Twilight, Friday evening, found me at Shiloh chapel, and the guest of Sister Mary Shoemaker, who keeps a "Pilgrim's Rest," in the city of Springfield. The home of Bro. and Sister Tesko is in this city, and they had kindly given the Gospel workers permission to spread a tent upon the beautiful lawn in front of their house. Their neighbors seriously objected, and began legal proceedings against them. Ex-Governor Robinson came to their assistance, and the tent remains, though the methods employed to affect its removal were evidently of a most unscrupulous if not malignant character.

I accompanied Bro. Plumer, the evangelist, to his evening service. Rain prevented a large at-

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTERS TO SECRETARY PHILLIPS.

SENECA, S. C.

We are gaining ground. Some have left the Masons, and others tell me they are coming out. One man left the Knights of Honor, and threw up a $2,000 insurance policy. Quite a number have left the Grange, and also the Alliance.

I loaned a Mason one of the books you sent me —"Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian Should Not be a Mason." He promised on his honor to return it in ten days, but nearly two months have elapsed and he has not returned it. How can he, as a Mason, when he has promised to "always conceal and never reveal." I do not expect to see the book again. So much for the truthfulness of a Mason who is held in high esteem by his neighbors, and who, probably, would not willfully lie about anything but Masonry.

But Masonry itself is a lie; its pretences are false; its benevolence a sham; its religion idolatry, and the lie practiced in the third degree is sacrilege. No man can practice Masonry without practicing a lie. Yours for truth and honesty,

H. S. ABBOTT.

MAYO, FLA.

I am an itinerant of the M. E Church, South, on Lafayette circuit, and am dead against all secret organizations, though I have never fired into them, from the fact that I was not loaded. Nearly all my official members are Freemasons; and I believe in my soul that this is one of the causes of the awful spiritual dearth on this circuit. I think, if I should speak against the lodge, it would astound everybody, like dropping a bombshell in their midst, for preachers, stewards, deacons or anybody do not seem even to think of its being wrong; I say I think it would astound them to say that Freemasonry is one of the devil's institutions. While this is the condition of affairs in this country, and while I have been silent for the reasons above stated, I was surprised that some unknown friend presented me with a year's subscription to the Cynosure. I had never heard of it until then, nor of the N. C. A.; but since I have been reading it, it has been leading me up; and when I get in a "bear-load," I intend to shoot, and shoot to kill. This is big game. Until I saw the Cynosure, with its advertisements of anti-secrecy literature, I had no idea there was so much . . . God bless you in the good work!

W. S. MCMANNEN.

WEATOGUE, CONN.

Dear Friends of the National Christian Association, Greeting:

As I cannot be with you in person, which I should be very glad to do, I assure you that I am with you in spirit, and that the bond of fellowship, which is the heritage of all who walk in the light, is mine.

The apostle John has declared unto us the important message that "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all"—no place for secret orders. I rejoice that God is making his light manifest through such instruments as he may choose. I thank God that he is calling out men and women in our day to let the light shine upon all the works of darkness; and not the least of these, in my opinion, is the great power to deceive that is being developed in oath-bound secret societies. I can but believe that the N. C. A. is one of his chosen agencies; and I thank God for what has been done in the past, and pray that it may be much more effectual in the future. P. BACON.

SALOON INTERESTS AND MASONIC INFLUENCE DEFY JUSTICE.

HIAWATHA, Kansas, May 15, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Masons always and everywhere positively deny the charge that they interfere with the rights of justice in the courts. To prove the truth of this charge I have a case in point. About a year ago a non-partisan league was formed in our town, for the purpose of looking after the better enforcement of the prohibitory liquor-law of our State. Not a long time elapsed before evidence was obtained criminating four druggists of the place. A local paper, the Hiawatha Democrat, came out in severe criticism of the palpable violation of the law, severely scoring the pastor of the M. E. church for his sympathetic efforts in behalf of one of the druggists who was a member of his church. The M. E. pastor, the druggists and the editor are all Freemasons. The next day after the editor's severe castigation of the M. E. preacher came out, our town was all in commotion. An indignation meeting was called; fiery speeches were made in condemnation of the editor for slandering the dominie; nor was this all. Charges were filed before the Masonic lodge against the editor for un-Masonic conduct in defaming a brother Mason in the person of the M. E. pastor (so we were told). The editor was tried (I was also told) before the lodge, but the lodge was divided on the question. We were told that the editor was acquitted by only one vote.

Now for the case as it came before the civil laws of the land. The druggists pleaded guilty to keeping a club-room where liquors were sold, and were fined by Judge Thompson $3,000 each. They thought the fine too high, and, notwithstanding having pleaded guilty, they appealed the case to the Supreme Court. That court affirmed the judgment of the court below.

Now we are ready to show the way Masons interfere with justice in the courts. An execution was ordered to sell property and pay the fine. The case was supposed to have reached its ultimatum when lo and behold, a full pardon from Gov. Lewelling made its appearance, and the confessed violators of the law were supposed to be free. But what has that to do with Masonry in the courts, do you ask? Listen; a petition signed by a goodly number of leading citizens was secretly gotten up and carried to the governor. Letters were written by editors, and also by the county attorney, and one by the president of the League (himself pastor of a church), asking leniency. A prominent pastor of a church in Topeka appeared in person before the governor, and made (as we are told) a pathetic appeal in behalf of the criminals. Now, when I tell you that the druggists are Masons; that all who signed the secret petition (save two) are Masons; that those who wrote letters to the governor are Masons; that the M. E. pastor at Topeka is a Knight Templar, and the governor himself a Mason—can we fail to see in all this the work of the "handmaid?"

I wrote these facts to the Kansas Lever, Chairman Dickie, and also the Voice. I tried to show the futility of trying to abolish the saloon while it was hedged about and protected by the lodge, and that it was useless to try to punish the violators of the liquor law while the lodge was permitted to come to the rescue of a brother in "distress." I said that prohibition could not be a success till, as a party, it had rid itself of the incubus of secretism.

Prof. Dickie admitted that the case was well taken, but felt the difficulty to be too great to bring this about. The Lever and the Voice each published my letter, carefully eliminating all I said about secretism and mutilating the article so that I hardly knew it to be mine, only by the signature. Here is where the trouble seems to me to be: Men that are brave, and would even dare to risk their lives in mortal conflict, when it comes to storm the breastworks of secretism are moral cowards. Verily the saloon is master of the situation, and will continue to be till we get woman-suffrage, which (I think) under God, is coming ere long.

J. W. MARGRAVE.

CYNOSURE OFFER!

Any of the Books sold by the N. C. A. in this paper, ordered, with subscription to the Cynosure, at one-fourth off from list price, sent postpaid.

The New Volume of Pen and Pencil Series.

WELSH PICTURES Drawn with Pen and Pencil.

By D. Lewis Jones, Morris Jones, Edward Ffoulkes, H. Elvet Lewis, D. Tyssil Evans, D. Davies and O. M. Edwards. Edited by Richard Lovett, M. A. With many Illustrations. Imperial 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, boxed..... 3.20

"'Welsh pictures' is the work of ten Welshmen, among whom illustrating the beauties of Wales has been parcelled out according to the special familiarity of each. The result is a pleasing volume."—London Times.

THE EARTHLY FOOTPRINTS OF OUR RISEN LORD, Illumined.

A continuous narrative of the Four Gospels according to The Revised Version, with introduction by Rev. John Hall, D. D. Illustrated by 113 full-page half tone re-productions. Small 4to, cloth.....net 1.50
Gilt edge, with silk book mark, boxed.....net 2.00
Full morocco, flexible, gilt edges, round corners, boxed.....net 3.75

Pictures reflecting the best in sacred art from Raphael to the present day are scattered profusely through the book.

"To many the life of the Christ will be a new book in this form. Though beyond the introduction it contains no word except what is found in the four Gospels, yet when read continuously, without the breaks necessarily made by the different stories of the four evangelists, the narrative takes on new force and lifelikeness. The very fact that this is not, our usual method of reading the Word will give it a new reality."—Golden Rule.

A GIFT OF LOVE, and Loving Greetings for 365 Days.

By Rose Porter. Long 18mo. Paper cloth..... 1.00
White cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.25
Decorated silk, silver top, in box..... 1.75

"'A Gift of Love' is the work of a loving heart. It contains a text of Scripture for every day of the year with the addition of an appropriate thought in poetry of prose all bearing on the theme of love. The work must have called for a great amount of patient toil. But it has not been spent in vain, for the volume will prove a blessing to many a soul. To use it day by day for a year thoughtfully and prayerfully, must result in a rich growth in love on the part of the user. The author is well known and esteemed for her previous works' sake."—The N. Y. Observer.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE SERIES.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer, containing CHRISTIAN LIVING, THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE, AND THE SHEPHERD PSALM. 3 vols. in box. 18mo, cloth..... 1.50
White vellum cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.75

D. L. Moody says: "Few books of recent years are better adapted to instruct and help Christians than those of this author. He is a man mighty in the scriptures, saturated with Bible facts and truths."

PRAYERS FROM THE POETS.

By Martha Harger. 16mo, two colored cloth, gilt top..... 1.00
Leatherette, boxed..... 1.50

"This volume is admirable. The Prayer are better suited to some of our moods than formal Litanies and are selected from excellent sources. The book will be a dear treasure to many hearts."—The Churchman.

KIN-DA-SHON'S WIFE.

An Alaskan Story. By Mrs. Eugene S. Willard, Home Missionary of the Presbyterian Board of America to Alaska. With illustrations. 8vo, cloth..... 1.50

"Being a close observer and in deep sympathy with the native population in their struggles towards a Christian Civilization, Mrs. Willard has gained a more intelligent knowledge of their character, of their needs and hindrances, than perhaps any other person."—Dr. Sheldon Jackson.

HEROES OF THE GOODWIN SANDS.

By Rev. Thomas Stanley Treanor. With many illustrations. 8vo, Cloth..... 1.50

"It is a book of most engrossing interest, and as stimulating as it is readable."—The Record.
"The deeds of daring are thrilling in the extreme. Suitable for the public library or for the home."—Times.

THE GREAT LONDON DAILIES.

By H. W. Massingham. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth..... 1.00

Very welcome to all who like to look behind the scenes and see how the great London dailies are worked.

New Editions.

The Prayer Meeting and Its Improvement.

By Rev. LEWIS O. THOMPSON. Eighth edition, cloth, $1.25.

"Most heartily do we wish this work a wide circulation, both among pastors and people, and we hope it may do much toward the lifting of the prayer-meeting into that higher place which it ought to hold among the grand instrumentalities in the kingdom of the Master'—Congregationalist.

"We do not remember to have met with a work so suggestive, and we heartily commend it to both pastors and private members."—Baptist Weekly.

The Crisis of Missions. By Rev. ARTHUR T. PIERSON, D. D.

Cloth, $1.25; paper, 35c.

"We do not hesitate to say that this book is the most purposeful, earnest, and intelligent review of the mission work and field which has ever been given to the church."—Christian Statesman.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.

By HANNAH WHITALL SMITH. One hundredth thousand. Issued in fourteen styles, from 50c. to $2.50. Send for circular.

"To commend this work would seem almost superfluous; and yet to young Christians who may not know it, we cannot refrain from saying, Buy this book, and keep it with your Bible for constant study, until you have thoroughly mastered, in your own experience, the 'secret' of which it tells. It will transform the dark days of your life, as it has transformed those of thousands before you, into days of heavenly light."—New York Evangelist.

The Topical Text Book. Fourth edition.

16 mo., cloth, 60c.

"This little volume is a worker's most useful tool. It collates all Scripture passages under their topical headings, and for this reason proves far more helpful in studying a subject than the best concordance.

"I find one of the very best ways to study the Scripture is to study topically."—D. L. Moody.

Stalker's Life of Christ. Twelfth edition.

Stalker's Life of St. Paul. Fourth edition.

12 mo., cloth, each, 60c.

These works by Professor James Stalker, M. A., are unique in their compact putting of these lives into such condensed form without injurious brevity. They are being taken up as text books by Biblical classes in all parts of the country, thus proving their practical value.

Grace and Truth under Twelve Different Aspects.

By W. P. MACKAY, M. A. Paper, 35c.; cloth, 75c. Two hundred and fiftieth thousand.

This remarkable sale can only be attributed to the very practical character of this work as a guide to the inquirer and a work of helpful instruction for the immature Christian. It is of this volume Mr. D. L. Moody said: "I know of no work in print better adapted to place in the hands of the inquirer."

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

By S. R. BRIGGS. Sixtieth thousand. 8 vo, cloth. $1.00; flexible, 75c.

Edition after edition of this work has been called for until it would seem the demand must be supplied. The sales however, increase rather than otherwise.

Feathers for Arrows. By Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.

16 mo., cloth, $1.00.

Few preachers have made such effective use of pointed illustrations as the well known pastor of the great Metropolitan Tabernacle. Here he has given us a large cluster of his best with liberty to enjoy and employ.

Revell's Record for Church Treasurers.

Size No. 1, $1.50; Size No. 2, $2.00.

Popular because practical—valuable because time saving—the only record for weekly envelope system that reduces the treasurer's work to the minimum.

For sale by the

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

LODGE NOTES.

FOREIGN MASONIC ITEMS.

The National Grand Lodge of Egypt, at Cairo, was founded May 8, 1879. It has eleven subordinate lodges. The officers are men of rank and high social standing. Bro. Hussein Fakhry Pasha, Minister of Justice, is Past Grand Master; Bro. Idris Bey Ragheb, Judge of the Court for Natives, is Grand Master; Bro. Anton Barum Effendi, Dragoman at the Italian Consulate, is Grand Secretary.

In England of late years it has been authoritatively decided that as to prefixes Most Worshipful can only be used by the Grand Master and Provincial Grand Master; Right Worshipful, by the Deputy Grand Master, Grand Wardens and Provincial and District Grand Masters; Very Worshipful, for other officers before Grand Deacons, and all the rest Worshipful, the same as with the Masters of lodges.

The Grand Lodge of the Island of Cuba was constituted and founded Dec. 24, 1891, through the combined union of all the St. Johns lodges of the island. The jurisdiction has twenty-six subordinate lodges, with about 3,000 members.

The National Grand Lodge of Mexico was founded August 22, 1825. Besides the National Grand Lodge there exist in some States of Mexico other independent Masonic grand bodies recognized by North American Grand Lodges.

In Denmark it is the crown prince who is the head of the Grand Orient, while the late Emperor Frederick held the Grand Mastership of German Freemasons from 1855 until the time of his death.

In Austria Freemasonry is eschewed by the aristocracy and the reigning family, as it is also in Russia and Belgium; while in Holland the Dutch nobility are nearly all members of the craft.

The Grand Orient of Greece, at Athens, consists of a Supreme Council, with one chapter at Athens and six Symbolic lodges. Prince Rhodocanakis is Honorary Grand Master.

In Sweden and Norway the Grand Mastership is held by King Oscar, who occupied the office before his ascension to the throne.

The Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England granted warrants during three months for the formation of eleven lodges.

The Grand Orient of the Republic of Chili, at Valparaiso, is in regular activity. It has seven subordinate lodges.

The Symbolic Grand Lodge of Spain, at Madrid, has ninety-seven subordinate lodges under its jurisdiction.

The Grand Lodge of England was organized in 1717. The constitution was promulgated in 1823.

The Grand Orient of Brazil, at Rio de Janeiro, has 120 chapters and 147 subordinate lodges.

The Grand Orient of Belgium, at Brussels, has seventeen St. Johns lodges.

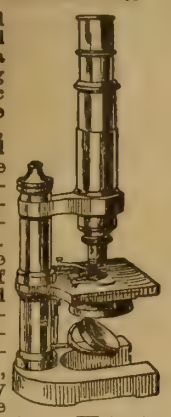
There are two English Masonic lodges in Yokohoma, Japan.

Now is the Time

When your bodily condition must have careful attention. If you are tired out from overwork, if your blood has become impure from close confinement in badly ventilated offices, shops, or homes, if you feel indisposed to exertion of any kind, if your food does not digest, if your appetite is poor you should immediately purify your blood, and the best way to do this is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. You will be surprised at the difference in your feelings when you have given it a fair trial. Your appetite will be increased, your digestion improved, you will not have that tired feeling any more, your step will be elastic, your spirits cheerful, you will feel in the words of thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, "like a new person." Be sure to get only Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

THE MICROSCOPE.



A careful microscopical examination and chemical analysis of the urine, is a valuable aid in determining the nature of many chronic diseases, particularly those of the nervous system, blood, liver, kidneys, and bladder. These aids make it possible to treat such diseases successfully at a distance, without personal examination of the patient. Thus Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Gravel, and other Diseases of the Urinary Organs are successfully treated; Nervous Debility, Exhaustion, Dropsy, Liver Disease, and many other Chronic Maladies are cured without seeing the patient. Write for question blanks, treatise, and other information, describing case, and inclose 10 cents, in stamps, to pay postage.

Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. L 106

75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house. THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention THE STANDARD when writing.

IF YOU WANT WORK

that is pleasant and profitable, send us your address immediately. We teach men and women how to earn from $5 per day to $3,000 per year without having had previous experience, and furnish the employment at which they can make that amount. Capital unnecessary. A trial will cost you nothing. Write to-day and address,

E. C. ALLEN & CO.,

Box 1001. Augusta, Me.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer, Ennis, Texas.

ANTI-SHORBOY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a nationa subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Gaboway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY M. HUGUNIN - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1894.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Never in human history has the question of giving the ballot to women received so much attention, or its advocacy made such progress, as within the last few years. Never has the better class of women taken such an interest in the discussion; though it is just to say that they are not all on one side.

It must be conceded that suffrage is not a natural right, in the sense that life and liberty are rights. Rights are not the gift of legislation, but of God. Legislatures may, either justly or unjustly, confer privileges, but they never can confer rights. All human beings, including infants and the imbecile, have the right to live. Even the brutes, when their destruction is not important to human well-being, are

> "As free to live and to enjoy that life
> As God was free to form them at the first."

The right of suffrage belongs to those who can wisely exercise it for the good of the whole. It may be safely assumed that youths of immature judgment, those who are debased in morals, or convicted of crime, all who are aliens, and all who are unable to read the ballot which they are expected to deposit, are not justly entitled to its use.

Character and capacity are not only the essentials to rulers, but to those who choose them.

We doubtless suffer, as a nation, a great multitude of evils that are mainly due to the low morality and small intelligence of many of our voters, and it is quite obvious that a true national reform lies in the restriction, rather than in the enlargement, of this franchise.

But while all this is true, there is absolutely no reason why the dividing line should be on sex. If character and capacity are the conditions for the rightful exercise of the ballot, surely the intelligent women—constituting the great majority of professed Christians, and with the wonderful advancement that has been made in female education—have surely a right to a voice in the choice of their rulers.

With what propriety do we admit a besotted Irishman, or an ignorant Negro, to the exercise of this high responsibility, while we deny it to the noble women who constitute the W. C. T. U.? Conceding that there is no great probability that the ballot will be withdrawn from the incompetent, is it not wise to give it, as a counterpoise, to the intelligent woman?

May we not, after some years of trial, infer that woman suffrage is safe? When, by its exercise, has family life been endangered? When have divorces been increased, or crime made more abundant? Has not the reverse been true? *

DIVORCE THE CHURCH AND THE LODGE.

Among the letters sent to the National Christian Association by those who found it either inconvenient or impossible to attend the recent Annual Meeting, was one from our old friend P. Bacon, of Weatogue, Conn., in which, after expressing his inability to be present on that occasion, he added other matters in connection with his own experiences that we deem worthy of separate publication.

"I am clear in my own mind," he writes, "that the great strength of Freemasonry and kindred orders is the support and encouragement which they receive from God's people. There is not that clear separation which is demanded in the Word of God. The light has come, and God demands that his people should bear testimony against the unfruitful works of darkness. When we allow ourselves to give consent to, or approval of, evil without remonstrance, do we not come under the condemnation of 'being partakers of other men's sins?'

"I have a copy of a resolution adopted by the First Congregational church in Farmington, Conn., during the Morgan times (of which our old friend Calvin Hatch was one of the deacons) which reads (I quote from memory): 'We approve of the course pursued by our brethren who have absolved themselves from their Masonic obligations, and hereafter will receive no one as a member of this church who is a member of the Masonic lodge.' Deacon Hatch told me that there were eight or ten members of that church who renounced Freemasonry. Had similar resolutions been adopted and adhered to by all, the churches would not have been in the weak and worldly condition in which we find them to-day." . . . .

"About twenty years ago I made up my mind that it would be my duty, if ever a Freemason asked for admission to any church to which I belonged, (I should be obliged if I was faithful to my covenant with that church) to vote against receiving him. It was not many years before a Freemason, by letter, asked to be received, and I moved that action be deferred until the next business meeting; but I am sorry to say that my motion was defeated and he was admitted.

"A few years later I presented a resolution that a committee be appointed who should investigate and inquire into the principles and character of Freemasonry, and report to the next business meeting of the church. It was voted to lay it on the table, where, for all I know, it remains to the present time. About two years later I asked for a letter from the church, which was refused because, as they claimed, I did not state what church I wished to join. I was then a member of the First Congregational church of Simsbury, Conn., and for all I know, my name remains on their books, but I have not communed with them, or in any way considered my obligations with them as binding, and they have acted the same with me, which I consider as very wrong towards the cause that we profess to love.

"I hope that the time may soon come when the whole matter may be brought up and discussed in a Christian spirit, as its importance demands."

And every child of God will sincerely hope and pray that the divorce between the church and the lodge may be speedy and made effective through the agency of the Holy Spirit.

THE POPE AND FREEMASONRY.

Some unknown friend sends us what is undoubtedly an official translation, in pamphlet form, of the Pope's Encyclical against Freemasonry, dated April 20, 1884.

Premising that the kingdom of God is ever opposed by the kingdom of Satan, the latter the embodiment of the love of self, he says: "At every period of time, each has been in conflict with the other, with a variety and multiplicity of weapons and of warfare, although not always with equal ardor and assault. At this period, however, the partisans of evil seem to be combining together, and to be struggling with united vehemence, led on or assisted by that strongly organized and widespread association called the Freemasons. No longer making any secret of their purposes, they are now boldly rising up against God himself."

Not only so, according to the pope, but (he adds), "They are planning the destruction of the Holy Church" (the Roman Catholic church, he means), "publicly and openly." The pope is a little obscure in his terms. As we Protestants understand Freemasonry, it worships the god of nature, and not the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, whose name and atonement it totally ignores, framing a religion of its own, which has no affinity with the love and work of the Saviour. It thus becomes the enemy, not of the Church of Rome in particular, but of Christianity and its Founder. If the Church of Rome is a branch of the church of Christ, worshiping him in spirit and in truth, then Freemasonry is its enemy. We know it is the adversary of Christ, and not in harmony with the Protestantism of Luther and Calvin.

The pope proceeds to give us an outline of the opposition of the Church of Rome to Freemasonry: "The first warning of the danger was given by (pope) Clement XII., in the year 1738, and his constitution was confirmed and renewed by Benedict XIV. Pius VII. followed the same path; and Leo XII., by his apostolic constitution, put together the acts and decrees of former pontiffs on this subject, and ratified and confirmed them forever. In the same sense spoke Pius VIII., Gregory XVI., and, many times over, Pius IX."

The pope then attacks the secret operations of the Freemasons and their government, as being a law unto themselves, and their purpose, which, he declares, "is the utter overthrow of that whole religious and political order of the world which the Christian teaching has produced, and the substitution of a new state of things in accordance with their ideas, of which the foundations and laws shall be drawn from mere 'naturalism'" —that is, the worship of the god of nature. "The fundamental doctrine of the naturalists," he proceeds, "is that human nature and human reason ought in all things to be mistress and guide. Laying this down, they care little for duties to God" (the Christian's God), "or pervert them by erroneous and vague opinions; . . . . they allow no dogma of religion or truth which cannot be understood by the human intelligence, nor any teacher who ought to be believed by reason of his authority." The pope is so far right, inasmuch as divine revelation (or revealed Christian doctrine) is ignored by Freemasonry, and every Mason is bound by his obligation to obey every order of the lodge without hesitation or evasion, in preference to all other authority.

Time and space forbid the quotation of much that the pope alleges against Freemasonry, and the letter of his appeal to his church to oppose the fraternity with all its might. Towards the close, he recommends his followers to implore of Christ "the help which the greatness of the danger and of the need requires." Any member of the N. C. A. and friend of our reform would deem this course one of wisdom and all-sufficiency. But the pope does not rest upon the sufficiency of the Great King alone to suppress this great evil. He adds: "Let us take as our helper and intercessor, the Virgin Mary, ... Michael, ... Joseph, ... and Peter and Paul," depending upon their "patronage" to "succor the human race."

"Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" Yea, "with God nothing shall be impossible." Surely his arm alone can give us the victory. We can let the saints rest.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM SUDDEN DEATH.

Rev. W. B. Stoddard, writing from Cedarville, Ohio, May 30, gives the following account of his recent painful experience at that place:

"Monday morning I went to the depot and secured a morning paper. There is a walk along the track, six or eight feet wide, from the depot to the main street of the town. I went on this walk toward the street, and when near it I heard a train approaching. Knowing that I was eight or ten feet from the track, and, as I supposed, perfectly safe, I did not look around, but walked on, reading the paper.

"The train approaching was the fast mail, running at least sixty miles an hour, as it was late. It is the custom to throw the mail-sack from this train while passing through the town. I knew nothing of this practice, and was struck by the sack with such force as to throw me in the air. I alighted on my head. I was carried to a neighboring doctor's where the gash in my head was sewed up, and my ankle bandaged. The opening in my head was on top, the first coating of the scalp being broken, and the middle coating indented. Had the gash been one-quarter of an inch deeper, my life would have been taken.

"My ankle is badly sprained, and has caused me much pain, but is getting better. The wound in my head is healing rapidly. The doctor expects to take out the stitches to-morrow. My ankle will probably keep me in-doors some days—perhaps weeks.

"I feel that I have much reason to thank God it was no worse. I have notified the railroad officials that I consider myself entitled to damages."

Our readers will rejoice and give thanks with Bro. Stoddard that his life is spared and his usefulness only temporarily impaired.

COXEYISM.

That the attempt of "Gen." Coxey and his coadjutors to march on Washington and present "a petition in boots" was unwise, ill-timed and in every way preposterous, has been made duly apparent. That the arrest of Coxey and Browne for the trivial offense of "walking on the grass and carrying a flag," and their being fined and imprisoned, was an equal mistake seems equally plain. It gave dignity to their exploit, and threw over them the air of martyrdom.

The love of notoriety is exceedingly strong in the average man, and when projects are undertaken with this end in view, they are best discounted by being severely unnoticed. If the space given to Coxeyism or pugilism by our daily press were left blank, we should see much less of their developments of folly and wickedness. The best rebuke to folly, sometimes, is to shut our eyes and our lips. *

—General Secretary Phillips has been somewhat hindered in his work during the past week by sore eyes, from which, however, he is now happily recovering.

—The first to send in their pledge to sustain the work of the N. C. A. during the present year, by personal donations, as set forth in last week's supplement to the Cynosure, were our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. Griffin, of Wisconsin. We trust their good example will be generally followed by other devoted friends of our reform.

—One important fact in connection with the present gigantic strike of miners is that the scarcity of coal has raised prices to a point where the miners of Nova Scotia can afford to pay the duty and ship coal into this country and compete with our home production. The tendency will be to discourage the strikers, and induce them to return to work.

—Up to the present writing, 195 subscriptions have been received for the new monthly paper of the N. C. A. As previously stated it is to contain matters of special interest to our reform, put up in a convenient form for distribution as a tract, and will be furnished to annual subscribers in clubs of twenty at 10 cents per copy; single copies, 20 cents a year. Make up clubs everywhere, and keep your neighbors and friends enlightened as to what we have in hand.

—Bro. R. A. Cullor, of Unionville, Mo., desires that some of our able correspondents should give, through the Cynosure, "a history of our national stars—the five-pointed star on the flag, and the six-pointed one in the coins. Surely both," he adds, "should be alike. It makes a man think of half-slave and half-free, or half-secret and half-honest." The history of the United States flag is well-known, but why the difference in the two stars exists may not be so easily answered. Can any of our readers explain it?

—One evening last week, Rev. W. M. Howie, pastor of the United Presbyterian church on the South Side in this city, and his estimable wife, were treated to a genuine surprise party by members of his church and congregation, with others, who brought ample refreshments and took, for the time, possession of the parsonage. The result was a most enjoyable re-union of kindred spirits, and a substantial token of their esteem for their pastor in the shape of a well-filled wallet. These little oases in the paths of consecrated ministers are very pleasant to enjoy and remember.

—At a meeting of the Congregational Union in London, on a recent evening, there was a large attendance, and the proceedings possessed unusual interest. On motion of Dr. Horton, it was unanimously resolved to express sympathy with "the Christians of America who feel the scandal and shame of the barbarities of lynch law as dealt out to the Negroes of the United States; and we join our prayers with theirs that this reproach will be removed from our common humanity." Whatever faults we may see in England, she is entitled to honor for the old-time and still-cherished sentiment of her people in favor of the oppressed and down-trodden Negro. It is no empty boast that "when a slave touches British soil, his chains fall from him." The recent death-blow given by British armed forces to the slave-trade on the African coast is another confirmation of her character for humanity.

—A notice of the death of Rev. Robert Archibald McAyeal, D. D., of the United Presbyterian church, has already appeared in this paper. In the United Presbyterian (Pittsburgh) of May 31, Prof. Jas. A. Grier contributes a sketch of the life of this good man and faithful preacher, which is full of interest. We make room, to-day, for the following extract: "His gospel was not only of the priesthood and prophetship of the Christ, but of his kingship as well; and so he stood for anti-slavery, anti-secrecy, temperance, and the crown rights of Messiah, through all his ministry. It is probable his hostility to Freemasonry was intensified by his father's experience as a Mason in the old country. It is a family tradition that his migration to America was partly because entanglements with Masonic plottings against the state made him feel the wisdom of sundering such associations by removing from them. He abjured Masonry as dangerous and hurtful, from the time he set foot on these shores. His son carried the inherited conviction into his pulpit, and some of the most scathing assaults which the order has received in this country were thence delivered." Some of our readers will remember the stirring address which Dr. McAyeal delivered before the New England anti-secrecy covention, Dec. 9, 10, 1891—"Why I am Not a Mason," and which was full of telling points, keen and logical. It was printed in full in the supplement of the Cynosure for Dec. 31. Peace to his ashes!

—Last week we reprinted the sterling testimonies, extending through many years, of the Illinois Congregational Association against the secret lodge. They are recalled by the recent reference of the United Presbyterian to the A. P. A. Members of that denomination, it says, "even though they may approve what are supposed to be the principles of such secret oath-bound orders, violate their church vows in joining them. It cannot be kept too prominently before the members of our church, that, 'We declare that all associations, whether formed for political or benevolent purposes, which impose upon their members an oath of secrecy, or an obligation to obey a code of unknown laws, are inconsistent with the genius and spirit of Christianity, and church members ought not to have fellowship with such associations.'" This is a clear-cut testimony that ought to be in the hearts and on the lips of every Christian.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page.)

tendance, but the few who met were fed with "the sincere milk of the word."

On Saturday morning I attempted to find an open door for work in our direct line, but the enemy had been busy since my last visit. One who ought to know admitted that the key of every church in the city was held in lodge hands to the extent of barring out free discussion, and that even those who were friendly were under such a spell of fear that they shunned any encounter with the hidden foes. Bro. Geo. Francis, pastor of Shiloh, was the only one who gave me real encouragement, by kindly offering an audience room four evenings in the week; and if Sister Shoemaker is of the same mind, I shall hope to give the good people of Springfield "more light" from the east soon. J. P. STODDARD.

FROM REV. WILLIAM FENTON.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June, 1, 1894.

I have just been talking to one of the pastors of the Augustana Synod, which meets at St. Peter's next week. Possibly arrangements will be made for me to speak to them. They will furnish a report of the action which they will take this week concerning their attitude toward secret societies.

This subject, surely, is becoming and always has been a matter of very great importance. And God's people will be compelled to notice it. I have just left a man in the street car—a prominent business man and church member. I have known him for many years, and he, for the last ten or fifteen years, has been very shy towards me, and I knew the reason of it; but this afternoon he took pains to sit near me and tell me that he joined the Masons many years ago, but never went to the lodge but a very few times; that he took his demit from the lodge; has taken no interest in Masonry for years; that he does not know how to make a grip or a sign, nor how to recognize a Mason. He has been published by the Masons as a Mason, and of course is regarded by some people as a Mason. Now he bade me not to say anything to anyone about what he has told me.

I think that there are a great many in his condition. His state of mind is not enviable. It is evident that he does not like Masonry, and that he fears it; and that he would rather be on the side of the Anti-mason than the Mason. Is his position a fair one before the world? Is it right before God?

If he is not known to the world as an Anti-mason, he is then known or regarded as a Mason, and will prove to be a decoy duck for the devil to ensnare men into his lodge. If God has given him repentance for having joined the Masons, confession is due to God.

I do not like to think that it is only because he wants to be on the winning side that he made the confession to me, but from the fact that he does not want it mentioned to anyone else looks like it.

I delivered an illustrated address on the relation of God's Word to Masonry, etc., on the market square last Sabbath afternoon. A Freemason and an Odd-fellow tried to confute the truth, but the audience was not on their side. Thank God for the witness to the truth! Yours,

W. FENTON.

THE EASTERN AGENT IN OHIO.

CEDARVILLE, Ohio, May 31 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have great reason to be thankful that I am able to report to-day. On Monday morning last I met with a bad accident, which came near being a fatal one. It is the custom to throw mail-sacks from the fast express trains running through this town on the sidewalk prepared by the railroad company for the accommodation of its patrons, or into the principal street of the town, or wherever it may suit the convenience of the agent on the train. Several of the citizens have been knocked down, but, so far as I have heard, none has as yet been killed. This custom of recklessly throwing the mail was not known to me. I was walking some distance from the depot, eight or ten feet from the railroad track on the sidewalk, while a fast express was passing. The train was late and running at a speed of sixty miles or more an hour. The thrown mail-sack struck me with such force that my feet were knocked from under me. In falling I struck the farther edge of the sidewalk. I was carried to a doctor's near by where the gash in my head was sewed up, and my sprained ankle bandaged.

Had I fallen toward the train I should have probably been drawn under. Had the gash in my head been one-quarter of an inch deeper, I should not have been here; so you see my reason for gratitude to God that my life was spared.

I have been confined to the bed much of the time since. The wound in my head is healing rapidly. It will be days, perhaps weeks, before I can again use the ankle that is sprained.

The doctor who has attended me thinks he would rather take his chances in joining the Masons than go through what I have come through. I find it is not necessary to belong to a lodge to get help while traveling. Everything possible has been done for my comfort. Eight Christian people called yesterday, to make inquiry and leave expressions of sympathy. There was not a lodge advocate among them.

With the good care of wife, who fortunately is with me, I may hope soon to be in the field again.

We reached this town Friday morning. The cordial welcome we have always received from friends here was extended. There were plenty of opportunities to speak. In response to an invitation given by the pastor of the United Presbyterian church here (Rev. Mr. Warnock), I spoke to his people Sabbath morning, and in the evening I presented the anti-Christian character of the lodge to Bro. Davidson's people at Clifton, four miles distant. In passing out of the church I met a man who said he had been accustomed to hearing the Masons "cussed" and "discussed". He was a Mason and not a Christian. Probably he heard the former in the lodge, for he only heard the latter in my meeting.

Mr. W. R. Sterrett, of this place, is the first, so far as I know, to accept the privilege of becoming a life-member of the N. C. A. by the payment of $50 as per vote of the Association at the meeting just passed. There will doubtless be many who will see the importance of thus contributing to a Cynosure sustentation fund, at the same time securing for themselves the Cynosure so long as they live, together with all the privileges of our Association and the certificate of the same.

With renewed courage because of the goodness of God in the past, I shall enter upon the duties of the year to come. W. B. STODDARD.

THE HOME.

VALLEY FORGE.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

Once I read a touching story—
  It was when I was a child,—
And my soul was stirred within me
  By that tale, so sad and wild;
And a vision rose before me
  Of a forest dark and drear,
Snow-clad hills and ice-bound streamlets,
  Ragged soldiers swarming near,
With their sad, despairing faces,
  Marching down the mountain gorge;
How they camped that dreary winter
  Mid the snows of Valley Forge.

And a chieftain stands among them
  Braver than the kings of old,
And he led their footsteps onward
  O'er the hills and mountains cold.
'Neath the folds of Freedom's banner,
  With no mantle but the sky,
Battled they with cold and famine,
  And so laid them down to die.
Not a selfish word escaped them,
  As in that dark mountain gorge
One by one they bravely perished
  'Mid the snows of Valley Forge.

Now Columbia rears her forehead
  Far above the mountain snows
And from east to western ocean
  Bright the flag of freedom glows.
We remember still the story
  How those sons of valor died;
How their bones were left to whiten
  On the plain and mountain side.
Valley Forge! Oh, bring the records—
  We will read them softly o'er;
Stranger eyes will not reproach us,
  If we bow in tears once more
O'er the tale of those who perished
  In that frozen mountain gorge,
And who left their blood-stained footprints
  On the snows of Valley Forge.

Steamburgh, N. Y.

THE VISION OF CHRIST.

In the statement of his faith which the Rev. Dr. Clapp, lately of Portland, gave to the installing council at Manchester, N. H., he spoke of the season of intellectual disturbance and doubt that set in soon after the commencement of his ministry. The problems of God and life and immortality weighed heavily on his mind. He could not solve them. He was in a wilderness, and his way out was not for himself alone to find. He did what a lost person must at last do. He cried for help. "In answer," he says, "the doubters and believers came; great pagans, great deists, great Christians—those who claim to know and dare to lead embarrassed souls along the way of destiny. Among them came Jesus. I can see him yet; radiant, regnant among them all; upon whom I had turned my back, because not sure of him. But in his presence, how could I be sure of any, all, others? He was the sun; they were stars of the first magnitude indeed; but only stars. Besides, all others faltered over questions that must be answered. They supposed and hypothesized; he spake what he knew and testified what he saw. He was confident about God, man and immortality."

This is a vivid bit of experience. It recalls to our mind what Prof. Henry B. Smith once told his students concerning himself: "When I went to Germany I passed through an intense struggle with rationalistic doubt and unbelief. But in the midst of it all there came before me a vision of Christ so distinct, so sweet, of Christ as a person, a living, divine and human Saviour, that all shadows were driven away and I never doubted more. This vision of Christ we all must have. No man can be a true and living Christian until he has had this vision of the living Christ."

These two actual and, presumably, independent experiences are illustrations of that favorite declaration of our time that the proof and defense of Christianity is Christ himself. This declaration seems to be made sometimes and in some quarters as if in comparative disparagement of Scriptures. But if so, by some strange confusion of thought; or, better stated, by some failure to grasp the whole truth. This disclosure of Christ spoken of as "a vision" is, of course, simply the vivid apprehension of the Master and Saviour who is already given us in the familiar pages. Neither Dr. Clapp nor Dr. Smith supposed for a moment that on a certain time each created for himself this beatific vision of the Lord. The wonder they saw was only He who was from the beginning, whom John and the other evangelists looked upon and their hands handled.

Why it is that our eyes are so often and so long holden from the clear recognition of him is a puzzle. Why any who live in the very dispensation of the Holy Spirit, whose office is to glorify him, should walk with unillumined face, and sadly, is not altogether easy to understand. But the explanation lies partly in the fact brought out in these two experiences of inward conflict and unrest. Christ comes to those who have been brought to their wit's ends. Not until the great hunger sets in, which the soul itself cannot satisfy, can it appreciate the marvelous bread of life. Then the vision may come, so full and surprising; and the heart says, Why, it is the Christ I have always known: How is it that I have been so slow to see and adore?—San Francisco Pacific.

THE SENSIBLE WOMAN.

A sensible woman begins early in life to show her prevailing characteristic. As a child she can be reasoned into obedience when she cannot be coaxed or driven, and it is wise to remember that wise impulses may be changed to bad ones by improper training.

The sensible woman does not allow self-gratification to persuade her to do that which is contrary to reason or sound judgment. She never loves a man so dearly, notwithstanding his bad habits, which she despises, that "she cannot give him up."

Her good sense tells her that love is short-lived unless fed on self-respect, and also that an affection which is weaker than a bad habit is scarcely worth having.

The sensible woman never does a thing simply because every one else is doing it, but because she has decided that she may safely do it. She cares just enough about the opinion of her neighbors, and none too much. She who does not care what others think of her is lacking either in good sense or morality. She whose first thought is, "What will folks say?" lacks good sense and firmness to do what she believes to be right regardless of consequences. The sensible woman is the medium between these two extremes.

In time of trouble one turns involuntarily to the sensible woman. Others may be favored companions when the skies are clear, but under the clouds are as useless as a lace shawl in a snowstorm. But the sensible woman knows you are human, and although that may have seemed prosaic, when your fair-weather friends are comparing you with the angels, you are not grateful. She does not gush or look scandalized or say: "I told you so," or become sentimental, or try to convince you that she has suffered worse; you know at once that she understands that she is not wanting in appreciation or sympathy, and that she will help you if you will let her.—Chicago Tribune.

MEASURING OUR GRIEF.

They were sewing on clothes for a home mission barrel. Their needles flew faster than their tongues, but the latter were not idle.

"I have no quarrel with those who go into mourning when their friends die," said Mrs. Burton. "I only ask the privilege of retaining my usual dress without being criticised."

This was in reply to a long criticism of a young seamstress who had not put on mourning on the recent death of her mother.

"Well! of course; but it seems as if you did not feel very badly," replied Mrs. Jones. "Now, when my poor, dear, dead husband died, I felt as if I must wrap myself in black forever."

A shadow of a smile was seen in the circle. Perhaps they were thinking of Miss Smith's remark: "Mrs. Jones always calls Mr. Walker her 'poor, dear, dead husband,' probably, to distinguish him from the live one, Mrs. Jones."

"I know some folks say they don't believe in mournin'," continued Mrs. Jones, "but I always think its because they're too stingy, or don't care."

Mrs. Burton's lips quivered, and the blood rushed to her cheeks. Her thoughts went back to the time, a few months ago, when her eldest boy had died. Only a few intimate friends knew how the family purse had been drained in the efforts to save his life. She knew Mrs. Jones' remark was a double thrust; but before she could reply the minister's wife, who knew both Mrs. Burton's circumstances and Mrs. Jones' kind heart but inquisitive turn of mind, said:

"I do not think we ought to make that conclusion, Mrs. Jones. Our love is shown quite as much in our care for our friends while they are with us as in the clothes we wear and the flowers we carry to their graves after they are gone."

"I have often thought there are three ways of measuring our griefs." It was Mrs. Harriman, a visitor at the parsonage, who spoke. The ladies looked up inquiringly, while the needles lagged a little.

"Yes, at least three ways," she continued. "Some people measure their grief horizontally—so many yards of crape and black ribbon. I remember where I was boarding there was a family of fellow-boarders—a man, his wife and son. The man was sick for several months. He lacked proper care. His wife was always too busy shopping or helping her friends to shop to care for him. The boy did what he could in his ignorant boy way. Bye-and-bye he died. The wife sat next to me at table, and she tried me almost beyond endurance by her confidences. Did I think eighteen yards of black ribbon enough for that dress? Was black becoming to her? Was her veil long enough? Had the boarders noticed that her jewelry was not mourning jewelry? She had been out two hours the morning of the funeral to get some, but could not get the ear-rings to suit. Poor Harry! She would not fail in her duty to him! And then she would use her newly bought, black-bordered handkerchief to wipe away a tear. All the while the boy's face was a sad mixture of honest grief and ill-concealed contempt. I think she measured her grief by the yard. And whenever I hear anyone say with pride and ostentation that she has not missed going to the cemetery on Sunday for so long a time, I can't help thinking she is measuring horizontally."

Mrs. Harriman paused a moment, then said: "You must not suppose I disapprove of wearing black. It is safe to leave that to the individual's judgment."

"But what are the other ways of measuring our grief?" asked Miss Smith.

"Downward, next. Vertically, but downward. Some of us are quite crushed by our sorrow, give up entirely to it, and are even prostrated by it. We think life has nothing more for us, and we refuse to live. Then we make ourselves a burden to our friends, as if others had no griefs. My husband had once among his patients a woman who actually lost her eyesight from excessive weeping because of her mother's death. And her mother was eighty-five years old!"

"Why, how foolish!" some one exclaimed.

"Yes, that seems so," returned Mrs. Harriman, "but it is no worse than the selfish yielding of many another—refusing to bear our burdens or receive our blessings. Yet it is merely a natural tendency not properly restrained. It is selfishness at the bottom.

"But vertically there is another direction, and some measure their grief upward. It is just as real grief. Their hearts are bleeding, but their eyes look upward. They think of their friends as in the 'upper country.' Their grief is sanctified to them. The 'oil of joy' is given them for mourning, and 'the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. They feel the loneliness often, but they keep on measuring upward, upward, till at last their 'conversation is in heaven.' You know that word 'conversation,' as used by the apostle, means 'citizenship,' as if we really dwelt in the heavens. I have a friend who told me she rarely takes flowers to her father's grave, for her thoughts never go there. She thinks of her father a great deal, but it is always in the heavenly country. She can truly say, 'O grave, where is thy victory?' "

"Perhaps that explains how Dr. Kensington could bring himself to speak at Mr. Swinton's funeral," said Mrs. Burton. "He had buried his wife only the week before, and I could not see how he could do it."

"Yes, I remember," rejoined Mrs. Harriman. "I was there. His face showed plainly the anguish he had suffered, but his public position required this duty of him. I certainly thought when he began that he must break down; but as he went on with those wonderful words of faith and hope, I said: 'He measures upward,' and my heart learned a lesson."

"It must be good to feel so," said Mrs. Burton; "but I suppose only very holy people can reach such heights."

"It does require great intimacy with God, but we are all called to that," said Mrs. Harriman, softly.

There was a long pause. All were busy with their own thoughts. Mrs. Harriman broke the silence by saying:

"And then this upward measuring brings such blessings to those around us. It is unselfish. It is possible, too, to pass from the downward measuring to the upward—only the opposite direction. I know a lady who was completely heart-broken by the death of her second child. Not one was left to comfort her. She thought, and her friends thought, that she would become insane, so uncontrollable was her grief. Her husband took her to Europe, and she seemed to improve. 'When we reached New York on our return,' she told me, 'I resolved I would be resigned, but when I caught the first sight of our home, the old agony came over me. I spent a wretched night. In the morning, while praying for submission, a thought came to me like an inspiration. Before the week was ended we had adopted two orphan boys, and God had taught me how he heals wounded hearts.' She learned how to measure in the opposite direction, you see. It seems"—

The arrival of several ladies interrupted the conversation, which drifted now to other topics. But Mrs. Harriman's words proved to be "seed thoughts" to more than one listener.—Mrs. Marion B. Knight, in Zion's Herald.

FOR MAKING EVERY DAY HAPPY.

When you rise in the morning form a resolution to make the day a happy one to a fellow-creature. It is easily done. A left-off garment to the man who needs it, a kind word to the sorrowful, an encouraging expression to the striving, trifles in themselves light as air, will do it, at least for the twenty-four hours; and if you are young, depend upon it, it will tell when you are old, it will send you gently and happily down the stream of life to eternity. By the most simple arithmetical sum look at the result; you send one person, only one, happily through the day—that is three hundred and sixty-five in the course of the year; and supposing that you live forty years after you commence that course of medicine, you have made fourteen thousand and six hundred human beings happy, at all events for a time. Now, is not this simple? It is too short for a sermon, too homely for ethics, too easily accomplished for you to say, "I would if I could."—Stylus.

"HE LIVES IN OUR ALLEY NOW."

"Where," said a teacher to his class of little ragged boys gathered from the crowded courts of the great city, "where is Jesus Christ?"

Quickly the answer came from a bright-eyed little fellow, in a tone of the utmost confidence, as though there were no manner of doubt about it:

"Oh, he lives in our alley now!"

What a revelation of faith and hope and love embodied in the daily life and work was wrapped up in that answer! The alley had been the abode of poverty, dirt, and misery. The women quarreled, the men drank, the children were neglected. But a lady came to reside in the neighborhood who offered her services as a district visitor to the vicar of the parish. In a sort of apologetic way he said:

"I suppose I must not ask you to take ——— alley?"

"Why not?" said the lady.

"Well," he said, "it's not a very promising district."

She modestly replied:

"Then it must the more need our sympathy."

So the lady began her work in ——— alley, not in her own strength, but in the power of God's Holy Spirit. By her sweet smile and kindly looks and loving words she soon won all hearts. The small rooms became cleaner and scolding women became more gentle, and the hard-earned money of the laborer was brought home to buy bread instead of its being spent at the gin palace. So evident was the transformation that even the children felt it; hence the touching reply, "Oh, he lives in our alley now!"

A REMARKABLE LIST OF THREE SIXTEENS.

I have thought of telling the readers of the Christian Union about a find I made the other day. I noted that 1 John 3:16 was remarkably like John 3:16 in sentiment, and began to look up the other 3:16's of the Bible. Here is a remarkable list. Would it not be a good idea to suggest that these verses be memorized? Here is a hint how to remember where the texts are located. The first is not 3:16, but 3:15. I introduce it at the beginning of the list because it is just once removed from 16, and it is the first promise of a coming deliverer—the Protevangelum. Genesis 3:15; Exodus 3:16; Numbers 3:16; Joshua 3:16: 2 Kings 3:16; Proverbs 3:16; Jeremiah 3:16; Daniel 3:16; Joel 3:16; Zephaniah 3:16; Malachi 3:16; Matthew 3:16; Luke 3:16; John 3:16; Acts 3:16; 1 Cor. 3:16; Galatians 3:16; Ephesians 3:16; Philippians 3:16; Colossians 3:16; 2 Thessalonians 3:16; 1 Timothy 3:16; 2 Timothy 3:16; Revelation 3:16.—Rev. W. W. White, Ph. D.

DO YOUR WORK EARLY.

Beside my window in the early spring,
A robin built her nest and reared her young;
And every day the same sweet song she sung
Until her little ones had taken wing
To try their own bird living; everything
Was done before the summer roses hung
About our home, or purple clusters swung
Upon our vines at autumn's opening.
Do your work early in the day or year,
Be it a song to sing, or word to cheer,
Or house to build, or gift to bless the race;
Life may not reach its noon, or setting sun;
No one can do the work you leave undone,
For no one ever fills another's place.

—Sarah K. Bolton, in the Christian Nation.

TEMPERANCE.

SCENES AND INCIDENTS IN THE SLUMS.

When we hear of a child born to parents who have some advanced disease of lung or heart or brain, we pity it and look with forebodings upon its future, feeling that sooner or later it will become the prey of its parents' enemy. But how much more should we pity the child of the woman who has been drinking hard for years and of the man who has lost all manly instincts in the saloon.

There have been cases within our knowledge where drunken mothers have fallen in an unconscious stupor on the streets, and there in the cold, cheerless night the little blighted life has dawned, and the first wail has but foreshadowed the sorrow, shame and despair that lay before it. There are other sad cases in which the mother has gone out to drink, leaving the little ones without food or fire, locked in their bare room. She has been arrested, taken to the station house by the police, and the little ones have been found, long, weary hours afterward, crying from hunger.

There was one little one in our nursery, especially bright and sweet, whose name was Lily. She was one of those child angels, beautiful in disposition as well as face. She would sing most sweetly the simple choruses of the Salvation Army songs taught them in the nursery, and made a lovely picture with her sweet face lighted up and framed with its wealth of golden curls. The parents of the little ones are visited by the slum officers, and so they went one day to the house where Lily's mother lived. On the threshold they met the father—a rough, brutal man. Holding out their hands, they greeted him, but he pushed them away, saying he wanted nothing to do with them or their religion, but that he would believe in them if they would go in and "get that woman converted," with a toss of his head toward the room which he could hardly call home.

On entering it they found "that woman" drunk, and the room was showing all the signs of the wreckage and disorder that her life had caused. To open the conversation in a friendly manner they drew Lily to them and asked her to sing a little song which was a great favorite with her. At that moment they heard an angry voice at the door threatening the child if she dared to sing it, and turning they saw her father. The mother, enraged by his interference, demanded of the child that she sing it immediately.

The father again threatened her, and the little one stood trembling between the two, not knowing which to obey, and yet dreading the consequence of disobeying either. Just as the girls were going to withdraw their request, and before they could interfere, the mother sprang in a fit of rage upon the child, and twining her hand in the bright curls, tore out by the roots a handful of golden hair. Thus can drink brutalize even a mother's heart.—Mrs. Ballington Booth.

THE DRUNKARD'S DEATH.

As I sat alone in my room this afternoon thoughts of the career of a certain man came across the lens of my memory, a man whose acquaintance I made in the bright days of my early manhood, and that remembrance carried a wave of sadness over my heart. Thoughts of him now crowd themselves on my memory, and I mention his fall because his fame as a lawyer was worldwide. Gifted with nature's highest endowments, few indeed were his equals and none his superior.

He stood first and foremost in his chosen profession, a credit to his friends, a blessing to his adopted country and an honor to his native land, dear old Ireland. But a thirst for strong drink entered into his soul. He contracted habits of debauchery and consequently sank in social grade. His friends and business deserted him. Many attempts were made to reclaim him, but all failed. The demon of strong drink had complete possession of him. That glorious mind, gifted of God, became a complete wreck, and that voice of more than Roman eloquence, to which thousands had listened spellbound, and which had so often with soul-stirring pathos pointed out the ways of right and justice, was silenced forever by the abnormal power of drink. His ending was as terrible as his life had been sublime. In one of the foulest dens of a great metropolis he expired alone—

With no friend near to catch his last breath
Or to close his sad eyes when silent in death.

No funeral cortege assembled to do him honor or follow his remains to their final home beneath the sod. No requiem was sung for the repose of his soul, only—

Rattle his bones over the stones.
He's only a drunkard whom nobody owns.

This truly eloquent and gifted man was guillotined by the cruel ax of intemperance in the very prime of his manhood and was buried as common paupers are buried—at the city's expense in the potter's field.

No marble entablature marks his last resting place. His grave is unknown and unwept.

But why mention any individual instance of the horrid effects of strong drink when we know that numberless bright lives are wrecked by it every day; that myriads of the brave, the gifted and the loved of our nation are falling by the demon knife of intemperance as grass falls before the mower's scythe.—J. J. Kelly.

TESTIMONY OF THE AGES.

Thou shalt not drink wine or anything that may intoxicate.—Buddhist Commandment.

Temperance is a tree which has contentment for its root and peace for its fruit.—Arabian Maxim.

Bodily enjoyment depends on health and health depends on temperance.—Phares of Greece, 640 B. C.

Strength of mind depends upon sobriety, for this keeps reason unclouded by passion.—Pythagoras, of Greece, 580 B. C.

Far from me be the gift of Bacchus—pernicious, inflaming wine, that weakens both body and mind.—Homer, of Greece, 900 B. C.

Look not upon the wine when it is red, . . . for at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."—King Solomon, 1015 B. C.

While the intemperate man inflicts evil upon his friends, he brings far more evil upon himself. Not only to ruin his family but also to bring ruin on his own body and soul, is the greatest wrong that any man can commit."—Socrates, 469 B. C.

BIBLE LESSON.

A STUDY OF INTEMPERANCE.

LESSON XII.—Second Quarter, 1894, June 17.

SUBJECT.—The Woes of the Drunkard.—Prov. 23:29-34.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Look thou not upon the wine when it is red.—Prov. 23:31.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Prov. 23:29-35. T.—Isaiah 5:11-16. W.—Isaiah 5: 18-25. Th.—Amos 6: 1-7. F.—Nahum 1: 3-10. S.—Matt. 24: 44-51. Su.—Rom. 13: 8-14.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The woes of intemperance.—vs. 29,30. This was written one thousand years before the Christian era, yet the description is as literally true to-day as it was in Solomon's time. The bitter fruits of intemperance are always the same. "Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow?" There can be no better answer to these questions than the misery of the man who has killed the one he loves best in a fit of drunken rage, when his senses return, and in his prison-cell he realizes what he has done. Or of him who has thrown away all the opportunities of his youth and manhood, the respect of his fellow-men, the comforts of home, everything that makes life worth living, and become the hideous wreck of himself, with no hope for this world or the next. "Who hath contentions?" The larger part of the quarrels which end in homicide have their source in drink. A man who is sober, no matter how much his passions are excited, will be likely to think twice before he sends a fellow-being into eternity, and forfeits his own life, to gratify a momentary impulse of anger. But a drunken man is incapable of thinking, or weighing consequences. "Who hath babbling?" This refers to the silly incoherent talk and maudlin songs of the drunkard. "Who hath wounds without cause?" The drunkard is constantly liable to receive injuries in all kinds of ways through his inability to take care of himself. It may also refer to the wounds received in causeless quarrels. "Who hath redness of eyes?" The bloodshot eye of the drunkard is as characteristic a feature as his reeling gait. "They that tarry long at the wine." These effects are, of course, not seen in one who only takes an occasional glass, and so the moderate drinker thinks there is no danger. He forgets that he is fostering an appetite, the nature of which is to grow, as much as it is the nature of a spark to kindle a conflagration if left alone. "They who tarry long at the wine" in their midnight revels are the ones who began with a single glass, never meaning to overstep the bounds of moderation. If every young man would refuse to take the first glass, the saloon-keeper would soon find his occupation gone. "They that go to seek mixed wine." Spiced with ingredients that increase its strength and power to intoxicate. Most of the liquors sold at the present day as "pure" are "doctored" with all manner of vile and poisonous compounds.

2. The danger of dallying with temptation.—vs. 31, 32. The wine-cup would not be nearly so dangerous were it not for its beautiful color and shining bead. The more attractive saloons can be made, the more dangerous they are. Kitchen bar-rooms and low doggeries may exist in spite of prohibitory law, but they do not exert half the power for mischief of the high-license saloon, with its brilliant lights, its pictures, flowers and other attractions. But beautiful as the wine-cup looks at first, "at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder," or, as the margin reads, "a cockatrice." This is the most deadly of serpents. Its bite is said to inflict death within an hour, inducing a fatal paralysis, and causing the whole frame to dissolve in one putrid mass of corruption. What could more powerfully illustrate the terrors of the drunkard's end?

3. Its effect on the moral vision.—vs. 33–35. Alcohol injures the whole physical system, but its most disastrous work is wrought on the brain. As this organ is the seat of thought, and the source of all moral perceptions, it can readily be seen that a man who drinks habitually will be incapable of making any very clear distinctions between right and wrong. He will call evil good and good evil. He will practice licentiousness without shame, and utter foul blasphemies that would appall him if he had a clear brain. But he is not therefore irresponsible. When mind and conscience was unclouded he willfully and deliberately took the first step, knowing where it would lead. His responsibility began here—with his first glass. One of the most remarkable as well as sad things about a drunkard is that experience herself cannot teach him any lessons that he will remember. Much as he may suffer in body and mind, he is ready to fly to the very source of all his ills in order to purchase a temporary forgetfulness. The money worse than wasted in the liquor traffic would set all the wheels of industry in motion, and give everybody work at fair prices. It would save 60,000 precious souls annually from a drunkard's grave. It would empty our jails and almshouses, and save the country from a generation of young criminals who inherit tendencies to thieving and homicide from drinking parents. The only way to deal with the saloon is the way we deal with murder and arson—by strict prohibition.

LITERATURE.

ISRAEL'S MESSIAH: or, Why the Jews Reject Christ. By H. L. Hastings. No. 16 of the "Anti-Infidel Library—April, 1894." Paper, pp. 64. In English and Hebrew. Published by H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass. Price, 10 cents.

All Christians know, or should know, that when Christ came as the promised Messiah, or Deliverer, the Jews, with very few exceptions, refused to receive him. The reason of their rejection, as commonly stated, was his humble birth, obscure station during his youth and early manhood, and his peaceable method of living and teaching. Not even the mighty works which he wrought among them could remove the prejudice of their first impressions of him; and that he, of all men, could be the mighty man of war whom they expected to come as their champion, they would not believe.

Still they held, and do hold to this day, that their promised Messiah is coming. Some look ardently for him; but to others his long delay has brought doubt and discouragement. Yet the majority of them are still looking for him, and are still scoffing at the gentle Jesus, and laughing his Messiahship to scorn. The vail is still upon their hearts; "the blindness in part that hath happened to Israel" has not yet been removed.

In this little book Mr. Hastings has carefully considered this question at large and in detail. Not the least interesting portion of it is the quotation from the Jewish Times of December 6, 1877, in which the cause of their rejection of the Christ is explicitly stated in connection with the prophecies relating to the Messiah whom they were to expect and whom they are still expecting. Certainly these prophecies are wonderful in themselves, and some of them, it must be confessed, appear to have a closer reference to the Second Coming than to the first. As Christians of this day, living beyond most of the prophecies concerning Christ, and seeing their fulfillment already completed, we, too, with the Jews, are looking for the glorious appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ to rule and govern all his chosen people, both Jew and Gentile—when the blindness of vision and heart shall be taken away from all men, and Christ shall be revealed to us in his proper form and character, when he shall come as our Deliverer and King, to reign forever over all nations, sitting on the throne of his father David. May God hasten that day!

Mr. Hastings has wisely prepared a Hebrew version of his tract for the conversion of God's chosen people to this magnificent truth. It ought to be useful in establishing the co-existence of Jesus, "the carpenter's son," with their long-expected Messiah.

THE BABE OF BETHLEHEM: A Children's Rhyme of the Olden Time. By H. L. Hastings. Finely illustrated and handsomely bound in embellished cloth. 72 pages—large type. Boston: Published by H. L. Hastings.

Seldom has the story of the birth of Jesus been told in a more attractive form for the pleasure and benefit of children. The versification is marked by smoothness and a simplicity that, like the Bible version, confers upon the narrative the dignity which it deserves. No one can read it without a recognition of this charm. For the home or the Sunday-school it possesses a positive beauty and excellence.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

The Review of Reviews for May, in its Progress of the World department, covers the important topics of the national aid to the Nicaragua Canal, our position in the Pacific Ocean, the question of trans-Pacific cables, our policy in Samoa, England's administration of the Fiji group, Hawaii's constitution-making, the patrol of Behring Sea, England's costly armaments, the Pope and the French Republic, the premiership of Lord Rosebery, the eight-hours day in England and other affairs of international interest. In the field of domestic politics, the quorum question in the House of Representatives, the tariff and the income tax in the Senate, New York's reform movement, the abandonment of prohibition in Iowa, and the liquor question in South Carolina, receive editorial treatment; and comment is made on the careers of the late Senators Colquitt and Vance. This department is supplemented with advance announcements of the great conventions and summer schools of 1894. Much information is given which will prove useful to all who expect to attend any of the numerous gatherings to be held in the country during the next five months. Amply illustrated character sketches of Dudley Field and Louis Kossuth, and interesting notes on Bermuda and its Affairs, are among the original papers; and the other features of this magazine maintain the high standard which it has reached in our periodical literature. Published at 13 Astor Place, New York City. Price, 25 cents.

Scribner's Magazine for June concludes the half-yearly volume and presents several illustrated articles of superior merit. Among these we note one on Maximilian's unfortunate career in Mexico, by John Heard, Jr.; a paper by Philip Gilbert Hamerton on the paintings of Stanhope A. Forbes, with a full-page copy of one; a treatise on dogs and dog-peculiarities, by N. S. Shaler; American Game Fishes, by Leroy M. Yale, and the story of A Beautiful Thing, by Frances Hodgson Burnett. Archibald Forbes contributes an essay on The Future of the Wounded in War. John March Southerner, by Geo. W. Cable, and a Pound of Cure, by Wm. H. Bishop, are continued. These, with poems by Edith Wharton and Mary T. Wright, and some thoughtful editorials will furnish excellent summer reading. New York: Chas. Scribner's Sons, 151–155 Fifth Avenue. Price, 25 cents.

Fact and fiction, fun and reality, distinguish the June number of St. Nicholas, with dainty "pictures to match." The frontispiece is an art-gem—June Roses—timely and handsome. Among the literary attractions are continuations of Decatur and Somers, A Four-Leaved Clover in the Desert, Jack Ballister's Fortunes, and Rhymes of the States; also the following new "pieces:" The Little Dryad; The Saga of Olaf the Young; A Russian School; The Raccoon and His Friends; Reynard's Clever Escape; Historic Dwarfs—Zotof; The Discontented Stone-cutter; A Yarn of Sailor Ben's; The Spider's Tale; and other bits of story and verse, nicely illustrated, etc. New York: The Century Co. Price, 25 cents.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Baptists sustain, in the United States, seven theological institutions, with 776 pupils, and an aggregate value of property $3,401,618; thirty-five universities and colleges, with 9,088 pupils, and a property valuation, including endowment, of $19,171,045; thirty-two seminaries for female education exclusively, with 3,675 pupils and $4,121,000 of property; forty-seven seminaries and academies on the principle of co-education, with property amounting to $3,787,793; and thirty-one institutions for education of the colored race and Indians, having 5,177 pupils, and of property, $1,380,510. The number of educational institutions of all classes and grades is 152, of pupils 23,966; the aggregate of property being $31,862,902.—Standard.

—Secretary McConnell of the home board of the Southern Baptist convention said in Brooklyn: "The colored Baptists are doing exceptionally well. In every town they are the first to take to the field. I can point to a town where, after building their own church, the colored brethren took up a collection to help their white brethren build theirs. Think of it! In New Orleans we have three feeble churches in a white population of 200,000, while our colored brethren have fifty-seven churches among the 60,000 colored people of that city."

—The American Baptist Home Mission Society closed its fiscal year, March 31st, with a debt of $101,456.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

—The thirteenth International Convention of Christian Endeavor, which will occur at Cleveland, Ohio, June 11–15, promises to be the largest and best in the history of the movement. The arrangements, already completed, it is announced, will include "nothing dull or second-rate."

LUTHERAN.

—The attendance of several of our theological seminaries is as follows: United Norwegian, Minneapolis, 39; Augsburg Seminary, 28; at Robinsdale, 45; English Seminary at Chicago, 81, and 58 post-graduates; Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, 76; Wittenberg, Springfield, Ohio, 39; Gettysburg, Pa., upwards of 70.

—The English Lutheran church, of Youngstown, Ohio, in the last six years has added more than 700 members.

—The Rock River, Ill., Assembly will meet for seventh annual season July 31st to August 16th.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—In the Moody Bible Institute in 1893 there were 576 students, of whom 195 were women.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover. 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual. By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. Paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 328 pages. cloth. $1.00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

Canning fruit by boiling it in the jars is so laborious that I put it in agate ware, with the right amount of sugar, and boil more or less according to the kind of fruit, and then fill my jars. They do not need any preparation if they are clean; not even a wet towel around them. I never fill them in a draught but do not exclude air from the room. After putting in a little of the fruit I put my hand over the jar to steam half a minute, but do not think even that is necessary.

Some women can berries cold, by allowing one cup of sugar to a quart of fresh picked berries, letting them stand over night to make juice, when they can make just as much by sealing in the usual way.

Rhubarb keeps well by slicing and canning in cold water.

There are also many laborious ways of packing eggs. I often see in poultry papers many columns telling how to do it. I smile, and go right on with my simple method, which is to make sure the eggs are perfectly fresh, and then pack in a cool place, in a box or any convenient receptacle which is perfectly sweet, without any packing whatever, taking care to pack them on the small end. Never turn them when they are thus packed.

I also wish to tell how to salt beef so it will keep perfectly sweet. Put in a good clean tub, which will not leak, first a layer of coarse salt, then a layer of beef. Keep on until all the beef is in, finishing with a layer of salt; not a particle of anything else. It will make a brine which will keep forever for aught I know, but must never be scalded. When the beef thus kept is boiled, no one will want to leave the house because that beef smells, as it is so perfectly sweet.—Mrs. L. W. Owen, in the N. Y. Witness.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST

A Secret Empire;

Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.

By Rev. Richard Horton.

Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.

Price, 60 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. KIMBALL,
Box 277. Newmarket, N. H.

Hood's is Good It Makes Pure Blood

Scrofula Thoroughly Eradicated.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"It is with pleasure that I give you the details of our little May's sickness and her return to health by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She was taken down with Fever and a Bad Cough.

Following this a sore came on her right side between the two lower ribs. In a short time another broke on the left side. She would take spells of sore mouth and when we had succeeded in overcoming this she would suffer with attacks of high fever and expel bloody looking corruption. Her head was affected and matter oozed from her ears. After each attack she became worse and all treatment failed to give her relief until we began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. After she had taken one-half bottle we could see that she was better. We continued until she had taken three bottles. Now she looks like and is fat as a pig. We feel grateful, and cannot say too much in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. A. M. ADAMS, Inman, Tennessee.

The Bloom of Health

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Pills act easily, yet promptly and efficiently, on the liver and bowels. 25c.

CINCINNATI BIG 4 ROUTE CHICAGO ST. LOUIS CLEVELAND

SUMMER TRIPS To The

MOUNTAINS, LAKES AND SEA SHORE

SHOULD BE ARRANGED VIA THE

BIG FOUR ROUTE

TO SECURE ALL THE

COMFORTS OF HOME

WHILE TRAVELING.

WRITE FOR TOURIST BOOK.

E. O. McCORMICK, Pass. Traffic Mgr. | D. B. MARTIN, Gen'l Pass & Tkt Agt

CINCINNATI.

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—o:o—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

—freed from their seeds and skins, as fresh and sweet as when first plucked, are the grapes in

SANITAS GRAPE FOOD

Concentrated and Perfectly Pure.

It's a royal drink and (you wouldn't know it except by the good it does)—a medicine. It clears the vocal organs, soothes the nerves, purifies the blood and nourishes the weakest stomach.

Not a taint of alcohol is in Sanitas Grape Food—it's suited for table or sick-room.

A pint bottle	costs 75 cents	at your grocer's	or your druggist's.	Makes one-half gallon.

A Booklet about it mailed Free.

THE CALIFORNIA GRAPE FOOD CO.,
Los Gatos, Cal.

General Eastern Agency, 145 Broadway, N. Y.
General Pacific Agency, 408 Sutter St., San Francisco.
Chicago Selling Agent, Edwin E. Hills, 70 State St.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS

AND

REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S

—]-oo-[—

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.

Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS OF

FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FARM NOTES.

SUBSTITUTES FOR GRASS.

A Pennsylvania correspondent of the Ohio Farmer seeks light from the editor on an important subject which may interest some of our readers very much. We give the inquiry and the reply:

Inquiry—We live on a farm of sixty acres, all good land, but has been rented out for eight or ten years and the grass is all run out. We intend to run a small dairy and hennery. What is the best substitute for grass? Will some one of experience with cow peas give information how to sow alone and with oats? How much oats and peas should be sown per acre? Can they be threshed with our separators, or do they have to be fed on the straw? What is the best variety of corn for a soiling crop and where can it be purchased? Have any of your readers had experience with permanent pastures and meadows, as advertised in the Farmer by the Farmers' Seed Company? Will some one tell the best food for young turkeys?

Reply—Corn and the millets are good substitutes for grass, and before either is ready to feed, oats and peas come in, and if sown at intervals, make a large amount of feed. Some large variety of sweet corn for fall and very early winter is a strong feed to depend upon. You do not want to put in cow peas in Pennsylvania, but the Canadian field peas, or if the seed can be purchased reasonably, the smaller marrowfats. The cow pea in the North is only valuable to grow to plow under. For a soiling crop of peas, plow and fit the ground as if wheat was to be sown. Then sow ten pecks of peas to the acre and plough them under at least four inches deep with a common plough. This puts them into rows and so deep that they do not dry out and mildew. A week after sowing, broadcast on a bushel of oats and two or three quarts of sweet corn to the acre to hold the peas up, and harrow them in. As soon as the pods begin to form begin to cut and feed. Make at least three sowings of the peas. They may be cut while somewhat green and made into hay, or allowed to ripen some, and when dry they may be threshed or "tread out," and the straw saved to feed, and the grain ground. We doubt if there is any better corn-soiling crop than large sweet corn for early, and the genuine Virginia white corn for late feeding; planting the latter not over ten quarts per acre, and cultivating it very shallow, so as not to prune the roots.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MY EXPERIENCES
WITH
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY A TRAVELER.

With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is

Fifteen Cents,

but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

To Restore

hair which has become thin, and keep the scalp clean and healthy, use

AYER'S
HAIR VIGOR

It prevents the hair from falling out or turning gray. The best

Dressing

AMERICAN HANDBOOK
AND
CITIZEN MANUAL.
BY
MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chic

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT
of the Holy Ghost,
BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by perusing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

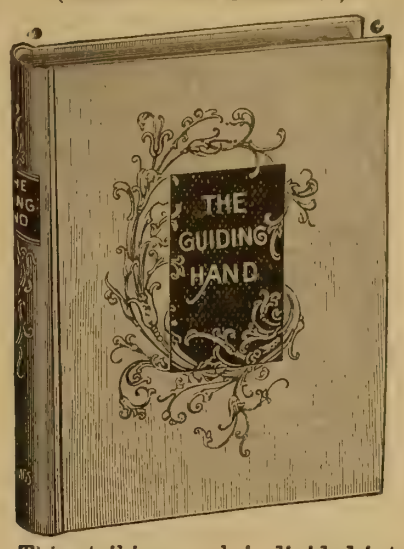
Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE GUIDING HAND;
—OR—
PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")



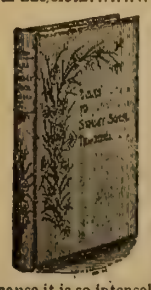
This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.
By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth.....75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Teloscope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	3	c.
The Lily	" " 8 "	Pure Words	" "	8	"
Light & L	Scholar's Qrly. 3 "	Light & L	Inf Cl. wk.	4	"
	Teacher's " 5 "		Lesson Leaf	15	"
Golden Treasures	1 "	L. & L. Primary	Qrly	4	"

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, & Sunshine, each Pr. Yr. 25c
The four to one address " 75c
Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr. 25c
Scholar's " " " 20c
L. & L. Infant Class, weekly, 25c

The Nonesuch Professor,

In his Meridian Splendor. By William Secker (Puritan). With an Introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. 16 mo, $1.00.

"It is a mine of sparkling gems."—Presbyterian Observer.

"A sheaf of golden grain, ripened by grace, and sweet with the flavor of rare simplicity and holy wisdom."—N. Y. Observer.

"It is a searching book."—Christian Intelligencer.

"This is a wonderful book. At whatever page you open it, your eye lights upon pithy aphorisms that combine the sententiousness of Benjamin Franklin with the sweet, holy savor of Samuel Rutherford. It contains hundreds of bright seed thoughts."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D

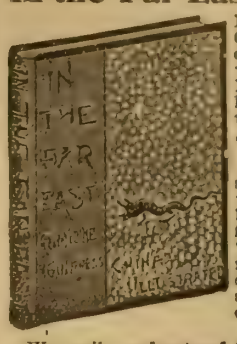
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations. $2.00

"A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa. • • • He who wants to know what missionary effort means in these days may well learn from this volume. • • • The reader who goes carefully through will have a good bird's eye view of recent events in Africa, with all the results of modern travel. • • • The work contains solid information of use to all who are interested in the future of this wonderful country. The many illustrations throw light upon savage customs and costumes."—Graphic.

In the Far East.

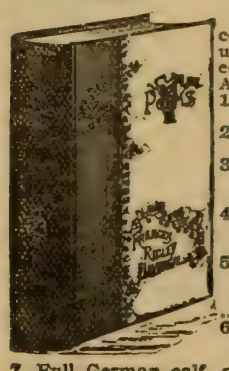


Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth, ...$1.50

This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. • • • We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort.—Presbyterian

We easily understand how this edition is the fifteenth thousand. It is a very remarkable book.—The Golden Rule.

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.



Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America.

1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled....2.00
2. Beveled boards, full gilt.....2.50
3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges, ...2.50
4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges...4.00
5. Persian calf, padded and emoossed, gilt roll and r. g. 5.00
6. Crushed levant, elegant.....6.00
7. Full German calf, padded, elegant, gilt, rd. cors.....7.50

Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall,
Bound in elegant illuminated board
Kept for the Master's Use .....
My King; Daily Thoughts for the Lord's Children.....

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50
Twelve Soul Winning Sermons, ... 50
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection 50
Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50
Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.

Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."

Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each.

Separate volumes may be had if desired.

The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00

An Eden in England.	Life in Eagle's Nest.
Ned Franks.	White Bear's Den.
Sheer Off.	Fairy Spider's Web.
Braid of Chords.	Lake in the Woods.
Silver Keys.	Seven Perils Passed.
Grace Vernon.	Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set 2.10

Jessica's First Prayer.	Friends till Death.
No Place Like Home.	A Miserable Christmas
Under the Old Roof.	A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth each 60c; the set.....4 20

Claremont Tales.	A Wreath of Smoke.
Christian Conquests.	Pomegranates from
Tales Illustrative of Parables.	Punjab.
	Little Bullets from
The Battle of Life.	Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80

Cassy.	King's Servant.
Lost Gip.	Alone in London.
Max Kromer.	Little Meg's Children
Storm of Life	Crew of the Dolphin.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Chicago lines will lose an enormous tonnage by the new rates from Duluth to New York and Boston, which have been put into effect.

Ten thousand men took part in the Memorial Day parade. Appropriate exercises were held in the various cemeteries following the decoration of the graves of the soldier dead.

Mrs. Paulina Wetzel dropped dead in the doorway of her home from grief at seeing her son under arrest.

Health officers who attempted to establish a quarantine at 764 Allport avenue and vaccinate the inmates were attacked by foreigners and badly beaten.

Memorial Day exercises were held in the public schools, speakers appointed by the Grand Army of the Republic making addresses.

Colored residents of Englewood have organized an association for the protection of their rights as citizens.

Creation of a fund for the purchase of a residence for the bishop was decided on by the Episcopalians in annual convention.

After a stormy session, bootblacks of Chicago formed a union and elected C. Jefferson King president.

Building operations for May show an increase of $1,137,575 as compared with the month last year.

Police have been ordered to assist the health officers in enforcing vaccination in districts where it is resisted.

Three children missing on the West Side are thought to have been lured away by kidnappers.

Output of beer in Chicago for May shows a decrease of 3,370 barrels. Tobacco figures show an increase over May of last year of 48,000 pounds.

COUNTRY.

Coxeyites in Wisconsin took possession of passenger cars on the St. Paul road and rode to Avoca.

Mrs. Mary W. Armour, of Westmoreland, N. Y., aged 70, a cousin of the Chicago millionaire, is mysteriously missing.

People of Fulton, Ill., have recalled their invitation to Colonel Breckenridge, of Kentucky, to deliver an oration there on July 4.

Officers dispersed strikers who were terrorizing miners at work at Pana, Ill. Many arrests were made.

Mine operators of southern Illinois refused to attend the conference at Springfield, and the strike was not settled.

Net gold exports from New York from Jan. 1 to May 26, inclusive, were $33,390,357, almost the normal maximum.

Senator Turpie has offered a joint resolution in the Senate to annul the treaty with Russia.

In a Memorial Day address at Galesburg, Judge Grosscup, of Chicago, declared further growth of industrial and labor organizations must be checked by law.

A Wisconsin Central passenger train was ditched at Manville, Wis., and six persons were killed and a number injured. The wreck caught fire.

Governors Matthews, of Indiana, and Pattison, of Pennsylvania, have issued proclamations warning striking miners of the consequences of riotous acts.

John A. Shackleford, a Logansport (Ind.) editor, has begun habeas corpus proceedings to recover possession of his wife, who is held captive by her stepfather.

Alexander Lindsay, his brother's three children, and Mrs. William Ingram were drowned in Smith Bay, Ontario, while fishing.

In a hurdle race at Phœnixville, Pa., two horses fell, and Arthur Davis and Guy Gilbert, their riders, were crushed to death.

Comptroller Eckles has asked national banks to assist him in securing figures on the credit business of the country.

Secretary Carlisle was before the bribery committee, and denied most of the statements made by correspondents.

The Lower House of Congress has passed a measure providing for an additional judge for the northern district of Illinois.

Governors of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia have been asked to serve as a board of arbitration to settle the coal miners' strike.

Striking miners searched all the houses in Barry, Colo., for firearms. Mine owners have left the district, fearing to be made captive.

Nearly three hundred War Department clerks were dismissed by Secretary Lamont in compliance with the provisions of the appropriation bill.

The French consul at New Orleans compelled a priest to retract certain statements made in a sermon, and a demand for the withdrawal of his exequatur has been made.

General Weaver was nominated for Congress by the Populists of the ninth Iowa district. J. H. Outhwaite was selected to be his own successor by Democrats of the twelfth Ohio.

FOREIGN.

A settlement of the dispute over the Irish parliamentary fund is said to have been reached and a decree will soon be entered.

In an address in Edinburgh, Henry Chaplin, ex-president of the board of agriculture, declared the fall in the prices of produce was due to the appreciation in gold following the demonetization of silver.

Giuseppe de Felice, a member of the Italian Parliament, was sentenced to eighteen years' solitary confinement for having incited disturbance in Sicily.

Young Catholics objected to the inscription on a wreath laid on the statue of Joan of Arc by Paris Masons and a riot followed in which many persons were injured.

In the British House of Commons the Minister of Agriculture denied the exclusion of Canadian and American cattle was with other intent than to keep out disease.

Germany has protested against the Anglo-Belgian treaty, alleging it to be a violation of the international African agreement.

Turpin, the inventor of melinite, is said to have sold to the German government the secret of the manufacture of a new explosive and projectile which will revolutionize.

A celebration of the Fourth of July is being arranged for by Brazil, to show her gratefulness to the United States for support during the recent civil war.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from May 28 to June 2:

S. H. Moore, S. Avery, C. E. White, Joel Fox, S. Dekker, J. Walter, J. D. Frick, H. Cope, Rev. E. S. Ternberg, A. Stalker.

To Restore

hair which has become thin, and keep the scalp clean and healthy, use

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

It prevents the hair from falling out or turning gray. The best

Dressing

THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Illustrated.

THE FULL

ILLUSTRATED RITUAL

OF THE

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine

PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid ..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid ..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARBOIN.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	55⅛@	57
Winter No. 2	53¾@	55¼
Corn—No. 2	37½@	39
Oats—No. 2	34½@	38
Rye—No. 2	48 @	49
Bran per ton	11 00	11 25
Hay—Timothy	7 00	@10 00
Butter, medium to best	11½@	15
Cheese	07¾@	09¼
Beans	1 25	@ 1 85
Eggs, fresh	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	3 00	@ 4 00
Flax	1 33
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 00	@ 9 00
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@70 00
Potatoes, (bu.)	65 @	90
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼@	06⅛
Lumber—Common	15	50
Wool (unwashed)	12 @	26
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 20	@ 4 55
Common to good	3 85	@ 4 30
Hogs	4 35	@ 4 80
Sheep	2 75	@ 4 75

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	56⅛@	56⅛
Corn No 2	42⅝@	42⅞
Oats	43 @	45
Rye	52 @	55
Eggs, Western fresh	11½@	12
Butter	09 @	17⅛
Wool	19 @	28

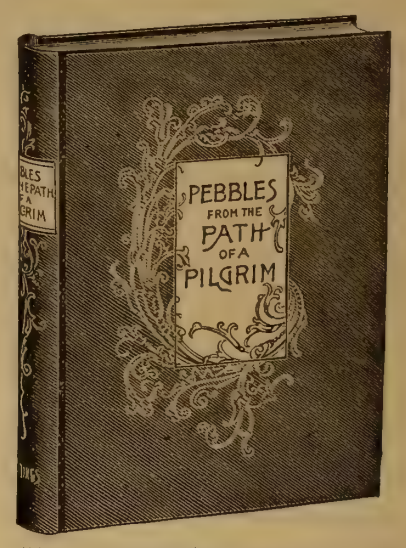
KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 35	@ 4 60
Hogs	4 30	57⅛

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book.... No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

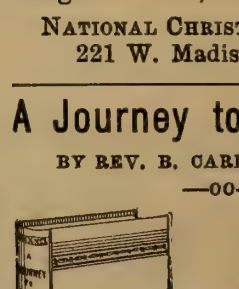
"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—



Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf ..... 1⅜c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅜c.

Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.

LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY		....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S "		....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE "		....3c.
" " " PRIMARY "		....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING

Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI, No. 40 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,259.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
"Liberal Religious" Bodies..... 8
Ohio Congregationalism and Secret Societies.. 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Christian Work for the Young..... 1
Sanctification..... 2
Bread Cast upon the Waters.....10
SELECTED:
Secret Societies for Women..... 3
"Lynching," a Return to Barbarism..... 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER....4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
The Augustana Lutheran Synod in Minnesota... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Reformed Presbyterian Synod; 'Kissing the Calves;" Stead's Book and the New "Liberal" Church; Bro. Cullor's Missionary Journey..... 5,6
Report of the New England Secretary..... 9
IN BRIEF..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
N. C. A..... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....12
LITERATURE.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS. 12
Catalogue of Publications 13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

We were shocked and pained to learn of the sudden death, last week, of Rev. C. V. Hughes, pastor of the Second Free Methodist church at Oshkosh, Wis. Bro. Hughes was extremely active in the promotion of the Wisconsin State Christian convention in opposition to secret societies last March, which was held in his church, and he was also elected secretary of the State Association. His able report of its proceedings appeared in the Cynosure for April 5. His loss will be deeply felt, both among his own church people and those engaged in our reform. We are without particulars of his death, but expect to receive them at an early day.

On the fifth page of this issue will be found the proceedings of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod at Philadelphia, kindly reported for the Cynosure by Rev. J. M. Foster. The evidences which it furnishes of the church's design to prosecute its various reforms with fidelity and energy are cheering to the Christian heart. The synod, it will be observed, heartily endorses the National Christian Association in its opposition to secret societies, and recommends its work to the moral, active and financial support of Reformed Presbyterian congregations. This is the synod's welcome response to the action of the recent annual meeting of the N. C. A in its appeal to all friendly churches for their co-operation.

The business situation at the close of the week showed only a little better outlook with only 2,937 coke ovens working and 14,576 idle. With the Cambria discharging half its force and seven out of nine of the Carnegie furnaces at Bessemer out of blast; the production and manufacture of iron and steel are smaller than at any other time for years. While it is believed that deferred work will cause heavy production after the strike terminates, the demand for products is at present much below general expectations even at the East. Other industries have been less affected, but many of the textile mills even in New England have now been closed for lack of fuel or of orders, besides other concerns in great number between the Atlantic and the Mississippi river. The returns of failures are still encouraging, 216 in the United States for the week against 322 last year, and forty in Canada against twenty-seven last year. It is somewhat encouraging that the decrease in payment through clearing-houses is but 24 3 per cent for the first week of June, 27 2 at New York, but only 19.4 elsewhere. The decrease in comparison with 1892 is about 30 per cent. At the banks general business was quiet. Money was easy.

At their Springfield (Ill.) State convention, recently, the Populists, in their declaration of principles, after adopting one relating to the labor question, added their reliance "upon the operation of the initiative and referendum for its practical operation." Thus a public measure may originate with the people, and be sent to the legislature or Congress, to be framed and made a law. In this case the initiative is in the people. Or, a measure may originate in the legislature or Congress, but cannot become a law until it has been referred to the people for approval or rejection. In this case the initiative is in the legislature or Congress. In either case the measure is referred to the people for final action, and this comprises the referendum. The reference is always to the people. The legislature may enact, amend or reject a measure, whether it originates in that body or comes from the people, but the latter have the last word in making it a law. The idea is an enlargement of the old Massachusetts town-meeting law, and is a restriction upon corrupt legislation, bringing into force the principle that the majority should govern, with the consent of the governed. It is the principle extolled in the Declaration of Independence.

To show how intimately connected the secret organizations are with the saloon interests, we have only to cite a recent transaction in Ohio. John McBride is at the head of the bituminous coal miners' strike, and is, of course, an oath-bound member of their labor union, or he wouldn't be in power. At Massillon, owing to the strike, the coal supply ran short, and among those with whose business this scarcity seriously interfered was the Massilon Brewing company, by whom application was made to McBride, as a special favor, for permission to purchase some coal. But the brewery was only one of the many organizations which were suffering from the restrictions of the strikers. There were transportation companies, factories, water works, gas works and electric works, and the homes of citizens, all languishing for the lack of coal. Yet no one but the brewery company seems to have asked any special favor of the strikers. Mr. McBride, however, promptly granted the desired concession, giving as his reason: "The company declares that it has $15,000 worth of beer in process of manufacture, all of which will be ruined unless coal can be obtained at once." Hence the brewers won the day. The lesson is obvious. In the words of a contemporary: "A strike against using beer would be more rational and profitable than the present strike against the operators of bituminous coal mines." In this connection the reader will find some very appropriate verses on the ninth page of this paper.

The strictures of the New York Voice upon the American Protective Association are pungent and worthy of careful attention: "The society claims a membership now of from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000, and the boast is made that it had more influence in the last elections throughout the country than the currency question had. The trouble with the society is not with its published platform, but with its secret methods. Form a secret society for political purposes in this country, and though its platform were written by Gabriel, it would soon develop into a mischievous and unwholsome affair. Its inevitable tendency is to become a shield and a cloak for intriguers and for assassins of character." Very much of what the Voice says of the A. P. A. in this paragraph applies with equal force to the older and stronger secret orders, which, while they claim to be non-political, yet carry their influence into political campaigns and, if possible, maintain the balance of power in the interest of their lodge companions. It is the secret machinations of all these societies that are mostly to be feared. There is no worse enemy than the armed foe in ambush.

Powderly, the suspended magnate of the Knights of Labor, does not propose to succumb quietly to the action of the order, but is airing his grievances in courts of justice. At his instance H. B Martin, of the General Executive Board of the Knights, was arrested for alleged "criminal and malicious libel." On the other hand, the Knights of Labor Journal intimates that Mr. Powderly is wrongfully withholding an official ritual (we believe), claimed to belong to the Executive Board. This secret work, entitled "The Philosopher's Stone," was given by Uriah S. Stephens, founder of the K. of L., to Mr. Powderly It is given only as a special honor to those who render certain services to the order. When demand was made by the new Executive Board upon Mr. Powderly for this work, he shortly replied as follows: "U. S. Stephens bestowed 'The Philosopher's Stone' on me upon condition that I should never impart it to any undeserving or unworthy person. I cannot disclose it to yourself or associates on the General Executive Board.'" Other papers also are involved in the dispute, and suspension followed the refusal. Mr. Powderly and Mr. Wright have also brought suit against the order for a balance which they claim is due them on salary account. Now that the fracas has landed these parties into open courts of justice, some new developments of lodge character are likely to be exposed.

CHRISTIAN WORK FOR THE YOUNG.

BY MRS NATHAN WARDNER.

There are five reasons why young people should engage in active Christian work.

First, for their own good, or for their development in spiritual life. The first step in the divine life is regeneration, an instantaneous work, to be followed by development; a progressive work ever increasing in power while life lasts, and if our views of the future are correct, throughout eternity. When a child is born into the world, although it possesses actual life, it must be fed, or there will be no physical development. When we are born into the kingdom of God we are spiritual babes, and if we ever grow up into the full stature of men and women in Christ Jesus we must be fed with spiritual food. If it were possible to feed a child only enough to keep it alive, what would it amount to? Could it fulfill life's mission in that condition? Yet how often we see spiritual children that seem to partake of only food enough to keep the breath of life in them—babes all the days of their lives—clogs to the church, which, instead of being able to devote all of its energies to the salvation of the lost and feeding the new lambs of the flock, must spend a great deal of its time in caring for these grown-up infants. Those Christians who require three-fourths of the pastors' and deacons' time to keep them alive religiously have never been developed.

Perhaps it would be well for us to inquire what this spiritual food is. On a certain occasion, when the disciples asked Jesus to eat, he said: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of. My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me." This then is the spiritual food—"doing the will of God," imparted by his grace.

It is of great importance in entering this Christian warfare, that we commence right and have a correct understanding of first principles; in fact, there can be no real success unless the foundation principles are rightly comprehended; but having these properly fixed in our hearts and minds, the apostle admonishes us to "go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God." If we go on unto perfection we must certainly engage in active work for the Master, for this is "doing the will of God." We must imitate the example of Him who went about doing good, seeking not his own pleasure, but the salvation of the lost. But here we must be careful that we are doing even this for the glory of God, or, instead of its feeding our spiritual natures, it will only stimulate our pride and vainglory.

Secondly, on account of the magnitude of the work. When we look at the question from this standpoint, our spirit would almost die within us, were it not for the words: "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth," and "lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the ages."

The work to be done, who can measure it? Who can comprehend it? A world in ruins. Vast multitudes of human beings having no hope, and without God in the world, sporting on the brink of eternity; and each moment of time plunges hundreds into the blackness of darkness forever, and so few to lift up the banner of the cross and proclaim salvation through Christ alone! Is it any wonder that Paul cries out—"who is sufficient for these things?" I am thankful that this same Paul also says: "Our sufficiency is of God."

Thirdly, on our young people must soon devolve the burden of the work, and it will require the best possible service. It will be better for the cause, and much easier for the workers, when that time comes, if there has been previous training. Untrained soldiers will hardly do for the first ranks. Then, too, the young need to commence while they have those more advanced in the work with them to advise. How many mistakes the young make, and how much valuable time is wasted that might have been prevented, had advice been sought from those more experienced. The growing disrespect for age, which we see all around us, is an alarming feature of the present day. Young America thinks a little too much of its own wisdom, and not quite enough of the wisdom of those who have borne the burden and the heat of the day. Experience is a good teacher. He imparts instructions that can be gleaned from no other, and that are not easily erased from memory's tablet. Let us, who are young in the Christian warfare, think of this, while we have these aged veterans of the cross with us. One by one in rapid succession they are passing to "that country from whose bourne no traveler returns." Perhaps the lips that to-day might give us words of infinite value may to-morrow be still in death, and, mingled with the beautiful flowers strewn upon their graves, will be found sad regrets that we paid so little heed to their counsels while they were with us.

Fourthly, because of their consecration. No greater reason than this can be assigned. We speak of consecrating ourselves to the work, and perhaps that is well enough, but it is our consecration from God that we wish to speak of here. When we accept Christ as our Saviour we are consecrated priests unto God. Perhaps we have not realized this, but the fact remains the same. A glance at the consecration of Aaron's sons as priests, may enable us to understand our own consecration better. Before they could be consecrated the sin-offering must be slain. Moses brought it forward, and they laid their hands upon its head, and he slew it. Here we have identification. The sin-bearer takes the sins and impurities of the sinner, and the sinner takes the purity, innocence, and spotlessness of the sin-bearer. Wonderful thought! Christ, the spotless one, stood before God in all of the sin, pollution, and degradation of the sinner; and when the sinner accepts Christ he stands before God in all the innocence, purity, and spotlessness of Christ. Marvelous transformation! Oh, for hearts to comprehend it! There can be no consecration until we come to the sin-offering. We cannot be worshipers until we take the place of the lost sinner and accept the death of Christ in our stead, and then God consecrates us to himself, and by this act we are separated from the world and to God.

After the sin-offering and the burnt-offering had been slain, the ram of consecration was brought forth. Aaron's sons laid their hands upon its head, and Moses slew it and took of the blood and put it upon their right ears, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet. After this the anointing oil, symbolic of the Spirit, was put upon them, and thus they were consecrated, or set apart, for the service of God. So when we lay the hand of faith on Christ, God consecrates us priests, and henceforth we are no more our own. There was also a basket of consecration, containing their food, a type of our spiritual food. And, lastly, they were to abide at the door of the tabernacle all the days of their consecration, and keep the charge of the Lord.

My dear young friends of the Endeavor, these are the days of our consecration. From the moment we accept Christ to the present, right on down to the end of life, body, soul and spirit—all that we have and are—are holy to the Lord, and to us the command comes: "Abide at the door of the tabernacle and keep the charge of the Lord." Are we doing it? May God, in his infinite power, help us to realize the responsibility of the position we hold. The consecrating blood is upon us, and it is none other than the precious blood of Christ. It is upon our ears, and we can listen to no communication that is not in harmony with his will. Not only will the blood compel us to bridle our tongue, but to close our ears against all corrupt, impure, and slanderous messages. It is upon our hands, and we can touch nothing that will not be for the glory of God. This is practical. It comes down into everyday life, and goes with us into the kitchen, the schoolroom, on to our farms, or wherever we may be. The consecrated hand must touch no unhallowed thing. It is upon our feet, and we can go in no society that will dishonor the name of Jesus. If this thought were always in our minds, what a power for good our lives would be!

Lastly, on account of the reward to be obtained. We are not working for Christ to purchase our salvation, as some seem to think. We are not working to our salvation, but from it. Christ does not teach and drill us all our lives, and not save us until death, but he saves us in the first place, and then trains us and drills us for his service and his glory. Salvation is a gift; all we have to do is to accept it; but there is a reward promised to all those who serve. God will reward every man according to his works. Those that do little for Christ must expect a small reward.

A young man converted on his deathbed, said to his friends: "I have no fear of death, for Jesus saves me now; but oh, how can I go to meet my Saviour empty-handed? Not one soul with which to greet him. If I could only recall the years I have wasted in sin, how gladly I would give them to my Master."

We are assured that "he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." But oh, where will be the crown of rejoicing for the idlers in the vineyard?

The message to the church in Philadelphia contains the following words: "Hold fast that thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

A few years ago I read of a minister who felt strongly impressed to go to a certain village and labor for the salvation of souls. The village was in a terrible state of demoralization, and not a Christian within its limits. The minister battled with his convictions for some time, but finally told the Lord he must excuse him; he couldn't go there. With this the conviction left him. Shortly after this he heard that another minister was there at work, and a mighty work of grace was going on. He was considerably exercised over it, and while in this state of mind, dreamed one night that he died and went to heaven. An angel met him at the gate, and was conducting him through the city and showing him its beauties. In a little while they came to a large number of beautiful crowns which the angel told him were kept in reserve for the laborers in the vineyard on earth. While gazing with intense satisfaction upon them, he spied one much more beautiful than any of the others and containing a larger number of stars. He ventured to ask who it was for? "That," replied the angel, "is the one that was intended for you had you gone to that village and done the work required of you; but you refused, and the crown will be given to another." A solemn lesson that we will do well to heed.

I have heard people say that if they could only get through the gate of heaven and see it shut behind them, it was all they asked. Perhaps I am more ambitious than such persons, but I don't want to go to heaven in that way. I want to hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done!"

I think much of the advice of the sainted Dr. Mackay, couched in the following language: "Dear fellow-servant, get so accustomed to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ, and him alone, that your entrance into glory will not be unnatural, and thus an abundant entrance will be yours." Should not that be a noble end to attain? Can anything be more soul-inspiring than that thought? May God, in the fullness of his love, so overshadow us with his presence, from day, to day that we shall be enabled to do properly our work, and when called to our final account, may we go with rejoicing, heavily laden with golden sheaves gleaned for our Lord and Master.

Milton Junction, Wis.

SANCTIFICATION.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

This is a much abused word. It is taken by a certain class to signify absolute personal holiness. But in this sense it is true of no mere man in this world. "There is not a just man upon earth that doeth good and sinneth not." But in the Scripture its root idea is separation. God sanctified the Sabbath in separating it from a common to a religious use. In this sense the tabernacle, the temple, the altar, the priests and the people of Israel were sanctified and made holy. In this sense Christ was sanctified by the Father and by himself. It is used to signify the revelation of the glory of God. God sanctified his great name before the Chaldeans in the captivity and deliverance of the Jews. Moses sanctified the Lord before Israel in smiting the rock and bringing water for the thirsty people. It is also used to indicate the personal likeness of the believer to Christ. "And the God of peace sanctify you wholly."

I. What is the nature of this sanctification? I answer: (1) It is the work of God's Spirit. Believers are enjoined to sanctify themselves. Moses said to Israel: "Sanctify yourselves to-day and to-morrow, and the third day the Lord will appear." That means, "cease to do evil, learn to do well." In 2 Tim. 2: 16, Paul said: "In every great house there are vessels of gold and silver and earthenware, and some unto honor and some unto dishonor. If a man purge himself from these (erroneous doctrines and unscriptural practices) he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use, ready unto every good work." Dishes used at the table must be washed before they can be used again. When the Master uses his servant, defilements of pride, selfishness, and vanity are contracted and we must be cleansed. So Christ said to his disciples that when a man was invited to a feast he bathed and went to the house of his host. But the dust of the way defiled his feet. So they must be washed. "He that is bathed need not to wash, save his feet only, but is clean every whit." But this is God's work. The prayer of Christ was: "Sanctify them through thy truth." Sanctification differs from justification. The latter is without, the former within the man. One is the judicial act of God the Father; the other a moral transformation by God the Spirit. "God in justification imputeth the righteousness of Christ; in sanctification his spirit infuseth grace and enableth to the exercise thereof. In the former sin is pardoned; in the other it is subdued. The one doth equally free all believers from the avenging wrath of God and that so perfectly in this life that they never fall into condemnation; the other is neither equal in all, nor in this life perfect in any, but growing up unto perfection." Sanctification is distinct from regeneration. In regeneration a new life is communicated to the soul; in sanctification that new life is developed. The seed is planted in the garden of the soul by the Spirit in the first; in the second it grows and bears fruit, in some thirty, in some sixty, and in some an hundred fold. In one case we are born of the Spirit and become new creatures in Christ; in the other we grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The dead soul is quickened by the Spirit, and then by exercise it develops until it comes to the measure of the stature of the fullness of a perfect man in Christ. As God separated the Jews from other nations to be his peculiar people, so the Spirit of God selects and calls and purifies the covenant children of Jesus Christ. "Select according to the foreknowledge of God through sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience and the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." (2) It transforms the whole man. "The very God of peace sanctify you wholly." Moses sprinkled the anointing oil upon the tabernacle and its furniture, and sanctified them. The temple was made holy in a similar way and could not be used for secular purposes without sin. Hence Christ drove out the sheep and oxen and overthrew the tables of the money-changers. The holy oil was to be put on the tip of the right ear, upon the thumb of the right hand and upon the great toe of the right foot of every priest for his sanctification. He was thus wholly dedicated to God's service. Every believer is a temple of God. "The temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." He is also a priest unto God, anointed by the Spirit. His mind is anointed and he understands the Word. His will is anointed and he gladly yields to the Word. His heart is anointed and he surrenders himself gladly and irreversibly to the personal Word. His whole being is anointed, and he says: "For me to live is Christ." "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God that worketh in you to will and to do of his own good pleasure." He is now God's steward. All his time is devoted to Christ and he uses one-seventh in religious services, as a recognition of Christ's right to all. His property is Christ's, and he devotes one-tenth to Christ's church as an acknowledgement of his right to all. (3) It is a progressive work. It is like the growing grain. First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear. It is the babe, the youth, the man. "As new-born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." Strong meat is for them that are of full age, having their senses exercised. It is like the progress of a runner. "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with diligence the race set before us." "Not as though I had already attained, neither were already perfect; but this one thing I do, forgetting the things that are behind and looking forth unto those things that are before, I press forward toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." There is progress in sin on the part of the wicked. "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Through New York and Ohio there is a line of cleavage. God has upheaved the earth and made a dividing ridge. On one side the water flows to the northern lakes; on the other down to the Gulf. Regeneration is the upheaval of the Spirit of God in the soul. Without that change our life flows backward and downward until it falls into the lake of fire. With that change, our life flows onward and upward until it empties into the crystal sea. There is daily progress. "So they from strength unwearied go still forward unto strength, until in Zion they appear before the Lord at length."

II. What are the evidences of sanctification? (1) A growing hatred of sin. An ungodly man may hate sin because of its disgrace and punishment, while his heart is in love with it. But the believer hates sin because it is an evil. God hates sin. He cannot look upon sin. The believer has the mind of God, the same choices and aversions. Job was a man of God. He feared God and eschewed evil. And yet after his trial of affliction and his views of God's glory by his voice out of the whirlwind, Job saw sin in a light before unknown. "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee: wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." Isaiah was the Lord's prophet. But it was not until he had seen the glory of the Lord in the temple that he cried: "Woe is me; I am a man of unclean lips." The nearer God we are, the more we abhor sin. It was after Paul had led multitudes to Christ and had written many epistles, and had shown himself a pattern in good works, that he cried: "Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" A growing sensitiveness to sin, a growing uneasiness and discontent with ourselves, is the best evidence that the old man is dying and the new man is gaining the ascendancy. The house of David waxes stronger and stronger; the house of Saul waxes weaker and weaker. (2) A growing delight in the ordinances of Christ's house. In the fifth chapter of the Song of songs, the virgins ask: "Who is this that cometh up out of the wilderness, like pillars of smoke perfumed with myrrh and frankincense." The believer comes up out of the world to the church of God and his soul ascends to God in the ordinances as the smoke from the altar of sacrifice. Hence in the 8th chapter, the question is: "Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness leaning upon her beloved?" The believer enjoys sweet fellowship with Christ in the ordinances. Hence David said: "Like as the hart for water brooks in thirst doth pant and bray; so pants my longing soul, oh God, that come to thee I may." "My soul for God, the living God, doth thirst; when shall I near unto thy countenance approach, and in God's sight appear." "One thing I of the Lord desired, and will seek to obtain,—that all days of my life I may within God's sight remain." (3) A growing desire for heaven. Some one has said, There are two things on earth most beautiful: a little child, before sin has hardened him, and an old man, after grace has softened him. It is said the Swiss, in a foreign land, are filled with homesickness because they do not see the snowcapped Alps that formed a part of their lives. The believer, as he nears the end of his journey, has this homesickness. "He is in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." A boy at college often thinks of home and loved ones. But when his course is almost completed and the time draws near for him to return home, his anxiety increases and his excitement intensifies. As the believer finishes his earthly course and nears the time when he will go home to his Father's house, his thoughts and affections are lifted up in anxious anticipation. "For me to live is Christ; to die is gain." I have seen a picture entitled "The Soldier's Dream." He slept on his arms on the night between a two-days' battle. In his dream he saw the old home, his wife and their child in her arms, little Willy opening the gate and a soldier with his knapsack walking toward it. Underneath was written, "Coming home." That is a picture of the soldier of the cross. He is weary with fighting. His soul faints. The Lord gives his beloved sleep. He dreams of the land of Beulah, the city of God, Jesus, and the glorified.

Boston, June 1.

SECRET SOCIETIES FOR WOMEN.

Secret orders are finding some trouble keeping the women quiet. Feminine curiosity does incline to pry into the mysteries of these benevolent societies, for the protection and help of every able-bodied man who is able to pay his dues.

The only wonder is that women have remained as quiescent as they have.

The Masonic fraternity had to quiet them by getting up the "Order of the Eastern Star." The Odd-fellows organized the "Rebekahs," a sort of a side-show, to keep the dear creatures from becoming uncomfortably curious. And now the public press acquaints us with the fact that the "Knights of Pythias" will be compelled to fix up some sort of a sham, and call it a heathenish or meaningless name, in self-defense. It seems too bad that the "lords of creation" should be so annoyed by curious women, in their innocent little amusements. All this calls vividly to mind the patronizing manner in which we have seen boys provide their little sisters with some silly amusement that they might have something to do and not interfere with the manly sports of their brothers.

It would be a good thing for the world if woman should positively refuse to be put off in this manner. She ought to be curious in regard to these things. God has created her as she is and she has an opportunity of using the inquisitive faculty in his service, in probing secret societies to the core. The moment the womanhood of this nation determines to penetrate the mysteries of these secret orders, or know the reasons why, that moment would decree their downfall. Men would abandon their orderr rather than have laid open to the knowledge of their wives and daughters the things done of them in secret. How long would men tolerate in women a course similar to that which they ask women to tolerate in them. Suppose the wives and daughters should be gone night after night until a late hour in attendance upon lodge meetings, and all surrounded by an air of mystery and secured by guarded doors and terrible oaths. Would the "lords of creation" meekly submit to this without protest? It is more probable that a kind of modern inquisition would be instituted at once and every head of a family a self-appointed inquisitive general, with high authority to know why he was being left out in the cold. If every woman, instead of being quieted by the sop thrown to her, would scorn it and turn on the fierce light of her penetrating inquiry, secret societies would go down as certainly as Sisera, by woman's hand.—Christian Nation. May 30.

"LYNCHING," A RETURN TO BARBARISM.

According to statistics published by the Chicago Inter Ocean there occurred in the United States up to May 5th, this year, no less than fifty cases of lynching. Of these, four were perpetrated in Kansas, two in Ohio, two in Indiana, and one in Pennsylvania, while forty-one belong to Southern States. Of these Alabama heads the list with eleven; next come Louisiana with nine and Arkansas with seven.

Apologists for the savagery in the South generally offer the excuse that lynchings occur as a natural result of the uncontrollable feeling of indignation on the part of the white population when the daughters and wives are assaulted by black brutes—a sense of honor requiring that the dearest heritage of man must be defended and avenged. Thus a prominent bishop of the Methodist church, last October, when a Negro had been burned at the stake after first having been subjected to tortures after the manner of the most cruel savages, wrote in the Forum:

> Unless assaults by Negroes on white women and little white girls come to an end, there will most probably be still further displays of vengeance that will shock the world. Sane men who are just will consider the provocation. Sane men who are righteous will remember not only the brutish man who dies by the slow torture of fire; they will think also of the ruined woman, worse tortured than he.

This has been the essence of the apology offered for the Southern lynchings, but from the statistics gathered it is evident that the plea is not well sustained, for of the forty-one cases of murder by mobs in the South, only eight victims were killed for such offenses, while all the balance were accused of less grave crimes and some were only suspected.

The fact of the matter is that the frequent recurrence of killing by mobs, whether the victims be colored or white, is the outgrowth of a lawless spirit and the desire to gratify the brutal craving for personal revenge common to man in a certain stage of moral development. It is on a level with duelling, street fighting, family feuds, vendettas and similar embodiments of the jurisprudence of a barbarous age. The people resorting to such means may be advanced in every other respect and stand in the front ranks of the nineteenth century civilization, but the very fact that they prevent the law from taking its regular course proves that they morally stand on the level of Corsicans, Afghans and Montenegrians, whose first thought is of the stilleto or other weapons of the assassin. To offer any apology for such deeds is to retard the needed progress towards a higher plane of morality and is to be deplored, especially when it comes from teachers of religion.

The safety and progress of any people depends on the sacredness with which the laws are regarded. When the execution of those laws has been entrusted to certain officials, the people must sustain them in the performance of their duty. To act otherwise is to break down one of the safeguards with which civilization is surrounded. It is anarchy in its nature; it is murder. The continuation of the practice breeds contempt for the law and the executors of the law, and unless the nation some time rises in its majesty and puts a stop to the outrage, the spirit of lawlessness will spread until the hand of everybody may be against everyone else, and nothing but might be recognized as right.

The law itself recognizes the exception of revenge taken by an injured party in the case of a delictum flagrans, but no excuse can be offered for any other case of killing by private citizens. Lynchings do not stop the crimes; on the contrary they seem to multiply. Horror breeds horror, and crime generates crime. It is time to wake up over the situation and bring some potent influence to bear upon the people so as to subdue the beast within and make it obedient to the laws of the country and the dictates of an advanced civilization.—Exchange.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Growing old.—Rev. I. J. Lansing's new crusade.—Foreign ignorance.—King Alcohol scores another victory.—The A. P. A.—A Masonic minister. Wellesley festivities.—A symposium on preaching.

People who have a terror of growing old, and it is as natural with some persons as the fear of death, may well take heart when they see how gracefully men and women who have served best their day and generation descend into the vale of years. Last Sunday was the 75th birthday of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who never considers herself "too old" for anything, whether it be in the line of philanthropic work, or taking up such a study as Greek when she had reached the allotted "threescore and ten." "I think I enjoy the coming of old age, with its peacefulness, like the going down of the sun," was one of her sweet and inspiring utterances on this occasion. "It is very lovely to me." God meant our last days to be our best days, and that is a false view of life which reverses the divine order.

Rev. I J. Lansing has driven home many a sharp lance in the fight with Rome, but, like every true reformer, he can ride several hobbies at once. He has undertaken to do a work in Boston somewhat similar to Dr. Parkhurst's in New York. His charge against the police force of collusion with the keepers of gambling dens and other vile resorts he is prepared to substantiate at the right time and place. Of course he gets more gibes and sneers from the daily press than encouragement, and there are the usual would-be witty allusions to Mrs. Partington and her broom. But who are the real Mrs. Partingtons?—the people who, like Dr. Lansing, would build the strong dyke of legal prohibition against the vast tide-waters of evil that are threatening to overwhelm society; or that "silken, velvety sentiment," as he well calls it, which prefers by a system of license to curtail and restrict, instead of destroying sin;—which chooses the broom instead of the dyke? Meanwhile Dr. Lansing's scathing accusations have caused considerable fluttering at headquarters. Evidently the hot shot he has poured into their ranks has hit somewhere. Probably they, with the keepers of bagnios and other disreputable haunts, who feel that their craft is in danger, discern a new and most significant appropriateness in Park street's old-time sobriquet of "Brimstone Corner."

There are fifteen thousand Italians in Boston. People talk of the ignorance respecting our history and national institutions shown by the foreigners who come from southern Europe, but they have little idea of the real density of that ignorance. This was well-illustrated on the evening of the 18th of April, when lanterns were hung in the steeple of the old North church to commemorate the signal-lights, "one if by land, and two if by sea," that were displayed to guide Paul Revere when he took his famous ride. Among these poor superstitious Italians, who had probably never read a scrap of American history in their lives, and could not have told the difference between George Washington and Nero, the strange theory became current that these lanterns were hung out to commemorate some miracle of divine power in the past, which had caused lanterns to be supernaturally displayed in order to thwart his satanic majesty, when to carry out some fiendish plan he of the cloven foot had put out all the lights in the steeple. Mr. May's Mission, and that of Mr. Conte, a native Italian worker (particularly a little four-page sheet issued monthly by the latter for the special instruction of his countrymen), are bright lights in this sea of darkness, which it is to be hoped no efforts of Satan or his emissaries will ever succeed in dimming. When such material becomes naturalized and a part of our political life, American citizenship will be, or rather it is already, a thing of iron mixed with clay, and very miry clay indeed.

Griffo is not a gorilla or a chimpanzee, though the name has a certain Darwinian suggestiveness. He is the Australian prizefighter who has succeeded Sullivan in the affections of that portion of the Hub who delight to honor the heroes of the prize-ring. He resembles that worthy in occasionally taking not one but several glasses too much; but is unlike him in the fact that he knows his weakness, and he lately signed the pledge at one of the Murphy temperance meetings held in a church at the South End. But alas, poor Griffo! Though the winner of 150 battles all told, he has not been able to win in the fight against King Alcohol, who has again floored him ignominiously. Mere strength of muscle, or even iron-clad pledges, avail little against this terrible Goliath of the liquor traffic. Only the power of Christ in the heart can wield the sling and stone which will make him fall powerless.

Supreme Vice President Fawcett of the A. P. A., speaking at the People's church a few nights ago, devoted considerable time to answering the objection that it was a secret institution. This is significant. There has been a great change in the sentiment of the public on this subject within a few years, and even the A. P. A. leaders feel the pressure.

I notice in the Boston Journal that Rev. Mr. Frost, the doughty champion of forty-three degrees of Masonry, whose discourteous treatment of Bro. Stoddard at Springfield, and, prior to that, at the Baptist Ministers' meeting in Boston, will be remembered by Cynosure readers, has been dismissed from his membership in the Second Baptist church at Palmer, Mass. Very properly they refused to give him a letter to the Tremont church, which he attempted to join without this formality, and thus led to investigations, which show him to have been guilty of very unministerial conduct, to say the least. The hearing was a private one, but the press report says: "There will be further developments in the case." The people are slowly getting their eyes open to the temporal and spiritual harm which a Masonic pastor can do to a church, and the time will come when an avowed member of the fraternity will find it as difficult to obtain a pastorate as if he owned to holding shares in a distillery.

Wellesley is very gay with social festivities of one kind and another. Tree Day gave opportunity for some brilliant masquerading on the part of the students, which ranged from Grecian Psyches, with purple wings, to gypsies dressed in all the colors of the rainbow. Of course, it was a pretty sight, and the musical and literary parts of the program were finely carried out. The costumes, however, were, many of them, too much on the decollete order to suit with the day, which was cool and showery, and the result has been a plentiful crop of colds. It is a question whether so much social festivity coming at a time when the students are supposed to be straining every faculty to prepare for their examinations does not have more to do with the fact that so many go home nervously exhausted than the amount of study actually done. Of course when a girl breaks down and cannot complete her college course, the reason is always that "she has been studying too hard," when, in fact, hard study alone never kills, any more than hard work. It is the worry of trying to do too much. It is the strain of the social life added to the exacting demands of the scholastic life; and only a constitution of iron can stand both. There is a growing feeling that it is time to call a halt in this direction, but much depends on the next president.

The Congregationalist has just published a kind of symposium of the pews, as to the sort of preaching that laymen like. The replies are not so different but they can be easily reduced to one composite whole—more of Christ, more of his teachings applied to the problems of practical, everyday life. It is Christ who is to draw all men unto him, not literature, science or humanitarianism. That pulpit will have the most "drawing" power which can best show forth the principles of Christianity as a practical and ever living force in the world of to-day.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

Don't forget to subscribe for the new monthly.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1894.

In view of recent happenings in connection with and on account of the strikes in the coal mines of the country, a bill prepared by Representative Kiefer, of Minnesota, is worthy of more than a passing notice. The bill is now being considered by the House Committee on Labor to which Mr. Kiefer referred it for amendment and suggestions before formally introducing it in the House. The bill provides for a National Board of Arbitration, to which all labor disputes shall be referred, and the decisions of which are made as binding as those of a federal court. The board is to consist of five members, one of which shall be the U. S. Commissioner of Labor and another the governor of the State in which the dispute is to be arbitrated. It provides that applications for arbitration may be made—always to the governor of the State in which applicants reside—by either employers or employes. There is only one obstacle to the passing of this or a similar bill by Congress, but that is a serious one, inasmuch as it involves the construction of the Constitution of the United States. It is argued by the opponents of the idea, who admit that it would be a good thing, that Congress has no authority under the Constitution to establish such a board, it having no jurisdiction over the internal affairs of the several States. The idea appeals strongly to the large and growing class which believes arbitration to be the proper method of settling all disputes, whether personal, national or international, and the hope that Congress will adopt it in some shape is frequently heard. A similar bill has been introduced in the House by Mr. Houk, of Tennessee.

Several things have made foreign missionary matters conspicuous in our churches this week. Sunday evening Rev. Hugh W. White, of Va., who will start for the interior of China about the last of next month, where he is to be maintained as a missionary by the Central Presbyterian church, of this city, and the Loudon Street Presbyterian church, of Winchester, Va., of which his father is pastor, preached a missionary sermon at the former church, and on Monday evening was given a reception by the Laura Pitzer missionary circle of the same church. Sunday the regular choirs at the Church of the Covenant and at All-Souls' church were displaced, the first at the morning and the last at the evening service, by the native African choir organized by a missionary and now making a tour of the United States under the charge of Rev. James H. Balmer and Miss Clark, returned African missionaries, as a living object-lesson, showing what the missionaries are doing for the Africans, and at the same time to raise money to build a training and industrial school at St. Philip's Mission, Grahamston, Africa. There are fifteen in this choir, six men, seven women and two children, one a Bushman, the other a Hottentot. They are from seven different tribes, and dress in native Kaffir costume. They sing both in English and in their native language, and will remain in Washington for a few days, singing in the churches. They have been away from home since February of last year, and have not yet decided just when they will return. Rev. William P. Chalfantand his wife, who have long been engaged in Chinese missionary work, delivered entertaining addresses at the annual mite-box opening at the Metropolitan Presbyterian church last night, on their Chinese experiences.

Some very instructive facts in connection with temperance work among the ten or twelve millions of German and Scandinavian Lutherans in the United States were stated in addresses made at the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the dedication of the Luther Place Memorial church, last Sunday. It was shown that the interest of the Lutherans in temperance work is largely in excess of that of many other denominations, and that it is exceeded by few, if any, of the others. These facts are worthy of the prayful consideration of some of the churches which are not as zealous in behalf of temperance as they might be.

The W. C. T. U. of Albuquerque, New Mexico, has founded an orphans' home, and under its auspices are taking steps to incorporate. This is the first institution of the kind under Protestant management in the territory.

REFORM NEWS.

THE AUGUSTANA LUTHERAN SYNOD IN MINNESOTA.

ST. PETER, Minn., June 8, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A ride of two and a half hours up the valley of the Minnesota river on the beautiful bright summer morning of June 6, and I was transferred from St. Paul to St. Peter. The two cities are of about the same age; at one time they were rivals, not for the honor of saintship, but for the honor of being the capital of the State. Then both of them were small villages; now, in an old railway guide, one is quoted with a population of 133,156 and the other 3,671. St. Peter claims that her defeat in the race for the honor of being the capital was caused by the dishonest act of St. Paul in stealing the bill for the removal of the capital from St. Paul to St. Peter while the bill was pending the action of the Legislature. However that may have been, St. Paul could not steal from St. Peter that with which God has so richly endowed her, namely, a charming landscape. When we think of a line of Bishop Heber's hymn: "Every prospect pleases, and only man is vile," we think of the impropriety of naming these two wicked cities in honor of God's holy apostles.

Upon my arrival here I was glad to greet many pastors whom I had met before in their respective churches. It had been arranged to have an address in the evening on the subject of secret societies; accordingly, in the evening, a highly intelligent audience assembled for that object, composed almost entirely of Christian ministers. Our well-known friend of the reform, Rev. L. G. Almen, presided. Rev. J. Telleen, of Rock Island, who is superintendent of foreign missions for the general council composed of English, German and Swedish Lutherans, conducted devotional exercises by reading the first chapter of Romans and leading in prayer. On the front seat sat Rev. P. Sjoblom, president of the Minnesota Christian Association; near him sat Rev. J. A. Frost, Rev. J. P. Aurelius, and others personally known to us as friends of the anti-secret movement.

One of the most important things before this synod at the present time is the subject of secret societies, which will be in order for discussion today or to-morrow.

Another thing of importance is the ordination of thirty-one candidates to the work of the gospel ministry. All, or nearly all, of the candidates are graduates of the Augustana Seminary of Rock Island, Ill. One of them, Mr. Rosenthal, is a converted Jew. His field of labor is designated to be at Fort Dodge, Iowa. We were glad to meet another true son of Abraham, who is such both in spirit as well as name, in the person of the reporter for the Inter Ocean, Mr. Schaap, who is here taking notes of the synod for the paper he represents.

Another subject before the synod was that of representation. Heretofore the rule for delegates has been to have the pastor and one layman from each congregation delegated to represent them in the synod. But hereafter they purpose having only one pastor and one layman to represent fifteen hundred communicants. The object of this change is to reduce the numbers in attendance at the annual meetings of the synod. The field of this synod covers the entire continent of America. Including the pastors and lay-delegates, the entire number of visitors to this meeting is between 600 and 700. The officers of the synod consist of Rev. P. J. Sward, D. D., president; Rev. M. C. Ranseen, vice president (and also vice president of the N. C. A.); Rev. Theodore Kjellgren, secretary, and Mr. C. G. Thulin, treasurer.

At this session of the synod the degree of doctor of divinity has been conferred upon Rev. P. J. Sward, Prof. N. Forsander, Rev. P. Sjoblom, Rev. S. P. A. Lindahl.

Rev. L. Skrefsrud, Ph. D., of Santhalistan, independent missionary with Rev. Mr. Boerreson, began a mission in India 27 years ago, having only $50 in hand, with no one to support them, either in India or in Europe. They have nevertheless been so successful in their work that many thousands of native heathen have been truly converted from the most degraded forms of heathenism to Christianity. Dr. Skrefsrud attends the synod; and he delivered a sermon full of life and spirit, illustrated with thrilling experiences of the power of God on his field of labor. He held the undivided attention of his large audience for more than two hours. He, many years ago, joined the Freemasons, but relates that he entirely gave it up many years ago; has not been in a lodge for twelve years, and now belongs to no lodge.

W. FENTON.

Please renew your subscription now.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

PHILADELPHIA, June 5, 1894

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Synod met here on Wednesday, May 30, 1894, at 10 A. M. The pastor of this congregation (the Second R. P. church), Rev. J. C. McFeeters, was elected moderator. The retiring moderator, Rev. A. J. McFarland, preached the usual opening sermon on the evening of that day. The other evenings were devoted to public meetings previously arranged. Thursday evening was given to missions.

The meeting was held in the First R. P. church, Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., pastor.

Rev. Dr. Matheny, of the Syrian mission; Rev. Mr. Carithers, of the Indian mission in Indian Territory; Rev. Mr. McIsaac, of the Southern mission, Selma, Ala.; Mr. Myers, a converted Hebrew, conducting a Christian Hebrew mission in Cincinnati, were the speakers. Prof. D. B. Wilson presided.

It was a rare treat. The hearers were won.

On Friday evening a meeting was held in the Third R. P. church, Rev. Mr. Montgomery, pastor, in the interests of the young people. Rev. T. P. Robb presided. The speakers, Rev. Mr. Carlisle, of Newburg, N. Y.; Rev. D. C. Coulter, of Kansas; Rev. Mr. Martin, of New Castle, Pa., and Prof. R. J. George, D. D., spoke with wisdom and earnestness.

On Monday evening a meeting was held in the Second church in the interests of reforms. Rev. H. H. George, D. D., spoke on the Sabbath; Rev. D. McAllister, D. D., LL. D., on Romanism; Rev. C. D. Trumbull, of Morning Sun, Iowa, on Temperance; Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., on Divorce; Rev. R. C. Wylie, on National Reform. Rev. M. A. Gault was to have spoken on secret societies, but was absent through indisposition. This meeting was a grand success and indicated that this church is still in the front rank in the public movements and moral issues of the day.

The question of leading interest before the synod was the appeal from the Geneva congregation of Beaver Falls, Pa., from the decision of the Pittsburgh Presbytery, in refusing to ordain and install their pastor-elect, Mr. H. G. Foster. The presbytery refused to go forward with the settlement of their licentiate, solely on the ground that there was a large and influential minority in the congregation protesting. The appeal was supported in synod by Prof. D. B. Wilson, D. D., of Allegheny, Pa., and President W. P. Johnston, of Geneva College. The presbytery was defended by Rev. R. C. Wylie, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Rev. D. McAllister, D. D., LL. D., of Pittsburgh, Pa. The parties were heard at length. Friday afternoon, Saturday afternoon, and all day Monday were occupied in these addresses. The vote was taken by roll-call. The appeal was sustained by a vote of ninety-one to forty-one. The synod by a vote of fifty majority decided that a presbytery has not the right to refuse to grant the majority in a congregation their legal and orderly obtained rights on the ground that there is a large and influential minority setting themselves in opposition without cause. In this case there were no valid causes brought forward as the ground of opposition, and it is not believed that any such causes existed.

The report on Secret Societies was read by Rev. J. C. Smith of Cincinnati. It is well-known that this church requires absolute separation from all secret, oath-bound societies, as a condition of membership. It goes without saying that they are glad co-operators with the National Christian Association in their long-drawn battle against the secret empire. This work was recommended to the moral, active and financial support of our congregations.

Synod resolved to push the matter of political dissent. Rev. A. J. McFarland, of St. John, N. B., was appointed as synod's agent to devote his time to this work. The appointment was accepted. It is understood that he will visit the Covenanter congregations in the States and preach to our people, to the end that they may be stimulated, and to others that they may be instructed in the great doctrines of Christ's mediatorial authority over the nations, the duty of loyalty to his crown rights and royal prerogatives, and the obligation of Christ's people to separate themselves from all political alliances that are inconsistent with unquestioned allegiance to the King of kings.

The report on National Reform was read by Prof. R. J. George, D. D. It was a paper in advance of anything heretofore presented. The synod continues to co-operate with the National Reform Association. An appropriation of $7,000 was made.

J. M. FOSTER.

"KISSING THE CALVES."

MT. WASHINGTON, CHELSEA, Mass.,
Fifth Month, 30th day, A. D. 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Said the religious leaders in Israel to every worshiper, when the people had "deeply" corrupted themselves: "Let the men that sacrifice kiss the calves." Hosea 13:2.

Do we wonder that the apostasy of Israel, at the time when God sent his prophet Hosea to cry: "Thy calf, O Samaria, hath cast thee off," is commended to us as the true standard by thy Boston correspondent, J. M. Foster, in his letter on "Brotherly Love," published in the Cynosure of the 24th instant? Very truly he says: "So the soldier of the cross loves all Christ's people." Amen, say all Christ's people.

Then comes the command to kiss some sectarian calf. "But it is subversive of church order and efficiency to pretend to serve Christ upon undenominational lines." A Christian may firmly decline to kiss the calf of any man-made ism at the bidding of any and of every leader in calf-worship, even though he write "Rev." before his name or D. D. after it.

A Christian may courageously testify that it is subversive of sectarian disorder, and that it promotes the order and efficiency of the church of Christ, both to serve and to pretend to serve Christ upon lines purely Christian and undenominational. Preacher Foster says: "We cannot be Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Methodists and Baptists promiscuously."

Certainly not, if we are loyal to Christ only.

Whatever calf the inhabitants of our neighborhood go a whoring after, Christians must be Christians, pure and simple. Whatsoever is more or less than this cometh of evil.

Not all the sectarianism in the world can save one soul; how then can any one sect give eternal life? The whole is greater than any of its parts, but zero added to zero several times does not produce something. Every man who will is at liberty "to serve Christ upon undenominational lines." And only by continuing in the Word of Christ incorruptible can we have true liberty. Bro. Foster will find his condition improved by coming up higher.

In the love of Christ, his servant,

WM F. DAVIS.

STEAD'S BOOK AND THE NEW "LIBERAL" CHURCH.

CHICAGO, June 2, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Before me is Stead's book, and on page 347 I find remarks by one of its readers, at the conclusion of the chapter entitled "The Conscience of Chicago." Mr. Stead's closing sentence is: "All the forces of civilization and of religion will work for the establishment of the civic church." Stead says, on page 342, "We believe in God and in humanity." That seems to be the creed of Stead and also of the religious congress which convened in this city May 23–25, 1894. But we quote the remarks of Mr. Stead's commentator: "There is much in this chapter akin to the new church project of the 'Liberal' societies which met in Sinai Temple May 23–25, whose chairman was Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas (ex-Methodist), and whose secretary was Rev. Mr. Jones (Unitarian, or more so), and which declared its love for humanity, and into the membership of which every one in the world was invited who had any or no religion. It could not be called Christian, from the fact that the Jew, Dr. Hirsch, of Sinai Temple, was called on to pronounce the benediction. Of course, he did not do so in the name of Jesus the Christ, 'the way, the truth and the life,' who said: 'No man cometh to the Father but by me.' What then? Shall we adopt the name of 'civic church,' and work for it to become 'the established church' of the United States (or America, as preferred)?

"If Stead, Thomas, Hirsch and the societies of scientists, etc., are its appropriate heralds, why is not also Mr. Ingersoll among them when the 'civic church' shall have clearly ignored the Lord Jesus Christ?"

Cynosure readers will see at once that such an "American Civic Church" would be an established civic teacher of the religious creed of Freemasonry, which welcomes members of any other religion so long as itself is held supreme; and thus our Christ becomes no more than any of the false Christs and systems that are a curse to the world. Yours, SENEX.

BRO. CULLOR'S MISSIONARY JOURNEY.

MONTROSE, Mo., May 28, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been on the road nearly three weeks, coming from Holyoke, Colo., with a wagon and team, driving about forty miles per day. I started with a roll of Cynosure tracts that I have had laid by for a long time, determined that if there was a chance to say anything I would use it—not by exchanging views on crops, labor, etc., but that which more vitally affects us—our spiritual depravity, accompanied by our financial depression.

I have interviewed forty-four men and three women on the subject of secret societies and their effects—their non-confirmity to the word or law of God, as set forth by Jesus Christ and his apostles. Twelve of these persons were in five groups; the others were individuals. The three preachers with whom I conversed were a Free Methodist, a Cumberland Presbyterian, and a Liberal U. B.—each strictly opposed to secrecy, but not in harmony with the Word. I say, God pity the man who will oppose one sin and preach up another!

One man, a Freemason, and a prominent figure in the organization and work of the Farmers' Alliance, said that he had never before heard such a man as I am. After glancing through "Freemasonry Illustrated," he said: "It is nearly right." Talking an hour or two, I drew a large circle, representing the highest degree of Freemasonry, to which all the others are subject, and which is the parent of all secret orders, its blood or members being found in all of them. Then I drew another circle inside of the first, to represent the Odd-fellows, with its life-blood running through all the minor secret orders. Inside of that I drew still another circle, to represent the Grange, the Grand Army of the Republic, United Workmen, etc. In all this I told him he could see the folly of his labor. He counseled me to be careful of that book, for the Masons would take it from me. He also said that when I got to heaven to tell that Christ of mine the reason he was not there—that he could not believe that verse in Numbers 30: 7—"Her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand"—seemingly wanting me to reason with Christ on this matter; but I told him how vain it was in the case of Dives, Lazarus and Abraham of which our Saviour tells us.

Another man said: "Do you believe that God would stoop so low down, be so little, and so unmerciful, as to punish all these poor people for the meanness that a few have done?" I said: "Let us change that a little. Let us say, Is it possible that I will stoop so low down, be so little, and so unmerciful to my own son!, that I will not believe the Word of God?

Another man gave me a hearty farewell handshake, and said: "Be awful careful, for two men were killed below here (Kansas City) lately."

I scarcely saw a secret society badge after I left Superior, Neb., except at a G. A. R. sermon, yesterday, at Crayton, Mo. In the Sunday-school there the question was brought out, "Why did not Moses go on in the deliverance of Israel when he had slain the Egyptian?"—which led to the expression I made, that many of our preachers nowadays start from their parents, who educate them for the ministry before they are sent or called of God to go, and go of themselves without that divine order which Moses received.

I remain yours in the true spirit of Christianity, J. T. CULLOR.

CYNOSURE OFFER!

Any of the Books sold by the N. C. A. in this paper, ordered, with subscription to the Cynosure, at one-fourth off from list price, sent postpaid.

The New Volume of Pen and Pencil Series.

WELSH PICTURES Drawn with Pen and Pencil.

By D. Lewis Jones, Morris Jones, Edward Ffoulkes, H. Elvet Lewis, D. Tyssil Evans, D. Davies and O. M. Edwards. Edited by Richard Lovett, M. A. With many Illustrations. Imperial 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, boxed..... 3.20

"'Welsh pictures' is the work of ten Welshmen, among whom illustrating the beauties of Wales has been parcelled out according to the special familiarity of each. The result is a pleasing volume."—London Times.

THE EARTHLY FOOTPRINTS OF OUR RISEN LORD, Illumined.

A continuous narrative of the Four Gospels according to The Revised Version, with introduction by Rev. John Hall, D. D. Illustrated by 113 full-page half tone re-productions. Small 4to, cloth.....net 1.50
Gilt edge, with silk book mark, boxed.....net 2.00
Full morocco, flexible, gilt edges, round corners, boxed.....net 3.75

Pictures reflecting the best in sacred art from Raphael to the present day are scattered profusely through the book.

"To many the life of the Christ will be a new book in this form. Though beyond the introduction it contains no word except what is found in the four Gospels, yet when read continuously, without the breaks necessarily made by the different stories of the four evangelists, the narrative takes on new force and lifelikeness. The very fact that this is not, our usual method of reading the Word will give it a new reality."—Golden Rule

A GIFT OF LOVE, and Loving Greetings for 365 Days.

By Rose Porter. Long 18mo. Paper cloth..... 1.00
White cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.25
Decorated silk, silver top, in box..... 1.75

"'A Gift of Love' is the work of a loving heart. It contains a text of Scripture for every day of the year with the addition of an appropriate thought in poetry of prose all bearing on the theme of love. The work must have called for a great amount of patient toil. But it has not been spent in vain, for the volume will prove a blessing to many a soul. To use it day by day for a year thoughtfully and prayerfully, must result in a rich growth in love on the part of the user. The author is well known and esteemed for her previous works' sake."—The N. Y. Observer.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE SERIES.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer, containing CHRISTIAN LIVING, THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE, AND THE SHEPHERD PSALM. 3 vols. in box. 18mo, cloth..... 1.50
White vellum cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.75

D. L. Moody says: "Few books of recent years are better adapted to instruct and help Christians than those of this author. He is a man mighty in the scriptures, saturated with Bible facts and truths."

PRAYERS FROM THE POETS.

By Martha Harger. 16mo, two colored cloth, gilt top..... 1.00
Leatherette, boxed..... 1.50

"This volume is admirable. The Prayer are better suited to some of our moods than formal Litanies and are selected from excellent sources. The book will be a dear treasure to many hearts."—The Churchman.

KIN-DA-SHON'S WIFE.

An Alaskan Story. By Mrs. Eugene S. Willard, Home Missionary of the Presbyterian Board of America to Alaska. With illustrations. 8vo, cloth..... 1.50

"Being a close observer and in deep sympathy with the native population in their struggles towards a Christian Civilization, Mrs. Willard has gained a more intelligent knowledge of their character, of their needs and hindrances, than perhaps any other person."—Dr. Sheldon Jackson.

HEROES OF THE GOODWIN SANDS.

By Rev. Thomas Stanley Treanor. With many illustrations. 8vo, Cloth..... 1.50

"It is a book of most engrossing interest, and as stimulating as it is readable."—The Record.
"The deeds of daring are thrilling in the extreme. Suitable for the public library or for the home."—Times.

THE GREAT LONDON DAILIES.

By H. W. Massingham. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth..... 1.00

Very welcome to all who like to look behind the scenes and see how the great London dailies are worked.

New Editions.

The Prayer Meeting and Its Improvement.

By Rev. LEWIS O. THOMPSON. Eighth edition, cloth, $1.25.

"Most heartily do we wish this work a wide circulation, both among pastors and people, and we hope it may do much toward the lifting of the prayer-meeting into that higher place which it ought to hold among the grand instrumentalities in the kingdom of the Master."—Congregationalist.

"We do not remember to have met with a work so suggestive, and we heartily commend it to both pastors and private members."—Baptist Weekly.

The Crisis of Missions. By Rev. ARTHUR T. PIERSON, D. D.

Cloth, $1.25; paper, 35c.

"We do not hesitate to say that this book is the most purposeful, earnest, and intelligent review of the mission work and field which has ever been given to the church."—Christian Statesman.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.

By HANNAH WHITALL SMITH. One hundredth thousand. Issued in fourteen styles, from 50c. to $2.50. Send for circular.

"To commend this work would seem almost superfluous; and yet to young Christians who may not know it, we cannot refrain from saying, Buy this book, and keep it with your Bible for constant study, until you have thoroughly mastered, in your own experience, the 'secret' of which it tells. It will transform the dark days of your life, as it has transformed those of thousands before you, into days of heavenly light."—New York Evangelist.

The Topical Text Book. Fourth edition.

16 mo., cloth, 60c.

This little volume is a worker's most useful tool. It collates all Scripture passages under their topical headings, and for this reason proves far more helpful in studying a subject than the best concordance.

"I find one of the very best ways to study the Scripture is to study topically."—D. L. Moody.

Stalker's Life of Christ. Twelfth edition.

Stalker's Life of St. Paul. Fourth edition.

12 mo., cloth, each, 60c.

These works by Professor James Stalker, M. A., are unique in their compact putting of these lives into such condensed form without injurious brevity. They are being taken up as text books by Biblical classes in all parts of the country, thus proving their practical value.

Grace and Truth under Twelve Different Aspects.

By W. P. MACKAY, M. A. Paper, 35c.; cloth, 75c. Two hundred and fiftieth thousand.

This remarkable sale can only be attributed to the very practical character of this work as a guide to the inquirer and a work of helpful instruction for the immature Christian. It is of this volume Mr. D. L. Moody said: "I know of no work in print better adapted to place in the hands of the inquirer."

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

By S. R. BRIGGS. Sixtieth thousand. 8 vo, cloth. $1.00; flexible, 75c.

Edition after edition of this work has been called for until it would seem the demand must be supplied. The sales however, increase rather than otherwise.

Feathers for Arrows. By Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.

16 mo., cloth, $1.00.

Few preachers have made such effective use of pointed illustrations as the well known pastor of the great Metropolitan Tabernacle. Here he has given us a large cluster of his best with liberty to enjoy and employ.

Revell's Record for Church Treasurers.

Size No. 1, $1.50; Size No. 2, $2.00.

Popular because practical - valuable because time saving—the only record for weekly envelope system that reduces the treasurer's work to the minimum.

For sale by the

National Christian Association;

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

Artificial whalebone is now made by treating leather first with sodium sulfid, and then with potassium sulfate, stretching it on a frame and drying slowly at a temperature of 50 to 90 degrees centigrade.

Pasteur, the French scientist, has shown that all fruits and vegetables when undergoing even partial decay contain bacteria which, if taken into the stomach, may cause disease. Fruit grown near to the ground may contain the bacteria of typhoid fever, tetanus, diphtheria, or cholera, which may have found their way into the material used for fertilizing, or may have become incorporated with the dried dust. Hence one should never neglect to cleanse fruit. Especial care should be taken with imported or shipped fruit—more particularly that from districts where there are infectious diseases.

A writer in the London Notes and Queries says: "It is worth while recording that the 'penny in the slot' automatic machine was known in the time of Hero of Alexandria, who describes in his 'Pneumatics' a sacrificial vessel which flows only when money is introduced. When the coin is dropped through the slit it falls on one end of a balanced horizontal lever, which, being depressed, opens a valve suspended from a chain at the other end, and the water begins to flow. When the lever has been depressed to a certain angle the coin falls off, and the valve, being weighted, returns to its seat and cuts off the supply. Hero's date is a little uncertain, but he is supposed to have lived B. C. 117–81."

A simple method of testing drinking-water is to put into a perfectly clean bottle with ground-glass stopper five ounces of the water to be tested. To the water add ten grains of pure, granulated, white sugar. Cork tight, and set in a window exposed freely to light but not to the direct rays of the sun. Do not disturb the bottle, and keep the temperature as near to 70 Fah. as possible. If the water contains organic matter, within forty-eight hours an abundance of whitish specks will be seen floating about, and the more organic matter the more specks. In a week or ten days, if the water is very bad, the odor of rancid butter will be noticed on removing the stopper. The little specks will settle to the bottom, where they appear as white flocculent masses. Such water should not be used for drinking.

The Boils Disappeared.

I was afflicted for a long time with boils. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla they disappeared very quickly and I have had no more since. W. E. JAQUITH, 307 Court Ave., Des Moines, Iowa.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.
For Catalogue, address
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

MY EXPERIENCES WITH SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY A TRAVELER.
With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is
Fifteen Cents,
but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

CURES OTHERS

To build up both solid flesh and strength after grip, pneumonia, fevers and other prostrating diseases, there is nothing to equal Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

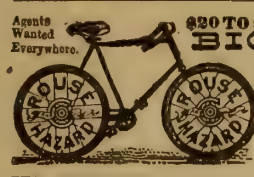
PROSTRATION FOLLOWING GRIP.

MRS. GARRETT.

MRS. REUBEN GARRETT, King George C. H., Va., writes: "I was taken with grip which finally resulted in pneumonia. Was prostrated for three months. Had a terrible cough and was emaciated and very weak. Was fast drifting into "quick consumption." The doctor gave me medicines all the time. I grew weaker. He advised cod liver oil emulsion. I took two bottles of it without any relief. I had pain in my left shoulder and back. I wrote you, and you prescribed your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took only one bottle before I felt better. After two bottles I could sit up, and felt I had been saved from the grave. I increased rapidly in flesh and strength."

WHY NOT YOU?

Agents Wanted Everywhere.



$20 TO $60 SAVED ON NEW BICYCLES
$125 high grade Safety $50; $100 pneu. $60; $40 cush. ball $20 etc. Largest and oldest dealers in U.S. Easy payments We sell everywhere. Catafree. Rouse, Hazard & Co., Mfrs., 4 G St., Peoria, Ill.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits.
FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.
OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention the Cynosure when writing.

IF YOU WANT WORK

that is pleasant and profitable, send us your address immediately. We teach men and women how to earn from $5 per day to $3,000 per year without having had previous experience, and furnish the employment at which they can make that amount. Capital unnecessary. A trial will cost you nothing. Write to-day and address,
E. C. ALLEN & CO.,
Box 1001. Augusta, Me.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.
Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY M. HUGUNIN - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1894.

"LIBERAL RELIGIOUS" BODIES.

The Reform Advocate, dated Chicago, June 2, 1894, contains a complete stenographic report of the proceedings of "The First American Congress of Liberal Religious Societies, Held at Sinai Temple, Chicago, May 22–25, 1894." It is an official publication, and whatever appears in its pages must be taken as authentic and authoritative.

This "Congress" was the outcome of a circular letter issued by Hiram W. Thomas, a high Mason, and an expelled Methodist minister, and now pastor of a so-called "people's church" in a theater in which this sort of "liberal" worship divides the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath with profane dramatic performances. Mr. Thomas, however, had associated with him in the call for this congress the following other "liberals": Dr. Wm. S. Crowe, a Universalist minister and editor of New Jersey; Dr. Emil Hirsch, a Jewish Rabbi, of Sinai Temple, and professor of rabbinical literature and philosophy in the Baptist University of Chicago, and Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, minister of All-Souls' church, an "advanced" Unitarian and writer of "liberal" poems, stories and essays.

The congress organized with Hiram W. Thomas in the chair. In his address the chairman welcomed those present as "Jews, Christians, orthodox and liberals, ethical-culture societies, educators, and representatives of labor unions." He might, with equal propriety, have included Freemasons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, and a score of other secret societies, whose religious tenets are exactly in line with those of the congress over which he presided. Addresses were made from "the independent," "the ethical-culture," "the Jewish," and "the Unitarian" standpoints. The Universalist endorsement would have been included, but death interfered to prevent its presentation.

This congress is acknowledged as an outgrowth of the celebrated World's Fair Parliament of Religions of last year, the evil effects of which, so far as vital Christianity is concerned, are manifest in many directions. We notice that Mr. Thomas, in his welcome, addressed himself to Christians. If any were there, it must have been as spectators of the proceedings, which were, throughout, devoid of Christ and his atonement as the only salvation of sinners. Of course "the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man" came in for a very large and distinct recognition, but that is only a very small and indefinite part of Christianity. It forms a religion that cannot be perfected unless Christ is admitted to the family as the only Saviour of men, by whom alone all mankind may reach the true idea of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Yet this congress and every sort of "liberals" cast him out of their synagogues, or reduce him to their own diminutive ideal of human brotherhood, with all its weaknesses and errors. So do the Freemasons, the Odd-fellows, the Pythian Knights, the Theosophists, the Spiritualists, the free-lovers, the secularists, and all the host of man-made religions, whose followers prate of "brotherly love," yet ignore the Elder Brother and his glorious position in the family of heaven; he to whom the Father hath committed all judgment—"that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him."

Christians can have no fellowship with these apostacies.

OHIO CONGREGATIONALISM AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

During our civil war there was an enormous growth of Freemasonry and other secret societies. This was not strange, since war always loosens the restraints of morality and tends to a general corruption of society.

But the deep feeling awakened by the Morgan murder and the discussion of 1826–1840 had not altogether subsided. Many of those who took an active part in that great moral upheaval were still in active life, and could not regard with indifference such a manifest deterioration of public conscience. Some of the Congregational ministers throughout the Northwest took the alarm. The State associations and conferences of Ohio, Wisconsin and Iowa passed strong resolutions against Freemasonry and the entire secret lodge system. This was followed by similar action on the part of many local churches, notably the two Congregational churches of Oberlin.

The subject was brought before the General Conference in Ohio at their meeting in 1867, and a committee (of which Prof. John Morgan, of Oberlin College, was chairman,) was appointed to report at the next yearly meeting.

Meanwhile Pres. Chas. G. Finney wrote a series of articles on Freemasonry for the Independent, which then represented the Congregational denomination, and was very generally taken by Congregational ministers. In these articles he gave his personal experience as a Mason, and, together with a most powerful argument, a brief history of the previous Anti-masonic discussion. These articles, with additions, were published by the Western Tract and Book Society, and, through the beneficence of Dea. Philo Carpenter, were placed in the hands of all Congregational ministers who would receive them. Nor did the Congregationalist and the Advance fail to publish strong articles against the Masonic system. The National Christian Association was organized; the publication of the Cynosure was begun, and there was an awakening all along the line on this momentous question. No one man contributed so much to this awakening of the church as the late Pres. Jonathan Blanchard.

At the meeting of the Ohio Conference, at Painesville, in 1868, Prof. John Morgan, of Oberlin College, made the report, which was accepted, and the following resolutions were adopted:

1. Resolved, That the disciples of Christ are, by their profession, the children of light, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, which they are bound to reprove; that secret, oath-bound organizations, Masonic and others, are alien from the simplicity of the Christian faith, and of evil and dangerous tendency; and we exhort our fellow-believers to refrain from them, cleaving to Christ as their Master and to the church of the living God as the pillar and ground of the truth.

2. Resolved, That while fully sympathizing with the cause of temperance, and desirous of promoting its interests in all legitimate ways, we regret that so many of its faithful friends have felt called upon to put forth their efforts in its behalf under cover of secrecy, thus practically excluding from co-operation very many of the most devoted friends of a most worthy cause.

3. Resolved, That the thanks of this conference be returned to Rev John Morgan, D. D., for his able and interesting "Report on Secret Societies," and that he be requested to place the same in the hands of the Western Tract and Book Society, with a view to its publication.

Since 1868—more than a quarter of a century, there has been a vast amount of anti-secrecy literature presented to the world. The truth has found, at last, a partial hearing, and left its impress on the church.

But Congregationalism has not fulfilled its earlier promise. Interest in the temperance question and other important reforms has tended to divert attention from this question, while the great and rapid growth of the secret lodge system has led the local churches, with a few exceptions, to rescind their former testimonies, and to quite forget the action of these State associations.

The zeal for church propagandism which led the Pharisees of old time to "compass sea and land that they might make one proselyte," while they forgot their higher obligations to God, has ever been the besetting sin of God's people. It is the great obstacle to all Christian reformers. *

—Up to date the order of the Knights of Pythias has been purely an American institution. A movement is now in progress to make it, like Masonry, a universal fraternity.

—Receipts of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Iowa during the past year were $40,126 61, and its total disbursements $19 846 31, showing a net profit of $20,280.30. Lodge "benevolence" pays very well.

—Prendergast, the slayer of Mayor Harrison, was to have been tried for insanity on the 11th of June, but a farther postponement of his case until next fall has been granted. In the meantime he is under sentence to be hanged on the 2d of July. The mysteries of Chicago justice are inscrutable.

—Rev. J. A. Collins, of the Christian Instructor, speaking of the new "Liberal" movement in this city, says: "The object seems to be to establish a system of liberal propagandism in the United States. Their distinguishing characteristic in liberality is that each is willing to part with everything religious except that which he himself holds. Very liberal in what does not belong to them!"

—A new public Sabbath breaking institution has been opened in this city—the Field Columbian Museum, at Jackson Park. Nearly 15,000 visitors were recorded by its turnstiles on its first open Sunday. A majority of the managers are "honorable men," but have no regard for the Christian Sabbath.

—The A. P. A. having obtained control of the Board of Education at Canton, Ill., held a meeting last week and dismissed four Catholic teachers and one Catholic janitor from the city schools, replacing them with Protestant employes. They propose to have schools "with the A. P. A. brand upon them" after this, whether it is right or wrong.

—License to do business in Wisconsin has been refused to the "Independent Order of Foresters," because its name so closely resembles that of another similar society. Are the new secret society orders becoming so numerous that they must infringe upon the names as well as the "benevolence" (for cash only, and no defalcations in payments) of each other? It looks that way.

—A note from Rev. Wm. Fenton, St. Peter, Minn., in connection with his attendance at the Augustana Lutheran Synod of that place, indicates his enthusiastic reception by members of that body, an increase of interest in our work, fair sales of anti-secrecy literature, and new subscribers for the Cynosure. This is gratifying intelligence. Bro Fenton's report, on another page, will be read with interest.

—The Lutheran church mourns the death of Rev. W. A. Passavant, D. D., of Pittsburgh, Pa., one of the best-known and most prominent General Council Lutherans in the United States. He established hospitals in Chicago, Milwaukee, and Jacksonville, Ill., besides a number of orphans' homes and asylums in various places throughout the Union. He was also the founder of Thiel College, in Pennsylvania, and at the time of his death was engaged in organizing and preparing for the support of its theological department. Another work with which he was prominently identified was the introduction and organization of the Deaconess Institute in America.

—Odd-fellowship in Ohio is a financial success, if we may rely upon the annual report of the Grand Lodge, last month. Its total assets, at the close of 1893, were $2,198,360.74, of which $1,767,854 73 is in investments—moneys "salted down"—besides cash in the general fund, $151,502 06, and $278,993 95 lying dormant in the widows' and orphans' fund. The total amount paid for current expenses was $304,422 74; total paid for relief, $310,173.24. The total cash receipts during the year aggregated $534,265.74, leaving a net gain in receipts over disbursements of $19,669.76. Evidently this Grand Lodge has not felt the prevailing financial depression. The members of subordinate lodges pay the bills.

—The United States Senate, a few days ago, attempted to solve the Hawaii question by adopting a resolution declaring: "that of right it belongs wholly to the people of Hawaii to establish and maintain their own form of government and domestic policy; that the United States ought not in any way to interfere therewith, and that interference in the political affairs of these islands by any other government will be regarded as an act unfriendly to the United States." A similar resolution was also introduced in the House of Representatives. Whatever prejudices may exist in favor of the royal party or of the provisional government, our government does well not to interfere further in the settlement of this vexed question.

—If it is true that the friends of Coxeyism are not yet convinced of its utter uselessness as a means of reforming present public evils; if it is true that these misguided men are establishing various recruiting offices to increase the number of would-be "reformers in boots;" if it is true that a section of a Coxey army, composed of anarchists and armed with dynamite, has started from Chicago to Washington, it is time that the public opinion and the restraining power of the law should prevent this movement from assuming additional strength and importance. If it is supported by any class of politicians, let them also come into the condemnation which the public peace and safety demands. Such combinations are dangerous.

--At the recent Iowa Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, at Monmouth, Ill., the question: "What is the relation of the A. P. A. to Protestantism?" led to an exciting discussion, but all agreed that our American institutions, as well as life, liberty and property, should be preserved. Ill-treatment of the Negroes in the South by brutal whites and the temperance reform were also enthusiastically discussed. The natural enthusiasm of the Negro is very apt to mislead him into the meshes of the lodge net, greatly to his injury.

—Shall we ever hear the last of that outrageous religious scandal, that "Knight Templarism and its teachings are distinctly and intensely Christian?" At the best, it is a revival of the old Crusaders' order, which began in 1118, for the alleged purpose of keeping the Saracens out of Jerusalem. It throve nicely for about 200 years, or until its last grand master was burned at the stake, under the instructions of Pope Clement V. and King Philip of France, in 1314. Then the order was obliterated and its property confiscated by these magnates. After lying dormant several centuries it was revived in New York in 1816. Outwardly it is "awfully pious," carrying its religion into saloons and brothels, privately and publicly, "for the good of the order" and the entertainment of its members.

—Dr. Shaw's article in the June Century Magazine refers to the popular delusion that our American cities are the only ones which show the phenomenon of rapid growth, and that their newness excuses their failure to provide well for the common necessities of urban life. To combat this idea, Dr. Shaw quotes an array of statistics that is startling. In 1870 New York had nearly 950,000 people, while Berlin had barely 800,000. In 1880 Berlin had outgrown New York, and in 1890 it still maintained the lead, having 1,578,794 people, as against New York's 1,515,301. The same story can be told of a score of the smaller German cities, whose names are hardly known to the average American. It is also a delusion that Chicago owes its great and rapid increase of population altogether to the coming of new men and women. A large proportion of its growth is due to the annexation of out-lying districts.

—Frank T. Crandon, who has achieved considerable prominence in Methodism, told the Methodist Social Union of Chicago, the other evening, that "The discipline of the church prohibiting members from dancing, playing cards, attending theaters and indulging in other innocent amusements was antiquated, unprogressive and undesirable." To which one of the daily papers of the city gives its endorsement, and remarks: "Despite the express prohibition of the general conference there is no doubt that most Methodists exercise their own judgment in the matter of interdicted amusements. They attend the theater, they dance, they play cards, they go to horse races and to circuses." It might have added that a majority of male Methodists belong to secret lodges and otherwise maintain a close adherence to the world, the flesh and the devil. But some day God will bring them into judgment for all these things.

—Rev. Dr. Green, of St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal church in New York City, has in practice a plan for the relief of the worthy poor that promises well for effectiveness. The church has several wealthy members, by whose counsel and aid the rector has opened a loan office in connection with his church work. At this office those known to be temporarily hard-pressed for money can borrow small sums up to fifty dollars each, by giving chattel-mortgages on their furniture as security. Every precaution is taken to prevent fraud, and the rate of interest does not exceed six per cent, which is very low when it is considered that the State law allows pawnbrokers to charge thirty per cent. The only objectionable feature that we see in this plan is the charging of any interest. As it is, it smacks of mammon rather than charity. Perhaps it would be well for other wealthy churches to set St. Bartholomew's a good example in this direction.

—Rev. J. H. Painter, a writer for the Christian Oracle of this city,—a disciple of Alex. Campbell—has read a copy of the Christian Cynosure, and makes this comment upon it: "Secret societies seem just as plenty as ever. I have more faith in men than to believe them to be as mean as this paper makes them out. Let the Lord legislate for his own church, and let men legislate for theirs." As long ago as in 1850 the General Congregational Association of Illinois, at Rockford, made this declaration: "However secret societies may differ among themselves, they are all anti-republican in their tendencies, and are all leading . . . ultimately to the theoretical and practical neutralization of Christianity." No church is better than its creed—no secret society more virtuous than the oaths which it imposes upon its members; nor can there be any affinity between the Lord's church and the "synagogue of Satan," which is now represented upon earth by Freemasonry, and which cannot by any sophistry be shown to be better than its murderous obligations and despotic government. Mr. Painter should read Alex. Campbell's protest against the lodge.

—Certain persons who deem it their privilege to know on what pretensions the Mormon Church at Salt Lake City maintains its influence as a propaganda, have invited discussion by and with the elders of that church of the following pertinent questions:

First—Was Brigham Young the lawful and legitimate successor of Joseph Smith (the seer) to the prophetic office and presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints? Second—And is Utah the appointed place for the gathering of the Saints in the last days, as spoken by Prohets of God, including Joseph Smith, the Seer?

At first sight these would seem to be very innocent queries; but Wilford Woodruff, Geo. Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith, comprising the "First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints," alias Salt Lake Mormons, have issued an official edict to the elders, forbidding all discussion of these doctrines of the church. Perhaps it is a wise stroke of policy to advise the servants of the church "to leave these challengers severely alone." The less Mormonism is stirred the sweeter it will be—on the surface.

REPORT OF THE NEW ENGLAND SECRETARY.

To the National Christian Association, Greeting:

DEAR BRETHREN:—It does not seem expedient for me to be present at your annual gathering on the 16th instant. I desire, however, to express my deep and increasing interest in the cause which God has so largely intrusted to your care, and to assure you of my earnest prayers in your behalf. You have come to your place of high and sacred trust in perilous times, and the examples of your predecessors, and the expectations of the living, and, above all, Christ and his church, call upon each of you to do his duty. The cry is: "Lo here," and "Lo there," until the best poised minds are in danger of losing their balance, and the most sanguine contemplate the future with serious misgivings.

You have not come to the responsibilities of your station by chance, but by the calling of Him who hath chosen you and ordained you for His service; wherefore "stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong," and may "the God of peace. . . . make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever."

A few features of the anti-lodge movement in New England may be both interesting and helpful to you. The general condition here is not materially unlike to that in other parts of our country; and the outlook gives little promise of rapid advancement in the immediate future. In spite of multiplied secret organizations, and the most artful opposition, there has been a steady gain among the thoughtful and pious. New England, as is well-known, is not given to sudden changes, but she has earned the reputation of maintaining her position in reforms when once committed to any good cause, and I am confident that a very large per cent of the ministry and the regenerated membership in the churches are strongly averse to the whole system of secret lodges, but many have not the courage to speak boldly, or do not feel sufficiently well-informed to make an attack upon them. The number of those who speak freely is constantly increasing, and persistent, kind and faithful effort will, I am perfectly confident, be awarded with success in due time.

There is one difficulty here which seriously obstructs the progress of our work, and which was not found, at least to such an extent, when I was laboring in the West. Everything is "syndicated," so that a man outside "the ring" can expect very little sympathy or co-operation from those who control very largely the religious activities on this field. This is to be expected in those ecclesiastical bodies which require the subordination of the clergy to their official superiors; but where Congregational polity has been adopted it looks a little strange to see a half-dozen men virtually controlling the appointments of N. E. churches from a central office.

This condition of things has closed the avenues through which we reached the people in other parts of the country and made the tract work a necessity. In fact, personal conference with individuals, and the distribution of tracts, have been about the only means of reaching the people and getting their attention. I have spoken whenever and wherever opportunity could be obtained, but such opportunities have been much less frequent than is desirable. I am coming to believe that the Christless worship of the secret lodge is the devil's specialty. Certainly he guards it with unceasing care.

The rum power, the Roman hierarchy, and almost any other chronic or organic form of evil, may be assailed, but the secret worship of the lodge must not be spoken against. Touch this, and all the machinery which the devil can command is put in motion to suppress any discussion or disclosure of "the mystery of iniquity." The devil knows that he cannot get all for his kingdom, and so he looks on with complacency while the comparatively few are gathered into the kingdom of Christ. He says: "Go on with your holiness conventions, and your revival and popular church services, but don't disturb my 'pet institution.' Get all you can along the outskirts, but leave the stronghold of my empire undisturbed; and while you rescue one poor vagabond from my clutches, I will bind a score or a hundred in hopeless bondage at my altars of Christless worship." It is thus, by "deceivableness of unrighteousness," that many who mean to be good men and true to Christ are "blinded by the god of this world" and hinder the coming of the kingdom of Christ without knowing that they are really being used as obstructionists by the enemy. Could Christians be induced to obey the plain injunctions of Scripture and cease to fellowship and earnestly reprove this giant evil, its days would be numbered and its power very soon come to an end.

There are omens of a brighter day, and rifts in the dark cloud through which the rays of light appear. Almost daily I hear from the work being done through the thousands of tracts and copies of the "Home Light" that are sent out, and for the present at least I see nothing better for New England than to press the work along this line.

The position taken by Dr. Geo. C. Lorimer, in his address to the Knights Templar, on Easter Sunday, is among the hopeful signs of the times, revealing as it does the supremacy of the lodge, in his estimation, above the church, and leading many of his associates in the ministry to inquire in what is this secret scheme of men armed, drilled and uniformed as if for war, better than the bride of the "Prince of Peace." In connection with this strange, and, to many, surprising announcement of Dr. Lorimer, many will read the testimony of Colver, Finney and others who differ from him, and who would not otherwise have had their attention directed to those statements, and thus God is overruling and directing so that even the wrath of man shall praise him.

Our great need in New England is a small hall where we can hold weekly meetings and a school of instruction, offer our literature to the public, and save the expense of rents for rooms in which to live. By the help of God and the co-operation of friends, I have faith that in time we shall attain to this and see the work planted here as firmly as at Chicago, or in any other city in the Union.

May God hasten the day, and bless you abundantly in your annual gathering, giving you good courage, great wisdom and an abounding faith in God and the final triumph of his kingdom in all the earth. Very sincerely, your brother and co-laborer in the kingdom of Christ,

JAMES P. STODDARD.

Boston, May 12, 1894.

THE HOME.

THE TONE OF VOICE.

It is not so much what you say,
As the manner in which you say it;
It is not so much the language you use,
As the tones in which you convey it.

"Come here!" I sharply said,
And the baby cowered and wept.
"Come here!" I cooed, and he looked and smiled,
And straight to my lap he crept.

The words may be mild and fair,
And the tone may pierce like a dart;
The words may be soft as the summer air,
And the tones may break the heart.

For words but come from the mind,
And grow by study and art;
But the tones leap forth from the inner self
And reveal the state of the heart.

Whether you know it or not—
Whether you mean or care—
Gentleness, kindness, love and hate,
Envy and anger are there.

Then would you quarrels avoid
And in peace and love rejoice,
Keep anger not only out of your words,
But keep it out of your voice.

—Youth's Companion.

BREAD CAST UPON THE WATERS.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

The stage-coach had bowled slowly over the prairie since early morning. There were twelve passengers inside, all men. Various signs of impatience were manifest among them, such as: "We should have been there long ago." "Can't you drive faster?"—this to the driver. "Might just as well walk and save fare," etc., etc. It was early in April and bitterly cold. A fierce wind blew from the east, and although the passengers were well muffled up, they shivered with cold.

At last a young man who sat in a corner, said: "We shall be there by six o'clock; it is four now, so cheer up." The passengers made themselves as comfortable as they could, and waited. The stage rolled on over the bleak, wind-swept prairie, and some of the passengers were asleep, when there was a sharp jerk and a shout from the driver: "Get out of the stage!" The passengers did so, when lo and behold, a wheel was off. "How far are we from Dallas?" said one of the passengers. "Twenty miles," said the driver. "Can you repair that coach?" "No; you cannot go on before morning." "Well, we are in a pretty fix," the passengers said, but the driver raised a hand and stopped them. "Wait, my friends," he said, "there is a small ranche about a mile from here. It is kept by a man who will accommodate you. You will have to camp down on the floor in your blankets, but you will be under shelter and get something to eat. I am going there; so come on." It was a cold, dreary walk, but they got there before dark, and found a welcome and a good supper, with the assurance that they could go on in the morning.

It was late, and the men had lain down on the floor in their blankets. The young man above referred to, whose name, by the way, was John Lincoln, had rolled himself snugly in his blanket, and was just dropping off to sleep, when, suddenly opening his eyes, he saw a young lad standing alone by a table. The boy seemed entirely alone. All the others were lying down. "I saw him in the stage," said Lincoln to himself; "I wonder who he is." He was warmly clad, but wore no overcoat. He had a bright, handsome face. "I wonder if he intends to stand there all night," said Lincoln; and then, flinging open his blanket, he called: "Come, my boy, you must be cold; lie down here with me." "I am not very cold," said the lad; but he obeyed and nestled down under Lincoln's blanket. He did not speak a word for several moments, but lay there shivering like a frightened deer. Lincoln waited a few moments until the boy had become quiet, and then said: "Are you going to Dallas, my boy?" "Yes," said the boy, "I have an uncle there." "Are you alone?" "Yes," said the boy. "You see I came from the lakes. I rode on the tow-path for more than a year. But my step-father did not like me, and some of the boys on the tow-path are bad boys, and sometimes they run away." "I am afraid that you are a bad boy," said Lincoln, "and that you ran away." "Oh, no," said the boy, "I am not a bad boy, and I did not run away." His lips were lightly compressed to check their quivering, but he could not restrain the tears which were fast rolling down upon his cheeks. "Well, never mind, my fine lad," said Lincoln; "but tell me what you are going to do when you get to your uncle's." "I don't know; he wrote to me to come. I guess I can find something to do."

It was a strange scene; the weary travelers coiled up in their blankets on the floor, the dim light of the lamp, and the wind howling outside. Lincoln composed himself to sleep, and the boy nestled close to him, stole his hand in his, and thus, hand in hand, they fell asleep. The next morning at daylight the stage drove up to the door, and Lincoln was about to climb into it, when he felt a tug at his coat. He looked around. It was his boy-friend of the night before. "I only wanted to bid you good-bye," said the boy. "I am not going till the next stage arrives. It will be here at two o'clock." "Well," said Lincoln, "I hope you will be a good boy. Don't form any bad habits; don't use bad words; don't keep bad company; but be honest and truthful, and I think you will prosper. Will you remember?" "Yes," said the boy. Lincoln counted out five dollars in change, which he placed in the boy's hand, and springing to a seat beside the driver, was rolling rapidly over the prairie.

Ten years passed away, and by a strange order of circumstance, John Lincoln was traveling the same route over which he had passed that windy day in April so long ago. It was late in the afternoon; he was very tired, for he had traveled on foot since early morning. The house of a friend with whom he expected to spend the night was still five miles distant. It was very misty, but, looking to the right, there in a little glen was a settler's cabin. Lincoln lost no time in reaching it, and, in response to his knock, the door was opened by a pleasant-looking young woman with a babe in her arms. "You can stay here all night," she said; "I am sure my husband will let you. But sit down; you look tired out." "I am very tired," said Lincoln. The room was neatly furnished, and everything betokened thrift and comfort. Lincoln was so weary that he laid himself down upon the couch on which he was sitting, and in a few moments was fast asleep. He was awakened by a hand laid upon his shoulder. He opened his eyes. The master had returned, and supper was ready. He sat down to the table and did full justice to the viands. But little was said, and it was not until he had nearly finished his meal that Lincoln observed particularly his host, who sat just opposite to him. Looking at him now, he saw that he was a tall, slender, heavily-bearded man, with a pleasant, handsome face. But this was not all. The man watched him constantly—furtively, it is true, yet every instant, Lincoln observed, with a strange thrill, that the husband's eyes were upon his face. What did it mean? thought Lincoln. Had he ever met this man before? Lincoln was sure he never had, and in spite of himself he became nervous.

After the supper was cleared away, Lincoln said to the stranger's wife: "I think I will go to bed now; I am very tired." "Certainly," said the woman, and picking up a lamp was about to show him to his room, when her husband sprang up. "Wait," he cried; "don't go yet. I want to speak to you." Then, standing in front of Lincoln, in the full light of the lamp, he said: "I want to know who you are." "But I don't know you," said Lincoln. "But I have seen you before," said the stranger. "Do you remember ten years ago last April, when you were on your way between Bearsville and Dallas, and the stage broke down?" "Yes," said Lincoln, with a smile. "Do you remember sharing your blanket with a boy that night? Yes, and you gave him some money the next morning?" "A trifle, I believe." The stranger grasped both Lincoln's hands, saying: "I am that boy. I never knew your name; do not know it now; but the kind words you spoke to me that night were the first that I had heard for months. You told me that you feared I was a bad boy, and that I had ran away. I was not a bad boy, but I had ran away. My step-father treated me cruelly. When I met you I had not tasted food for two days. What a feast I had that day! Oh, my friend," the stranger said, while the tears flowed fast down his cheeks, "you did not know what you were doing in thus kindly treating a poor, friendless lad like me."

At his urgent request, Lincoln spent several days with his new friend, George Arnold. The little ranch was his own, he said, bought with the fruits of his own toil. His uncle had been kind to him, and had assisted him in many ways. The Rev. John Lincoln rode away on his journey, one lovely morning, parting with regret from his new-found friend. As he looked across the wide-rolling prairie, and marked the distant chain of the Rockies, stretching to the west and south, their snow-capped heads glistening in the sun, the words of Israel's sweetest singer were brought with power to his mind: "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty!"

Steamburgh, N. Y.

FILLING A BASKET WITH WATER.

An eastern king was once in need of a faithful servant and friend. He gave notice that he wanted a man to do a day's work, and two men came and asked to be employed. He engaged them both for certain fixed wages, and set them to work to fill a basket with water from a neighboring well, saying he would come in the evening and see their work. He then left them to themselves and walked away.

After putting in one or two bucketfuls one of the men said:

"What is the good of doing this useless work? As soon as we put the water in on one side it runs out on the other."

The other man answered:

"But we have our day's wages, haven't we? The use of the work is the master's business, not ours."

"I am not going to do such a fool's work," replied the other, and throwing down his bucket went away.

The other man continued his work till, about sunset, he exhausted the well. Looking down into it he saw something shining at the bottom. He let down his bucket once more and drew up a precious diamond ring.

"Now I see the use of pouring water into a basket," he exclaimed to himself. "If the bucket had brought up the ring before the well was dry it would have been found in the basket. The labor was not useless after all."

But he had yet to learn why the king had ordered this apparently useless task. It was to test the capacity for perfect obedience, without which no servant is reliable.

At this moment the king came up to him, and, as he bade the man keep the ring, he said:

"Thou hast been faithful in a little thing, now I see I can trust thee in great things. Henceforward, thou shalt stand at my right hand."—The Sunday Hour.

"I AM A GOOD, MORAL MAN."

How often do ministers of the Gospel hear this remark from men who profess to be as good outside the church as those who are in. We doubt not, neither do we deny that some people in the church are far from being what they ought to be. This, however, is not the fault of the church or the means of grace, but it is the neglect and abuse of these that occasions the trouble. No man, however moral, has a right to hide himself behind the mistakes of weak and faithless Christians. The proper standard is to judge himself from the standpoint of the best Christian and from the standpoint of a right relation to God. Morality is not religion. It is not an element which can stand independent of any relation with God. It is not capacitated to say: "I have discharged my full duty to God." There is a vast difference between a moral man and a believer, for the one relies wholly on self and hopes his own goodness will suffice, while the other trusts himself to God and seeks divine help in the full performance of his duties to God and man. The one stands alone, with only his own weak and sinful habits and moral qualities clustering about him and hopes these will be a sure guarantee to his acceptance before God. The other accepts the way which God has provided and uses the means he has ordained for the salvation of the soul and strives by the grace of God to overcome and thus be worthy of God's favor. So many men have the mistaken notion that a moral life is a Christian life, and yet they do not recognize a single means of grace. Had God not ordained the means of grace for a wise purpose we might disregard them, but since those divine means are for man's spiritual good we have no right to ignore them and base our hopes on moral qualities.

In talking with a stranger the other day, the above remark was made when he was asked if he were a child of God, "I am a good, moral man, and do not do harm to anybody. I do as I would be done by. I do not swear unless I get angry or something of that kind. Unless a man cheats me, I never try to cheat him. I have never been in prison, nor have I been disgraced. In other words, I am all right. I don't think I need any more Christianity than that."

This code of morals and this standard of Christian life is unfortunately very common. Many people in this world pride themselves on being no worse, but a good deal better than a great many others, and upon their having no particularly bad habits, and of being fairly up to the average. But God says: "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "There are none righteous; no, not one."

We should not fail to bring such a one to see at once the danger of his position and the fatal ending of his life if his views on this vitally important matter are carried out. It is hard, sometimes, in talking with a man of this kind—well dressed, well-to-do, with a good opinion of himself—to press home the queston of sin, the fact that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." But we ought to do it. God will use his Word, and no one can fail to be influenced by the earnest word, prayerfully given, of a consecrated Christian.—The Christian World.

A NEWSBOY'S FUNERAL.

Recent Chicago papers gave a glimpse of life in that great city that would be of interest to most readers. It was contained in a bit of news relating to an incident of the day before. The newsboys of Chicago number high among the thousands, and their ages range from four years to eighty, and over. Less than half the usual number were on hand Friday for the day's business. They were burying one of their number at Graceland cemetery. "Young Waffles" was the name by which the deceased was known. His real name was Jobson. Years ago he had an older brother whose cheeks, from the effects of small pox, resembled a "waffle," and hence the name "Waffles." When he died and was succeeded by his young brother, "Young Waffles" became the name. "Young Waffles" at the time of his death was twenty-five years old. Just before the storm he went with two companions to the government pier to fish. After the storm "he was found dead in a 'pocket' sitting upright between his two friends, who were just alive." A search of his clothes developed that his only wealth was a deed to a grave in Graceland. Times have been hard with the newsboys of Chicago, as with other folks, and it was only with great difficulty the means were provided with which to provide for a decent burial. But the undertaker made liberal concessions, and the boys, many of them, sacrificed their suppers and breakfasts of the evening and morning before the funeral.

"Young Waffles" had been on the streets many years. "He had supported his mother till she was killed by a Rock Island train four years before." He had made money as newsboys make it, but his liberality had kept him poor. According to the testimony of the newsboys, he was "so good natured, no kid could make him mad." He had great commiseration for "kids who lose at craps." When he found one who had "gone broke" he would give him money and say "stick to work, boy, and then you can give to other kids."

During the morning hours a steady stream of newsboys, "from the old man who sells papers at the entrance to the La Salle street tunnel to the four-year-old beginner," had filed by the coffin to take a last look at "Waffles," and many a one came out with two white streaks down an otherwise dirty face." Among the mourners were "a number of young men who in years gone by sold papers, but who now occupy responsible places." The hearse started for Graceland at three o'clock. There was no clergyman in the party, "the boys saying they were afraid to ask one for fear of being refused." When the cemetery was reached, "Robert McMara, William Swanfield, Bennie Ross. Severs Johnson, George Campbell, and Epper Kenna carried the casket to the grave. As it was slowly lowered McMara picked up a handful of earth, threw it on the coffin, and said: "Dust to dust." Then the others followed his example and the obsequies of "Waffles" were over.

TEMPERANCE.

TWIN BALLOTS.

Along in November, when cool was the weather,
Two ballots were cast in the box together,
They nestled up close, like brother to brother,
You could not tell one of these votes from the other,
You could not tell one from the other.

The Sunday-school man, no man could be truer,
He spent all the summer denouncing the brewer,
He spent all the summer denouncing the brewer;
But his ardor cooled off with the change in the weather,
And late in the autumn they voted together,
They voted together.

The Sunday-school man had always been noted
For fighting saloons—except when he voted
For temperance, except when he voted,
He piled up his prayers in holy perfection;
But knocked them all down on the day of election,
Knocked them all down on the day of election.

The foxy old brewer was cheerful and mellow;
Said he: "I admire that Sunday-school fellow,
Oh, yes, I admire that Sunday-school fellow."
He is true to his church; to his party he's truer,
He talks of the Lord, but he votes for the brewer,
He votes every time for the brewer.

—Anonymous.

THE "GOTHENBURG SYSTEM" A FAILURE.

Mr. Joseph Malins, chief officer of the Order of Good Templars in England, honorary vice-president of the National Temperance Federation, and of the United Kingdom Alliance, has been studying the Gothenburg system as a remedy for the evils of the liquor traffic, and writes a friend in Massachusetts, where the system is being proposed for adoption, saying:

"Of all methods I think this is the worst. It preserves the upas tree, but makes its roots strike deeper. It indefinitely postpones prohibition.

"It is hated by the Scandinavian prohibitionists, has been opposed by the Good Templars of Sweden, and declared a failure by the Good Templars of Norway, and reported against by our British consul at Christiana, whose report to our Government I have had the loan of from our Foreign office, and the results of which I will expose in about a month, when I shall have time to complete the matter.

"It is detested by the temperance leaders of Finland, and will be in America when its deluded advocates have their eyes opened to the dire consequences of the blind folly of countenancing a principle which, on the face of it, implicates the whole community in the liquor traffic and places it in an almost impregnable position.

"You may not know that the leader of the Liberal party in Sweden has this year obtained from me the material for a Local Option bill which he proposes to introduce for the remedying of the evils kept up by the system Massachusetts proposes to set up!

"Of course party politicians in Massachusetts want to get liquor out of party politics, but they had better purify the party without transferring the pestilence into the body politic of the whole community, if thus embraced by them."

A TEMPERANCE SCHEME,

which combines one or two of the features of the celebrated Gothenburg plan with others decidedly novel, has been devised by the Prohibition element in Haverhill, Mass. The last municipal election in that city resulted in a decisive defeat of the temperance people, with the result that last week the licensing of saloons began, and within two days 26 groggeries had sprung into a flourishing existence. The Prohibitionists have now determined to fight fire with fire, and are preparing a saloon of palatial design wherein they will sell liquor at the minimum rate of cost. No attempt will be made to make money, and if whisky of a sufficiently satisfactory grade can be purchased for 5 cents a glass the Prohibitionists' saloon will sell it for that. Beer will be sold for 2 cents. The theory is that in the face of the superior attractions and extremely low rates of the new saloon the other 26 liquor venders will lose all their trade and be compelled to surrender their $2,000 licenses and go out of business. Then the Prohibitionists will close their own rum shop, remaining ready to open it again in case their opponents revive. It is an extremely interesting experiment, of which the first result will probably be a sudden influx to Haverhill of all the thirsty souls within a radius of twenty miles. What the after-effects will be is yet to be ascertained. If the Prohibitionists' funds hold out while they are pursuing their heroic methods they may succeed, though at the cost of having created a great temporary increase in drinking and in the taste for it.—Chicago Record.

VOTE IT DOWN.

Down with the saloon! Let that be the slogan and every voice be a trumpet to proclaim it.

Down with the saloon! It is God's relentless enemy, the nation's and yours.

Down with the saloon! It has no respect for home, the church, the Sabbath. It curses the one, blasphemes the other and tramples upon the third.

Down with the saloon! It breeds violence and ruin. Twenty anarchists were dragged from an apartment of a Chicago doggery the other day. It was a fitting place for them. The two bad things mix.

Down with the saloon! It is pledged by the most infamous means to perpetuate its diabolical ruin. It fattens upon the corruption it breeds, and, like the wrecker, is enriched by the ruin it works.

Down with the saloon! It multiplies mad-houses and prisons and crowds their cells with brutalized, raving, cursing human wrecks.

Down with the saloon! It controls our politics, corrupts our legislature, intimidates our judiciary and insults every sense of decency with insolent contempt.

Down with the saloon! Its ranks are filled by troops of murderers, thieves, perjurers, tramps, libertines and harlots, who scoff at the restraints of society and thirst for blood.

Down with the saloon! It robs thousands of homes of their most promising boys, and, all besotted and ruined, hurls them into drunkards' graves.

Down with the saloon! Talk against it. Fight against it. Pray against it. Vote against it.—Epworth Herald.

NUGGETS.

The British Postoffice Total Abstinence society numbers 3,000 members.

There are 703 societies connected with the Scottish Band ofHope union.

Every father should be proud of a prohibition boy. Such a one will never become a drunkard.

In Charlotte, N. C., an ordinance has been enacted finding a minor $25 on being found in a saloon.

Fifteen brewers and wine merchants in Great Britain died last year, leaving between them $30,833,500.

In Liverpool recently 150 temperance sermons were preached on what was observed as "Temperance Sunday."

The Italian government has sold to an English syndicate, for fifty thousand lire, the right to regulate the sale of alcohol in Italy.

There were over 89,000 arrests made in Chicago last year, the vast majority for drunkenness and crimes due to or associated with liquors. Over $615,000 were collected in fines, mostly from the same cause.

Sam Jones, in company with Geo. Stuart, is making a tour of Tennessee in the interest of prohibition. According to the Chicago Inter Ocean "they are raising the roof off things." Fifteen thousand people attended his Chattanooga meeting.

The Grand Lodge of Good Templars of England had a membership Nov. 1, 1892, of 53,122; admitted, reinstated, etc., during the year, 33,347; suspended, expelled, died and dropped during the year, 25,941, leaving a membership Nov. 1, 1893, of 50,528.

BIBLE LESSON.

SECOND QUARTER—QUARTERLY REVIEW.

LESSON XIII.—Studies in the Books of Moses, June 24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Lord's portion is his people.—Prov. 23:9.

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Gen. 37:23-36. T.—Gen. 41:38-48. W.—Gen. 45:1-15. Th.—Ex. 1:1-14. F.—Ex. 2:1-10. S.—Ex. 12:1-14. Su.—Ex. 14:19-39.

LESSON I.—Jacob's Prevailing Prayer.—Gen. 32:9-12 and 24-30. Golden Text.—I will not let thee go except thou bless me.—Gen. 45:26. Points of Interest.—Jacob's prayer; Jacob wrestles with an angel; Jacob blessed. Central Truth.—God honors the faith that finds expression in importunate pleading.

LESSON II.—Discord in Jacob's Family.—Gen.—37:1-11. Golden Text.—See that ye fall not out by the way.—Gen. 45:24. Points of Interest.—The favorite son; feeding the flock; relating his dream; hated by his brethren. Central Truth.—Jealousy resides in the hearts of evil men.

LESSON III.—Joseph sold into Egypt.—Gen. 37:1-11. Golden Text.—Ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good.—Gen. 1:20. Points of Interest.—Joseph cast into a pit; Joseph sold for a slave; Jacob's sorrow. Central Truth.—Envy begets the spirit of murder.

LESSON IV.—Joseph Ruler in Egypt.—Gen. 41:38-48. Golden Text.—Them that honor me I will honor.—1 Sam. 2:30. Points of Interest.—Joseph exalted; Joseph further honored; Joseph's wise policy; gathering food. Central Truth.—God exalts those who are true to him.

LESSON V.—Joseph Forgiving his Brethren.—Gen. 45:1-15. Golden Text.—If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.—Luke 17:3. Points of Interest.—Joseph makes himself known; comforts his brethren; provides for his father. Central Truth.—Willingness to forgive is a trait of a noble mind.

LESSON VI.—Joseph's Last Days.—Gen. 50:14-26. Golden Text.—The path of the righteous is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.—Prov. 4:18. Points of Interest.—The burial of Jacob; Joseph's dream fulfilled; Joseph consoles his brethren; his last days. Central Truth.—God expects us to confide in his word.

LESSON VII.—Israel in Egypt —Exodus 1:1-14. Golden Text.—Our hope is in the name of the Lord.—Psalm 124:8. Points of Interest.—A small beginning; trials and prosperity of the Israelites; their enslavement. Central Truth.—God works his sovereign will in the affliction of his people.

LESSON VIII.—The Childhood of Moses.—Exodus 2:1-10. Golden Text.—I will deliver and honor him.—Psalm 91:15. Points of Interest.—The birth of Moses; the rescue of Moses; restored to his mother. Central Truth.—God delivers and preserves his chosen servants.

LESSON IX.—Moses Sent as a Deliverer.—Exodus 3:10-20. Golden Text.—Fear not, for I am with thee.—Isaiah 41:10. Points of Interest.—Moses receives the divine command; is encouraged to go forward; God's name revealed to the Israelites by Moses; Moses still further encouraged. Central Truth.—Men who are sent by the Lord speak not in vain.

LESSON X.—The Passover Instituted.—Exodus 12:1-14. Golden Text.—Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us.—1 Cor. 5:7. Points of Interest.—The origin of this great event; the slaying of the lamb, and the sprinkling of its blood on the door-posts; how the passover was to be eaten; its typical importance. Central Truth.—Our only safety is in the blood of Christ.

LESSON XI.—Passage of the Red Sea.—Exodus 14:19-29. Golden Text.—By faith they passed through the Red Sea.—Hebrews 11:29. Points of Interest. The pillar of cloud and fire; the Israelites protected and delivered; the destruction of Pharaoh and his army.—Central Truth.—While we keep in obedience to God by faith, there is a way through every difficulty.

LESSON XII.—A Temperance Lesson.—The Woes of the Drunkard.—Prov. 23:29-35. Golden Text.—Look thou not upon the wine when it is red.—Prov. 23:31. Points of Interest.—The afflictions wrought by intemperance; the danger of dallying with temptation; effects of intemperance upon the moral vision, and its dreadful ending. Central Truth.—The moderate drinker becomes the habitual and lost drunkard.

The lessons of the quarter present the development of the Israelites through a period of several hundred years. They first appear as a family, in the persons of Jacob and his eleven sons returning to the land of Canaan. Next they enlarge into a clan, seventy persons, settling in the land of Goshen. Here they developed into a people, but as yet unorganized, without leaders or laws. At the close, we find them a nation, with a worship and a government. They were a praying people (Jacob at the brook), a persecuted people (Joseph in prison; Israelites in Egyptian bondage), a protected people (Joseph in the pit; the escape of the firstborn through blood sprinkling), and a victorious people, as we will learn in their future history.

LITERATURE.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

The Review of Reviews for June shows the usual flexibility of that keenly edited periodical in adapting itself to the topics of the month. In its department of Leading Articles it groups together a very remarkable series of digests of important recent essays on various topics pertaining to the political and social status of woman. Moreover, its always varied and curious collection of caricatures illustrating the history of the month is enlivened by a number of cartoons from New Zealand and Australia, some intended to eulogize and others to satirize the enfranchisement of women in the New Zealand colony and the unsuccessful woman suffrage campaign in New South Wales. These articles and caricatures are submitted apropos of the great pending discussion in the State of New York. Our naval policy is one of the leading topics treated editorially. In the same connection, projects of ship canal building in relation to seaboard defense are discussed. Other topics receiving comment in the "Progress of the World" department this month are: the Senate's tariff muddle, the Great Northern Railway strike and arbitration, the coal miners' strike, the rationale of Coxeyism, the New York Constitutional Convention, the question of woman suffrage, the temperance movement and news from the college world. English political and social movements receive due attention also in this department of the magazine. Several other matters of interest are likewise capably treated. Published at 13 Astor place, New York City. Price, 25 cents.

The June Century abounds in attractions. Two college students, Messrs. Allen and Sachtleben, devote the June paper to a description of The Ascent of Mt. Ararat. Their ascent of Mt. Ararat was made on the Fourth of July. Another interesting feature is an authoritative account of Edison's Invention of the Kineto-Phonograph, by Antonia and W. K. L. Dickson, Mr. Dickson having been associated with Mr. Edison in working out this invention. There is also an introduction by the inventor, and a portrait of him from a recent photograph, together with examples of the pictures shown by this new invention for reproducing to the eye the motions of a given scene as the phonograph reproduces the related sounds. Theodore Stanton has an article on Tissot's Illustrations of the Gospels, a series of pictures made by the French artist after many years' study of the types and scenes of the Holy Land. Three or four of these pictures are reproduced with the article. Dr. Albert Shaw has a timely article on The Municipal Framework of German Cities, presenting some startling facts. Frank R. Stockton contributes an entertaining story, The Magic Egg; Pudd'nhead Wilson, by Mark Twain, is concluded; and several other papers on as many topics will be read with interest. Published by the Century Co., 33 East 17th street, New York City. Price, 35 cents.

The Preacher's Magazine for June has a leading sermon by A. M. Fairbairn, D.D., entitled, Imitation of Christ. The senior editor, Mark Guy Pearse, contributes The Faithful Mediator, being another chapter of his able papers on Moses: His Life and its Lessons. The Rev. Thomas Waugh writes on Some Qualifications for Successful Preaching, a most suggestive paper, especially intended for the young preacher. The Rev. Robert F. Horton furnishes The Ideal, the first of a series of articles under the general heading of The Teacher and the Class, and we notice that the Revs. James Stalker, Hugh Price Hughes, Archdeacon Farrar, and others, are to write various articles on this subject in future numbers. A Plea for Division in Preaching, by the Rev. S. E. Keeble, is also in this issue. The Homiletical department contains sermons and outlines by the Revs. H. T. Smart, Charles Cross, Thomas Puddicombe, F. B. Meyer and others. There is also a Children's Sermon by the Rev. J. Reid Howitt, entitled Ladies and Gentlemen. Notes and Illustrations, Notes on the International Sunday-school Lessons, and Outline Addresses on the Golden Texts, are among the other features of this excellent magazine.

Astronomy and Astro Physics for June has a photographic view of Gale's Comet on May 3, 1894, with a descriptive sketch of it, by E. E. Barnard, of the Lick Observatory, who also contributes Recent Observations on the Satellites of Jupiter, and a paper on the Proper Motion of Stars in the Dumb-Bell Nebulæ. Frank H. Bigelow and H. A. Hazen have each an article on West Indian Hurricanes and Solar Magnetic Influence. The Forms of the Discs of Jupiter's Satellites, by W. H. Pickering; two papers on Spectra of the Nebulæ of Orion, etc., by James E. Keeler and W. W. Campbell, and several minor articles, will interest those who have a penchant for astronomical science. Published at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn. Price, 50 cents.

The student of social economy, which embraces a large number of subjects possessing great interest at the present time, will find the Social Economist for June especially good reading. It ably discusses Fallacies About Farm Prices; The Disaster of Low Politics; The Eight Hour Question; Coxeyism and the Interest Question; The Importance of Hawaii and Samoa; The Ethics and Economics of Transportation; A One-Man Town, an object lesson of the times. The Editorial Crucible and other departments are filled with timely and important notes and news. Published at 34 Union Square, New York. Price, 25 cents.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

CHURCH INCREASE.

—According to the late census, the population of the United States increased from 1880 to 1890, 24.86 per cent. During the same period the membership of the following ecclesiastical organizations—Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Reformed, German Reformed, Lutheran, Congregationalist, Disciples of Christ, Roman Catholic and Jewish—increased from 9,739,760 to 12,487,383 or 28.21 per cent, or nearly 4 per cent more than the population. In the same time the Methodist Episcopal Church increased 30 per cent or more than 5 per cent in advance of the population; the four branches of the Presbyterian church 39 per cent or 9 per cent more than the rate of increase in the Methodist Episcopal and 14 per cent more than the rate of increase of the population; the Congregational a little over 33 per cent; the Dutch Reformed, 18 per cent; German Reformed, 27 per cent; United Presbyterian, 17 per cent; Lutheran, 68 per cent; Disciples of Christ, 83 per cent; Jewish, 160 per cent.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The M. E. Church North claims a membership of 2,524,053; increase in four years, 442,000, or more than the entire membership at the end of her first half century. There are 28,392 schools, 2,369,782 scholars, 16,444 traveling ministers, 14,000 local preachers, 24,525 churches. Contributed $1,473,898.76 for foreign missions. There are 40,000 students in her schools, 2,500 of these being in Northwestern University, Chicago. The Methodist church has more than kept pace in growth with the country.

—It is singular to contemplate the spectacle of an impressive Methodist dedication in the Eternal city, with Bishop Newman as the special preacher of the day. Other M. E. churches have been set apart for worship in Rome, but this particular dedication was quite out of the common.

—Rev. Father Lambert, a priest whose withdrawal from the Roman Catholic church some months ago attracted wide attention, has united with Calvary M. E. church, New York. The ceremony was most impressive.

—Under the caption, "She is there already," Dr. Moore calls attention to the fact that at least one-third of the lay delegates to the Central Mission conference in India were women. He says: "This conference is authorized by the General conference."

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—Bishop Kinsolving of the Episcopal diocese of Texas vigorously defends his right to take a Negro clergyman with him, not only into the chancel of the church, but also to his home and table. This is a sign of progress.

Y. M. C. A.

—The international jubilee and convention of the Young Men's Christian Association was opened June 1 by an impressive service in Westminster abbey. The great edifice was crowded. The Bishop of London preached in the evening at a meeting and reception in Exeter hall. George Williams, founder of the association, who has just been knighted, was given a reception. Prince Bernadotte, Count Bernstorff, chamberlain to the German emperor; Lord Kinnaird, Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, Bishop John P. Newman, Rev. George A. Hall, and many other church leaders were on the platform. Archdeacon Sinclair read an address of welcome to the delegates.

MISSIONS.

—The reason why Dr. A. J. Gordon's Clarendon street church in Boston gave $20,000 to the A. B. Missionary Union, last year, was not its great wealth. It is not a notably rich church, though it has a large membership. It was because its pastor had talked missions and worked missions and prayed missions for more than twenty years. He had sown seed, had watered it, had guarded it, and had seen many evidences of its fertility. The current expenses of the year were less than $10,000, but its gifts to foreign missions $20,000; and no individual was asked to give a dollar. The time for giving came, and the trained and God-honored people gave. When they counted up what they had given, it was $20,000.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the Fast. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 18th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover. 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, pass words, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 398 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow.—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual. By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 398 pages. cloth $1.00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear area of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

(From the Vanguard.)

Hot biscuits are not a necessity. There are families who never make them. They plan to have good light bread always on hand. The soda and lard in them are bad for the health. They are more digestible eaten cold than warm, as is also light bread.

Why cook potatoes in grease, especially in lard? Fried potatoes are hard to digest. They can be boiled or baked, and if eaten before they get heavy are delicious. Care must be taken in boiling potatoes not to let them stop boiling hard, else they will water-soak.

Many unfortunate women work themselves to death decorating their homes. A large part of the work of the modern housekeeper is entirely unnecessary. Look about and see if you cannot drop off much of the useless treadmill and be the better for it.

Eating between meals is a bad habit, as it disturbs digestion and gives the stomach no rest. This is a cause of dyspepsia. Correct the habit and the stomach will get into more healthy conditions. Persons who eat only at mealtime generally have good appetites.

Don't neglect frequent bathing this hot weather. Keep the body clean if you would have health, and not be offensive to others. A daily bath need not occupy more than fifteen minutes. With healthy persons morning is the best time to take it. A bath when one is weary is hurtful instead of restful, as some claim. Nature is not equal to the necessary reaction.

Pure air and pure water are more powerful restoratives than all the drugs of the apothecary. Give the lungs a chance by leaving off the corsets and all tight clothing. Then hold the shoulders back as far as possible, acquiring a habit of standing and sitting straight. Then cultivate deep breathing in the purest air you can get, as almost any kind of outdoor air is better than house air.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

TRIAL FREE

$2.75 Buys our $9 Natural Finish Baby Carriage complete with plated steel wheels, axle, springs, and one piece steam bent handle. Made of best material, finely finished reliable and guaranteed for 3 years. Shipped on 10 days' trial. FREIGHT PAID; no money required in advance. 75,000 in use. We are the oldest and best known concern of our kind, reliable and responsible. Reference furnished at any time. Make and sell nothing but what we guarantee to be as represented, sold at the lowest factory prices. WRITE TO DAY for our large FREE illustrated catalogue of latest designs and styles published.

OXFORD MFG. CO., 340 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. KIMBALL,
Box 277. Newmarket, N. H.

That Tired Feeling

So common at this season, is a serious condition, liable to lead to disastrous results. It is a sure sign of declining health tone, and that the blood is impoverished and impure. The best and most successful remedy is found in

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Which makes rich, healthy blood, and thus gives strength to the nerves, elasticity to the muscles, vigor to the brain and health to the whole body. In truth, Hood's Sarsaparilla

Makes the Weak Strong

Be sure to get Hood's and only Hood's

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, always reliable and beneficial.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,
AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough
Edward Payson, James Caughey,
Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther,
C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso,
S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills,
D. L. Moody, Guy Fox,
Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts,
Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge,
and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S
]-oo-[
SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.
Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THE GUIDING HAND;
—OR—
PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.
-——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.

By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth.....75

This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3 c.
The Lily "	" 3 "	Pure Words "	" 3 "
Light & L Scholar's Qrly.	3 "	Light & L Inf Cl. wk.	4 "
" " Teacher's "	5 "	" " Lesson Leaf	" 1½ "
Golden Treasures	1 "	L.&L.-Primary Qly	"

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr. 25c
& Sunshine, each Pr. Yr. 25c Scholar's " " 20c
The four to one address " 75c L. & L. Infant Class, weekly, 25c

The Nonesuch Professor,

In his Meridian Splendor. By William Secker (Puritan). With an introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. 16 mo, $1.00.

"It is a mine of sparkling gems."—Presbyterian Observer.

"A sheaf of golden grain, ripened by grace, and sweet with the flavor of rare simplicity and holy wisdom."—N. Y. Observer.

"It is a searching book."—Christian Intelligencer.

"This is a wonderful book. At whatever page you open it, your eye lights upon pithy aphorisms that combine the sententiousness of Benjamin Franklin with the sweet, holy savor of Samuel Rutherford. It contains hundreds of bright seed thoughts."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT
of the Holy Ghost,
BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by persuing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatizing on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist — "Open Rebuke" — An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance, and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

"Best" Marriage Certificate. Size 14x17½. Price postpaid 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50.

This superb certificate meets a popular demand, and is rapidly becoming the favorite. Read what the people say of it: BRO. BEST: My attention having been called to your marriage certificate, I must pronounce it the neatest in design and execution of any I have seen. Rev. E. P. HART. E. C. BEST—Dear Brother: I am well pleased with the specimen copy of your marriage certificate, and shall use them hereafter. They are in good taste, well executed, on good material, and at a very reasonable price. Yours, M. V. CLUTE.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

A New York milk farmer, who is on a sharp lookout for the best methods, tells us that he gained a quart of milk a day to a cow by changing the practice of feeding the meal ration before giving any hay, both morning and night, to give hay first and the meal later on. His explanation is that feeding the meal when the stomach is comparatively empty, and all the hay and water afterward, the meal was not so well digested as in his later practice.

In selecting farms and gardens in new places, purchasers often make the mistake of giving preference to light sandy soils, which can be worked with less labor than clay, and never become muddy, but such light soils, although good for some special crops, possess much less strength than others, and are enriched at more expense, and while the clay soil will retain for years the manure washed into it, a sandy soil can never be permanently enriched.

At a farmer's institute in Michigan the question whether it paid to raise horses on the farm arose, and the following statistics were given in answer: According to the report of the Secretary of Agriculture for 1891 the average valuation of horses was $61.22. Would it be more profitable for farmers to raise horses than to raise milch cows with an average valuation of $21.75, or oxen and other cattle that average $15.24? In settling this question, the cost of breeding and the length of time a horse must be kept must be taken into consideration.

In a German medical journal Dr. P. Furbinger treats of the peanut as an article of food rich in albumen, of which it contains 47 per cent together with 19 per cent of fat and non-nitrogenous extractive matters. He recommends the use of roasted peanuts in the form of soup or mush. On account of their cheapness peanuts are recommended as a popular article of food, especially in poorhouses and the like; moreover, they are recommended as an article of food for the corpulent, for diabetes, and for the subjects of kidney disease, in the last mentioned of whom foods rich in animal albumen are to be avoided.

"Every year," says the Cincinnati Gazette, "it seems to be more and more difficult to secure proper help on the farm, as well as in the farmhouse. From where is the relief of this state of affairs to come? It is more trouble for the housewife to secure and manage help than to do the work herself. Unfortunately it is rarely a physical possibility for the farmer to do the work of the farm himself, and more hands are needed. It seems that farm help is retrograding in quality about as rapidly as quantity. What is to be the end of it?" Stop feeding the vagrant on charity in the city to which he flocks and adopt measures to force him into the country, where he must work or starve. Make idleness dishonorable and punishable, and thus ennoble him who works.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
THE GRAND RAPIDS SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
GRAND RAPIDS MICH.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S AND AGENT'S PROFITS. $12 buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc., free. OXFORD MFG. CO.
338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

THE CELEBRATED OXFORD ORGANS.—CONTAINS 122 CELEBRATED ORCHESTRAL TONED REEDS.

When you buy from us you pay the factory profit, and not agents' dealers' or middlemens' enormous profits. This beautiful Oxford Columbia Organ for $45.00.

COMPASS:—Five Octaves, 11 Necessary Stops, 2 of 3-Octave, 2 of 2-Octave Each.

11 NECESSARY STOPS— All that can be put on a 4 set reed action without attaching bogus stops, viz.: Diapason, Principal, Melodia, Dulcet, Cremona, Vox-Angelica, Echo Horn, Celeste, Treble Coupler, Bass Coupler, Grand Organ and Right Knee Swell and Left Knee Swell. The above 4 set reeds and 11 necessary stops are placed at the disposal of the performer and the action is characterized by greater power, variety and brilliancy of tone, combined with the most exquisitive purity and sweetness, in addition to the music contained in an ordinary organ.

DESCRIPTION OF CASE— Constructed of the best grade of solid black walnut, handsomely finished, hand-rubbed with oil, durable and strong, thoroughly seasoned, kiln dried, and made on scientific principles, each component part being paneled to prevent warping or splitting, with veneered panels, elegantly carved and ornamented; center panel on top fitted with a large beveled French plate glass mirror, with veneer panels on each side; exquisite fret work, brocade silk velvet trimmings back of all fret work, large music cabinet, swinging front fall board, two lamp stands, convenient handles for moving. It is entirely new in design, and is as illustrated in cut. The case stands on casters.

INTERIOR CONSTRUCTION— is simple yet scientific and durable, not liable to get out of order and easily adjusted in case of any disarrangement; working parts are free from friction and will neither break nor wear. Nothing but the best of material used, and you will never find in one of the Oxford organs blotting paper instead of felt; cloth instead of leather; oil-cloth instead of rubber; common board instead of three-ply stock.

THE TONE— which is the most important part of an instrument, is full, sweet, round, sympathetic, and harmonious, with volume, variety and brilliancy, combined with great power.

THE BELLOWS— a very important part of a good organ, are of the very best and strongest material, best quality of rubber cloth and best quality of felt, with perfect stop action. They have an immense capacity and furnished, with the automatic valve for preventing an over supply of air, will never leak or wear out.

THE WARRANT— By our warrant we pledge ourselves in case our organ should prove defective in material or workmanship during a term of fifteen years to put the same in proper condition or refund money.

FREE—Our Wholesale Catalogue of Organs, Baby Carriages, Sewing Machines and Bicycles, quoting cash and time prices. Write for Catalogue at once and state which to send.

THE OXFORD MFG. CO. | Old Established and reliable.... | 338 TO 334 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Where Grapes are Choicest —sweeter and juicier than anywhere else—they're taken from the vine, pressed and their succulence concentrated—the origin of

Sanitas Grape Food

—unfermented—absolutely pure.

It's a delicious medicine—nourishes the digestion, strengthens the nerves, clears the vocal organs. A refreshing beverage—non-alcoholic—suitable for table and sickroom use—keeps fresh for years.

A pint bottle (75c.) makes one-half gallon of the food.

Your grocer or druggist sells it. Booklet free.

THE CALIFORNIA GRAPE FOOD CO.,
Los Gatos, Cal.

General Eastern Agency,
145 Broadway, N. Y.
General Pacific Agency,
408 Sutter St., San Francisco.
Chicago Selling Agent,
Edwin E Hills 70 State St.

CINCINNATI CLEVELAND CHICAGO ST. LOUIS R'Y Co. BIG 4 ROUTE

SUMMER TRIPS To The

MOUNTAINS, LAKES AND SEA SHORE

SHOULD BE ARRANGED VIA THE

BIG FOUR ROUTE

TO SECURE ALL THE
COMFORTS OF HOME
WHILE TRAVELING.

WRITE FOR TOURIST BOOK.

E. O. McCORMICK, Pass. Traffic Mgr. | D. B. MARTIN, Gen'l Pass & Tkt Agt
CINCINNATI.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer, Ennis, Texas.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH
NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers." CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARROIN.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

RECENT PUBLICATIONS OF FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem"—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

"INDUSTRIAL ARMY."

Twenty members of the Denver industrial army are said to have been drowned by their boats capsizing in the Platte.

"Admiral" Kelly was captured, but afterward released, by officials at Cairo, Ill. A landing of his "army" was bitterly refused at that point. A quarantine was declared and all citizens were requested to enforce it.

Clark and his Milwaukee commonweal army tramped into Chicago and took up quarters in the stables at the Garfield race track. Next day they proceeded toward Washington.

STRIKES.

Monday—It was reported that Colorado mine-owners had agreed to the settlement of the strike proposed by Gov. Waite, who ordered out troops to secure its enforcement.

Armed strikers surrounded sheriff's deputies at Carterville, Ill., and refused to permit the moving of coal cars. A request for troops was answered by the sending of guns and ammunition.

United States deputy marshals guarded the Santa Fe Road from strikers, under orders from Judge Grosscup.

Indiana strikers attempted to blow up a trainload of troops who were aiding the railroads to raise the coal siege.

Strikers are said to have fired upon Powellton (W. Va.) miners from ambush and killed four of their number.

Tuesday—Colorado striking miners accepted the terms of arbitration and laid down their arms.

Striking miners at Streator, Ill., refused to allow the city waterworks to have coal.

Indiana miners in Sullivan county outwitted the militia and burned five cars loaded with coal.

Desperate strikers took possession of McKeesport, Pa. Nonunion men were terribly beaten and many acts of violence committed.

Strikers stoned a Vandalia train near Brazil, Ind., killing the engineer, William Barr, and injuring the conductor and a brakeman.

Many shots were fired in a skirmish between strikers and guards at Farmersburg, Ind.

The McKeesport, Pa., tube works strikers forced the men at Duquesne to cease work, and destroyed several coal tipples.

Thursday—Five young men were arrested at Brazil, Ind., for the murder of Engineer William Barr, who was stoned to death.

It is said seven lives were lost in battle between strikers and militia at Mineral Siding.

Deputies and strikers at Cripple Creek exchanged many shots, but no one was reported killed.

Wednesday—Strikers attacked the Little mine, near Peoria. Four of the defenders, including one of the proprietors, were wounded and one of the attacking party killed. The mine was then set on fire.

William Dickson, one of the men injured in the miners' riot near Peoria, has since died. Three companies of militia were ordered to the scene.

Members of the First regiment received orders to be in readiness to proceed to the scene of trouble with striking miners.

Twelve hundred militia men were sent to Cambridge, Ohio, where strikers interfered with the movement of Baltimore & Ohio trains.

Striking miners at Marion, Ill., fired upon a train carrying coal, and troops were ordered to suppress them.

STORMS.

Cyclones swept over Tacoma, Wash., and Fort Scott, Kan. A number of persons were killed and great damage was done.

Kaslo, a town of 1,200 population in British Columbia, is reported entirely destroyed by a recent flood.

Three persons were killed by a cyclone in Grant county, Oregon. An entire family is missing.

Floods continue to do great damage throughout Colorado and Oregon. At Lamar, Colo., the bridge over the Arkansas was swept away.

COUNTRY.

Drought, cold weather and frosts greatly retarded crops generally in Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

Low temperature and lack of rain are injuring the crops of Illinois. Locusts have appeared in some localities.

William Dwight Whitney, professor of the combined chairs of Sanscrit and comparative philology at Yale, is dead.

Compromise amendments to the sugar schedule in the tariff bill were all adopted in the Senate, insuring its passage at an early date.

Chicago roads will combine to fight the ticket brokers by enforcing the anti-scalping law.

Five boys, inmates of a Catholic home in Tarrytown, N. Y., died from eating a poisonous root. Seven others were seriously ill.

Theodore P. Haughey, president of the defunct Indianapolis National Bank, was sentenced to a term of six years in the penitentiary.

Operations are being generally resumed at the iron mines in the Lake Superior region. Shipments of ore have already reached 900,000 tons.

That American manufacturers are finding new fields for their products is shown by the exports for ten months, which have reached the unprecedented total of $153,305,294.

By a vote of 276 to 56 the Augustana Lutheran synod, in session at St. Peter, Minn., decided to adopt the proposed new constitution.

By the explosion of a gasoline generator in a laundry at Portland, Oregon, six Chinamen were killed.

The Retail Coal Dealers' Association of the Northwest threatens to boycott wholesalers who deal directly with consumers.

Jennie Creek, 10 years of age, of Millgrove, Ind., has received a medal from the French order, Legion of Honor, for saving a train from destruction.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM
BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

The Kind of medicine
you need is the old reliable tonic and blood-purifier,
AYER'S
SARSAPARILLA
It can have no substitute.
Cures others,
will cure you

AMERICAN HANDBOOK
AND CITIZEN MANUAL
BY
MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chic

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 4 to June 9:

J F Hanson, J C Hunter, Rev J Forbes, S S Horine, H G Tussey, Mrs Jane Still, S E Hart, Rev L O Pederson, L A Phillips, A S Waterbury, A Rose, J T Cullor, J Morrison, E Van Fossen, G Pallister, R Fraser.

A healthy appetite, with perfect digestion and assimilation, may be secured by the use of Ayer's Pills. They cleanse and strengthen the whole alimentary canal and remove all obstructions to the natural functions of either sex, without any unpleasant effects.

Dandruff is due to an enfeebled state of the skin. Hall's Hair Renewer quickens the nutritive functions of the skin, healing and preventing the formation of dandruff.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	59⅛	@	61¾
Winter No. 2	58¾	@
Corn—No. 2	40	@	42
Oats—No. 2	40¼	@	42⅛
Rye—No. 2	49	@	50
Bran per ton	11 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@	10 50
Butter, medium to best	10	@	17
Cheese	07¾	@	09¼
Beans	1 25	@	1 85
Eggs, fresh	11
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	3 50	@	4 25
Flax	1 32
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50	@	9 00
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@	70 00
Potatoes, (bu.)	83	@	95
Hides—Green to dry flint	02½	@	06½
Lumber—Common			15 50
Wool (unwashed)	12	@	26
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 55	@	4 85
Common to good	4 10	@	4 50
Hogs	4 30	@	4 87½
Sheep	1 50	@	4 40

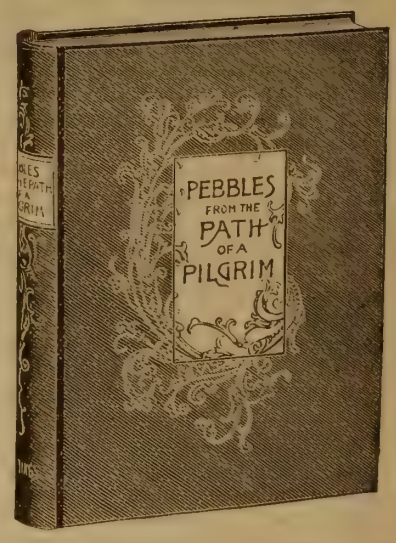
NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	61	@	62⅛
Corn No 2	45	@	45¼
Oats	48	@	49
Rye	52	@	58
Eggs, Western fresh	14	@
Butter	10	@	19½
Wool	19	@	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 50	@	4 90
Hogs	4 40		4 67½

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.
—BY—
MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book.... No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Journey to Palestine
BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.
—oo—

Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf..... 1⅞c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅞c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.
LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING
Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI, No. 41 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,260.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
The Church's Enemy Overcome..... 8
A Formidable Alliance.. 8
"The Progressive American Party"..... 8
Our New Monthly..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Living for Christ..... 1
The Pillar of Fire (Poetry).....10
SELECTED:
A Slander Upon African Missions..... 3
Labor Federations a Menace to Civilization 3
Secrecy Among "Industrial" Sympathizers... 3
Peace of Europe..... 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
EDUCATIONAL NOTES.....12
REFORM NEWS:
From the Pacific Coast Agent; The New England Secretary Studies the A. P. A.....5,9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Congregationalists and the A. P. A.; Personal Experience with Greek Letter Fraternities; The Most Dangerous Humbug..... 5
IN BRIEF..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
N. C. A..... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
LITERATURE.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
Catalogue of Publications 13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

The customary comments upon the Bible Lesson for this week's issue of the Cynosure have failed to reach us, greatly to our regret. Their place on the twelfth page, however, is filled with some "Educational Notes," both seasonable and interesting.

The letter from Rev. P. B. Williams, our efficient agent on the Pacific coast, printed on the fifth and ninth pages of this issue of the Cynosure, abounds in stirring testimonies against the lodge and the good work accomplished by Bro. Williams in bringing people to their senses as to the lodge iniquity. During the month of May this able speaker delivered ten anti-secrecy lectures and eleven other addresses, including sermons. He is an indefatigable worker.

Six ministers of the Gospel at Evanston, the other day, were chosen as a jury to investigate the case of a druggist in that prohibition town, who was accused of surreptitiously selling ardent spirits in the guise of a medical "tonic." These clergymen were of different denominations (including Rev. A. W. Parry, of the Free Methodist church), and the evidence before them was very conclusive. Their unanimous verdict was positive and condemnatory, and the druggist was fined $100 for infraction of the law. "No one wastes any sympathy on the liquor-seller," says the Northwestern Christian Advocate, and clerical juries are in favor with the people.

The Coxey movement has resulted in the introduction of a bill in the United States Senate by Senator Peffer and in the House of Representatives by Mr. Geary, of California, providing for the promotion of good road-making and the issue of non-interest-bearing bonds. A provision in it makes it compulsory for every State, Territory county and township to give work to every unemployed person in its limits at $1.50 a day for common labor and $3.50 for labor with a team, eight hours a day. J. S. Coxey and Carl Browne, of commonweal movement, were granted a hearing by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor to advocate the bill. They urged its passage on the ground that it would provide employment for the idle men of the country. The hearing was not completed and it will be resumed on the 27th inst.

The next international Peace Congress is to convene at Antwerp, on the 29th of August. This announcement should greatly interest the Christian world, and inspire a large and influential attendance. Preparations are being made to send delegates from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Richmond, and perhaps other cities of the United States. The season for an ocean voyage is favorable, and it seems desirable to have a numerous representation of Americans in the deliberations of this congress.

The Methodist Episcopal church, North and South, have both declared for the eternal divorcement of the church and the saloon. The Southern church, at its recent General Conference, refused, by a vote of 47 to 104, to characterize the signing of an application for a liquor license as a simple "indiscretion," but declared it an immoral act. It also made as pointed a declaration against the leasing of property for saloon purposes and likewise denounced the practice of acting as bondsmen for liquor dealers. The declaration of the M. E. church, North, pronounces the licensing of liquor-sellers "vicious in principle and powerless as a remedy;" and adds that "no man engaged in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages ought to receive the commercial patronage of Christian people," nor their suffrages. Now let the members of these churches vote in the spirit of their declarations.

Straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel was not peculiar to the Jewish age. A baker in New York was recently arrested and fined for selling two loaves of bread, while thousands of gallons of intoxicating liquors were being sold in violation of law, and to the great injury of the public welfare, and no earnest effort was being made to prevent it. The province of law is not to enforce religious obligation, but it is to protect the general well-being of society. The liquor traffic is a perpetual wrong. On Sunday it is peculiarly so; for on that day there is probably more consumed, and more crime is committed, than during any other day of the week. We find no fault with the enforcement of law. What we most need, all over our land, is greater loyalty to civil authority and more respect for legal enactments. But to punish what, at most, are trivial offenses, and to wink at enormous crimes against society, is the right way to bring all law and all government into contempt.

Rev. J. C. K. Milligan contributes a paper on "Brutish Counsels," founded on passages in Isaiah 19, to the Christian Statesman, in which he carefully reviews the spirit of the age and our obnoxious national traits. In the course of his article he says: "Our statesmen and legislators, engrossed in questions of finance, of money, of party and personal interests, of the distribution of offices, of tariffs and the monopoly of trade, are unwilling to allow the claims of the Lord Jesus to public recognition even to come up for discussion in the halls of national legislation. The great moral questions of the day—the sanctification of the Sabbath; the regulation of marriage and divorce; the establishment of just naturalization laws; the limitation of suffrage by educational and moral tests; the sanctity and security of the ballot and election returns, and the suppression of secret, oath-bound conspiracies for the promotion of selfish interests and the overthrow of all government, law and order—are either thrust aside with contempt as unworthy of consideration, or are considered in answer to the demands of the un-Christian and immoral, the hoodlums of society, the organized anarchists, the open foes of our Protestant and republican civilization. . . . Calamities are thickening upon us because this is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the Lord, nor receiveth correction."

Certain events within the past few weeks have brought to the realm of public discussion the question: "Must we have a standing army?" Among the incidents leading to this inquiry, and supposed to answer it, are the following, the summary of a daily city paper: "Regiments of home militia afield in half a dozen States, to suppress rioters. Myriads of Poles, Hungarians, Russians, Italians, the victims of centuries of oppression and brutalism, ignorant of the language and customs of the country, fitted only for the rudest forms of labor in fields already glutted, disappointed with the results of their change, and freed from their accustomed restraints, in revolt against law and order and the rights of their fellows." "One thing seems certain," says an observant contemporary: "This country must prepare to maintain a standing army or it must close the gates on an unrestricted immigration until it has assimilated, educated, and Americanized its present accumulation. The American workingman asks no odds of his peers. He can hold his own with the thrifty German, the industrious Scandinavian, the alert Celt, the intelligent artisan of any country. But he cannot compete with the besotted ignorance, the squalid habits of life, the brutality, and savagery of the immigration that is now pouring in on us. It must be checked, or this country will be Europeanized, even to the extent of a standing army." No further comment, just now, seems necessary. It will be a sad day, however, when the freedom of the American citizen may be safely asserted only at the point of the army bayonet.

LIVING FOR CHRIST.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

Some one remarked: "There are two things most beautiful: A child before sin has hardened him and an old man after grace has softened him." A friend replied: "There is one thing more beautiful, a young man or woman on the verge of manhood or womanhood, the world beckoning toward its allurements and promises, and the church calling to duty and usefulness, turning the back upon the world, and choosing Christ." The greatest, the grandest, and the noblest thing in life is to take Christ as the portion of our souls. Paul says in Colossians 3: 23, 24: "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ." And in 2 Cor. 5: 14, 15: "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead: and that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again." Unity of purpose in life is necessary for two reasons; first to secure the highest development of character, and, second, to obtain the greatest results. Two young men, equally well equipped with natural and acquired talents, start out in life. One determines to become very rich; the other to be a great scholar. Their paths begin to diverge, and at last they are far apart. Each accomplishes his object. But the man with the great fortune sacrificed the opportunities to become learned, because they interfered with his money-getting, and he is not a scholar. The man with great literary attainments is very poor because he had not time to make money. They are both great men, because they have learned to concentrate their energies upon one purpose. The first is a money-king; the second is a literary-king.

Napoleon was a great leader. The one absorbing passion of his life was glory. He attempted to overthrow the nations and establish a universal empire, with himself at the head of it, and France as the seat of his dominion. His watchword was glory. U. S. Grant was a patriot. His one purpose was to save and bless his country. He became a great general and accomplished great things, and received great rewards. Daniel Webster was a great statesman. The great purpose of his life was to unify this nation, by strengthening the indissoluble bonds of liberty and union. His selfish and ambitious desire for the Presidency led him to depart from this purpose on one occasion, and he fell like a towering pillar whose fall is all the greater because of its height. But his great purpose made his character and work great. Now the Christian lives for Christ. This is the highest purpose in life. It develops the greatest character and it enables us to do the greatest work. This was pre-eminently true of the Apostle Paul. Christ was the center of his theology. "I am determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." "Preach the word." Preach Christ as the eternal Son of God, having all the perfections, names, titles, attributes and works of the Father, and who became the Son of man, having a true body and a reasonable soul, and, though possessing two distinct natures, remains one divine Person forever. Preach him as the Prophet who reveals to us by his Word and Spirit the will of God for our salvation; as the Priest who offered himself a sacrifice for our sins and entered into heaven to intercede for us; and as our King to subdue us to himself and conquer all our enemies. Christ is the alpha and omega of the Christian's theology. Christ was the centre of Paul's inner life or worship, "wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." "Let all the angels of God worship him." The saints and angels in heaven united in singing: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive glory and honor and power." Christ was the centre of Paul's outward life or work. "For me to live is Christ." All that I am, all that I have, and all that I can be are devoted to him. He went everywhere, preaching Christ. "Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." What Paul did we should do. Wealth and honor were not a primary or secondary object with him. His one and only purpose was to glorify Christ. This we are expected to do:

I. Because it is our highest duty. Some regard this as an inferior motive; and they enforce their view by asking: "What would a man think if his wife would say, 'I love you from a sense of duty and I discharge my obligations arising out of our relations in the home from a conviction of duty!" Let me say that such a wife will always be true. She recognizes Jesus as her king. The family relation is constituted in his name and by his authority. He is King in the home, the author of its rights and privileges, its relations, duties and obligations. Husband and wife, father and mother, son and daughter, brother and sister, are all under law to Christ. And the highest type of conjugal love is the love that recognizes Christ as king and grows out of a sense of responsibility to him. Such a love cannot be inordinate and foolish, because it is moderated by a sense of obligation to Christ. Neither can such a love be indifferent, austere or cruel, because it is stimulated, regulated and softened by the sense of accountability to Christ the Judge. So the believer loves Christ from a sense of duty. This sense of obligation restrains him from wrong-doing and it stimulates him in well-doing. He serves the Lord Christ.

2. Because it best serves our own highest interests. Paul said: "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." Christ took hold of Paul that he might deliver him from sin and make him holy. Now Paul purposes to realize that purpose. He proposes to take hold of that purpose for which Christ took hold of him. Hence he continues: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." This principle will settle every vexed question. Shall I go to the theatre? Where is the harm? Now apply this test. Christ took hold of me to free me from sin and make me holy. I have resolved to take hold of this purpose and realize it. Is going to the theatre consistent with that purpose? Does the theatre help a man to conquer sin? Does it lift men up to a higher moral plane and make them more holy? Would Christ go if he were here in the body? Would I like for him to come and find me there? Shall I join the lodge? It helps a man socially and financially, we are told. Why should I forfeit this advantage? Try the test again. Is the lodge within or without the kingdom of Christ? Does it help us in the battle against sin, or is it allied with iniquity? Does it promote vital godliness or foster the casuality of the depraved human heart? Does it help or hinder me in laying hold of that for which Christ laid hold of me? Would Christ have joined the lodge if he were here? Would I be glad to have him come and find me in the lodge-room administering their oaths to a victim prepared according to the rights of initiation? Shall I use my political rights under the United States Constitution? Apply the test once more. Is that instrument in harmony with the divine law? Do our Sabbath legislation, temperance legislation, divorce legislation, Chinese legislation, Indian legislation and African legislation indicate that our compact is a fountain of iniquity with which no follower of Christ can strike hands and be innocent? Does political action under that instrument lift up or drag down the Christian? Would Christ take such an obligation? If Christ were to come, would those within the political body and criminally participating in its organic wickedness, or those without who lifted up their protest against the daring sin, be accounted as his loyal friends? We are doing the best for ourselves when we are faithfully serving Christ.

3. Because it makes our lives the most useful. In the Acts of the Apostles we have a record of their useful lives. When Bishop Ripan had read the account of John Williams' labors in the South Sea Islands, he said: "I have read the 29th chapter of the book of the Acts." Many chapters have been added. Livingstone was found dead in a hut in the heart of Africa, kneeling by his cot. His last recorded prayer was: "May the blessing of heaven descend upon any man, English or American, who shall do anything to close this open sore of the world." Dr. Moffat entered South Africa in 1816 and labored fifty-two years. Africaner was a cruel chief. Dr. Moffat crossed the Orange river and preached Christ to him. His heart was pierced by the arrows of the King. Three boys in Uganda, Central Africa, found Christ. Their chief called them and said: "You believe Christ will raise you from the dead. We will see." He ordered a great fire kindled. The body of one was mutilated and thrown into the flames. The second likewise. The third said: "Do not cut off my hands and feet. I will not struggle or resist. Only throw me into the fire." Africa is another chapter of the Acts. The Danish missionaries went to India in 1701. In 1750 they had 15,000 converts. At the death of Schwartz, in 1796, they had 50,000. But they admitted caste and that proved fatal to their work. Carey landed in India in 1793. He became an indigo manufacturer and cleared $450,000. This he devoted to the mission. He became Professor of the Royal College at Calcutta, at a salary of $500 per month. He lived on one-tenth of the tithe and gave the rest to the mission. He translated and printed the Bible in the Bengale language. At his death there were twenty-six self-supporting native congregations. Alexander Duff was sent, in 1829. He established a college with English as its basis. He started with three students. At the end of the first week he had 300. There were soon four such colleges in as many cities of India. In 1821 Miss Cooke was sent to establish a school for girls. To-day 100,000 India girls are in those schools. India is another chapter in the Acts. Adoniram Judson had a fine pastorate in Boston offered him. He preferred going to Burmah. His friends said: "You are making a mistake." To-day 30,000 converts are reading the Burmese Bible. Did he make a mistake? When Francis Xavier stood before China and saw the prejudices and caste which held them, he cried: "O rock, rock, when wilt thou open to my Master?" Christ smote the rock, floods gushed and ran in the desert like a stream. Dr. Morrison entered China in 1807. The Bible was translated and printed. To-day there are 50,000 Chinese communicants. In 1853 Commodore Perry entered Japan. He opened his Bible on the capstan, read the Psalm 100, and ordered the port to be opened. He entered without firing a shot. In 1871 Japan adopted the Christian calendar; in 1874 she adopted the Christian Sabbath; and in 1890 she adopted a constitutional government. To-day there are three native synods, representing native churches, and they send out missionaries to the foreign field. The story of Madagascar is of thrilling interest. The missionaries landed in 1821 on an island 1,000 miles long, 350 miles wide, and having 6,000,000 people. Little was accomplished at first. In 1837 a new king ordered the mission houses confiscated, the missionaries imprisoned, and the converts scattered. This reign of terror continued to 1861, when the king died and his sister came to the throne. She was a convert. There was great rejoicing and 300,000 came to the capital to witness her coronation. On a little table at her right was her crown. On a little table at her left was a Bible. On the wall in front was written "Glory to God!" in the rear, "Good will toward men;" on the right: "The Lord reigneth;" and on the left, "He will give his people peace." Her first act was to open the prisons and liberate the missionaries. The work revived. From that time till now there have been more converts in Madagascar than in all the Roman empire in the first 100 years of the Christian era. On the tombstone of William Geddes, the apostle of Aneityum, New Hebrides, is written: "When he came in 1848, there were no Christians; when he departed in 1872, there were no heathen." John G. Paton landed on Tanna in 1858. After three years the cannibals drove him away. He went to Aiwana. To-day both islands are Christian, and two ships fly as winged Gospel messengers between the thirty islands of New Hebrides. Rev. Mr. Gilbert wrote: "When I landed on the Fiji islands, my first duty was to gather up and bury the hands, feet, skulls and bones of the arms and legs of 80 men who had been roasted and eaten at a cannibal feast. I was permitted to see the men who partook of that feast sit down with me at the Lord's table." These are so many chapters added to the Acts. In the beginning of this century there were only 1,000,000 copies of the Bible in forty languages. Now there are 250,000,000, and it is printed in 310 languages. Then there were 200 ordained missionaries; now 6,000 ordained missionaries and 35,000 helpers, and 3,000,000 converts. Then $250,000 was given annually; now $20,000,000 a year for missions. But how little is done! Recently the census of India was taken. There are 287,000,000 people. The government employed 950,000 to take it. They were stationed and began the same hour. The work was done in half a day. There are 40,000,000 communicants in the Reformed churches. If one-tenth of these would devote themselves, the enrollment of the world for Christ could be taken within the present century. A Brahmin said to a missionary: "We are finding out you Christians. You are not as good as your Book. If you were good as your Book you would take India for Christ within five years." We must plead guilty. We are not as good as our Book so long as we give in this country $2,200,000,000 for intoxicating drink and only $10,000,000 for missions; so long as we have one minister for every 1,000 of our population, and one missionary for every 500,000 of the heathen; so long as we have one physician for every 600 people and only one for every 3,000,000 in heathen lands; so long as we send 3,000 gallons of whisky to the Congo for every missionary to Africa.

4. Because Christ died to secure this. Paul judged that if Christ died for all, all should live for him. Christ died to bring us to God. But we can come to God only through Christ. And if we take Christ as the way, we must walk in the way. Christ died to make us holy. But we cannot be holy without living to Christ. Christ died to purchase for himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. But we cannot be Christ's without living to him. The purpose for which the Son of God died is realized in our living lives entirely devoted to his service.

Boston, June 9, 1894.

A SLANDER UPON AFRICAN MISSIONS.

Prof. Garner, the man who has been studying monkey language in African jungles, with a view of classifying and translating it, was in Chicago recently, and in the course of an interview, printed in the Herald, uttered this foul calumny against Christianity and Christian missionaries. The reader will believe as much as he pleases of Garner's report. The editor of the Cynosure does not believe it. Association with monkeys seems to have demoralized the professor's conceptive faculties.

"I wish I could make my visit and work in Africa of value to the Christian people of this country who have spent millions of dollars in sending missionaries to that continent. My advice would be given to them untainted by prejudice, and I would say: 'Don't send any more missionaries there.' It cannot be said that I, Southerner that I am and formerly slave-owner, am prejudiced in favor of the Negro, but I can say that I found them contented and happy in their native country, and in their lives practicing all the virtues that we as Christians practice, and not as many vices.

"I can say without feeling, except for regret, that the Christian religion has a bad effect upon the African. In the towns where the missionaries make conversions families become divided and dissensions arise. More than this, the African upon conversion immediately practices zealously that portion of the Christian creed relating to atonement. He commits depredations and asks forgiveness and then believes himself guiltless. He does not fully understand the meaning of the doctrine. This evil exists more than would be believed. This doctrine of forgiveness is exercised so freely by those who have been converted that in a community a Christian is looked upon as a mean man and is not trusted. The people there have no religious convictions. They have a code of ethics, which is very similar to ours, only it is practiced more generally, and infractions are punished more surely and severely. Such a thing as murder is not heard of among the people I visited. They cannot understand how such crimes are committed in this country.

"In one of my trips I went through the Esyria country, which is between the third and fifth degrees south latitude, and I was near the source of the N'Dogo River. The natives there asked me about the white men. I was compelled to tell them to be careful of the man who came to them with 'God palaver,' as they call it. I felt it my duty to tell them to be distrustful of the messages the missionaries might bring. But I told them to treat kindly the white man who would come to them and ask to deal with them commercially. I think it is not only a great waste of energy and money to send missionaries to Africa, but it is absolutely detrimental to the people sought to be benefited."

LABOR FEDERATIONS A MENACE TO CIVILIZATION.

In a recent address at Galesburgh, Ill., Judge Grosscup, of Chicago, discussed the present relations of labor and capital as follows:

The tide that bears nations on its current never stands still. The old disputes that politically divide us are but few and will soon be settled, and then we shall be already in the midst of the new. Without partisanship, I think I can say that in my judgment the agitation over the tariff is nearly at an end. The present industrial depression has taught us that when a basis of duties is once found upon which our industries will be safe, it will, for a generation at least, remain undisturbed. I do not say that the tariff will not be the question of the next political contest; I do not say that it will; the experience of the country between now and then will determine that. What I mean is that the people are determined to judge it once for all, and when it is so judged woe to that party that will seek to reopen it. We shall then for the first time be fairly face to face with the burning questions of property and labor.

REAL MEANING OF PROPERTY.

What is property? This country, when discovered, was void of all things except nature. Here were the sea, the air, the soil, the forests, the covered mines, and all the sources of our present material condition, an unconquered domain that belonged alike to all. The ships that touched these shores brought no riches except men willing to work. Little by little labor captured the offerings of nature, and after paying the debt of existence laid the surplus away in her stock of accumulation. This was the first property. Little by little the stock grew. Those twin sisters of progress, labor and genius, worked their way upward, subduing the soil to agriculture, building highways, and factories, and to the sons of toil and invention came the harvest. But accumulation is only the vantage ground from which genius and labor work anew. Without it the laborer and the thinker would be reduced to their primitive condition; from it, as a stepping-stone, they mount to higher destinies. In time an industrial revolution came. The morning of inventiveness broke when genius, overleaping the narrower boundaries, reached for the higher legacies of nature. Water surrendered to the powers of steam, the products of the mine were turned into steel, and the demons of the clouds became the swift messenger of trade. It is these revolutions that have brought forth suddenly a wealth of accumulation that at once dazzles and threatens society.

Three hundred years ago the wealth of the United States, that which labor had conquered and saved from nature, was probably not the equal of the wealth to-day of the city of Galesburg. Now it is upward of 70,000,000,000 of dollars. Each year adds more than was the whole in the days of George Washington; each year adds more than was the entire cost and destructiveness of the four years of war through which you veterans marched. The whole of it, though controlled by individuals, is pre-eminently and beneficially the nation's wealth. There came that mighty unification of property now embodied in the corporations and other organizations, which commerce and trade so universally employs. With this contribution of individual property to corporate management came the surrender of individual control to directories and committees.

THE INDIVIDUAL IS LOST SIGHT OF.

Thus a system has grown up embracing a large percentage of the accumulations of the nation, in which the holdings of the individual have passed from his control into that of representatives. Formerly representative government was confined to political rights; in the last end of this century its methods have almost absorbed personal and property rights. This system, beginning originally with those great enterprises, as railroads and steamships, that could find realization under no other methods, has extended, until it comprises a majority of the manufacturing and commercial ventures.

The tendency shows no sign of running out. On the contrary, day after day, men are still further losing individual control of their property, and already, as a result, in many branches of industry at least, the combinations are so strong that the continuance of individual competition is impossible. It is not surprising that in the presence of these phenomena labor should also have learned the art of organization. From little societies, where obligations were voluntary, it has gone on until in every specialty workers to-day are compressed into unions, where the individual will is merged in the master will of a ruler or committee. Before a boy can learn a trade he must receive a permit from the supervising body, and before he can work at his trade he must matriculate into the obligations which the union imposes. The remainder of his life as a mechanic is simply one long subjection to the direction of others. He can work only when they grant leave, and at wages that shall have received their approval, and he must be ready, at any notice, to deliver up his family to hunger and the street when a call for a strike comes. He has effectually sunk his will into the general will of his trade and has cast away for organization all the advantages and inspiration of independent individuality. But the spirit of organization, once stirred, does not stop. The trades unions are each year approaching a closer consolidation, and the time is not distant, if not already upon us, when a single union will, for all the purposes of strikes and menace, be in control of all branches of labor. In that hour the bricklayer, or the boiler-maker, will not simply have delivered over his personal rights into the keeping of his fellows of the same craft. The shadow of a still deeper tyranny will have overtaken him. His rights will then be subject not alone to the will of those who likewise lay bricks, or make boilers, but to the remote, and to him entirely unintelligible, exigencies of crafts with which he has no personal relation, and to whose principles and demands he may be an entire stranger.

BASIS OF BUSINESS MENACED.

I do not say that this surrender of individuality, either by the possessor of capital or by the worker, is opposed to our laws as they stand to-day. I am not now interpreting those laws. What I do say, however, as a citizen, is that the higher laws of civilization and advanced manhood demand that this shadow on independent individuality should be removed effectively and at once. Sunken individuality will destroy the basis on which business in the long run can be successful, and it debases the man. I have no quarrel with labor unions as organizations to better the conditions of their members. The right of each man to rise in the world is sacred, and if his rise can be accelerated by his association with his fellows no one can rightly object that the opportunity is embraced. Many kinds of labor are, doubtless, paid too little. But the worker falls also into error who surrenders his independent manhood to the decrees of a combination. And the combination is revolutionary when it aims to deprive any citizen of that which is his birthright.

Neither have I any quarrel with the mobilization of capital which is essential to some of the greater projects of industrial development. The railroad, the telegraph, the steamboat, and many of the other adjuncts upon which the movements of the present day are carried must, in the necessity of their constitution, gather into a central management the control of individual capital. They are the legitimate objects of corporate existence, that intangible life to which the state gives birth in the promotion of its great purposes. But it is time that we should consider whether corporate and all other consolidated management of individual holdings should not be denied, except in those necessary agencies without which industrial progress could not be achieved.

SECRECY AMONG "INDUSTRIAL" SYMPATHIZERS.

Information from a source that is entirely reliable came to the News to-day of a secret meeting that was held by Industrial sympathizers on Saturday night. Ways and means were discussed for relieving and releasing Smith's "army," now held at the Davis county line. It was proposed to furnish and equip them with revolvers and dynamite. A man who was supposed to be in harmony with the object of the meeting was present in the capacity of a detective. He listened to the proceedings for a considerable time. He, however, took no active part and became an object of suspicion. But he was successful in calming the fears of the men who distrusted him. Business was again carried on, oaths were taken and vows made. The obligations were administered to each man in his turn. Finally the "detective" was reached and he refused to become a party to the contracts entered upon and he was bounced from the building in short order. Officers of the law now have his name and the names of most of the men present as well as those who addressed the meeting. Thomas, Boyle, Vinson, Hopkins and Stubbs were speakers at the meeting.—Deseret News, May 29.

PEACE OF EUROPE.

Nearly every mail brings us the assurance from one crowned head or another on the other side, that he or she is in favor of peace, and a general disarming. But at the same time they each are arming and increasing their forces.

Talk of peace in Europe, with standing armies of over 10,000,000 men armed to the teeth, 2,500,000 horses and nearly 18,000 cannon ready to belch forth death and destruction of the masses at a given time. The navies of the various powers are also being increased—in vessels, armament and men. England has added nearly seven thousand men and boys to her navy this year. These, and other palpable signs, indicate the most devastating war that the world has ever witnessed. Russia is now said to be the greatest advocate of peace—which, in itself, is a strong indication that war is imminent.—Western Catholic News.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Mrs. Howe on unpopular causes.—Dr. Lansing's Crusade.—The cigarette question.—College matters.—Gov. Greenhalge and docked horses.—Slavery in Conn.—A reminiscence of colonial times.

"There is no happiness comparable to having taken up a noble cause when it was unpopular. I only wish I had taken up twenty such." This utterance of Julia Ward Howe, at the recent annual meeting of the New England Woman Suffrage Association, is on the same line with the testimony borne by Whittier, and other noble champions of unpopular causes. There is a time—and the writer speaks from experience—when it is a little hard to be looked upon as a crank by the most of one's friends and acquaintances. But here, as in all others, causes that are worth daring and suffering for it is only the first step that counts. Having once settled your position on what Carlyle calls the "eternal right," the rest of the way is positive enjoyment. If personal ownership of things material can bring a legitimate sense of satisfaction, the ownership of one's own convictions is a far more exquisite pleasure to a noble mind. I know of nothing that can equal it;—to feel that our thoughts and opinions are our own, with their resultant actions; that they are not in the market and cannot be bought, not with gold or office; what are houses and lands weighed in the balance against a satisfaction like this?

Dr. Lansing is pushing on the battle, and even in this short space of time has succeded in so thoroughly frightening evil-doers that they are closing up their houses and moving out—report says "on the advice of the police." Furthermore, he is stirring up other ministers to wage a similar warfare in the immediate neighborhood of their own churches. This is as it should be. The power of the pulpit is on the wane or already gone, when it is no longer feared by the workers of iniquity. Of course those papers which for reasons of their own oppose and ridicule the movement call Dr. Lansing's crusade "sensationalism," but is he or Dr. Parkhurst more sensational than Jeremiah or the other old prophets who thundered forth their denunciations against the prevalent evils of their time?

It is too bad to use the venerable profile of the Nestor of New England poetry, William Cullen Bryant, to advertise a brand of cigars! One of the peculiar methods employed by the manufacturers of cigarettes received a fresh illustration the other day when the young son of a W. C. T. U. woman, an acquaintance of the writer, took up a half-consumed cigarette which had been left in the place where he worked, and began to dissect it. He unrolled in the operation a long strip of cloth, which formed its basis and chief material. What poisons it was saturated with, besides a little bad tobacco, it would take a professional chemist to say; but no wonder the cigarette manufacturers are growing rich while American youth pay the cost in stunted frames and intellect, if not an early death.

This is an age of discovery. From times so ancient that the mind of man runneth not thereto it has been solemnly asserted that a woman can't throw. The teacher of gymnastics at Smith College has discovered that she does have the capacity to throw, only it is "a suspended function," which effort and practice will restore. Our women's colleges are following so close on the men's colleges in the matter of athletics that one is rather tempted to wish she had never made the discovery. A female base-ball pitcher would be fearful to contemplate.

Three thousand people visited Wellesley on Float Day. The photographs of the senior class crew show some well-developed specimens of young American womanhood, as far removed as possible from the interesting ideals current in the early part of the century—pale-cheeked, except as the hectic flush showed a tendency to consumption; with wasp-waists, and front hair in long ringlets. The disappearance of that particular style of coiffure, by the way, was a mile-stone marking the approaching era of woman's emancipation. The captain of a crew at Vassar or Wellesley would look as funny in those long drooping ringlets with which pictures of the Mrs. Sigourney and Miss Sedgwick era have made us familiar, as the sight of a soldier marching to meet the enemy with goggles on.

In his Baccalaureate sermon at Andover, last Sunday, Prof. Churchill, discoursing on the "Secret of Power in the Christian Ministry," made the foundation of ministerial power to consist in the strength of the preacher's conviction of "Jesus Christ as the Truth." Such a conviction will not long allow the stronghold of sin, secret or open, to remain unmolested. At Laselle, Auburndale, Dr. Rice of Cambridge talked to the graduating class on "obedience to the heavenly vision," as revealed by closer cultivation of the spiritual sense and nearer communion with God, though it may cost denial and sacrifice;"—a lesson particularly applicable to the bright young women who this year will step out into broader spheres than were dreamed of fifty years ago. Another golden nugget of truth is this saying of Prof. Cowles before the graduating class of Cushing Academy, in contrasting the weary plaint of Solomon, "There is nothing new under the sun," with John's vision of Him who will "make all things new." The world is old, ages old, but it is new to every one who discovers God in it.

Gov. Greenhalge is a British-American, but he sets his face like a flint against the cruel and idiotic fashion introduced by Anglomaniacs of docking the tails of horses. He has issued an order to his staff that they must not appear in his official company mounted on horses that have been thus mutilated. He was for several years president of the Lowell Humane Society. There is a law now before the Massachusetts Legislature, which, if it passes, will send any person who thus cruelly mutilates this noble quadruped, at the behest of fashion, a year in jail, or a fine of $300. And this is not a whit too severe a punishment.

Most of us think of slavery in New England as a thing about as far removed from these times as the Salem witchcraft cases, and it is somewhat startling to read that the last slave sold in Connecticut has lately died. She was auctioned off on the New Haven green as late as 1824. For some reason, slavery died harder in Connecticut than in the other New England States, while the caste spirit is even now stronger and the color line more closely drawn. A young colored lady of high Christian principle and fine culture was refused entrance as nurse in the New Haven hospital, a few years ago, when it was said that no opposition would have been made on the score of color in the Massachusetts General. But in spite of all this, it cannot be forgotten that Mrs. Stowe and Prudence Crandall were Connecticut women. The "nutmeg State" has produced some of New England's strongest champions of freedom and equal rights.

The last monthly meeting of the Massachusetts Historic Genealogical Society was made very interesting by Mr. Carpenter's paper on the "Causes of the Banishment of Roger Williams." He made it clear that the colonists only acted in the interests of political prudence, while to Williams himself banishment into the wilderness made him the prophet of a new era of civil and religious freedom. He was also a very practical man in certain directions, as mystics and religious enthusiasts are quite apt to be. He was the first market-gardener of New England, as Rev. William Blackstone, the original owner of what is now Boston Common, was her first horticulturist. It is not generally known that this latter clergyman settled in Rhode Island two years previous to Williams' coming, and lived a hermit's life, building him a cabin on the side of a hill where he wrote and studied and tended the orchard which he planted, undisturbed by canker-worms, caterpillars, curculios, and other crawling, creeping pests which make the life of the fruit-grower of to-day a burden. Tradition says that he originated the sweet apple, and occasionally preached in Providence, whither he rode on a bull, carrying sacks of his sweet apples for general distribution. There is a figure for romance. What Rembrandt colors a Hawthorne might clothe him in! He died a few days before the breaking out of King Philip's war, being taken literally from the evil to come, for the Indians burned his little hermitage, and left only a desolate, blackened spot where it stood. The memory of the gentle, scholarly recluse has almost vanished, save in local tradition, but many a one has secured a place on the roll of fame and yet done less to benefit the world.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 13, 1894.

The bill providing for the opening on Sunday of several of the government buildings in this city was discussed at the summer stated meeting of the Presbytery of Washington City, held this week, and a resolution unanimously adopted disapproving of any legislation having for its object the opening of public buildings on the Sabbath. It was proposed that every minister in the presbytery should preach a special sermon against this bill, but it was decided that the bill had not developed support enough to make that necessary. It is probable, also, that the powerful sermon preached against the bill last Sunday by Rev. Dr. Byron Sunderland was considered by his brother ministers to be all that was needed on the subject at present. The presbytery also adopted a resolution approving the action of the last general assembly opposing the appropriation of public funds for the support of sectarian or denominational schools. It must not be understood that the other Washington ministers are in favor of Sunday opening. On the contrary, it is doubtful if three Protestant ministers could be found in the entire District of Columbia willing to endorse the Sunday opening of government buildings, although several Catholic priests have done so. If there was the slightest indication that the bill in question was in danger of becoming a law the ministers would quickly begin an organized fight against it. The adoption of the resolution by the presbytery was more in the nature of a declaration of principle than a fight against this particular bill, and the only reason there have been no similar resolutions adopted is that there has been no other meeting of ministers since the bill came up.

Should a man who engages in the sale of intoxicating liquors, either at wholesale or retail, be allowed to retain his membership in church? It would seem that there should be but one answer to this question from church members, but, strange as it may appear, there are several churches in Washington in which there is a radical difference of opinion among members as to what that answer should be. It seems that nearly all of the Protestant churches have rules against liquor selling by members, and yet, if my information be correct, and it ought to be as it comes direct from members of the churches concerned, there are disagreements amounting almost to open factions in several of our churches because their ministers insist that those rules shall be adhered to and that certain members be compelled to choose between the profits of their liquor business and their church membership; and there are said to be other churches in which all attempts to raise the question are hushed up because of the big contributions made by men who derive profit from the liquor traffic. Indeed, there was a public meeting of all of the ministers of one of the most numerous denominations in Washington and in the country, held here not many months ago at which this liquor question was dodged instead of being squarely met. How the devil must chuckle—pardon the Ram's Horn-ism—when he sees the churches temporizing with the liquor traffic for what there is in it. But it was just the same a few years ago with the various lottery schemes, now happily shut out of all, or nearly all, Protestant churches. The church drove the gamblers out and eventually the church will drive the rumsellers out.

Owing to the activity of the Post Office Department officials the business of sending obscene literature and lewd pictures through the mails has been almost, if not entirely, transferred to the express companies. To break up this demoralizing business entirely a bill was this week reported to the Senate from the Committee on Post Offices, making it unlawful to send obscene literature or lewd pictures by express; the penalty for violation to be a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for one year, or both. The bill was introduced by Senator Vilas, whose experience at the head of the Post Office Department during the first Cleveland administration convinced him of the necessity for such a law. There should be no doubt about the passage of such a bill, but the express companies have up to this time succeeded in preventing the enactment of a law preventing the sending of lottery tickets by express.

*

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST AGENT.

PHILOMATH, Ore., May 30, 1894.

Were you ever so busy that you could not find time to write? That has been my condition for the past week.

On the 22d I went to Sodaville and spoke in the Free Methodist church, to a very fair audience. Several lodge men were out to hear me. One minister of the C. P. church made a weak defense of the lodge, at the close of my lecture, by comparing the lodge to the family and church. He also said, "We must throw away the Old Testament because it has no Christ in it;" to which we replied that the Old Testament is full of Christ, from Genesis to Malachi. This minister will, I believe, see the fallacy of his position and leave the lodge. He has a noble Christian wife, who is opposed to the whole business.

Sodaville is a great summer resort for invalids. The mineral springs are said to have healing virtues for most diseases, especially those of the liver and kidneys. I secured two Cynosure subscriptions here.

Here I was joined by Rev. Walter Reynolds, a young minister, who went the whole round with me. He is a grand young man, who expects to unite with the annual conference, next week, and take a field. He will make an excellent accession to our ranks, both as a pastor and an anti-secrecy worker. He is an "all-round reformer."

We next went to Waterloo, a new town, built up at the falls of the Santiam. I spoke here in the Independent Evangelical church. We had a very good audience, who stood fire quite well. One man and one woman could not stand the pressure and left. Two subscribed for the paper.

The people urged us to return again and speak to them further on the subject. An excellent impression was made. An old gentleman, at the close, came forward and said: "One who has been there knows what you are talking about. I was led into the lodge as soon as I was old enough, but have left Masonry forever."

Our next night was at Mountain Home Schoolhouse. As we wended our way up the mountain to Wm. Ingram's, where we had been told to stop, we came upon a dwelling occupied by an aged couple. We stopped to rest and get a drink of water. The gentleman asked my business. I told him I was there to speak on the subject of secret societies. Immediately he asked, "Are you to speak against them?" Being answered in the affirmative, next came the "God bless you; we are opposed to the whole brood."

We had a very fair crowd at night. I have often heard of "bearding the lion in his den." This was as near it as I ever experienced. I had heard that this was a regular den of lodgeites. I found it so. One Mason, Odd-fellow, G. A. R., etc., got so terribly angry that before he knew what he was about he whipped out his old jackknife and opened the blade, but came to himself in time to commence whittling the bench instead of the speaker. He told a young man, on the way home, that he was "mad enough to get up and knock that fellow across the schoolhouse." The young man answered him, "By the looks of

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

CONGREGATIONALISTS AND THE A. P. A.

LIDGERWOOD, N. Dak., June 9, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On the 6th of June, the Wahpeton conference of Congregational churches met at Rutland, N. Dak. It was a very interesting gathering; and light from on high manifestly shone upon it. The ladies held a delightful session on the subject of missions. Reports from Sabbath-schools and churches were given with intermediate seasons of earnest prayer and praise.

Some theological subjects were pretty thoroughly discussed, such as: "What should be the answer of the church to the skepticism of the age?" and "Does the punitive justice of God get enough place in the present day preaching?" An able paper was also read by a layman: "On the relative duties of the employer and the employe."

But the most noticeable subject discussed in the conference was: "Should Protestant churches countenance the American Protective Association?" It was presented by the Rev. G. S. Bascom, who showed conclusively that the churches have no use for the secret tactics of the A. P. A. The Rev. S. F. Porter referred to the useless life and death of the Know-Nothing party, which was the grandfather of the A. P. A.; which last has now readopted one of the worst principles of the Italian church, which it professes to oppose. He said that the Protestant churches could not honestly uphold secretism, which is utterly anti-American, and anti-Christian. Then Judge Mills stated that the churches are bound to listen to Christ, and follow him in all things; and Jesus said: "In secret have I said nothing." "He that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved." One brother, only, tried to apologize a little for secretism, because our armies used it down South while fighting in the Rebellion. The question was asked: "Is it right to go around killing now because so many were killed then?" The question was not answered; and the conference passed on to other subjects. This open testimony was well received; and there was little apparent opposition.

P.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE WITH GREEK-LETTER FRATERNITIES.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—To illustrate what "fraternal love" means and does for the student, the reader is respectfully asked to excuse a personal experience.

I have openly advocated the removal of "frats" for two years. In so doing I have been almost alone in my class ('94) of sixteen, all but one beside myself having succumbed to the secret social system.

For four long years, as a fellow-student and classmate, I have been treated as a social outcast, and but for outside friends and other interests would indeed have had an unpleasant and unprofitable school life, and for no other reason, as the "frats" say, than that I do not believe in their principles and will not countenance their institution.

Certain "frats" in my class were profane and immoral. The class has always been, from its first election till graduation, divided into two secret and bitter factions, which have prevented any harmonious action and made enemies of those who otherwise would have been friends. For these reasons I declined to have my picture taken with the class, knowing that to do so would but be saying that our relations were pleasant notwithstanding secret factions, which I knew was false. I also believed that I had some rights in "selecting" my associates.

I also declined to take part in class-day exercises for similar reasons. The class, however, made a miserable failure in getting up their class-day program, and finally gave it up, because the "fraternal spirit" was too strong. My misguided friends of course blamed me entirely for the disgrace which overtook them.

An ardent Phi Delta Theta, a third degree Mason, who has received the very highest tokens of respect and social recognition per his "frat," and withal a "theolog," took occasion to give me his personal opinion in the most effective and final argument of fratism, i. e., personal abuse, profanity and vulgarity, which immorality he and other leading "frats" have privately practiced under cover of their secret ways during their entire course of study and high social distinctions.

This particular Phi is by nature quite generous, and I hoped that he might "come to himself," instead of which he got worse, apparently being encouraged by his "brothers."

Something must be done for the good name of the institution, and for him. I had previously, aided by three courageous independents, laid the state of affairs before the faculty without giving names, but all was in vain. The immoralities promised to continue unchecked; so I did what every student naturally avoids only as a last resort. I reported the profane and aristocratic "frats" to our faculty. Result: A few of the "best" students and the "bosses" of the "frat." factions came to their salvation (?) through the fires of humiliation and open (for once) repentance of their sins before the faculty and a church examining board; for the aforesaid Phi is soon to be ordained. He, like a man, came to me and asked forgiveness—being advised to do so by our faculty—which of course I was only too glad to give.

It was an "awful thing" as the Sig. "frat" "theolog" said; but it was a good lesson in morality, which, had it not been for the secret principles allowed by the faculty, need not have come so hard upon innocent students.

The moral is plain: Secret fraternities wink at immorality; they "hold up" profane and vulgar students, enabling them to live dual lives, and depriving them of their rights of true moral education, which faculties are morally bound to give. Secretism, worst of all, conceals vice. Better an open brawl than hypocritical peace. Better that the faculty take more labor in directing the social life of their wards, and less in book-lore, than let the Greek chapter "preserve order" by perverting justice and covering rottenness.

Of course it will not do to give the names of those involved in the above narrative nor of my school, because that would be a reflection upon those who have elevated themselves to "social standing," and a factor of discord to a school that now is governed (socially and morally) not by the best judgment of faculty, but by the secretists, who "greatly enjoy the situation." But the facts are as stated.

VINDEX.

THE MOST DANGEROUS HUMBUG.

BLOCKTON, Iowa, June, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—There are generally two parties to every humbug—the humbugger and the humbugged. American people do love to be humbugged. Barnum said so, and he delighted in humbugging them.

Paul said, All are not Israel who are of Israel. So it is with Americans: All are not true Americans who enjoy the privileges of this republic, founded on Protestantism and the principles of the Reformation. We have, now, so-called Americans voluntarily bowing to an invisible empire and swearing eternal allegiance to Noble Grands, Mighty Chancellors, Worshipful Masters, Most Worshipful Masters, Most Worshipful Grand Masters, Sublime Princes, Kings and Grand Kings.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, in the Atlantic Monthly, says, This is certainly a most cruel age for the anointing of kings; and it is a curious fact, he adds, that with all our boasted freedom and equal rights superiority over the communities of the old world our people have the most enormous appetite for the old-world titles of distinction. To be a Roman was to be greater than a king, but to be an American citizen is to be a free man the world over—no nobles, no aristocrats, no masters—only one grand brotherhood of freemen; American peers—nothing less, nothing more to be desired. But what does all this plotting, parading, and obligating to imperialism and despotism mean but titled conspiracy and marks of the beast? (Rev. 13: 14): And he said unto them on the earth, Make an image to the beast; and the dragon had power to give life to the image, and the image should speak; and no man should buy or sell save he that had the mark of the beast in his right hand. Giving life and intelligence implies organism; and the beast having two horns, lamb-like, implies religious orders.

Prophecy is always better understood after it has been fulfilled, and the signs of the times indicate that we are living in the fulfillment of this remarkable prophecy. The members of every secret order known in acquaintance or commerce by the mark in the right hand is a fulfillment of this prediction; and the springing up of these orders, like the frogs of Egypt, all over our land, fills that particular phase; causing all, both great and small, rich and poor, bond and free, to receive his mark and worship the image; and none should buy or sell, save he that has the mark in his right hand—meaning those strikers who forbid peaceable men to work because they have not the mark, or secret sign—this is another point fulfilled.

What kind of a religion is this beast-worship? (Rev. 19: 20): And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that worked miracles before him that deceived them that had received the mark of the beast and had worshiped his image; they were both cast alive into the lake burning with fire and brimstone. (Rev. 14: 9): If any man receives the mark of the beast in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God poured out without mixture in the cup of his indignation; and shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb forever. (Rev. 20: 4): And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, that had not worshiped the beast, nor received his mark in their right hand, and they lived and reigned with Christ. Not one with the mark of the beast in heaven, while hell is full of them! Ought not this to settle the question that lodge-worship is a false religion? (2 Peter 3: 16): They do wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction. (2 Thess. 2: 11): For this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie and be damned.

Any opinion adverse to the Scriptures on any moral issue is a humbug, the teacher is a humbugger, and his followers are humbugged. (Lev. 5: 4): If you swear to do good or to do evil, and the thing is hid from you, when it is revealed unto you whether the oath was to do good or bad, it is a sin unto you, and you shall repent of that sin. This declaration is authenticated with the seal of heaven upon it. Christ says, Thou shalt not foreswear thyself. This Scripture will close every oathbound secret order in this world; and yet how many are humbugged! You may visit your neighbor, but you must not swear you will do it; if you do, you are a blasphemer.

(Ezek. 33: 8): When I say to the wicked man, Thou shalt die, and thou shalt see him commit sin, and dost not warn him of his sin, and his soul is lost, his blood will I require at thy hand. (1 Tim. 5: 22): Keep thyself pure, and be not partakers of other men's sins. In a lodge of eighty members with five professed Christians, the seventy-five will pass resolutions over the heads of the five professed Christians; but God will hold the five professed Christians responsible for the sins of that lodge. (2 John 11): If a man teach a doctrine adverse to the Gospel, and you bid him God-speed, you are a partaker of his sin. If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me, (Matt. 16: 24). In secret have I said nothing, (John 18: 20). Christ is our example, and we should follow his footsteps, (1 Peter 2: 2). Oh, my soul, be not thou united in their secret, for in their anger they slew a man, (Gen. 49: 6).

In the blood of Christ there is an antidote for every wound that sin has made; and you who have the mark of the beast in your right hand, or dissipation on your brow, covetousness in the heart, or the stains of a disreputable character—with all your weakness you may knock at mercy's door, and our Great High Priest, who saves to the uttermost, will open and kindly invite you in, take off the old tattered garments of sin, and put a new robe upon you and a new song in your mouth. Then he will say to the lewd, add to your faith virtue (2 Peter 1); and to the drunken, add temperance; to the fretful, add patience; and to the one with the mark of the beast in the right hand—the mark that has made you a worshiper of the beast as well as a Sir Grand Knight or Lady of Royal Society or of Imperial Court, with a string of high-sounding titles that is sinking your soul in hell to carry them—(Matt. 23: 8): Call no man master, for one is your Master, even Christ, and ye are all brethren; (1 Cor. 5: 11): Thou shalt not call any man brother that is a drunkard, fornicator, idolator or covetous; for what agreement hath the temple of God with infidels? (2 Cor. 6: 14). Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and my daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. (John 15: 3): Now are ye clean through the word which I have spoken unto you. Abide in Me.

Dear friends, you may stand some of the little humbugs and live over them; but that grand humbug, that will shut the door of heaven and open a yawning hell—you can't stand that!

(Rev.) E. DEWITT.

CYNOSURE OFFER!

Any of the Books sold by the N. C. A. in this paper, ordered, with subscription to the Cynosure, at one-fourth off from list price, sent postpaid.

The New Volume of Pen and Pencil Series.

WELSH PICTURES Drawn with Pen and Pencil.

By D. Lewis Jones, Morris Jones, Edward Ffoulkes, H. Elvet Lewis, D. Tyssil Evans, D. Davies and O. M. Edwards. Edited by Richard Lovett, M. A. With many Illustrations. Imperial 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, boxed..... 3.20

"'Welsh pictures' is the work of ten Welshmen, among whom illustrating the beauties of Wales has been parcelled out according to the special familiarity of each. The result is a pleasing volume."—London Times.

THE EARTHLY FOOTPRINTS OF OUR RISEN LORD, Illumined.

A continuous narrative of the Four Gospels according to The Revised Version, with introduction by Rev. John Hall, D. D. Illustrated by 113 full-page half tone re-productions. Small 4to, cloth.....net 1.50
Gilt edge, with silk book mark, boxed.....net 2.00
Full morocco, flexible, gilt edges, round corners, boxed.....net 3.75

Pictures reflecting the best in sacred art from Raphael to the present day are scattered profusely through the book.

"To many the life of the Christ will be a new book in this form. Though beyond the introduction it contains no word except what is found in the four Gospels, yet when read continuously, without the breaks necessarily made by the different stories of the four evangelists, the narrative takes on new force and lifelikeness. The very fact that this is not our usual method of reading the Word will give it a new reality."—Golden Rule

A GIFT OF LOVE, and Loving Greetings for 365 Days.

By Rose Porter. Long 18mo. Paper cloth..... 1.00
White cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.25
Decorated silk, silver top, in box..... 1.75

"'A Gift of Love' is the work of a loving heart. It contains a text of Scripture for every day of the year with the addition of an appropriate thought in poetry of prose all bearing on the theme of love. The work must have called for a great amount of patient toil. But it has not been spent in vain, for the volume will prove a blessing to many a soul. To use it day by day for a year thoughtfully and prayerfully, must result in a rich growth in love on the part of the user. The author is well known and esteemed for her previous works' sake."—The N. Y. Observer.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE SERIES.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer, containing CHRISTIAN LIVING, THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE, AND THE SHEPHERD PSALM. 3 vols. in box. 18mo, cloth..... 1.50
White vellum cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.75

D. L. Moody says: "Few books of recent years are better adapted to instruct and help Christians than those of this author. He is a man mighty in the scriptures, saturated with Bible facts and truths."

PRAYERS FROM THE POETS.

By Martha Harger. 16mo, two colored cloth, gilt top..... 1.00
Leatherette, boxed..... 1.50

"This volume is admirable. The Prayer are better suited to some of our moods than formal Litanies and are selected from excellent sources. The book will be a dear treasure to many hearts."—The Churchman.

KIN-DA-SHON'S WIFE.

An Alaskan Story. By Mrs. Eugene S. Willard, Home Missionary of the Presbyterian Board of America to Alaska. With illustrations. 8vo, cloth..... 1.50

"Being a close observer and in deep sympathy with the native population in their struggles towards a Christian Civilization, Mrs. Willard has gained a more intelligent knowledge of their character, of their needs and hindrances, than perhaps any other person."—Dr. Sheldon Jackson.

HEROES OF THE GOODWIN SANDS.

By Rev. Thomas Stanley Treanor. With many illustrations. 8vo, Cloth..... 1.50

"It is a book of most engrossing interest, and as stimulating as it is readable."—The Record.
"The deeds of daring are thrilling in the extreme. Suitable for the public library or for the home."—Times.

THE GREAT LONDON DAILIES.

By H. W. Massingham. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth..... 1.00

Very welcome to all who like to look behind the scenes and see how the great London dailies are worked.

New Editions.

The Prayer Meeting and Its Improvement.

By Rev. LEWIS O. THOMPSON. Eighth edition, cloth, $1.25.

"Most heartily do we wish this work a wide circulation, both among pastors and people, and we hope it may do much toward the lifting of the prayer-meeting into that higher place which it ought to hold among the grand instrumentalities in the kingdom of the Master'—Congregationalist.

"We do not remember to have met with a work so suggestive, and we heartily commend it to both pastors and private members."—Baptist Weekly.

The Crisis of Missions. By Rev. ARTHUR T. PIERSON, D. D.

Cloth, $1.25; paper, 35c.

"We do not hesitate to say that this book is the most purposeful, earnest, and intelligent review of the mission work and field which has ever been given to the church."—Christian Statesman.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.

By HANNAH WHITALL SMITH. One hundredth thousand. Issued in fourteen styles, from 50c. to $2.50. Send for circular.

"To commend this work would seem almost superfluous; and yet to young Christians who may not know it, we cannot refrain from saying, Buy this book, and keep it with your Bible for constant study, until you have thoroughly mastered, in your own experience, the 'secret' of which it tells. It will transform the dark days of your life, as it has transformed those of thousands before you, into days of heavenly light."—New York Evangelist.

The Topical Text Book. Fourth edition.

16 mo., cloth, 60c.

This little volume is a worker's most useful tool. It collates all Scripture passages under their topical headings, and for this reason proves far more helpful in studying a subject than the best concordance.

"I find one of the very best ways to study the Scripture is to study topically."—D. L. Moody.

Stalker's Life of Christ. Twelfth edition.

Stalker's Life of St. Paul. Fourth edition.

12 mo., cloth, each, 60c.

These works by Professor James Stalker, M. A., are unique in their compact putting of these lives into such condensed form without injurious brevity. They are being taken up as text books by Biblical classes in all parts of the country, thus proving their practical value.

Grace and Truth under Twelve Different Aspects.

By W. P. MACKAY, M. A. Paper, 35c.; cloth, 75c. Two hundred and fiftieth thousand.

This remarkable sale can only be attributed to the very practical character of this work as a guide to the inquirer and a work of helpful instruction for the immature Christian. It is of this volume Mr. D. L. Moody said: "I know of no work in print better adapted to place in the hands of the inquirer."

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

By S. R. BRIGGS. Sixtieth thousand. 8 vo, cloth. $1.00; flexible, 75c.

Edition after edition of this work has been called for until it would seem the demand must be supplied. The sales however, increase rather than otherwise.

Feathers for Arrows. By Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.

16 mo., cloth, $1.00.

Few preachers have made such effective use of pointed illustrations as the well known pastor of the great Metropolitan Tabernacle. Here he has given us a large cluster of his best with liberty to enjoy and employ.

Revell's Record for Church Treasurers.

Size No. 1, $1.50; Size No. 2, $2.00.

Popular because practical—valuable because time saving—the only record for weekly envelope system that reduces the treasurer's work to the minimum.

For sale by the

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

The hop grows wild in Europe from Norway to Italy.

The earliest reaping hook was the lower jaw of an antelope lashed to a stick.

The spinning wheel was invented in India before the most ancient historical records.

The first plow was a forked limb, drawn through the ground by animal power.

The Egyptians, 2,000 years before Christ, had hoes made of bone, with wooden handles.

The spade used by the Roman peasant during the empire was a wooden instrument tipped with iron.

The telescope was discovered by the children of a lens-maker who were playing with a couple of lenses.

The mortar and pestle still in use in most parts of Asia and all over Africa is the prototype of the modern flour mill.

Jonathan Hulls, in 1736, made a small steamboat. It failed to work, but had all the germs of Fulton's later invention.

Daniel Schwenton, in 1636, described the diving bell, made a dress for divers and invented a model centrifugal pump.

The germ of the trumpet and all instruments of the trumpet family was the cow's horn, used by savages as a signal or to furnish noise at their feasts.

The idea of the balloon first occurred to the Montgolfier brothers from seeing a large piece of paper, falling over the fire, become inflated with smoke and hot air, rise and sail away.

The earliest fanning mill or winnowing machine was invented in China, and in use there for centuries, while Europeans were cleansing their grain by casting it into the air on a windy day.

Seventeen million, one hundred thirteen thousand, nine hundred and ninety-seven immigrants have landed on the shores of the United States since 1820 according to the recently published report of the bureau of immigration. This is more than one-fourth of the total population of our country. Over five million of these have come during the past ten years.

Better Than for Ten Years.

My father, William Carr, has been sick for a long time and he could not get any medicine that would do him any good. My sister had taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and she urged him to get some of it. He has taken several bottles and he is better than he has been for ten years. DELLA H. CARR, Cuba, Mo.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.
For Catalogue, address
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

CURES OTHERS

Mrs. J. H. LANSING, of South Glen's Falls, Saratoga County, N. Y., writes: "After my third child was born, I barely gained strength enough in two year's time, so as to be able to crawl about to accomplish the little house work that I had to do, and that only by lying down to rest many times each day; had sick headache very often, many pains and aches all the time. After I had taken one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' I could see a great change in my strength and less sick headaches. Continued taking the medicine until I had taken seven bottles of the 'Favorito' and one of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I am now able to do housework for myself and husband and two children aged nine and five. I also take dressmaking, and enjoy walking a mile at a time, when I can have the time to do so. And I am sure it is all due to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as I know I was failing fast before I commenced to take it." Sold by medicine dealers everywhere.

MRS. LANSING.

WHY NOT YOU?

$5 TO $20 per day at home. The work is easy, pleasant and adapted to both young and old of either sex. Any one can do the work. GEO. STINSON & CO., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house. THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention the Cynosure when writing.

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)
5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S
]-oo-[
SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ
12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ransom, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, oulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY M. HUGUNIN - - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1894.

THE CHURCH'S ENEMY OVERCOME.

Rev. H. W. Pope tells of a remarkable work against the lodge and other social sins accomplished by a "praying band" at Berwick, Me. Eighteen months or more ago a lodge was organized in Berwick, into which thirty male members were initiated at a cost of $15 each. This action aroused the emulation of another lodge in the town, and very soon it had enticed fifteen young men into its meshes at a cost of $30 each.

Then it was that a pious citizen began to contrast the success of the lodges in reaching men as compared with the ordinary and pitiful failures of the churches in the same direction. He observed that the lodges depended upon securing their growth by persistent personal effort by a few determined men. This suggested a plan that might accomplish great good by a band of Christian men working and praying for other men. He and one associate organized such a band, which grew in size and power until its influence extended to surrounding neighborhoods and towns.

For ten months not a week passed in which there were no conversions. In one community where there was no church a meeting started in a blacksmith shop, at which the attendance gradually increased from a few up to 300. The whole number of conversions resulting from this pious and persistent course was 200, and of these 150 converts were men.

The Christian World reports the regret of an earnest and devoted pastor at the indifference of some of the male members of his flock. He said: "It is seldom that they have time to attend the mid-week prayer-meeting, but I find they can attend their lodges two or three times a week." The Christian World adds: "What a sad commentary on the professed Christian! When will these dear brethren learn to make as much account of the church as they do of their fraternal organizations?"

We think the question of the Christian World is fully answered by the praying band of Berwick. Let the churches do two things: (1) Make membership in the lodges a bar to membership in the house of God. (2) Work as hard and devotedly for the conversion of the young men as the lodge does to secure them as members of the lodge. In short, repeat the experience of the Berwick Christians, and the same happy results will follow everywhere.

The lodge is the enemy of the church of Christ, and of course every devoted Christian should oppose it with all his powers. The pastor referred to by the Christian World will find that he and his flock have a work to do before his experiences will improve.

A FORMIDABLE ALLIANCE.

Last week, in Chicago, the two secret orders of the Knights of Labor and the new American Railway Union formed an alliance, with the purpose of gaining and perpetuating a supremacy over all other rival labor organizations and power to make all strikes ordered by them successful.

The effective combined strength of these two orders, to-day, is estimated at 325,000 members, and both, it is stated, are increasing at a rate hitherto unknown in the labor world. The American Railway Union has 425 local unions, 125,000 men, and is daily taking in an average of 2,000 new members, employed by railway companies, thus increasing its strength at the rate of not less than 120 local unions per month. The Knights of Labor, since the installation of Grand Master Workman Sovereign, gained in April and May 215 new local assemblies, and is every day adding hundreds to its membership. In Chicago the present estimated strength of the Railway Union is 15,000 men, including every branch of the railway service, and the Knights of Labor number not less than 40,000 men and women, gathered from all kinds of trades and employments.

The history of this coalition is significant. The recent convention of national labor organizations in St. Louis was a failure (it is stated), so far as co-operation in the field of labor was concerned. The struggle between the new union and the old brotherhoods of railway men was carried into the convention. The new union was not represented in the convention, and the grand officers of the respective brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen, Railroad Trainmen, and the several orders of Railway Conductors and Railway Telegraphers, expressed themselves as unalterably opposed to the plan of uniting their forces in other than strictly class organizations. In this position they were supported by representatives of the American Federation of Labor. The vote in the St. Louis convention is understood to have been 11 to 6 against the federation of any two or more of the bodies entering the convention, but the Knights of Labor voted solidly for the combination.

The action of the Chicago convention, in forming the coalition between the Knights of Labor and the American Railway Union, which is based upon the idea of having their respective minor bodies include laboring men of all conditions, firmly binds these two great powers together on one side, while the American Federation of Labor and the older railway fraternities, strenuously believing in class organization, are arrayed in opposition to the new consolidation.

During the proceedings which led to the coalition the convention was addressed by Grand Master Workman Sovereign, who made a strong plea for unity among bodies having so many interests in common as these. He assured the convention that the governing board of the Knights was unanimous in favor of the plan. He was followed by President Debs and Vice President Howard (both of the A. R. U) in speeches advocating the alliance. These led to the appointment of a committee to draft resolutions for a consolidation, and the adoption of the following, prepared by that committee:

WHEREAS, It is obvious that the coalition of labor organizations is the imperative demand of the times; and

WHEREAS, The Knights of Labor and the American Railway Union are founded upon the same principles of eternal right and justice, and upon the common brotherhood of man; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the sentiment of the American Railway Union in convention assembled, as voiced by its committee, be that the American Railway Union do hereby tender to the Knights of Labor its hearty alliance in all movements brought about for the elevation and benefit of the laborer; and be it further

Resolved, That we express the above sentiment so that the world may know that the two greatest labor organizations it has ever known—namely, the Knights of Labor and the American Railway Union—have affiliated and conjoined their interests for the purpose of placing the members of both organizations in a close bond of harmony for the better advancement of the world of labor; and be it finally

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be tendered the general executive board of the Knights of Labor forthwith.

There was not a dissenting voice, and the resolutions were hailed with enthusiasm.

This is by far the most important stand taken by the labor organizations during the first half of the present year. It is indicative of the growing tendency towards the centralization of interests by the labor unions, and a consequent increase of influence in the settlement of questions leading to strikes, giving augmented strength to labor as against capital whenever disputes shall arise between them. Should it prove as successful in its objects as predictions indicate, there is danger that it will draw within its fold all, or nearly all, other labor organizations.

In this connection we invite particular attention to the very able address of Judge Grosscup, of the United States District Court—"Labor Federations a Menace to Civilization"—on page 3 of this issue of the Cynosure.

"THE PROGRESSIVE AMERICAN PARTY."

A new secret political party has been organized under the above title in Pennsylvania, and a convention is soon to be called by its leaders to nominate county and State officers.

At a meeting in Pittsburgh, not long ago, about 150 delegates were present, who represented the secret "patriotic" societies of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, the Patriotic Sons of America, the Loyal Orange League, the Sons of St. George, and the Daughters of Liberty. An executive committee of ten was appointed and a future secret meeting for the furtherance of the objects of the party was announced.

The press account of the order states that this new party will make no attack on the Catholic church, but the stand is taken that the present public school system shall not be interfered with by any one. The combined "patriotic" orders represented in this party claim a membership of 300,000 in Pennsylvania, one-half of whom are in Allegheny county.

Protestant voters should understand that this is a movement intended only to benefit the members of each of the secret orders named. Its plausibility arises from its assumed "patriotism," which is only a cloak for partisan and individual aggrandizement. Voters who do not have the lodge mark in their foreheads or in their hands will gain nothing by supporting this or any similar party. The spirit and intent of both the American Protective Association and the American Protestant Association—neither of which is named in connection with this new political party—is the same—the especial profit and glory of their members, to the exclusion of all others—Protestants or Catholics.

We speak by the card. A letter from Peoria, Ill., to the Chicago Herald, dated June 6, referring to the recent election and the A. P. A., says:

> The power and the inconsistency of the association was shown in a score of instances. Alexander Hearst, a Republican Protestant, was beaten for member of the school board by Harry Lambert. Hearst was an old member of the board and was regarded as highly efficient in the office. He was not a member of the association. He was unanimously nominated by the Republican caucus. Lambert is also a Republican, and a member of the A. P. A., which is his only claim or qualification for membership in the school board. He was never put in nomination, nor was his candidacy publicly announced, but he easily beat Hearst at the polls through the secret methods of the order.

If this instance outlines the policy of the A. P. A. (as we believe it does), it serves to stamp this and all kindred secret "patriotic" organizations with a partisan selfishness and corruption that no true Christian voter can for a moment endorse. It is not the outgrowth of a true republicanism; it is not American; it is a breeder of confusion and anarchy.

OUR NEW MONTHLY.

Readers of the Cynosure are pretty well acquainted with the fact that its publishers purpose to immediately begin the regular issue of a four-page monthly paper, designed to contain special information, suggestions and incidents relating to the anti secrecy reform and its practical relation to social and religious affairs.

It will present these things in a condensed yet comprehensive manner, in such a form that the paper may be made as effective for distribution in behalf of our reform as a tract. Indeed, a principal motive for its publication is to reach persons who never see the Cynosure, as a synopsis of the doctrines which we teach.

Its price (20 cents a year for single copies, and 10 cents a year in clubs of twenty copies) places is among the cheap as well as effective means of enlightening people as to the evils of the lodge and the progress of our reform. Please send in the names and money at once, and thus encourage a good work —In a recent interview, published in the New York Times, Col. Fred D. Grant (elder son of Gen. U. S. Grant), ex-Minister to Austria, is reported as saying: "No secret organization should be recognized by any lawmaker, or by any man holding a public office, no matter whether it be a religious organization or otherwise." His father was equally judicious in his opinions.

—The Sabbath-Rest Association of Chicago has succeeded in getting an ordinance passed by the council closing most business places in the city on Sunday, but not the saloons. Under present circumstances, the saloons are stronger than the Sabbath-Rest Association; but it may not always be so. It is too soon to judge how successful the ordinance will prove; but its passage is a great point gained in the interest of morality.

—The strike of bituminous-coal miners ended on Monday of this week wherever the authority and advice of their general organization could end it, and there is hope that the coal famine will now abate. Some time must elapse, however, before supplies of fuel will enable all works to resume that have no other reason for suspending production. While the output of pig iron is less than half what it was a year ago, figures show a taken quantity nearly double the output are for consumption. The woolen mills have been closing rapidly. It is asserted that scarcely any have orders to occupy them beyond July 1 in men's wear, but in the demand for dress goods a somewhat better tone is perceived. Sales of wool in two weeks have been 5,626,583 pounds, against 3,627,176 pounds last year and 11,520,100 pounds in 1892. The New York and Philadelphia markets are dull, and at Boston a slight decline is seen in prices, with a large sale of territory wool at 30 cents scoured. Western holders appear to be expecting higher prices than can at present be realized in Eastern markets. While general business is restricted, it is comparatively free from losses by failures. The number of failures during the week was 232 in the United States, against 313 for the corresponding period last year. In the West and Northwest few if any evidences of improvement in business are to be perceived, except those telegraphed from Omaha, Chicago and Detroit. Activity at the Nebraska metropolis is showing itself in increased demand for money. Recent advices are that wheat and oats crops in that State will be small, but that of corn heavy. Chicago shipments in seasonable lines report an average trade for the middle of June.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page.)

that fellow you would have had your hands full."

You see, Mr. Editor, I weigh 216 pounds, and while that is no advantage to a lecturer when it comes to climbing mountains on foot or otherwise, it does seem to be some protection to a man against the cowardly curs who have sold their liberty to the lodges, and would deny every other one the right to free speech. I find quite a number of intelligent young men at this point who are opposed to the lodges. One man took the paper for a year.

From here we went to Lebanon, a town of a thousand people or more. There are six churches, but none could be obtained for our lecture. We hired the Union Hall. The lady Maccabees got up a big supper to draw the people of their order, and the Odd fellows and Populists did likewise. We had about fifty men out, but not a lady was present.

We opened on them at 8 o'clock. In about thirty minutes several began to boil, and they concluded to get out. I stopped long enough to say: "Gentlemen, I believe in a traveling ministry, but not a traveling congregation. Men who run so soon indicate light weights. There is but one man in five hundred thousand having backbone enough to tackle the lodges. I am one of them; so, this may be the opportunity of your life time. You had better stay and hear me." They all stayed. After the lecture about twenty-five followed me to the hotel and we had another round there. Some lodgemen said, "It will help us." I answered, "That's what I aim at, to help you. But," said I, "if it is going to help in the way you intimate, then you fellows had better 'shell out' and help pay for the hall." Further I said: "You are welcome to all the help my lectures will do your orders. Any time when you would like more of it, just furnish me a house and send me word." To one most blatant fellow, I said: "I think there's hope for you to get your eyes open. By morning you will see men as trees walking, and just one more application will cause you to see clearly."

To say that they were discomfited does not tell it. They remind me of a fellow whistling through a graveyard, to keep his courage up. One signed for the paper.

The next morning the proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel, where I stopped, said: "Mr., you gave us facts last night that no man can answer, get over, or around. I have been a member for years of the A. O. U. W., but it has been at the expense of my conscience. I know it is wrong, and no place for a Christian. I never heard a lecture against the orders till you spoke last night. I am glad I heard you." I think that man will leave the lodge.

On Sunday, the 27th, I closed at Plainview, preaching at 11; then, immediately after dinner, we repaired to the Calipoosi river, where I immersed Bro. James Newman, the man who left the Odd-fellows and united with the church. He informs me that a political drummer, the past week, tried to defend the order with him, but got so badly beaten that finally he confessed that it was a humbug, and gave his word and honor that as soon as his time expired as Noble Grand, he would leave forever.

I spoke again at 3:30 P. M. for the W. C. T. U., on the subject of prohibition. This, I think, did good. Sentiment is being aroused there most wonderfully.

I spent Monday visiting and left on Tuesday, feeling that I had never served a better people in all my life. May the Lord bless them. I am to speak two or three times this week on prohibition, before the election. Then, next week, we go to the conference at Salem. There I am expecting to put in full time. P. B. WILLIAMS.

THE NEW ENGLAND SECRETARY STUDIES THE A. P. A.

BOSTON, June 5, 1894.

Bulletins yesterday morning announced for the evening: "The first open meeting of the A. P. A." The brief program read: "Private Instructions; Address by Rev. Adam Fawcett, Supreme Vice President. Public invited."

I was on hand, as were many others, impelled doubtless by a desire to learn from a "Supreme" at headquarters what this movement is, about which so many doubtful rumors were abroad. Like the mole under the sod, its presence was known by the ridge above its haunts; but, like the serpent's trail across the dusty road, it left nothing to indicate which way it went, where it coiled, or when it would spring from its covert lair. Conjecture was rife among the uninitiated. Some surmised that the curtained cage contained a young "cub" of the "Roman tiger" secretly nourished by Jesuit shepherds, until its teeth and claws were strong enough to rend asunder and defeat the force arrayed against the aggressive movement of the "papal dragon." Others believed it the offspring of the "royal bird of liberty," endued with mighty possibilities, and destined to rise and soar and scream in triumph over every invading enemy upon American soil. Viewed from a political standpoint, some thought it the sappers and miners corps of the "commonweal army," or the "lion's paw" of the Republican party, with which it is seeking to crush the bones of its successful Democratic rival.

Some saw only integrity, patriotism and self-sacrifice inspiring and guiding those foremost in the movement, while others discerned the outlines of a gigantic scheme of trickery to elevate the few at the expense of the many. Others took a broader view, predicting a marvelous revolution, in which Romanism and her Jesuitical plots, and every intrepid adventurer presuming to hold and advocate a religious faith or secular theory averse to A. P. A-ism must fall before the herculean pugilist in training for the day of encounter, within the veiled precinct of this portentous movement.

Opinions differed, but the wise and the ignorant were thirsting for knowledge, and here, at last, was an opportunity to drink at the fountain-head, and sit at the feet of a veritable "Supreme" while he discoursed to "cowans" of such things as it is lawful for the uninitiated to hear.

Alluding to objections made by some that it was a secret society, Mr. Fawcett answered this objection, by classing the American Protective Association with the Masonic and Odd-fellows' fraternities, and then eulogizing them for the noble record they had made. They are the champions of benevolence and "good-will among men." They are the pioneers of progress and reform. Their membership is of the noblest and purest types among men. Into this family of ancient and honorable record the young and hopeful A. P. A. has been born; therefore, the heart of this child must be clean, its blood pure, its brain clear and its purpose lofty. It is a satisfaction to learn from a "Supreme" as authority the family to which the A. P. A. belongs, for it gives us an opportunity to study its generic principles; but the method of answering the objection that it is a secret oath-bound society strikes one as quite peculiar. In a "nut-shell," it is this: Masonry and Odd-fellowship are secret societies. The A. P. A. is a secret society, and, of necessity, it must be all right because they are benevolent, etc.

Suppose we change this proposition thus: Masonry and Odd-fellowship are secret orders. The society of Jesuits is a secret order, and it must of necessity be right because they are benevolent, etc. I think the "Supreme" would demur from this conclusion, and yet it is precisely the ground upon which he asked his audience to accept the A. P. A. as being above suspicion.

Having disposed of the secrecy feature of the order to his satisfaction, Mr. Fawcett recapitulated the professed principles and objects of the association, substantially as they have been given in the public press, and then summarized the whole in a single sentence: "The business of the A. P. A. is to tear up all evil by the roots, and turn the roots up to the sun." No intelligent patriotic citizen can question the dangers threatening our republic, from foreign invaders and domestic altercations, of which Mr. Fawcett spoke so impressively. That part of his address was timely and deserving of highest commendation. His methods of introducing further complications, by swearing our free citizens into squads and clans, must, however, augment rather than mitigate the evil, or avert the danger of which he, with other good citizens, is justly apprehensive. Mr. Fawcett emphasized the pernicious influence of the "papal hierarchy" in American politics, and declared that no man owing allegiance to a foreign potentate, civil or ecclesiastical, should be allowed to vote or hold an office under our government. Such a man was not and could not be an independent voter, and only those who are free to exercise their judgment could safely be intrusted with the ballot. This is sound to the core, and so perfectly apparent that it needs no defence. The basis of our political system is the ballot cast by our free citizens; and no voter who is a subject of any foreign government or who has sworn or pledged his allegiance to obey the behests or follow the leadership of any clan or "combine," is a free man, whether the "Supreme" head of that "combine" is in Italy or the United States. When, in the forcible words of Hon. Wm. H. Seward, a man places his "hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and bending his knee before them, enters into combination with them, personal or political, good or bad, swearing to submit himself to the guidance and dictation of other men, surrendering his judgment to their judgment and his conscience to their keeping," that man surrenders his freedom, ceases to be independent, and, according to the sound maxim laid down by "Supreme" Fawcett himself, he is disqualified to vote or to hold an office in our republic. Yet this is the very thing that Mr. Fawcett asked us to do, and it is what every man who joins the A. P. A. must do. He must disqualify himself for the privileges of citizenship by the surrender of his personal liberty to a secret oath-bound political combine. A man of his intelligence, if strictly honest, ought to be more consistent with himself, and he ought not to expect an intelligent following until he can furnish a better guarantee of ability than appears in such positive contradiction in a single address.

We hear much in Boston about "independent women voters." It is an organization of merit, having a worthy leader, and deserving of commendation; but if the craze for "orders" continues, independent men voters will be at a premium with the relic-hunter, who may pick up an occasional specimen of the original stock who is not, like the farmer's calf, with a ring in his nose, and some "Supreme" at the end of his "leading string."

In the application of his universal "stump machine" to the work of upturning rooted evils to the sun, Rev. Mr. Fawcett gave due and timely notice to all ambitious politicians and editors to keep hands off, and gave several instances where other clergymen besides Dr. Gladden had spoken against the order at their peril, seeming in his zeal against Romanism not to see that he was advocating the establishment of a censorship over the press, the rostrum and the pulpit, as fatal to true Americanism and Christianity as that which Rome is seeking to fasten upon the people.

When questioned as to the evil of intemperance and the restricted legal rights of women, he said: The A. P. A. does not interfere in such matters. So I suppose he does not consider drunkard-making an "evil," or taxation without representation an injustice, or else they are of that peculiar kind that his patent "stump machine" won't "catch on." However others may have felt, I was not disappointed in my expectation of hearing a eulogy of the A. P. A. which left the average hearer as much in the dark about its real animus at the end as he was at the beginning of the discourse. His closing appeal was for members and for money to start a daily paper and carry on the work. I did not remain to see the net hauled in, but am told that it was full of great fishes.

JAMES P. STODDARD.

THE HOME.

THE PILLAR OF FIRE.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

Oh, the days are now come when the legions of wrong
Shall learn of the powers that to heaven belong;
When clouds charged with thunder sweep o'er us like night,
And the star in the east flashes red on our sight.
When war's fiery billows sweep over the plain,
With terror before them, and death in their train;
But the Pillar of Fire in the skies yet remains,
And will hail our brave legions to glory again.

The power of the tempter shall vanish away,
For his cause is in vain and his idol is clay.
The hopes now enshrined when our forefathers lived
Are green as the bowers in the highlands of God.
Be the prayers of thy children, O Father, with thee
And through darkness and tempests our motto shall be
"He who sits on his throne with his sceptre of might Sustaineth the arm that supporteth the right."

Steamburgh, N. Y.

THE LIVING CHRIST MAN'S ONLY HOPE.

I was conducting an evangelistic meeting in Aberdeen, some years ago, in the great music hall in that granite city. The hall seated about 2,500 people, and had been packed to the doors for a week or ten days with all classes and conditions of people. One night, finding it necessary to make some alterations, I had asked the committee to remain after the meetings were over. In explaining matters I had occasion to walk back and forth in front of the platform, or stage, which extended all the way across the hall.

Presently I noticed that I was being followed back and forth by a little girl, who kept at my heels like a little dog. Finally I turned to her and asked:

"Lassie, what do you want? Why are you not away home with the rest of the folk?"

Then, for the first time I scanned her a little more carefully. Her eyes were large and hungry looking, and still suffused with tears. She was barefooted, and her clothes were of the poorest, "all tattered and torn," her hair hanging in long unkempt strings over her neck and partly over her face. Distressed as was her poor, little, pinched face, miserable as she was in all her physical condition, she was still a bonnie child. When I asked her what she wanted, I fully expected that she was wanting some money to buy bread; indeed, that she was a little beggar. Well, so she was. A beggar, and for bread; but it was the bread of life that she was after.

"Lassie, what do you want?" The little lassie reached up on her tiptoes and whispered into my ear, as I bent to catch her words: "I want to get saved."

Surprised and startled at the intensity of her whispered words, I drew back and looked her eagerly in the face and repeated her own words for answer:

"You want to get saved?"

"Ay, sir, I do," oh, so pathetically, and still in a whisper!

"And why do you want to get saved?"

Again on her tiptoes she reached up and whispered in my ear: "Because I am a sinner."

This was so satisfactory a reason, and by this time the child had so interested me, that I drew her to one side, away from the gentlemen who were standing by, that I might talk to her more unreservedly.

"How do you know that you are a sinner? who told you so?"

"Because God said so in the Book; and I feel it right here," and she put her little dirty hand on her breast as the publican did.

"Well," I said, "do you think I can save you?"

Hitherto she had spoken in whispers, but now, drawing away from me, her eyes talking fire and her whole tone assuming that of a polemic, and her words rang out short and clear:

"Na, na, man; you canna save me. No man can save a sinner;" and she looked at me as if much offended at the bare suggestion.

By this time, my interest still deepened, and I drew her down beside me on one of the benches, and taking her little hands in mine, and speaking as kindly as I knew how, said to her:

"You are quite right; no man can save you, much less I. Tell me, why, then, did you come to me? I cannot save you. Who, then, can save you?"

Again she dropped into a whisper, and almost touched my ear with her lips. There was an infinite pathos in her voice as she said:

"Jesus can save me."

"Yes, my dear, you are right. Jesus can save you. But tell me, how can he save you? What has he done to save you?"

Again the lips to my ear, and again the eager whisper—if possible more pathetic and tender:

"Oh, sir, he died for me."

I do not know what made me answer as I did. Perhaps it was curiosity to know how the little waif, who had so hotly repudiated the idea of man's ability to save, would answer:

"Then he is dead, is he? How can he save you if he is dead?"

The little thing sprang up from her seat, and again those eyes, just a moment ago suffused with tears, flashed upon me. No whisper now; no timid putting of lips to my ear; but her voice ringing out as before:

"He is no deid! Jesus is no deid!"

"But you just now said that he died for you. If he died for you, he must be dead. How can a dead man save you, however good and loving he may have been?"

She looked at me in amazement, and, lifting her little bare and lean arm in striking gesture, she declared again:

"Man, Jesus is no deid. He died for me, but he is not a deid man. He is God's Son. Man, did you not tell us this vera nicht that God raised him from the dead. He was deid, but he is no deid noo. Oh, man, I want to get saved:" and her voice dropped into the old pathetic tones. "Do not fash me but tell me a' aboot it and how I can get saved."

I had preached that night from the text, "He was delivered for our offenses and raised again for our justification." Here was a little theologian who had grasped the whole Gospel with a clearness that I have only seen among Scotch children, all of whom, however poor, have been taught the Scriptures from their youth. Now she knew that she was a sinner—she knew that only Jesus could save her. He had died, but God had raised him from the dead, and now he was able to save.

I need not say that the little one soon went away glad and happy. "He is no deid," "he died for me; but he is no deid." How often these words have come back to me. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast ordained strength."—George F. Pentecost, D. D., in the Independent.

AS TO LITTLE THINGS.

Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, some years ago president of Middlebury College, once said in an address in Chicago: "My life depended on the making of a screw. When at Bowdoin College in 1832, I made a small brass screw for Prof. Smith's theodolite. This little act led to the making of a steam engine, the first ever built in Maine." During the next vacation of ten weeks Dr. Hamlin completed an engine and sold it for $175, enough to pay a year at Bowdoin. Observe well the characteristics of great men. You will find that he who would rule well must first serve. But some have set their mark higher and scorn to do little things. He who scorns to do little things may never have the opportunity to do great things; for the things that are deemed great are often actually small, and things that seem small are often great in their bearings and consequence. Trifles lighter than straw are often the feathers that turn the scale of character and destiny. The great events of the world are gradual in their progress and slow in their growth. Whatever comes to pass suddenly generally passes away suddenly. Startling theories and speculations, which break forth upon the world like the sun from behind a cloud, soon sift upon the earth their expiring ashes. Excitement in church or state that springs itself upon the world like meteors or the lightnings, is soon followed by more dense darkness.

We shall find, by careful observation of things, that great and valuable results are usually of gradual growth from slight original causes. The least of seeds becomes a great tree, under which the birds of the air come and shelter themselves. The vast river rolls on to the ocean. It leaps cataracts, floats navies, impels mighty machinery and waters wide regions of country; yet it started, maybe, in the crevice of a rock, or even a dewdrop not larger than a tear. Great islands and archipelagoes, the seat, perhaps, of mighty empires, are the work often of very small animals, that build them up slowly from the bottom of the sea. It is said that a whisper slightly stirs the air around the globe. Touch the sea anywhere with your finger, and you move relatively the whole body of water. Nothing is more certain than that our every word or act, in its moral influence upon the world, is like the result just named. Such is the moral and social machinery that there is need only of the touching of a match, the pressing of a spring, or the turning of a valve to start a powerful train of consequences. The eating of an apple led to the world's fall, and the falling of an apple to the world's philosophy.

The mariner's needle and its play are little matters, but the discovery of continents and the carrying on of the world's commerce are not little matters. The nice touches and shades given by the artist to his paintings are little matters, but little here makes perfection. "Recollect that trifles make perfection and perfection is no trifle." The sculptor does not mould the human countenance at once; a thousand blows rough cast it, says one, and ten thousand chisel points polish it and bring out its exact features. It is a work of time. So do human influences and actions slowly chisel out our fixed characters and habits. Every day adds something to the work. There is power in littles. Little acts are elements of true greatness. They raise life's value, like the little figures over the larger ones in arithmetic, to its highest power. They are the tests of character and disinterestedness. They are the straws upon life's deceitful current which shows the current's way. All the heart comes out in them. They move on the dial of character and destiny alike, indicating the future of one's destiny. It is seldom that acts of moral heroism are called for, but rather the real heroism of life is to do its little duties promptly and faithfully. He who waits to do wonders in this world in any other way than by doing little duties will have to bewail a life lost, at least, without scarcely anything having been accomplished or anyone having been benefited by their learning or genius.—The Friend.

"SOMEBODY MUST BE IN."

The late Archdeacon Hare was once, when tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge, giving a lecture, when a cry of "Fire" was raised. Away rushed his pupils, and, forming themselves into a line between the building, which was close at hand, and the river, passed buckets from one to another. The tutor, quickly following, found them thus engaged; at the end of the line one youth was standing up to his waist in the river; he was delicate, consumptive-looking.

"What!" cried Mr. Hare, "You in the water, Sterling? You are liable to take cold."

"Somebody must be in," responded the youth; "why not I, as well as another?"

The spirit of this answer is that of all great and generous beings. Cowardice, and coldness too, says, "Oh, somebody will do it!" and the speaker sits still; he is not the one to do what wants doing. But nobility of character, looking at necessary things, says: "Somebody must do it, why not I?" and the deed is done.—Selected.

FORGIVENESS.

Nothing is harder than to forgive a malicious wrong, a harm done us, in a matter where we know we were right.

Sir Eardly Wilmot was an English baronet, widely known as a leader in social life and a man of great personal dignity and force of character. Having been a distinguished chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, he was often consulted by friends as to perplexing social questions.

On one occasion a statesman came to him in great excitement over an injury just inflicted on him by a political leader. He told the story with warmth, and used strong epithets in describing the malice which had inflicted the wrong.

"Is not my indignation righteous?" he asked impetuously. "Will it not be manly to resent such an injury?"

"Yes," was the calm reply. "It will be manly to resent it, but it will be Godlike to forgive it."

The answer was so unexpected and so convincing that the statesman had not another word to say. He afterward confessed to a friend that Sir Eardly's words caused his anger to suddenly depart, leaving him a different and a much better man.—Anonymous.

ASA GRAY'S BOYHOOD.

Who was Asa Gray? He was a great botanist, and found out a great many interesting facts about plants that had never been known. He traveled all over the world, and studied the flora of every country. He lived to be over seventy years old, and most of his life was spent in this interesting study, writing of and teaching its wonderful truths. The boyhood of men who have been benefactors of mankind is always full of interest, and in the book Asa Gray's wife has just published, "Letters of Asa Gray," we find these interesting facts regarding his boyhood.

Asa Gray was born in Sauquoit, in Oneida county, New York, when that western country was just being settled. He tells us that a little girl in the neighborhood taught him his letters, and took him to school with her. His brothers and sisters had a Webster's spelling-book, which did duty for them all. The little boy was very anxious to have one for his very own. The household spelling-book had been well thumbed, and a new one would look so much better. His father told him that as soon as he learned what was in the old speller as far as "baker," he would give him a new one. It was only a few weeks before the little Asa had reached the goal, and his father gave him the coveted prize. He went proudly to school the next day, and, as he might not speak to the teacher to proclaim his triumph, he walked in front of her desk to his seat, waving the book with a great flourish before her. It was just before he was three years old.

They had a lovely teacher by the name of Sally Stickney. She ruled by gentleness. For the class she had an old-fashioned two-shilling piece, with a hole through to insert a yard of blue ribbon. She put this over the head of the one who stood first in the class. So it traveled home every night with some one of the scholars until the ribbon was worn and faded. But more than that, the one who stood at the head on the last day of school was to be the owner of that two-shilling piece, which the scholars had watched with jealous eyes so many weeks, and studied Webster's spelling-book so hard in the hope of getting it.

One of Asa Gray's friends, now eighty years old, relates this part of the interesting story of the two-shilling piece: "Well, with hearts beating fast, and eyes on the coveted prize, we were called on the last day of school to spell. We took our places. I was at the head, Asa next. I missed and he went above me; my all was gone, but I braved it without a tear; a few more words would end the strife. It came around to Asa, and he missed; how quick I went above him; but in an instant he dropped his head on the desk before him, and cried as though his heart would break. School was dismissed, scholars were leaving; still he did not move, until teacher came to him, whispered to him, soothed, and petted him; then he jumped up and ran. I felt sorry for him, and would have been willing to divide with him if he had not crowed over me so. I ran nearly all the way home—a good mile—with my treasure. My mother told me to go another three-quarters of a mile to a Stephen Savage's store and spend it for calico and piece it up to keep forever. I could only get one yard for my two-shilling piece. I pieced the quilt. Now my grandchildren are studying Asa Gray's botany! He called here two years ago, and said in a smiling way: "I have got all over feeling badly about that;" and I answered: "And well you may, when you have received so many honors since then."

A neighbor who lived to be very old tells this story of Asa Gray's boyhood: "One day his father had sent him to hoe a certain amount of corn, and he found him reading instead of at his work. He gave him a choice to finish his hoeing and then read comfortably, or to sit there in the field all day in the hot sun and read. He chose the reading, and his father then said: 'I made up my mind he might make something of a scholar, but he would never make a farmer.'" But books were scarce, and money was scarce.

When Asa Gray was a young man, a medical student, so many others were smoking that he tried it too; it made him very sick at first, and took him some time to get accustomed to it. At last, as he sat one evening before the fire and smoked, he said to himself: "Really, I am beginning to like it. It will become a habit. I shall be dependent on it." And so he threw his cigar into the fire and gave up smoking entirely.

This great botanist in later life had a black-and-tan terrier named Max that was his loving companion for twelve years. He loved his plants so well that often when he passed through his greenhouse he would stop and pet them, patting them gently, giving a few words of encouragement to those who did not seem to thrive as well as they ought, and words of commendation to those who had made a fine growth, He said he found more botany in a half-day in the desert than in a week in Egypt. A country that had been cultivated five thousand years had no weeds.—Anonymous.

RETURN UNTO THY REST, O MY SOUL!

Psalm 116: 7.

Jesus, hope of contrite souls,
Saviour of the lone and lost;
Rock o'er which no billow rolls,
Harbor of the tempest-tost,
Helpless mid the storms of sin,
Tempted, troubled and depressed;
To thy clefts oh, take me in,
Give the heavy laden rest.

Thou the Way, the Truth, the Life;
Source of comfort, rest and peace;
Thou canst end my weary strife;
Thou canst bid my conflicts cease;
Saviour to thine arms I fly,
Burdened, desolate, distrest,
Save, oh, save me lest I die;
Give the weary wanderer rest!

Many a sorrow, many a sin,
Stains and scars my burdened soul;
Friend of sinners, take me in,
Bind my wounds and make me whole.
Grant to me thy matchless peace,
Fill me with thy boundless grace;
Bid my storms and sorrows cease,
In the sunshine of thy face.

—H. L. Hastings, in the Christian.

TEMPERANCE.

A TRUE SKETCH.

Not far from the Traveller office, in an humble attic room, a pale-faced, sorrow-stricken woman sits plying the needle, pausing every now and then as she imagines she hears a foot-fall on the stair; she is expecting her husband at last. He comes, the the once-honored father, the kind and tender husband, the faithful citizen, the professing Christian; alas how changed!

To relieve her mind, the wife but a little before had been reading the holy Book. It lies on the pine table before her. Her husband enters; he staggers to the spot, his eye catches a sight of the blessed volume, and his first exclamation is an oath! How powerful, how rapid has been the operation of rum's tremenduous alchemy! All personal regard, all form of comeliness are gone. The decrepit and broken old man at thirty-five, the bloated cheek, the filthy beard, the dropping chin, the swollen tongue, the bloodshot eyes, the matted hair.

Enraged he lifts his hand and is about to strike the woman who at God's altar he but a little while ago had promised to love and protect. But he does not strike her to-night. Ah! his eye has caught sight of some pennies lying on the table, the hard earnings of the worse than widowed mother, destined to purchase bread for her starving children. Eagerly his hand clutches the pennies, and turning his back on the table, he staggers down the stairs into the street, and with eagerness he hastens to lay those pennies on the counter of the man who had first initiated him into the mystery of drunkenness.

This is no fancy picture of the imagination. It is a sober reality. It is what the writer witnessed but a few nights ago, and what he has in the past frequently seen.

"How can I do better," that man has more than once said to us, "when the temptations are so thick about me?" Why should the law refuse that man protection, while it gives protection to the man who is pursuing him to destruction with his murderous traffic? Why should the Legislature place temptation all around that man?

Strange, passing strange, that men should, by their votes, send to the State House representatives who will legislate in the interest of crime, misery and wretchedness, who will enact statutes that protect the nefarious business of rum-selling! —Boston Traveller.

A PROHIBITION CHURCH.

How came it about? A young graduate from Rochester (N. Y.) University was called to the pastorate of a large church in Newburg. He entered upon his labors as one called of God. But he was soon advised that he must not preach too much temperance, as the people would not stand it.

The young man was not moved, but continued to preach as directed by his God. The second parishioner spoke to him; but without avail. Then one of the deacons took it up; and next came his farewell sermon, to the astonishment of the whole parish.

All pleadings had no effect upon the young preacher. There were 28 Prohibitionists in the town who gave him a call. They hired a hall and organized a Prohibition church. This was about two years ago; and now they have a fine church edifice, and a Prohibition Baptist church with a membership of 500, and a fine Sunday-school connected therewith.

This is the first Prohibition church in America, I think. This young Rev. E. A. Tuck certainly has shown himself a model man of God, as were Peter and John, Paul and Silas, Daniel and others who could not be swerved from the right by wicked men.

Those 28 Prohibitionists likewise deserve all praise; and the Rev. Mr. Tuck is a good example for every young man who enters the Gospel work. It is high time for every Christian Prohibitionist to come out from among ministers and churches that lend themselves to political parties; that support rum parties and vote with saloon keepers to license the rum traffic.

If the church is to be the bride, the Lamb's wife, it seems to me that this church is about the only one adorned as a bride for her husband. No consistent man can think that the Son of God would wed himself to a rum-license church.—Prohibitionist, in Western Tribune.

HOW IT WORKS IN KANSAS.

I was lecturing out in Kansas, last spring, where they have prohibition. An intemperate man came to me one day and said:

"Yes, Mr. Perkins, this prohibition will bring ruin to the State."

"It will, will it?"

"Yes, it will impoverish us and destroy our business houses."

"If a Kansas farmer brings a thousand bushels of corn into Topeka, he gets how much for it?"

"Four hundred dollars," answered my friend.

"Now, if they take these thousand bushels of corn over to Peoria, how much whisky will it make?"

"Four thousand gallons."

"And whisky is worth—now much?"

"Oh, after they have paid four thousand dollars revenue tax on it to the other thirty-six States, it will be worth about $4,600!"

"And if this whisky should come back to Kansas, you would have to pay about $4,600 for it."

"Yes, more too. We'd have to pay about $5,000 for it."

"Would it be worth anything to your citizens?"

"No; I suppose it would cause a great deal of idleness and crime. It would hurt us. I never did think whisky a positive benefit. I ——"

"Well, how much would it hurt you?" I asked.

"Oh, I can't tell! I ——"

"Well, I'll tell you," I said. "It will hurt you directly about five thousand dollars' worth. You would sell the corn from which this whisky was made for $400, and then buy back the whisky for $5,000. You would be directly out of pocket just $4,600. And indirectly it would cost Kansas, in idleness and crime—caused by the four thousand gallons of whisky—$20,000. It would take 16,000 men a day apiece to drink it up, if they drank a quart each a day. The loss of 16,000 days' labor to Kansas would be $20,000, wouldn't it?"

"I declare!" exclaimed my friend. "I never heard it put that way. I see it all plainly now.

I'll never say anything about prohibition damaging Kansas again."

"Yes," I said, "if Kansas can save $25,000 on every thousand bushels of corn by letting it go over to Peoria, the more she is damaged that way the richer she will become, till finally Illinois, utterly impoverished, will have to call on Kansas to lend her money to build poorhouses. But there is one thing in Kansas," I said, "that will be ruined by prohibition."

"What is that?"

"Why, her poorhouses. Her poorhouses and her jails will become empty. Think of a poorhouse with not a soul in it but the poormaster! Think of a jail without a convict! Poor bankrupt jail and poorhouse!"—Selected.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

Chauncey M. Depew delivered the address at the annual commencement of the College of Virginia.

At Vassar a class of seventy-one was graduated. Special degrees were conferred upon ten candidates.

The Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Michigan, has to enlarge its Seminary on account of the increase of students.

At the University of Nebraska commencement Gov. Crounse rebuked Prof. Herron for making a socialistic oration.

Twenty-five graduates of Lake Forest University received diplomas at the sixteenth annual commencement exercises.

Old Mt. Holyoke college, at South Hadley, Mass., closes the year with 300 students in its four courses of study, coming from 22 States in the Union, and from Macedonia, Turkey and Japan.

Paul was a thoroughly educated lawyer and theologian, and after his conversion his education helped to make him the strongest preacher among the apostles. No better plea for Christian seminaries and colleges is needed, although there are others almost as effective.

The catalogue of Augustana (Swedish Lutheran) college and seminary at Rock Island, Ill., (1893–1894), shows 509 students (381 men, 128 women), embracing 10 religious denominations and 8 nationalities, from 23 States (2 from Persia). The course is very full and varied.

The Professors of the German Baptist Seminary (Rochester, N. Y.,) have decided, as in former years, so this year, to spend their vacations by visiting and preaching among the congregations. An excellent idea, to bring congregations and instutions of learning into close sympathy with each other.

The forty-fourth annual catalogue of the Heidelberg University and Theological Seminary, at Tiffin, Ohio (1893–1894), operated by the Reformed church in the United States, is received. It shows 16 post-graduate students, 36 seniors, 14 middle class, 24 juniors, 17 sophomores, 24 freshmen, 7 normal class, 52 special students, 77 music students, 31 art students, 30 college of commerce students, and 15 summer-school students. The college is high grade in its facilities, and apparently prosperous. Commencement exercises from June 1 to 21.

Attorney-General Moloney decides that women in Illinois may not vote for university trustees. His decision is met with a good deal of logical criticism which he will find it difficult to rebut. The trusteeship of the Illinois State University, to which the Attorney-General's decision especially applies, is a school office not specified in the State Constitution, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, in a circular dated June 4, 1894, furnishes a construction of the suffrage law in the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois in the case Mary E. Plummer vs. Oscar Foot, 144 Ill., 68, in which it is held that women of 21 years of age or upwards, either native-born or naturalized citizens of the United States, who have resided in the State one year, in county ninety days, and in the school district thirty days next preceding an election for any officer of schools, can vote at that election, provided the officer to be elected is to hold a school office which is not mentioned in the constitution, but created by the legislature in conformity with the power granted in the constitution. The trusteeship of the State university is a school office not specified in the constitution; hence this construction will allow women to vote for trustees of the University of Illinois.

—At Wheaton college the Baccalaureate sermon will be preached in the college chapel, Sunday forenoon, June 24, by Dr. N. I. Rubinkam, of the University Congregational church, Chicago; the address to the class will, as usual, be given by President Blanchard. There will be a missionary address in the evening. Monday and Tuesday, following, will be occupied by the oral examinations which close the spring term. Tuesday evening will occur the graduating exercises of the Musical Conservatory and Art School. Wednesday, June 27, at 10:30 A M. the annual meeting of the board of trustees will be held in the president's office. On the afternoon of that day at 2 o'clock occur the graduating exercises of the preparatory school. On Wednesday evening the associated alumni meet for their annual dinner and literary gathering. The literary exercises in the college chapel at 8 o'clock in the evening are free. All are cordially invited. The address will be given by Edgar B. Wylie, the essay by Miss Wilhelmina H. Jacobs and the welcome to the incoming class by Charles W. Fletcher. Thursday, June 28, at 9 o'clock A. M. in the lecture room, will be held the commencement-day prayer-meeting. At 10 o'clock the graduating exercises will occur in the chapel. In the evening there will be the usual senior class concert, which is to be given by the celebrated Schubert Quartette.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

—The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held on Thursday, June 7, 1894, Theophilus A. Brouwer. Esq., Vice President, in the chair. The death of the Hon. John Jay, one of the vice presidents of the society, having occurred since the last stated meeting of the Board, a memorial minute concerning him was unanimously adopted. Grants of books were made for distribution to the value of about $4,037, including a consignment to the Central American Agency of more than 3,000 volumes. Appropriations in funds were also made to the amount of $2,664, including grants to the Spanish Mission of the American Board, the Bengal Mission of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the Evangelical Society of Geneva. Various items of correspondence from foreign lands were laid before the Board. The issues from the Bible House, during the month of May were 96,000 volumes; issues also since April 1st, 188,878 volumes.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

—Among the notable movements looking toward Christian unity must be reckoned the declaration by the Congregational Association of New Jersey proposed for discussion before the State and local conferences and the National Council. The paper is too long for reproduction, but the basis proposed to the various Protestant churches for a union or alliance are: 1. The acceptance of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, inspired by the Holy Spirit, as containing all things necessary to salvation, and as being the rule and ultimate standard of Christian faith. 2. Discipleship of Jesus Christ, the divine Saviour and Teacher of the world. 3. The Church of Christ ordained by him to preach his Gospel to the world. 4. Liberty of conscience in the interpretation of the Scriptures and in the administration of the church.

EPISCOPALIAN.

—"The best plan is to fire them both out of the community." The persons to be thus summarily disposed of are the Episcopal Bishop Kinsolving and the rector of a Houston, Texas, church. Their offense is "mixing niggers and white folks." The "mixing" occurred in inviting a colored clergyman within the chancel and permitting him a part in the services. Many of the congregation threaten to leave it, it is said, and a secular journal is moved to advise heroic treatment like that quoted above.

—The bishop of the Episcopalian diocese of Maryland is credited with having "created a sensation" at the opening of the annual convention by his strong condemnation of ritualistic practices. It appears that there are in Baltimore two churches which burn incense in their services, and the pastor of one of them has declared himself in favor of the introduction of the confessional, and of making attendance on it mandatory. The good bishop was deeply stirred by these practices and sentiments, and spoke of such courses as "nothing but anar chy." He declared the use of incense most positively forbidden by the ritual.

FRIENDS CHURCH.

—The Society of Friends has been revising its book of discipline. It declares against the license system, and advises that no Friend use tobacco in any form, or engage in its production of manufacture.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Methodist Episcopal church has thirty-eight churches that have in the neighborhood of a thousand members or more each. The largest membership is that of the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal church, Brooklyn, which possesses a membership of 2,076. These thirty-eight churches altogether have a total membership of 43,708, or an average of 1,150.

—The Rev. Dr. Miner Raymond, a professor in Garrett Biblical Institute, Chicago, is eighty-four years of age, and has not missed a recitation in ten years.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—In nothing perhaps has the success of the Presbyterian missions been more complete than in that most helpful department, the work of the medical missionaries. Over 266,000 patients have been treated. Considering that a healthy soul can only exist in a healthy body, the importance of this work can scarcely be exaggerated.

—Annual report of boards to the recent General Assembly show the following statistics; Total receipts of the Board of Home Missions were $906,490. It expended $1,155,709. It has a debt of $258,645, of which $66,-407 came over from last year. There were 13,368 additions to home mission churches on profession of faith during the year. There were 101 churches organized. The receipts of the Board of Foreign Missions were $843,-411.67. The expenditures were $995,921.70, leaving a debt of $102,597.79. There have been 3,141 additions to the churches in the foreign field. The Board of Missions to the Freedmen reports an income of $194,610.15, with expenditures of $192,322.40. There are 16,015 communicants in the churches under the care of this board, and 11,424 pupils in its schools. The Board of Aid to Colleges received $100,466.85, considerably less than the year previous, but the board met all its obligations, presumably without incurring debt. The Board of Ministerial Relief disbursed $159,375.37 to 731 beneficiaries. It incurred a debt of $19,358. The Board of Church Erection expended $174,255. The Board of Publication reported a profit of $35,805.49 in its business department.

LITERATURE.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

The June number of McClure's Magazine begins the third volume of this pretty periodical, which never lacks interest and variety. The leading paper, copiously illustrated, introduces the reader to the iron works at Homestead, Penn., which are graphically described by Hamlin Garland. Among the "Human Documents" for the month are Lord Rosebery, Premier of Great Britain, and Richard Harding, the young tourist-author. Gen. Greely contributes "an expert view" of the Arctic expositions now in progress, pointing out the physical difficulties that will be encountered. The Peace of Europe is discussed by M. de Blowitz, of the London Times Other papers are: The Good Angel, an illustrated story by Octave Thanet. Why Did We Marry? a poem, by Julian Ralph; Kaa's Hunting, an illustrated story, by Rudyard Kipling; Chopin's Twelfth Nocturne, a poem, by John Talman; An Incident of Gettysburg, by Capt. T. J. Mackey, C. S. A.; Wild Beasts in Captivity, illustrated, showing how they are watered and fed—special dangers in handling them, by Cleveland Moffett; The Ebb Tide, a novel, by Stevenson and Osbourne, illustrated and continued. Published by S. S. McClure, Ltd., 30 Lafayette Place, New York City. Price, 15 cents.

The Journal of Hygiene, which never lacks good sense and value, in its June issue continues Dr. V. A. English's description of Ceylon and the Sinhalese, and has a paper on Bread and Bread-making, which carries an interest beyond the kitchen and bakery, and appeals to human stomachs; Jennie Chandler writes on Education. The editor, Dr. M. L. Holbrook, contributes health notes—The Perfect Man (continued); Mental Vigor and Bodily Training; Keep Your Refrigerator Clean; Obesity Treated by Exercise; Abuse of the Stomach; Water Filtration; Salvation Army Hygiene; Tea drinking a Vice; Injuring Babies by Smoking; Long Life and Temperance; Consumption Only Slightly Contagious; Reincarnation; Health Habits of Thos. Jefferson; How Milk is Polluted; Hygiene in the Dairy; Co-operation, and Book Notices. Published by Dr. M. L. Holbrook, 46 East 21st street, New York City. $1.00 a year.

Geo. T. Angell, in Our Dumb Animals for June, offers a money prize for each of two short essays on "the best plan of peacefully settling the difficulties between capital and labor," and "the best plan of preventing poverty and relieving the poor." Each essay must not exceed 3,000 words in length. The winning essay in each case will net its author $100. Competition open until Dec. 1, 1894. Apply to Geo. T. Angell, 19 Milk street, Boston, Mass. Our Dumb Animals should be in every home where children or animals, or both, are found. Published monthly, at 50 cents a year.

The Violin World is published in "the interests of string instruments and their players," at 13 East 16th street, New York City. The June number is finely illustrated, and possesses many attractions for musicians. Subscription, $1.00 per annum.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover. 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn mower, Town pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages paper cover. 25cts each

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials" 328 pages, cloth, $1.00

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. B. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arraignment of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE NEWEST HEALTH SUGGESTION.

This is the age of reforms; and of dress reforms—like the making of books—there is no end. Formidable and imposing is the title of the very latest organization with objects in this especial direction: "The Society for the Encouragement of Loose Clothing." It was formed in London for the purpose indicated in its name, and it expects to have branches in all parts of England as well as in America. With the hope of getting the movement started in New York, a Mrs. Julia Leith is now visiting the metropolis; and pursuant to the usual program in such cases made and provided, she has been getting herself extensively interviewed by the reporters. A representative of the Mail and Express lately gave the genial visitor this much of an opportunity to ventilate her views:

"We apply our principle to both sexes. We do not believe that men ought to wear tight clothing any more than women. Of course they do not, but then you will find a great many men who wear very tightly buttoned vests, which we believe to be injurious. Our idea of how clothing should be made is entirely original. I am negotiating with a tailor now to get up some models. We believe that as far as the mechanical limitations, the clothing ought not to touch the body at all, except at the points of support. This we expect to accomplish by means of a fine wicker-work, which will hold the fabric off say the sixteenth or quarter of an inch, and so permit a freer circulation of air. A man will look a little larger than he really is, but that is not to be considered when health is our main consideration. We shall also advocate the manufacture of cloth of coarser fiber than is now used for men's clothes; and we have a chemist in our society who is experimenting with certain drugs which will be incorporated into the cloth for the purpose of warding off disease germs."

NICE FOR THE TEA TABLE.

Make a light sponge cake and bake in jelly tins. Soak a quarter of a box of gelatine in half a cupful of cold water. Whip a pint of cream and put it in a granite pan, standing this inside of another containing cracked ice. Add to the cream half a cupful of powdered sugar and a teaspoon of vanilla sugar. Stir the gelatine over boiling water until it is dissolved, add it to the cream and stir at once until it begans to thicken. When the cakes are cold put a thick layer of this cream over each and put strawberries thickly on, pile one on top of another, and let the top layer be cream and strawberries.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use grease or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

One Fare Excursions South Via C. & E. I. R. R.

Round trip tickets will be sold from all stations on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R. on July 5th, August 7th. Sept. 4th, Oct. 2nd, Nov. 6th and Dec. 4th, 1894, at one fare, to points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. Tickets good to return for twenty days from date of sale. Stopover allowed on going or returning journey. For further particulars apply to any C. & E. I. R. R. agent or Chas. W. Humphrey, Northern passenger agent, 170 E. Third street, St. Paul. Chicago City Ticket Office, 230 Clark street, or to Chas. L. Stone, G. P. & T. A., Chicago, Ill.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Illustrated.

THE FULL

ILLUSTRATED RITUAL

OF THE

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine

PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

Nervous

Troubles
Originate in

Impure Blood

Therefore the True
Method of Cure
Is to Take

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Which cures Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Catarrh, Rheumatism and other Diseases, because it

Purifies The Blood

Be sure to get Hood's and only Hood's

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic, gentle and effective. Try a box. 25c.

CINCINNATI CLEVELAND CHICAGO BIG FOUR ROUTE ST. LOUIS RY.

SUMMER TRIPS To The

MOUNTAINS, LAKES AND SEA SHORE

SHOULD BE ARRANGED VIA THE

BIG FOUR ROUTE

TO SECURE ALL THE

COMFORTS OF HOME

WHILE TRAVELING.

WRITE FOR TOURIST BOOK.

E. O. McCORMICK, Pass. Traffic Mgr. | D. B. MARTIN, Gen'l Pass & Tkt Agt

CINCINNATI.

The Nonesuch Professor,

In his Meridian Splendor. By William Secker (Puritan). With an introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. 16 mo, $1.00.

"It is a mine of sparkling gems."—Presbyterian Observer.

"A sheaf of golden grain, ripened by grace, and sweet with the flavor of rare simplicity and holy wisdom."—N. Y. Observer.

"It is a searching book."—Christian Intelligencer.

"This is a wonderful book. At whatever page you open it, your eye lights upon pithy aphorisms that combine the sententiousness of Benjamin Franklin with the sweet, holy savor of Samuel Rutherford. It contains hundreds of bright seed thoughts."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—0:0—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address Box 277. S. C. KIMBALL, Newmarket. N. H.

AMERICAN HANDBOOK AND CITIZEN MANUAL.

BY

MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chic

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARBOIN.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS OF

FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem"—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy,"—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FARM NOTES.

DESTRUCTION OF CHINCH BUGS.

The Illinois State Board of Agriculture furnishes the following information to the farmers:

In bulletin No. 19 of this experiment station, published in February, 1892, notice was given of the commencement of an extensive outbreak of the chinch bug in southern Illinois, with warning of its probable development in the following year. According to our advices at that time eight counties in the southern and south central part of the State were injuriously infested and eighteen other counties were mentioned in which the chinch bug was reported as of general occurrence in unusual numbers.

Economic measures now available are practically limited to experiment for the destruction of the chinch bugs in place by the introduction of their contagious diseases, and the interposition of barriers between small grain and corn to prevent their passage from one to the other as infested fields of small grain ripen or are destroyed. To accumulate and kill them as they pass from field to field, a deep furrow may be plowed—to be kept clean and as friable as possible, especially on the verticle side, next the field to be protected—and in this the accumulating bugs may be killed by a mixture of kerosene and water (about one part to eight) thoroughly and repeatedly shaken together. A variation of this method, used very successfully in Wisconsin, is to lay a quantity of green wheat or oats, or fresh corn stalks, in the furrow, in which the chinch bugs can be killed with this kerosene mixture as they accumulate.

A more expensive and less readily manageable method is the planting of strips of some favorite food plant, as spring wheat or other quick-growing succulent cereal or grass, around infested wheat or around corn to be protected, where the chinch bugs may accumulate and be destroyed before laying their eggs for the second generation of the year. The bugs may be confined to the strip, after having entered it, by the use of the furrows plowed all around it and attended to from day to day until the destruction is complete.

For the benefit of those who wish to experiment with the introduction of contagious diseases, arrangements have been made to infect and distribute live chinch bugs to farmers, the funds for this experiment having been furnished by the board of direction of the State agricultural experiment station. Those wishing such material should send to the undersigned, with the least possible delay, a collection of some thousands of live insects, inclosed with a little green vegetation (wheat, oats or corn) and no dirt, in a tin box large enough to hold from a pint to a quart. Upon receipt of these they will be exposed to infection by confining them in a tight box with a large quantity of dead and dying chinch bugs and returned without charge to the senders, with full directions for use.

Byron used a great deal of hair-dressing, but was very particular to have only the best to be found in the market. If Ayer's Hair vigor had been obtainable then, doubtless he would have tested its merits, as so many distinguished and fashionable people are doing now-a-days.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

—freed from their seeds and skins, as fresh and sweet as when first plucked, are the grapes in

SANITAS GRAPE FOOD

Concentrated and Perfectly Pure.

It's a royal drink and (you wouldn't know it except by the good it does)—a medicine. It clears the vocal organs, soothes the nerves, purifies the blood and nourishes the weakest stomach.

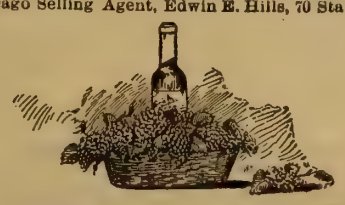
Not a taint of alcohol is in Sanitas Grape Food—it's suited for table or sick-room.

A pint bottle	costs 75 cents	at your grocer's	or your druggist's.	Makes one-half gallon.

A Booklet about it mailed Free.

THE CALIFORNIA GRAPE FOOD CO.,
Los Gatos, Cal.

General Eastern Agency, 145 Broadway, N. Y.
General Pacific Agency, 408 Sutter St., San Francisco.
Chicago Selling Agent, Edwin E. Hills, 70 State St.



A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK

TOUCHING INCIDENTS

AND

REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough
Edward Payson, James Caughey,
Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther,
C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso,
S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills,
D. L. Moody, Guy Fox,
Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts,
Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge,
and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

MY EXPERIENCES

WITH

SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY A TRAVELER.

With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is

Fifteen Cents,

but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

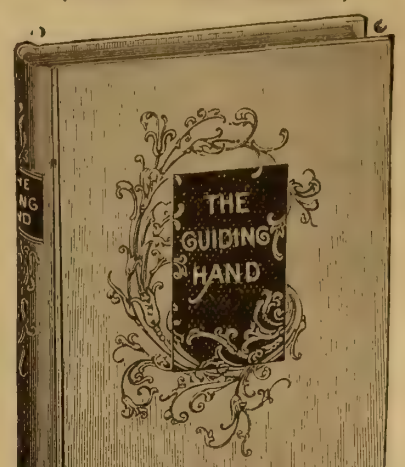
THE GUIDING HAND;

—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")



This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

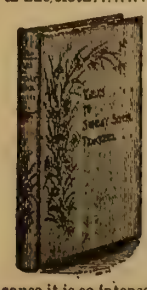
(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.

By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth.....75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbytor:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT of the Holy Ghost,

BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by persuing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50
Twelve Soul Winning Sermons..... 50
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection..... 50
Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50
Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.

Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."

Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each.

Separate volumes may be had if desired.

The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00

An Eden in England.	Life in Eagle's Nest.
Ned Franks.	White Bear's Den.
Sheer Off.	Fairy Spider's Web.
Braid of Chords.	Lake in the Woods.
Silver Keys.	Seven Perils Passed.
Grace Vernon.	Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set 2.10

Jessica's First Prayer.	Friends till Death.
No Place Like Home.	A Miserable Christmas
Under the Old Roof.	A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth each 60c; the set.....4 20

Claremont Tales.	A Wreath of Smoke.
Christian Conquests.	Pomegranates from Punjab.
Tales Illustrative of Parables.	Little Bullets from Batala.
The Battle of Life.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4 80

Cassy.	King's Servant.
Lost Gip.	Alone in London.
Max Kromer.	Little Meg's Children
Storm of Life	Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Heavy winds and hail did considerable damage to buildings. One man was killed by a bolt of lightning.

Ticket brokers profess to have unearthed facts showing that the anti-scalping law was secured by bribery.

At the annual election of World's Fair directors, George B. Swift succeeded William T. Baker.

Business in Judge Windes' court was suspended because one of the jurors had been exposed to smallpox.

Rosalie Hall, where the closing exercises of Northwestern University were to be held, was destroyed by fire.

Money rates in Chicago remain at 3 to 5 per cent on call. Millions are offered in New York at 1 per cent and less.

William Deering, the harvester manufacturer, has given $50,000 to the Northwestern University Medical School.

Judge Payne refused to sign the order for a continuance of the Prendergast case which had been agreed on, believing Judge Chetlain to have acted without legal warrant in postponing the execution.

COUNTRY.

Attorney General Moloney rules that women in Illinois may not vote for trustees of the State university.

In an interview at Ottawa State Comptroller of Banks Eckels said the financial outlook was vastly improved over a year ago.

It is claimed at the largest banks that business is beginning to look brighter. Demand for money is increasing.

Captain J. C. Cleghorn was nominated for governor by the prohibitionists of Wisconsin, in State convention at Milwaukee.

Hundreds of Negroes at Omaha armed themselves to prevent the lynching of Payne, the alleged murderer of Miss Rubel.

In the house a bill setting aside $100,000 from estates of colored soldiers to provide a home for infirm Negroes was passed.

Johann Kauffman, of Cramp Hill, N. J., murdered his wife and three children and killed himself.

Populists of Kansas, in State convention at Topeka, renominated L. D. Llewelling for governor.

At Crawfordsville, Ind., a little girl swallowed a screw and died. Hastening to her assistance, a man fell from a pump tower and was fatally injured.

Ex-Priest J. V. McNamara was acquitted at Liberty, Mo., of the charge of slandering priests and nuns.

In the Senate investigation it was shown that New York police gave protection to green goods swindlers.

S. F. Frank, a Pole, who had been a resident of Buffalo for twenty-five years, was seized when on a visit to his native country and sent to Siberia.

Erastus Wiman was found guilty of forgery in New York. Clemency was recommended by the jury.

Officers were elected by the supreme council of the Royal Arcanum, in session at Detroit. C. W. Hazzard, of Monongahela, Pa., was chosen regent.

D. L. Harkness, dairy and food commissioner of Wisconsin, died at his home in Berlin of blood-poisoning.

Mrs. Lois Tritton, who was the last slave sold at auction in New Haven, Conn. (in 1825), is dead, at the age of ninety-five.

Mrs. Lucy S. Lovell, a pioneer of Elgin, Ill., is dead, aged eighty-eight years. She was the mother of Judge E. C. Lovell.

Figures submitted to Congress by the director of the mint show an increase in the output of gold and silver.

Women suffragists of Kingman, Kan., arrayed an opposition editor in a gown and paraded him through the streets.

Available stocks of wheat in the United States and Canada June 9, according to Bradstreet's, are 78,800,000 bushels.

Senators called before the bribery committee denied that they were interested in sugar speculation.

Test votes in the Senate indicate that the Democrats will be able to prevent a duty on wool.

United States marshals have arrested the Coxeyites who seized Union Pacific trains in Colorado.

An incendiary at Monroe, La., taken from jail for execution by a mob, was permitted to hang himself.

Deputy sheriffs attempting to arrest strikers at Mount Olive, Ill., were driven out of the place by a mob of sympathizers.

Bank clearings for the principal cities for the week show a fatal decline of only 19.5 per cent.

Indications point to an early cessation of gold exports. Shipments for the week aggregate $2,250,000.

Financiers report an increasing demand for money at the old rates, indicating a general resumption of business.

Warning has been sent to all postmasters not to interfere too much with the politics in their localities.

Supreme court of Illinois decided that it had no jurisdiction in the Senatorial apportionment cases.

A Washington paper claims to have discovered a plot to destroy the capitol hatched by H. J. Jaxon and other Chicagoans.

That one effect of the panic has been to broaden the market for American goods is shown by exports for eleven months, which have exceeded imports by $231,613,359.

Fruit prospects are poor, according to department of agriculture reports. The peach crop will probably be a failure.

P. A. Seguin, an ex-priest, lectured on Catholicism at Assumption, Ill., and was threatened with death by a mob.

Iron miners at Ironwood, Mich., have resolved to strike for an increase in wages. Several thousand men are involved.

William Walter Phelps, ex-minister to Germany, died at Englewood, N. J.

Coxeyites who stole a freight train, worsted deputy marshals in an encounter at Dawson, N. D. Subsequently twenty of the ringleaders were captured.

A wage scale was adopted by the Illinois miners, in session at Springfield, and if acceptable to the operators, work will be at once resumed.

Ten thousand miners in Kansas will strike in an endeavor to force a settlement of the trouble in Missouri and Indian Territory.

FOREIGN.

Muley Hassan, sultan of Morocco, died suddenly at Tadla, and it is believed he was poisoned. His son has succeeded him.

The constitution proposed for Hawaii by the executive council has many peculiar features. Educational and property qualifications are prescribed for electors.

There have been 1,500 deaths from the Rubonic plague in Hong-Kong, China, and people are fleeing from the city in droves.

Rebels are gaining ground in Corea and foreigners have been warned to seek safety in flight.

Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, of London, is dead. He was made famous by his defense of the Tichborne claimant.

By the capsizing of a boat off the coast of Ireland fifty harvesters, on their way to Scotland, were drowned.

Abdul Aziz has been officially proclaimed Sultan of Morocco. European powers may not recognize him.

Explosions in the Franziska mines at Karwin, Russia, have caused the death of 200 miners.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 11 to June 15:

M Shay, E M Harrison, W R Hendricks, J C Cozier, J Trout, W W Johnson, R Miner. J Henderson, J Stradling, J Rideout, Mrs E Morath, H J Mason, Rev R J Campbell, W T Carothers, J McLelland, Rev W G Waddle, Mrs C Shank, Mrs G L Paine, J S T Milligan, H Myer.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	57¾	@	60¼
Winter No. 2	56¼	@	58⅛
Corn—No. 2	40	@	42⅛
Oats—No. 2	42¾	@	45
Rye—No. 2	49¼	@	50
Bran per ton	11 00	@11	25
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@10	50
Butter, medium to best	11	@	17⅛
Cheese	07¾	@	09⅛
Beans	1 25	@ 1	85
Eggs, fresh	09½	@	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 75	@ 4	75
Flax	1 39
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50	@ 9	25
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@70	00
Potatoes, (new, pr. bbl.)	1 75	@ 2	75
Hides—Green to dry flint	02½	@	06⅛
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	12	@	26
Cattle—Choice to extra	3 05	@ 4	85
Common to good	2 50	@ 4	25
Hogs	4 35	@ 4	90
Sheep	1 00	@ 3	50

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	60	@	60⅞
Corn No 2	45	@	45¼
Oats	48¾	@	57
Rye	52	@	58
Eggs, Western fresh	11½	@	12
Butter	10	@	18
Wool	19	@	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 00	@ 4	75
Hogs	4 40		4 70

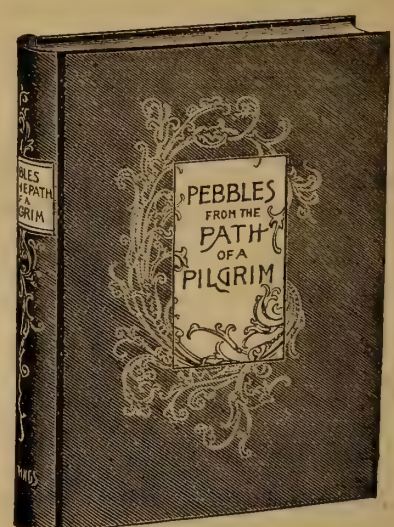
Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

A Journey to Palestine
BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.
—00—

Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

AYER'S PRIZE MEDAL AT WORLD'S FAIR PILLS
The Best Remedy for STOMACH, Liver, and Bowel Complaints
AYER'S PILLS
Received Highest Awards AT THE World's Fair.
AYER'S PRIZE MEDAL AT WORLD'S FAIR PILLS

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.
—BY—
MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.
BY REV. S. F. PORTER,
A Study of Christ's Comings.
Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.
For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI, No. 42 — CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1894. — WHOLE No. 1,261.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
What Answer?..... 8
The New Labor Combination..... 8
True Character of the A. P. A..... 8
Masonic Demits, Exclusion, Expulsion, etc... 8
Notes by the Way. 9
Strikes and the People at Large..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Chosen Generation 1
Courage of a Boy-Martyr.10
SELECTED:
Trades Unions to Rule .. 2
The New Plague in Asia 3
What Masonry Does for a Man's Soul..... 3
Recent Growth of Jerusalem 3
Immigration in 1893..... 3
Masonry Incompatible with Christianity 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
From the New England Secretary; From the Pacific Coast Agent; The Norwegian Lutheran Conference..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Commencement at Oberlin; "The Pope's Dilemma;" A Letter from Bro. Davidson.....5,6
IN BRIEF..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
N. C. A..... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 12
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
LITERATURE 12
Sterling Testimonies.....13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

The mayor's veto of the Sabbath-observance ordinance, last week, is ostensibly another blow at "class legislation"—or rather a wicked ignoring of the higher law—the divine fourth command of the Decalogue. We have heard of a country justice of the peace who, finding a supreme court decision opposing his judicial idea, abruptly brushed it away with the remark that he was the only authority in the case under consideration. Mayor Hopkins' legal acumen is of a similar sort.

The most startling item of foreign news, this week, is the assassination, on Sunday night last, of President Carnot, of France, by a young Italian named Santo. The prisoner, who narrowly escaped lynching by the excited populace, gave no idea of the motive which led him to so great a crime. The supposition that he was a crank of the Guiteau order appears to be well-supported; but the event has aroused the French people, and a war upon the Italians in the Republic seems imminent. President Carnot, who was only in his fifty-seventh year, has been for seven years an able President, and was greatly esteemed. The integrity of the Republic, it is thought, will be maintained by the people and Carnot's successor.

Rev. Wm. Fenton's report of his work at the Norwegian Lutheran annual meeting of the synod will be found in another column; additional particulars of interest were sent in a private letter to this office: "The convention is over. . . . . I kept the (anti secrecy) books and a large cartoon on exhibition in the vestibule every day, and made short explanations, or addresses, as opportunity offered, after the manner of Bro. Stoddard at the World's Fair. I sold $7.00 worth of books and gained two new subscribers for the Cynosure . . . . They said they wanted me to address the convention, but there was no time—they were as busy as bees. While the majority are deadset against secret societies, there are some who think these societies are not so bad, and need to be instructed as to the nature and character of the 'Garrowbush' religion."

To put men in prison for various terms, as a punishment for criminal acts, and as a warning to other evil-doers, has always been esteemed as just. To keep them there during all their various terms of confinement without employment for their hands and minds is cruelty and injustice. "The abolishment of convict labor," advocated by the labor-unions because it interferes with the interests of their members, is both puerile and unjust; and when they wage indiscriminate war upon all manner of labor in the penitentiary they manifest either an incapacity to reason or make an exhibition of the same malevolence that distinguishes them when they assault non-union men for working where they themselves have refused to work. But then it is only an exhibition of the secret lodge spirit in an aggravated form—the disposition to ride over the rights of others for their own aggrandizement.

Dr. Parkhurst's skill and energy in uncapping the sewers of vice in New York City, with a view of having them cleansed, seems to have established the fact that hundreds of keepers of disreputable houses in that city have been systematically blackmailed. Testimony is at hand, showing that the owners of these dens of vice have been uniformly required to pay to every new police captain $500 at the start, and monthly installments, thereafter, of $50, with a "Christmas present" to the officer of from $75 to $100 besides. The leader in this startling system of corruption, it is reported, has fled to avoid investigation. Even the Governor of the State is charged, we know not how truly, with an endeavor to prevent all the truth from coming to the surface. Tammany rule, the saloon, the gambling-hell and the brothel are, if these statements are true, equally guilty in maintaining this municipal wickedness. It is terrible.

Speaking of the criminal population of Chicago, officer "Jack" Shea, chief of the city's detectives, is quoted as saying: "Nearly every one of these fellows is under the protection of some politician or 'heeler,' who shows up when an arrest is made, and uses his 'pull' to square matters." The Evening Journal's comments on this statement are worth repeating: "Shea knows what he is talking about. He has been in the city hall so long that he has an acquaintance with nearly every criminal in the city. . . . . He said nothing that was not known to everybody. Who that has lived a year in Chicago is not aware that politics is the servant of crime? Most politicians are graduated from the criminal classes; they are promoted from the gin-mill to the city council and finish their education in the higher branches of rascality there. As plane precedes spherical trigonometry in the colleges, so in this Fagin's academy the pupils study blackmail and 'knocking-out' before they learn to demand and obtain bribe-money. Everybody knows this; it has become so common a matter of knowledge that it is now a matter for jest." But a very serious jest, which involves the personal and political safety of a great people.

Sunday observance in the regular army is on trial at Omaha, Neb., in rather a novel form. Sunday before last, Charles Cederquist, a private, refused to obey the orders of Major Worth, who commands the battalion to which the soldier belonged. On Saturday the battalion had been engaged in target drill, which was not completed. On Sunday, when the shooting was ordered to be resumed, Cederquist refused to fire his rifle, and was promptly locked up in the guard-house. When President Lincoln was in office he made a standing rule that no unnecessary work should be done by government employes on the first day of the week. This regulation, even during a bloody war, when religion and morality were supposed to be rather loosely considered, was officially obeyed, and the weary soldier was not cheated out of his Sabbath rest, except in cases of emergency. That the army, in a time of peace, should be made to perform extraordinary or unnecessary work on the Sabbath, such as target-shooting, seems amazing; and Cederquist simply did his duty under the higher law when he refused to obey. The first requirement of military life is obedience, but the divine law which Lincoln deemed paramount to military power, will not condemn the humble private for his Christian act.

Concerning the condition of business throughout the country last week, R. G. Dun & Co. state: "The week has been rich in promise but poor in performance. It was confidently promised that exports of gold would cease, but they have not. It was promised that the end of the coal strike would bring immediate recovery of industries, but partial resumption of work discloses comparative scantiness of demand for products." Bradstreet's review notes "indications of a moderate improvement in various lines and enough instances to render the fact of some significance. A notably favorable feature is the practical ending of the coke and coal strikes, together with those in related industries, which will put to work at once, or soon, more than 250,000 men. The number of employes in industrial lines still on strike is estimated at about 30,000. There are sales by jobbers in stable lines for future delivery where nothing save a hand-to-mouth business has been reported for weeks. At points tributary to Kansas City and St. Louis grain harvesting is under full headway. The condition of the wheat is excellent and the demand for money to move the crop marked and the supply abundant. Western steel works recently started report a disposition by capitalists and others to push new enterprises."

THE CHOSEN GENERATION.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

God's people are described in the Scriptures as "a chosen generation." The term generation signifies family or race. In the Old Testament the people of God are sometimes called the family or race of Abraham and of Israel. In Psalm 105: 5, 6, 7, David said: "Seek the Lord, and his strength; seek him forever more. Remember his marvelous works which he hath done; his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth; O ye, the seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Israel his chosen." Elsewhere they are called the house or family of Israel. Often they are represented as God's family or children. Moses said: "Ye are the children of the Lord your God." God sent this message to Pharaoh by Moses: "Israel is my son, my first born; let my son go, that he may serve me." And in after-years the Lord recalled this event by the prophet Hosea: "Out of Egypt have I called my son." The Israelites were likewise spoken of as "a chosen generation," a selected family. Moses said: "The Lord loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them." "The heaven, and the heaven of heavens, is the Lord thy God's; the earth also, and all that is therein; only the Lord had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day." By Isaiah God said: "I give water in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen."

Now all this is true of CHRISTIANS, in a far higher sense. "They that are Christ's are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Like Abraham, they are justified freely by God's grace; they are in covenant with God, and they have an inheritance in a more holy, more secure, and more exalted possession than Canaan. Christains are the family of God. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." "But as many as received him, to them gave he power (right or privilege) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures." So that in a far higher sense than God's ancient covenant-people, true believers are brought into the relation, and formed to the character of "sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty." "To them pertains the adoption." "God hath sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that are under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry: Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

God's people are a chosen generation.

I. They were chosen in the eternal sovereign election of God. "God hath chosen them in Christ before the foundation of the world; having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will." "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." In the councils of eternity God chose a certain number of sinful men to salvation. "Thine they were and thou gavest them me."

II. They are selected from the body of mankind in the appointed time. Israel, as a family or race, was selected and separated from the other families and races. "Thee only have I known of all the families of the earth." The people of God are selected individually and set apart for divine service, and their aggregate form "the chosen generation." David said: "But know that the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself." Christ said: "I have chosen you out of the world." James represents Christians as "a people for his name taken out by God from among the Gentiles." Paul said: "That the purpose of God according to election (selection) might stand." And Peter said: "Elected (or rather selected) according to the foreknowledge (the preordination) of God, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." To be the object of the choice of the unprincipled and foolish is a disgrace, not an honor; an evil, not a benefit. But to be the choice of the infinite and eternal God is beyond all comprehension. "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God." "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" Whom God chooses he chooses forever. "The purpose of God according to election must stand." "The gifts and callings of God are without repentance." The cause of this election and selection is in God himself. Moses said: "The Lord did not set his love on you, nor choose you, because you were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people: but because the Lord loved you; and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the Lord brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh, King of Egypt." And just before they entered Canaan his words were equally true of their selection: "Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the Lord thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying: For my righteousness the Lord hath brought me in to possess this land: but for the wickedness of these nations the Lord doth drive them out from before thee. Not for thy righteousness or for the uprightness of thine heart art thou brought in, but that the Lord may perform the word which he sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Understand, therefore, that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked people." It was not worldly wisdom, power or dignity that prompted God's choice. "Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are. That no flesh should glory in his presence. But that, according as it is written: He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world." They are not selected for their moral worth. Paul says to the Ephesians: "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind." The social, political, commercial and religious life of Corinth and other heathen cities were so knit together as the way and woof of one fabric that one could not participate in any of these without entering the tent that enclosed all. Hence, to the Corinthians Paul said: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of heaven? Be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God? And such were some of you; but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God." The only account that we can give of this election and selection is: "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." "For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion." Oh, amazing love! "A mystery hid in God" is the cause of the selection of every one of the chosen generation.

III. They are separated, disconnected from the rest of mankind. Of Israel it was said: "Lo, the people shall dwell alone and shall not be reckoned among the nations." Christians are commanded to come out from the world and be separate and touch not the unclean thing. They are not to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. They are not taken out of the world, but are kept from the evil. They save themselves from the untoward generation, who are of their father the devil and do his works. Believers cannot be members of brewers' or distillers' corporations, Sabbath-breaking railroad or newspaper corporations, or secret oath-bound fraternities which beguile men's souls to perdition.

IV. They are united together by the most intimate and indissoluble bonds. Israel was a brotherhood. "Moses, when he would have set at one two Israelites who strove, said, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?" Christians are a brotherhood. They have one Father. "Our Father which art in heaven." One Elder Brother, in whom they are all members of the household of God. They have one Lord, one faith, one baptism. They have common faith and hope, common interests and enemies, common duties and dangers, common joys and sorrows, one mind, one heart, one inheritance. The Holy Spirit sheds the love of Christ abroad in theis hearts and writes his law upon their minds. Their choices and aversions are the same. "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory; to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the length and breadth, and depth and height: And to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Jesus Christ throughout all ages. Amen."

Boston, June 16, 1894.

TRADES UNIONS TO RULE.

Frederick Boyce, an English missionary, contributes the following to the London Prophetic News as showing the result of the growing power of the trades unions in Great Britain and elsewhere:

Force, as represented in the great trades unions of the nations, will shortly take possession of the ruling power; for the struggle for this, even at the present time, grows desperate, and has reached even the Upper House of the British Legislature. In the sixteen weeks' coal strike of 1893, the men fought for their point in Britain to the bitter end, and partly obtained it; while the property owners reluctantly yielded. So the crisis of the change has passed, and the revolutionary masses will continue their march to the rulership of the whole dominion. The governing power will therefore continue to descend till it reaches the lowest and most unscrupulous of the people, who will be openly destroyed at Christ's visible coming. It is, therefore, a mistake for ministers and Christians of influence to take up, and to sympathize with, the modern movements for the transference of power from the upper to the lower classes, because the men of force, the despotic men, who lead masses of weak-minded men in their trades unions will eventually gain possession of the reins of authority and they will unite to trample the very name of Christ and Christianity under their feet.

We are clearly now approaching the period of the formation of the ten toes of Daniel's great image, and this union of the ten nations of the old Roman empire may be effected among the masses who comprise the socialist and trades unions of the various nations, in this way as well as by a formal political union under Antichrist's leadership. Unions are the order of the day, and they are now progressing rapidly among women as well as men. A marvelous change has been witnessed in Britain during the past few months in regard to the organization of women. Women's unions are being rapidly organized for various purposes, and when organized, such unions cannot avoid the popular questions of the day which affect them. They may, in some instances, counter-balance the power exercised by the men's unions, but they also may be drawn into the same revolutionary tide. Might will overcome right in the last day, and all forces will yield to that class of leading men who can hold their fellow-men fixed, as it were, in an iron grip. Such a rule, although many may look upon it as a grand era of socialism, and the dawn of a glorious millennium, will soon bring untold sorrows upon the people generally; it is therefore well for the nations that God has appointed only a short time for it. The rule of the masses, with their chosen leader—the great opponent of Christ—will continue but for forty-two months (Rev. 13: 4–8), at the end of which period Christ will come openly, and free his people and the meek of the earth from the yoke of the great oppressor.

Many of the anarchists, who are now rising up in the various nations, and who are already causing the governments of Europe much anxiety, will, undoubtedly, fill a leading place among the rulers of the "last days," because their rule means the utter destruction of all existing governments and institutions—a clean sweep of all—a wholesale wreck, that they may build up society on their own model, upon the ruins which they would make. Scarcely a week now passes but the newspapers report some lawless action of the anarchists, and it is to be feared that much of that revolutionary spirit, which passes for socialism, will lead the masses to the goal of anarchy. The end cannot therefore be very far distant. Capital and commerce no longer hold the ruling power. The force of the trades unions has wrested that power from such as held it. Business men have clearly lost their power, because they are not only allowing the masses to take it, but they are engaged in such fierce business competition, one with another, that they exhaust all their resources for a mere business existence. The tradesman has had his day, and he now has to fight hard to keep going, even at a ruinous expense for advertising; while manufacturers are but adding to the thousands of already overstocked stores.

The forces are therefore sweeping on, on, ON; for the end is near, and the crisis must soon become an all-absorbing topic to business men, and all-bewildering to monopolists who hold the prices of the commonest necessaries of life in their hands. But the monopolists' end is near too; and modern revolutionists will well repay him for unjustly wresting from them hard-earned wages. The great latter-day struggle, it is clear, will be chiefly directed against men of large capital which has been chiefly amassed through labor. Men have been forewarned of such a day—a day of leveling all (Isa. 24: 1–4), and that evil day will surely come to many, even as a thief in the night. Before the manifestation of the violent revolutionary force of the last days, God will give other warnings, and ere that dark day comes upon all, the voice of the Almighty's warning will be unmistakable. Those who fear him will then surely heed that warning.

THE NEW PLAGUE IN ASIA.

A dispatch from Vancouver, British Columbia, June 13, says: The most important news brought by the Empress of Japan is of the alarming spread of virulent plague that first appeared in Canton at the end of April. The plague is similar to the great plague in London in the sixteenth century and is carrying off large numbers of victims. It soon spread to Hongkong, appearing there in May. It is chiefly confined to Chinese, but a few Portuguese have been afflicted. The plague has paralyzed business to a large extent, as many leading steamship lines refuse to take either passengers or cargo from Hongkong. The symptoms of the disease are as follows:

Without premonitory warning in the shape of a chill, there is a sudden onset of fever, rising to 105 degrees or over. There is much headache, accompanied by stupor. In twelve or twenty-four hours a glandular swelling occurs in the neck or arm pit, increasing to the size of a fowl's egg, being hard and tender. With or without the decline of the fever, the patient sinks into a condition of coma and dies at the end of 24 or 48 hours. If six days is reached, recovery is possible. The Canton correspondent of a Hongkong paper, under date of May 8, says:

Scarcely a house has not some one dead. The plague commenced in the Mohammedan quarter and one hundred cases are reported daily. One man stationed at the west gate began at 9 o'clock in the morning to drop a "cash" in the box each time a coffin passed him. At 4 P M he had counted 170 cash. Children were put in baskets or were wrapped in pieces of matting and buried. From this district, where the dirt is thickest and the houses most crowded, it spread to the country portions and has now reached the country, and the people who fled there from the city know not what way to fly. Idols are being worshiped in an extravagant and frenzied manner. The past few months people are forbidden to reckon and the new year was begun last Saturday. All night new year sounds were kept up, and amid so much ghastliness an attempt at outward adornment and gaiety was apparent. It is impossible to ascertain the number of deaths. Officials try to suppress the facts. At the largest charitable (native) dispensary, a notice at the doors states that up to date 2,000 coffins have been given away. This is far below the actual number used. Sixty thousand is nearer.

A foreign doctor's assistant went through a number of streets and said he was surprised to see within open doors a dead body, while outside there were no white and blue lanterns. Many made no attempt at the usual noisy mourning. The dead were silently carried out with not a follower. In one house all lay dead—ten. On May 10 it was found that the disease had reached Hongkong, and energetic steps were at once taken to cleanse the infested localities. However, hospitals were opened for the sick and the ship Hygra was moored in the harbor for the accommodation of patients.

The Chinese appeared at first to be inclined to co-operate with the authorities in bringing to light known cases of the plague, but probably because of the heavy mortality, the attitude became more and more distrustful. The first determined stand against the authorities was made on May 19, when houses were barricaded and stones were thrown at officers making house to house visitations. Up to the latest reports 393 cases occurred and 320 deaths. The schools have been closed and a panic exists among the Chinese, many of whom are fleeing to the mainland.

WHAT MASONRY DOES FOR A MAN'S SOUL.

I am now an old man, down near the River, and have spent the most of my life in the service of my Master as a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I wish to give to our readers a little of my experience and knowledge of what Masonry will do for a man. Years ago, when in the prime of life and active work, I was asked to join the Masonic lodge, and the offer was made to me that if I would join, it should cost me nothing to take any degree, no doubt the object being to give character and add influence to the lodge, being urged and invited in various ways. I plainly told them I would not go where I could not take the Lord Jesus Christ with me. And in later years I lived by a neighbor who was a Mason in good standing and who departed this life two years ago. As a neighbor and citizen, he was good and kind, always friendly and sociable, but no Christian. The time was when he enjoyed the life and power of God in the soul, but after becoming a Mason that life faded and died, and he was no longer found in the house of prayer. As a neighbor, I visited him frequently and talked with him on the principles of Masonry. He claimed that a Mason in addressing God the Father as the supreme ruler and great architect of the universe included Jesus Christ. My answer was: "He that is ashamed of me and of my words, of him will I be ashamed before my Father and the holy angels." And "No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

Then during his sickness I visited him, and one day he said to me: "Elder, I have been a Mason for about twenty years, and to the best of my knowledge I have never heard the name of Jesus Christ used in the devotional exercises." I replied: "And yet he is the only way of life and salvation." He said: "Yes." And when nearing death and talking to no one in particular, he said: "We went to the gates and they would not let us in. They did not know we were wanderers from the feet of Jesus." And with almost the last breath he was heard to say: "Most Worshipful Grand Master" and other Masonic phrases. Thus he died and was buried with all the honors, pomp and show of Masonry, which I consider a disgrace to Christianity. May God help us as a church to ever stand true to the principles of truth, righteousness and reform, and in the name of Jesus Christ to stand before the world as a beacon light to guide immortal souls to the haven of rest.—Aquila Purtee, in the Christian Conservator.

RECENT GROWTH OF JERUSALEM.

The British Consul at Jerusalem, in his latest report, gives some interesting details respecting the present condition of the Holy City. It appears that buildings of various kinds continue to be erected in the vicinity, and that the city is far outgrowing its former limits. On the western side houses have increased so rapidly within the last few years that quite a large suburb has arisen where formerly there were fields and vineyards.

Every available piece of land is now being bought up by private persons or by benevolent societies and missions, and already the name of "Modern Jerusalem" has been given to this new quarter. Last year the first public garden was completed outside the Jaffa Gate, and trade is generally increasing, especially that in Jaffa oranges, olive-wood work (now an important local industry), and olive oil. The export of colocynth declined in consequences of tithe levied on it by the authorities. It is gathered by Arabs in the neighborhood of Gaz, where it grows wild.

An interesting enterprise which has recently been commenced is the collection of the bitumen which rises to the surface and floats about on the Dead Sea. Two sailing boats were taken by train from Jaffa to Jerusalem, and then conveyed on carts to the Jordan, where they were floated down the river to the Dead Sea, and they are now engaged in picking up the bitumen, which is in much request in Europe. The Consul thinks it would be advantageous to trade with the inland districts if a steam launch and several lighters were placed on the Dead Sea to ferry across the produce of Moab, which is a country rich in cereals, fruit and cattle. At present it is conveyed by caravans round the north or south end of the Dead Sea, entailing a journey of from four to five days. Kerat, the chief town of Moab, is now garrisoned with Ottoman troops, and authority is established there, so that if rapid communication were established the whole produce of Moab would find its way to Jerusalem and the coast.

IMMIGRATION IN 1893.

The Commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island reports that 352,885 immigrants, representing thirty different languages, landed at that place during 1893. 229,921 of these were males, and 122,964 females. The countries most largely represented were: Italy, Germany, Ireland, Sweden, Australia, Hungary, England and Norway. The total number who could neither read nor write was 54,576. The largest percentage of illiteracy came from Italy, Hungary, Russia and Ireland. Of the large Italian immigration, forty-four per cent could neither read nor write. Less that $30 each was brought by 59,291 immigrants, while 17,542 had over $30 each. 30,944 of these new-comers located in New England, 150,191 in New York, 14,676 went to New Jersey, and 48,808 to Pennsylvania. A very small proportion went into the South Atlantic States, while of the North Central States, Illinois received 35,220, the largest quota. The American Tract Society keeps a missionary stationed at Ellis Island, well supplied with Christian literature in the languages of these people.

MASONRY INCOMPATIBLE WITH CHRISTIANITY.

The Parish Messenger, a local Episcopalian paper of Omaha, is always able to express itself clearly. Not long since it devoted one page to secret societies in general and to Masonry in particular. We present the following extract:

"The inevitable trend of Masonry is to destroy in the minds of its votaries any necessity for believing in Christ, or of coming to the Father by him. Indeed, that is the trend of the numerous secret societies that are springing up everywhere. Easy-going Christian priests and ministers and laymen may deny this as they will; the fact remains that these societies have, or are commencing to have, rituals for lodge worship and for burial of the dead, which are clear denials of the necessity of Christian faith, either here or hereafter. Christians take part in this worship, side by side with those who deny Christ and scout his Godhead. The land is full of ardent Christian-Masons who are practically dead to all Christian faith and usefulness. Of course that is not always so, but it is generally true that ardent Masonry and earnest, active Christianity are incompatible. We know many churchmen whose Christian earnestness and faith are oozing out at their fingers' ends, while they indulge with vigor in all the tom foolery of the Mystic Shrine—and as for Knight Templar Christianity, it is entirely compatible with the utter rejection of Christian baptism or communion. We are told indeed that Templars who reject Christianity forswear themselves. We do not know how that is; but we do know that Templarism does not require of its professors Christian profession in the church, or baptism, and we do know that some of the most virulent oppressors of the church in any form have been Knights Templar, without reproach of Templarism. Its very pretension to a Christianity that has no underlying reality is its danger. Satan himself is never more dangerous than when he clothes himself in the semblance of an angel of light. The greatest puzzle to us, however, is to understand how many 'Catholic churchmen' there are who think it wrong and sinful to have anything to do with 'sectarian' Christianity and its worship, but who find no difficulty at all in entering the Masonic sect and engaging in the worship of the lodge."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

An anti-secret picnic.—Prohibition matters.—The Yearly Meeting of Friends at Newport.—Wellesley's new President.—Evangelist Wm. F. Davis again arrested.

The 17th, which this year fell on Sunday, was a day of intense heat. It thinned the churches, kept even pleasure-seekers at home, and made everybody long for shade and cooling breezes. To people who could not command these luxuries the school-boy's geographical statement that there are four zones, the frigid, the horrid, the temperate and the intemperate, did not seem so wildly amiss. New England conservatism has not affected her climate in the least. She is prone to the most erratic extremes of weather. Her springs are coy, and her east-winds pierce through the very joints and marrow, but, in spite of all this, there is a certain calm stability about her even in the matter of climate. We know pretty well what to expect. Her rivers run to the sea, her hills rear their rocky ramparts to heaven, her valleys put on greenness and beauty, unvexed by flood, cyclone or earthquake. In the language of the Old Farmers' Almanac, the weather-bureau of fifty years ago, we know when to "expect frosty nights" and "cold rains" and "a fine growing-time;" and we know, too, that scattered through the year will be days that are like a smile of God whose perfect beauty we can only express by the one word "heavenly."

Such a day was the 18th. An opportune thunderstorm had cooled the air the night before, and given us just the ideal picnicking conditions. Odd-fellows, Masons, Knights of Labor, and other secret organizations, hold picnics, and why should not anti-secretists? Acting on this suggestion a party of the friends from Boston and vicinity gathered on the writer's lawn, under the shade of a spreading elm and some patriarchial old apple-trees, and partook of cake, ice-cream, and other orthodox edibles suited to the occasion; after which Mrs. A. A. Rockwood—dear Mother Rockwood, as we fondly call her—on behalf of the assembled friends, and many who were necessarily absent, presented Bro. Stoddard with an envelope containing over fifty dollars for the purchase of a roll-top desk and book case, as "a slight token of their loving sympathy in his work and grateful appreciation of his self-denying labors;" ending with the hope that the New England C. A. headquarters, which we already possess by faith, may soon become a reality. Bro. Stoddard was completely "surprised," and feelingly expressed the thanks of himself and wife. The trenchant words which he has written for the cause of truth in his N. E. series of tracts will, I am sure, lose none of their force, but come with added power and inspiration, when, in Masonic parlance, he is supplied with "the working tools of his craft." Deacon Leadbetter followed with an interesting reminiscence of the old days when he was a delegate to the Middlesex South Conference of Congregational churches, held at Ashland, a town near by. The churches were then not afraid to discuss the question of Masonry, though the lodge had its apologists the same as now, both in pulpit and pew. A man of this stamp who was present flatly denied that it corrupted justice, or that Masonic signs were interchanged in our courts of law. Good old Deacon Leland, who presided, inquired if he had never seen the sign of distress pass between the judge and the prisoner at the bar. He answered boldly, yet with visible agitation, "No." "Well, I have," said Deacon Leland with emphasis. And so the voices of the past and present mingle in one grand accordant sentence of condemnation against the secret works of darkness.

One of the most pleasing features of the gathering was the presence of young people and children, together with the middle-aged and full of days. Not the least important member of the company was Bro. and Sister McIntire's "youngest," who was voted a model baby, and a shining illustration of the advantages of anti-secret parentage. The unexpected arrival of Bro. Philip Bacon, from Weatogue, Conn., and also the presence, for a little while, of Rev. Mr. Hicks, the Congregational pastor at Wellesley, who is in earnest sympathy with every good work, anti-secrecy included, added much to the general pleasure. So the day waned to its sun-setting, as happy days will, all too soon. Social gatherings of this kind ought to be more frequent. They bring together in loving union those of the same convictions, and prepare the way for efficient and united work, shoulder to shoulder.

The first-class restaurants, hotels and clubs of Boston are to-day in mourning for the arrest of their purveyor, a Mr. Munduit, who supplied them with the highest-priced liquors directly imported from France. The singular part of it is that he has carried on his illegal business for several years unknown to the authorities. Or has Dr. Lansing's crusade stirred them up to this unwonted activity? He is the steward of the Somerset Club, and his store was known as the very best in the city for imported French meats and canned goods. The full value of the liquor seized is over $5,000, the biggest single haul that has ever been made in the city. Munduit has for three years been trying to obtain a liquor license, which for some reason has always been refused by the Police Commissioners. He is wealthy, and, it is said, will fight the case bitterly. As he is without doubt high up in the mystic orders, its progress will be interesting to watch.

The Yearly Meeting of the Quakers, in Newport, was an interesting one, but, according to a correspondent in the Transcript—herself a Quaker—showed a marked departure from the methods of twenty years ago. They have not been able to keep their distinctively plain dress any more than the early Methodists. The plain bonnets, the white kerchiefs, the broad-brimmed hats, have well-nigh disappeared. So, also, the period of silent communion, while singing in meeting, and other innovations on the old-time customs, have been introduced. But so it must continually be. Times and manners change, but the spirit of George Fox still lives.

Mrs. Julia Josephine Irving, the new Wellesley President that is to be, as I stated in a former letter, belongs to this communion, and shows her Quaker descent in her plainness of dress and uncompromising devotion to truth, as she sees it by her own inner light. She has decidedly radical views, and in regard to executive talent and business ability surpasses any of her predecessors. She is somewhat eccentric and very witty, and the stories of her sarcastic repartees and pat replies are endless. One or two, at least, are good enough for the Cynosure readers. Happening to notice and speak in terms of admiration of the beautiful hair possessed by one of the students, the girl thanked her. "You need not thank me," calmly replied Mrs. Irvine; "I didn't make it." On another occasion she squelched a member of the Faculty who complained that she could not hear her say grace, with the remark: "But I was not speaking to you." That she will have an original way of enforcing government may be inferred from her action on another occasion when, desiring a quiet evening for study, she was disturbed by the noise of the students in the room above. Going up stairs, she knocked at the door, and quietly observed to the one who happened to open it: "Did you wish to come and see me? If so I would rather have you knock on my door than my ceiling. Good evening." And without waiting for a reply, she returned to her interrupted study, to enjoy the calm which followed.

The evangelist, William F. Davis, has been again arrested for preaching on the Common without a permit. The city government which, seven years ago, imprisoned him for a year for this alleged offence, will hardly care to bring such discredit upon itself again. But why the preaching of the Gospel should not be as free in Boston as in London or Rome, is a question that a Christian public ought to force the Hub authorities to answer.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 20, 1894.

Washington newspapers have been, as a rule, creditably free from sensationalism of the dangerous sort, but one of our dailies this week published a long article, purporting to give the details of an anarchist plot to blow up the Capitol and other public buildings with a new and powerful explosive, which certainly belonged to the dangerous class, whether true or false. If known to be true, such information should be given to the authorities, not to the general public; if known to be false, the publication of such matter is criminal, as it alarms the nervous and timid to an extent that might result in death or insanity. Fortunately in this case the speedy denial of the police authorities prevented anything like a general alarm being aroused.

The one gratifying feature about the investigation now being conducted by a committee of Senators concerning scandalous charges made against Senators in connection with the sugar schedule of the tariff bill is that the testimony so far taken has utterly failed to show that there is either reason or justice in the practice that has grown all too common in the columns of newspapers, as well as in private conversation, of assuming that our public men are as a rule knaves, ever ready to feather their own nests regardless of public interests. Your correspondent's long residence in Washington and constant familiarity with the careers of public men has convinced him that they are growing better all the time. The standards of public honor and honesty are higher to-day than ever before. Our public men, take them as a whole (of course there are some black sheep), are more religious, more temperate and more refined than ever before, and I rejoice at anything that is calculated to impress those facts upon the country.

The silver question turns up in the most unexpected quarters. It is very much in evidence in the discussion of the Nicaragua Canal bill, now being constructed by a sub-committee of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It was taken for granted when this sub-committee was instructed to prepare a bill that should differ from those heretofore introduced that the House was in favor of the construction of the Nicaragua Canal and its control by the United States government, but none of the bills before the committee were approved in their details by a majority. One of the subjects upon which there is the widest difference of opinion is the manner in which this government shall obtain control of the canal and pay for its construction, the old idea of endorsing bonds to be issued by the canal company having been entirely abandoned. There are three propositions being considered by the sub-committee, although the first, to issue greenbacks to the amount necessary, is not now being pressed. The other two—the issue of bonds or the coinage of silver, either the seigniorage in the Treasury or bullion to be purchased—are now being discussed, and many who favor the canal are alarmed lest the canal be lost sight of in a heated controversy over silver.

Rev. Howard Wilbur Ennis, of the Western Presbyterian church of this city, took occasion last Sunday in a sermon to attack some of the humbuggery of Theosophy, and some of the followers of that peculiar doctrine thought to obtain some notoriety by challenging Mr. Wilbur to a public discussion with one of their number. Mr. Wilbur had the good sense to decline taking part in any such exhibition. The following quotation from his note to the president of the Theosophical Society seems properly to state the views of a minister of the Christian religion towards the subject: "From my point of view the question is not open for debate. Theosophy has been 'weighed in the balance and found wanting' by a Judge higher than of earth. Again, as I am not in the business of revivifying either defunct methods or effete religions in the face of pressing duties of far higher import, I must respectfully decline your invitation."

I have always believed that the Lord is always ready to help those who earnestly try to help themselves, and for that reason I have faith in the success of a business enterprise recently begun by Addie R. Mickle, of 1414 Sixth street northwest, a girl of 14 years, who has not walked a step in eleven years, and who never expects to be able to walk, and who has the use of only one hand. This girl has an active brain, if her limbs are mostly useless. She conceived the project of editing and publishing a monthly paper, and as an evidence of her Christian spirit she resolved that one-tenth of all money received should be donated to the poor of the city, although she is herself poor. She calls her paper the "Hearth-Stone," and the two numbers which have been published are creditable, indeed. She only asks 50 cents a year for the paper and she certainly deserves to be patronized, and I believe will be. *

The man who drinks intoxicating liquor pulls up his own root, even in this world. . . . Dig up thirst by the roots, that the tempter may not crush you again and again, as the stream crushes the weeds.—Bukha Saka, Hindoo, born 627 B. C.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND SECRETARY.

BOSTON, June 14, 1894.

Wednesday of this week I spent with the Christian workers in Providence, R. I. This is a band of consecrated men and women, with devoted leaders, who have grace to war on the wicked one and all his works. Many have enjoyed "the pleasures of sin for a season," and felt the bite of the serpent and the sting of the adder, where lust, liquor and loathsome population swelter in the cauldron of vice, but have been made "clean through the word spoken unto them." The exercises may be termed "informal," and yet evidently put and kept in shape by the Holy Spirit. There were fervent addresses, but the most impressive feature to me of the convention was in the testimonies, some of which were the most wonderful to which I ever listened. One lady said, in substance: "My husband was a drunkard. He drove me out of our wretched home. It was bitter cold and I had nowhere to go; I saw the door of the mission open and I went in for shelter; I had no thought of religion, but I heard the Gospel preached and was saved. I went back and told my husband what the Lord had done for me. He swore at me and cursed the mission. When I wanted to go to the mission again he was terribly mad, and wouldn't let me leave the house. I said, 'Then I'll sing and pray here;' so I sang a hymn and knelt down and prayed; then I sang another hymn and prayed again. He was so mad that he drove me out on the street. I went straight to the mission, praising Jesus all the time. When I went home I found my husband there, but he was a 'new man in Christ Jesus.' He had been away to another mission and was there converted. Our whole family have been saved and washed in the precious blood. The Lord is blessing us wonderfully, and we have a happy home and we are all at work for the dear Lord." From friends conversant with the facts, I learned that this was no passionate outburst of enthusiasm, but a true statement, and that those wonderful trophies of God's saving power are among the most active and consistent workers and livers in that household of the faithful. Has infidelity, or lodgery, or any other Christless system, anything to compare with this?

Near the close of the evening session Bro. Wales gave an account of his work for the past two years among the Greeks. He said that one of the greatest obstacles to the Gospel in Greece was Freemasonry. Introduced there by foreigners, and patronized by some of the missionaries, the people looked upon it as a part of the Christian system which they were asked to accept. Some of them joined the lodge and took their horrid oaths. They were so shocked and disgusted with that kind of barbarism, so much worse than their own, that they revolted and exposed the whole thing, and the government suppressed their meetings. Yet we have one minister at least, here in Boston, who has publicly avowed his preference for that same pagan blasphemy, and declared his allegiance to the lodge above his love and fidelity to the church of Christ. When the lodge god, the 'Grand Architect of the Universe," comes to make up his jewels, where will he find his choicest and most valued, if not among the professed ministers of Christ, who worship and serve the devil, in Christian lands?

J. P. STODDARD.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST AGENT.

WOODBURN, Ore., June 14, 1894.

On the evening of June 1st we spoke at Evergreen school-house, on the subject of Prohibition, to the majority of the community. I am satisfied that a complete canvass of Benton county would increase the prohibition vote three hundred per cent. On Sunday, June 3, I closed the conference year at Philomath.

On the 4th came the State election. We polled thirty prohibition votes in the Philomath precinct, twelve being the number polled at the previous election. We consider this a fine increase.

On the 5th we started to conference at Salem. In the organization of the conference, Bishop Dillon being storm-bound at Missaula, Montana, Rev. H. L. Barkley was elected bishop pro tem, your correspondent, secretary, and C. H. Merrymen, statistical secretary. The sessions of conference were quite harmonious.

Bro. Barkley makes an excellent presiding officer. He was again elected presiding elder and assigned to the Willamette district. Rev. Wm. Stewart was also re-elected and given the Umpqua district for another year.

Among other items on moral reform, conference discussed and adopted the following on secret societies:

"Inasmuch as oath-bound secret societies have become so prevalent in our land, and as we believe them to be detrimental to Christian character and contrary to God's Word, therefore they ought to be opposed by all Christians especially."

We secured ten yearly subscriptions to the Cynosure, and arranged appointments to speak as follows: Oregon City, June 17, 11:00 A. M., and Canby at night. Turner, the 19th; Springfield, 21st; Roseburg, 23d and 24th, three times. Then I put in the time till July 1st at or near Bandon and Myrtle Point. July 1st, at Dairyville; Denmark, the 2d; Sixes River, the 3d; Port Oxford, the 4th; Euchre Creek from 5th to 9th; Ophir Postoffice and Gold Beach, the 10th; Pistol River, the 12th; Chetco, the 14th; Wind Chuck, the 16th; Smith Rivers Corners, the 18th; Crescent City, the 20th. The two last-named places are in California.

Let prayer go up for us, that God may bless us at each point, to the opening of the eyes of the blind. I am in the work in earnest.

WOODBURN, Ore., June 18.—I had splendid audiences yesterday morning and evening at Oregon City and Canby. I go this week to Southern Oregon, to be absent a month or more.

P. B. WILLIAMS.

FROM REV. WM. FENTON—NORWEGIAN LUTHERAN CONFERENCE.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 21, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The United Norwegian Lutheran Church has been holding its annual conference in the Auditorium of this city during the last eight days. It adjourned this evening.

This denomination is made up from three other denominations, namely, the Norwegian Augustana Synod, the Norwegian Conference Synod, and the Norwegian Anti-Missouri Synod. In the united body there are 1,028 congregations, 107,000 members and 36,000 school children. They have one academy at Canton, S. D.; one college at Northfield, Minn., one at Grand Forks, and one at Moorehead; a theological seminary at Minneapolis, and the Augsburg theological seminary, in the same city. The ownership of the Augsburg seminary is, however, in dispute as to whether it belongs to the minority of the conference synod or to the united body. It never has been deeded to the united body. This conference has been profoundly agitated over that question during the entire session, as it was at its annual meeting of last year, held in Minneapolis. Now the whole matter is left in the hands of two committees; one from the united body, and one from the minority. Of the united body Rev. G. Hoyme, of Eau Claire, Wis., is president; Rev. T. H. Dahl, of Stoughton, Wis., is vice president; Rev. J. C. Jensen, of Clinton, Wis., is secretary; Hon. R. Swensen, of Minneapolis, is treasurer.

Last year the indebtedness of this denomination was $40,000. This year it is free from debt, and, besides, has contributed $22,000 to missions, $8,000 to St. Olaf college, Northfield, Minn; and in all $70,000 has been contributed to the support of the denomination. Six have been ordained to the Gospel ministry.

On Tuesday evening Rev. L. A. Skriefsrud spoke of his missionary labors in Santhalistan, to which he was called with Rev. Mr. Boerresen twenty-seven years ago. He said, they soon had the joy of seeing thousands converted to Christ. That people had been cursed with three things: money-loaners, lawyers and saloons.

[NOTE—The history of the Norwegian mission in Santhalistan is very interesting, and will be printed as a separate article in the next Cynosure.—EDITOR

The Santhalians were much addicted to strong drink, and while under its influence would part with all their possessions to gratify the depraved appetite. The lawyers and money-loaners then took advantage of them by loaning them money at exhorbitant rates, and so got possession of their property. While things were in this condition Dr. Skreifsrud sought an interview with the governor of India and related the circumstances to him. The governor of India then appointed a commission of investigation, which commission found the state of the people even worse than had been represented by the missionary. The governor of India then appointed a new commission,

(Continued on 13th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

COMMENCEMENT AT OBERLIN.

OBERLIN, O., June 21, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The sixty-first Commencement of Oberlin College, which occurred on the 20th of this month, was remarkable for the size of the class graduated and general interest that was taken in the exercises. The weather was especially favorable for the occasion, being bright but not too warm for comfort. The graduating class was the largest in the history of the college; it contained 109 members in all departments.

The first of the regular exercises was the exhibition of the Senior Academy class on the Saturday previous to Commencement. The orations and essays were well written, and displayed an earnest advocacy of the reforms for which Oberlin has always stood. On Sunday afternoon Pres. Ballantine preached an eloquent and powerful Baccalaureate sermon, entitled "The Coming Day," from Rom. 13:12: "The night is far spent, and the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." The President took a very optimistic view of current history, and saw, in all the social disturbances of the present day, the various forces which shall bring about Christ's kingdom.

Tuesday was Alumni day, and a large number of former students were pressed to tell the story of Oberlin's early history. Interesting addresses were delivered by members of the decennial classes, beginning with 1844. In the afternoon the seniors furnished a pleasant Class-day program. The annual Commencement concerts occurred Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and were unusually successful, both in performance and in attendance. Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah" was sung by Dr. Dufft, Mme. Claryand Mr. J. H. McKinley, assisted by the Musical Union.

Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, of the New York Outlook, delivered the Commencement address, Wednesday morning, on the subject of "Culture, the End of Education." It is impossible to give anything but by the barest outline of this scholarly speech. Culture, he said, was the end of all training, and it might be defined as the complete harmony of the man with his environment. For this reason culture is attainable by all; the reverent study of nature and human life will bring it to the humblest. But it must never be considered an end in itself. Only as it is translated into unselfish labor for the good of others can it fulfill its true purpose.

Among the degrees conferred, the title of D. D. was given to Pres. Frost of Berea College and W. E. C. Wright, of Cleveland. The Alumni dinner, in the afternoon, was largely attended. After-dinner speeches were made by Gen. Cox of Cincinnati, Hon. T. D. Holbrook of Chicago, and others.

The year just past has been a successful one notwithstanding the hard times, and the prospect for the future work of this venerable institution is very bright.

H. H. HINMAN.

"THE POPE'S DILEMMA."

CHICAGO, June 18, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In the Standard appeared an article entitled "The Pope's Dilemma," and an extract from Satolli, the Pope's best representative in this country, presenting the sad grievance of "his holiness." And what is that? Why, it is that this self-professed representative of Him who "had not where to lay his head," and yet could have had "twelve legions of angels" to obey him—this pope who poses as the head of the Catholic (or universal) church, must have, or (as Satolli puts it) "equity demands independence similar to that of separate national sovereigns"—a boon of which he is deprived "so long as the territory" (or States) "in which the holy see is located belongs to any other power;" that is, any other power than himself, as the supreme civil sovereign of such "territory." Hence, if subject to Italy, his "supreme jurisdiction over the whole church must be cramped, and outside nations may oppose him from jealousy," etc.

Poor, dear, unfortunate old man! Let him read the New Testament, and try to obey the Master whom he professes to represent. Here is the blessed invitation, even to the pope in his "dilemma:" "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you," etc. (Mat. 11: 28–30.) Will the pope surrender to Jesus? NEMO.

A LETTER FROM BRO. DAVIDSON.

BATON ROUGE, La., June 11, 1894.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—You have doubtless read of the several iniquitous and barbarous bills introduced in the Louisiana Legislature, within the past few weeks, viz: An anti-miscegenation bill; a "Jim Crow" street car bill; a separate waiting-room bill; a parish convict or vagrant bill, and a bill authorizing sheriffs to keep at hand packs of bloodhounds, to run down fugitives. Surely we have a fine set of legislative solons.

The Assembly was to have met to day at 1 P. M., but for some cause best known to themselves, they had not gathered at 1:45; and, being compelled to take the train at 2:20, I hurried to the depot. I took a stroll round by the hotel where the law-making gentlemen hold out, and I never saw a more hoosierastic and wild-piney-wood looking set.

I met Bro. A. E. Johnson, a fine, artistic painter, and a member of Shiloh Baptist church of New Orleans, and was most pleasantly surprised to see him frescoing the Catholic church at Baton Rouge. Bro. Johnson has quitted himself like a man and displayed the Negro's genius in executing this grand piece of work.

I also called on Dr. T. A. Walker, who most cordially received me and assured me that he shares a large per cent of the Baton Rouge patronage. The doctor is solid on all of the great reform questions.

The Methodist Episcopal (colored) has built the finest Negro church in the city, worth about $20,000. The African Methodist Episcopal people have remodeled their Bethel and greatly beautified it; while the Mt. Zion and Mt. Pleasant (Baptist) churches have each built creditable frame edifices. Rev. R. Brooks, of the Macedonia Baptist church, has had it remodeled and beautified.

I preached at this Macedonia church. I find Elders Foster and Brooks still holding out against the lodge; while Elder Hannibal Williams is "holding with the brave and running with the hounds." Secretism is not as strong here as it was some years ago.

I went out, by buggy, to Hope Villa, and preached at St. Luke Baptist church, Rev. P. Lee, pastor, and Zion Traveler Baptist church, Rev. David Richardson, pastor. I find it strange that our Methodist pastors, almost to a man, are lodge-men, and very few of their doors are open to anti-secrecy preachers.

It would seem that my letter, in April, to the Illinois Central Railroad must have done some good, as both the General Passenger Agent and the General Superintendent wrote to me personally, and I notice that much more care is given to enforcing the rules alike on both white and colored passengers.

I find times hard and business unusually dull here, saw-mill workers receiving only 75 cents a day; and yet a pleasure excursion was run to Crocodile Bayou last Monday, and another goes to-day to Plaquemine. Others are advertised: For Mulatto Bend next Monday; for New Orleans, June 24; and one for Natchez, Miss., June 23.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 12.—I reached the Crescent City safe and sound, and found the church people glad to see me. We are having additional work done to the church. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ, FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

"As to the question of the attitude of Christians toward the secret orders, two or three things seem to me very plain. One of them is this: that the whole movement of things on the line of secrecy is thoroughly antagonistic to the movement on the line of Scripture and Christianity."—From address of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago, to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

CYNOSURE OFFER!

Any of the Books sold by the N. C. A. in this paper, ordered, with subscription to the Cynosure, at one-fourth off from list price, sent postpaid.

The New Volume of Pen and Pencil Series.

WELSH PICTURES Drawn with Pen and Pencil.

By D. Lewis Jones, Morris Jones, Edward Ffoulkes, H. Elvet Lewis, D. Tyssil Evans, D. Davies and O. M. Edwards. Edited by Richard Lovett, M. A. With many Illustrations. Imperial 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, boxed..... 3.20

"'Welsh pictures' is the work of ten Welshmen, among whom illustrating the beauties of Wales has been parcelled out according to the special familiarity of each. The result is a pleasing volume."—London Times.

THE EARTHLY FOOTPRINTS OF OUR RISEN LORD, Illumined.

A continuous narrative of the Four Gospels according to The Revised Version, with introduction by Rev. John Hall, D. D. Illustrated by 113 full-page half tone re-productions. Small 4to, cloth.....net 1.50
Gilt edge, with silk book mark, boxed.....net 2.00
Full morocco, flexible, gilt edges, round corners, boxed.....net 3.75

Pictures reflecting the best in sacred art from Raphael to the present day are scattered profusely through the book.

"To many the life of the Christ will be a new book in this form. Though beyond the introduction it contains no word except what is found in the four Gospels, yet when read continuously, without the breaks necessarily made by the different stories of the four evangelists, the narrative takes on new force and lifelikeness. The very fact that this is not our usual method of reading the Word will give it a new reality."—Golden Rule.

A GIFT OF LOVE, and Loving Greetings for 365 Days.

By Rose Porter. Long 18mo. Paper cloth..... 1.00
White cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.25
Decorated silk, silver top, in box..... 1.75

"'A Gift of Love' is the work of a loving heart. It contains a text of Scripture for every day of the year with the addition of an appropriate thought in poetry of prose all bearing on the theme of love. The work must have called for a great amount of patient toil. But it has not been spent in vain, for the volume will prove a blessing to many a soul. To use it day by day for a year thoughtfully and prayerfully, must result in a rich growth in love on the part of the user. The author is well known and esteemed for her previous works' sake."—The N. Y. Observer.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE SERIES.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer, containing CHRISTIAN LIVING, THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE, AND THE SHEPHERD PSALM. 3 vols. in box. 18mo, cloth..... 1.50
White vellum cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.75

D. L. Moody says: "Few books of recent years are better adapted to instruct and help Christians than those of this author. He is a man mighty in the scriptures, saturated with Bible facts and truths."

PRAYERS FROM THE POETS.

By Martha Harger. 16mo, two colored cloth, gilt top..... 1.00
Leatherette, boxed..... 1.50

"This volume is admirable. The Prayer are better suited to some of our moods than formal Litanies and are selected from excellent sources. The book will be a dear treasure to many hearts."—The Churchman.

KIN-DA-SHON'S WIFE.

An Alaskan Story. By Mrs. Eugene S. Willard, Home Missionary of the Presbyterian Board of America to Alaska. With illustrations. 8vo, cloth..... 1.50

"Being a close observer and in deep sympathy with the native population in their struggles towards a Christian Civilization, Mrs. Willard has gained a more intelligent knowledge of their character, of their needs and hindrances, than perhaps any other person."—Dr. Sheldon Jackson.

HEROES OF THE GOODWIN SANDS.

By Rev. Thomas Stanley Treanor. With many illustrations. 8vo, Cloth..... 1.50

"It is a book of most engrossing interest, and as stimulating as it is readable."—The Record.
"The deeds of daring are thrilling in the extreme. Suitable for the public library or for the home."—Times.

THE GREAT LONDON DAILIES.

By H. W. Massingham. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth..... 1.00

Very welcome to all who like to look behind the scenes and see how the great London dailies are worked.

New Editions.

The Prayer Meeting and Its Improvement.

By Rev. LEWIS O. THOMPSON. Eighth edition, cloth, $1.25.

"Most heartily do we wish this work a wide circulation, both among pastors and people, and we hope it may do much toward the lifting of the prayer-meeting into that higher place which it ought to hold among the grand instrumentalities in the kingdom of the Master."—Congregationalist.

"We do not remember to have met with a work so suggestive, and we heartily commend it to both pastors and private members."—Baptist Weekly.

The Crisis of Missions. By Rev. ARTHUR T. PIERSON, D. D.

Cloth, $1.25; paper, 35c.

"We do not hesitate to say that this book is the most purposeful, earnest, and intelligent review of the mission work and field which has ever been given to the church."—Christian Statesman.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.

By HANNAH WHITALL SMITH. One hundredth thousand. Issued in fourteen styles, from 50c. to $2.50. Send for circular.

"To commend this work would seem almost superfluous; and yet to young Christians who may not know it, we cannot refrain from saying, Buy this book, and keep it with your Bible for constant study, until you have thoroughly mastered, in your own experience, the 'secret' of which it tells. It will transform the dark days of your life, as it has transformed those of thousands before you, into days of heavenly light."—New York Evangelist.

The Topical Text Book. Fourth edition.

16 mo., cloth, 60c.

This little volume is a worker's most useful tool. It collates all Scripture passages under their topical headings, and for this reason proves far more helpful in studying a subject than the best concordance.

"I find one of the very best ways to study the Scripture is to study topically."—D. L. Moody.

Stalker's Life of Christ. Twelfth edition.

Stalker's Life of St. Paul. Fourth edition.

12 mo., cloth, each, 60c.

These works by Professor James Stalker, M. A., are unique in their compact putting of these lives into such condensed form without injurious brevity. They are being taken up as text books by Biblical classes in all parts of the country, thus proving their practical value.

Grace and Truth under Twelve Different Aspects.

By W. P. MACKAY, M. A. Paper, 35c.; cloth, 75c. Two hundred and fiftieth thousand.

This remarkable sale can only be attributed to the very practical character of this work as a guide to the inquirer and a work of helpful instruction for the immature Christian. It is of this volume Mr. D. L. Moody said: "I know of no work in print better adapted to place in the hands of the inquirer."

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

By S. R. BRIGGS. Sixtieth thousand. 8 vo, cloth. $1.00; flexible, 75c.

Edition after edition of this work has been called for until it would seem the demand must be supplied. The sales however, increase rather than otherwise.

Feathers for Arrows. By Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.

16 mo., cloth, $1.00.

Few preachers have made such effective use of pointed illustrations as the well known pastor of the great Metropolitan Tabernacle. Here he has given us a large cluster of his best with liberty to enjoy and employ.

Revell's Record for Church Treasurers.

Size No. 1, $1.50; Size No. 2, $2.00.

Popular because practical—valuable because time saving—the only record for weekly envelope system that reduces the treasurer's work to the minimum.

For sale by the

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

It is said, upon documentary testimony, that during the forty-four years from 1850 the "higher critics" have set forth, to the amazement of the world, not less than seven hundred and forty-seven different theories in regard to the origin of the Old and New Testament. It would be difficult to recall seven of them, so little impression have they made.

Dr. Wines was formerly the principal of a boys' school. One day he had occasion to "trounce" a boy. The lad took his revenge in a way that the doctor himself could not help laughing at. Dr. Wines' front door bore a plate on which was the one word "Wines." The boy wrote an addition in big letters so that the inscription ran: Wines and other Lickers.

Dr. W. C. Winslow, honorary secretary of the Egypt Exploration Fund, writes us thus: "The volume on Ahnas, the site of Hanes (Isaiah 30:4) has just been issued, and that on Queen Hatasu's temple will soon follow. Our annual circular and appeal have just been sent out. So crippled for funds are we, that an earnest call for aid is imperative in order to continue even the most important explorations in progress." This good work should have the liberal support of intelligent Americans.

I remember of reading in my childhood of crow courts. I have never since witnessed or heard of one; but a number of years since I was witness of something that looked much like an execution among humming birds. It occurred near the coast in Brazoria county, Texas. I was walking along a path, and hearing a humming noise overhead, looked up, and not more than twelve or fifteen feet from the ground was a swarm of humming birds. In a space not as large as a barrel, I think there could not have been less than fifty of them; and no swarm of bees ever buzzed more actively. I did not think at the time of its being anything but play, and after watching them a little while passed on. Returning along the path about half an hour afterwards, I found directly beneath where the fray had been a dead humming bird. It was pretty evident that for some reason the wrath of the community was aroused and they had inflicted punishment upon the offender.—Rev. L. Tenney, in the N. Y. Observer.

Work Does Not Tire Him.

I have been troubled with my back so that I could not stand on my feet. I have taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and I feel like a new man. Work does not tire me now. MARTIN EARNEST.
Ashland, Ill.

One Fare Excursions South Via C. & E. I. R. R.

Round trip tickets will be sold from all stations on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R. on July 5th, August 7th, Sept. 4th, Oct. 2nd, Nov. 6th and Dec. 4th, 1894, at one fare, to points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. Tickets good to return for twenty days from date of sale. Stopover allowed on going or returning journey. For further particulars apply to any C. & E. I. R. R. agent or Chas. W. Humphrey, Northern passenger agent, 170 E. Third street, St. Paul. Chicago City Ticket Office, 230 Clark street, or to Chas. L. Stone, G. P. & T. A., Chicago, Ill.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SLEEPLESSNESS,

Nervous Debility, Nervous Exhaustion, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Locomotor Ataxia, Melancholia, and kindred ailments, whether resulting from over anxiety, overwork or study, or from unnatural habits or excesses, are treated as a specialty, with great success, by the Staff of Specialists attached to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. Personal examinations not always necessary. Many cases are successfully treated at a distance.

ASTHMA. A new and wonderfully successful treatment has been discovered for Asthma and Hay Fever, which can be sent by Mail or Express.

It is not simply a palliative but a radical cure.

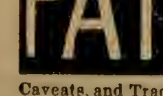
For pamphlets, question blanks, references and particulars, in relation to any of the above mentioned diseases, address, with ten cents in stamps, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

$5 TO $20 per day at home. The work is easy, pleasant and adapted to both young and old of either sex. Any one can do the work. GEO. STINSON & CO., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.



BICYCLES ON EASY PAYMENTS
New or 2nd hand, lowest prices, largest stock; makers & oldest dealers in U.S. We sell everywhere. Catalog free
ROUSE HAZARD & CO. 4 6 St. Peoria, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.
For Catalogue, address
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.
OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house. THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention the Cynosure when writing.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S
—]-oo-[—
SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ
12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Rand seen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——, ——, Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY M. HUGUNIN - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1894.

WHAT ANSWER?

1. Should the pastor of a Christian church receive a notice from a secret society, a progressive-euchre club, or an association of saloon-keepers, that either was coming to his church on Sunday, in a body, wearing the regalia or other insignia of that particular organization, and invite him to preach to them a Gospel sermon, what course ought he to pursue?

2. Ought he to reply that he habitually preaches the Gospel from his pulpit every Sabbath; that saint and sinner are alike and ever welcome; that the ushers are instructed to make no distinction on account of color, dress, or apparent condition, and that the society named would be as welcome, coming in one group, or singly, as all other persons are at any public service?

3. Or ought he to accept the invitation to preach a special Gospel sermon to the particular body which so invited him, reserving seats for all, and otherwise express his gratification at their coming?

4. On the other hand, after accepting the invitation of the lodge or other society, knowing that its object is, in part, to make a public display and advertise itself to the young men in the congregation, would it be right for the pastor to make no particular allusion to the special purpose of the society before him?

5. Or would it be his wisest course to commend the lodge or other society then present in the church to the young men as a model institution, and so secure the thanks of all secret societies, progressive-euchre clubs, or saloon-keepers in the country?

These questions are raised because secret societies of various names are more and more taking occasion to march in solid phalanx, wearing regalia, arms, etc., to some church, on the Sabbath, to hear (it is claimed) a "Gospel sermon," or a discourse on "patriotism."

Now if the pastor preaches a true Gospel sermon, applying the Word of God faithfully to the conduct of his hearers in this life, he will show them that the secret society system, progressive-euchre clubs, or saloon-keeping, is in direct opposition to the teachings of Christ and Christian practices; and also that Jesus Christ is the only way, the truth and the life, and that in him, and by him alone, cometh our salvation. But in doing so he will be sure to offend the lodge or other society by whose invitation he is preaching.

In view of this presentation of the subject, the readers of the Cynosure are requested to favor us with their answers as briefly as is consistent with the importance of the foregoing five questions.

THE NEW LABOR COMBINATION.

Last week the Cynosure printed the details of a formidable alliance between the American Railway Union and the Knights of Labor, in the interest of organized wage-earners.

Now it is announced that within a few weeks the Knights of Labor, the American Railway Union and the Farmers' Alliance will be merged into one vast secret order, which will be able to control a million and a half of artisans and laborers and make itself a power in politics. While the leaders of these societies declare that such a union is to be formed in the interest of workingmen generally, its power could very easily be changed into a formidable political force.

It is proposed to finish the work of the combination at a labor convention, which is to assemble at Springfield, Ill., July 2–4. President Debs of the American Railway Union, which held its convention in this city last week, when informed of the proposed coalition, at once became its earnest advocate. In an interview he said:

"There seems to be no question now of the success of the scheme. I am heartily in favor of the consolidation with the Farmers' Alliance and I believe the great majority of the American Railway Union members look at it in the same light. We are for anything and everything that will in any way benefit the condition of the wage-earners of America. That is the first broad principle of the American Railway Union, and we stand ready to affiliate with any body of men working for the same end. Resolutions will be introduced in this convention, before it adjourns, looking toward the consolidation of the Knights of Labor, Farmers' Alliance and our own Union.

"We have already resolved to affiliate with the Knights of Labor, and as this is only a step further, and as the delegates were solidly in favor of the first, the triple alliance will surely be favored.

"We will appoint delegates to the Springfield convention, and I with others of the present officers of the Union will attend. We will not send as many as we are entitled to, as we can advance our interests with a smaller number. We are entitled to eighty-four delegates—one for each of our seventy-nine local unions in Illinois, and our five general officers. When this scheme is consummated it will be the greatest step ever taken in the interest of the laboring people of the country."

The platform that is to be submitted at the Springfield convention was agreed upon at a recent convention of the American Federation of Labor. The following topics or "planks" are included: Compulsory education; direct legislation for the laborer; a legal eight-hour work-day; sanitary inspection of workshop, mine and home; liability of employers for injury to health, body or life; the abolition of contract system in all public work; the abolition of the sweating system; the municipal ownership of street cars, and gas and electric light plants for public distribution of heat, light and power; the national ownership of telegraphs, telephones, railroads and mines; the collective ownership by the people of all means of production and distribution; the principle of referendum in all legislation.

On these points it is claimed the American Railway Union, Knights of Labor and the Farmers' Alliance are united, and that at the next election all three will support such a platform as organizations.

TRUE CHARACTER OF THE A. P. A.

Referring again to what we quoted in a recent issue from the Voice's editorial on the A. P. A., in which occurred this sentence — "The trouble with the society is not with its published platform, but with its secret methods. Form a secret society for political purposes in this country, and though its platform were written by Gabriel, it would soon develop into a mischievous and unwholesome affair. Its inevitable tendency is to become a shield and a cloak for intriguers and for assassins of character" — the thoughtful reader will find much for serious consideration.

Every one of these secret societies, whether organized for political purposes or otherwise, including even such as the Mollie Maguires, the Clan-na-Gael, and the Ku-Klux Klan, had, or has, for its ostensible purpose the promotion of benevolent or patriotic objects, and yet every one is liable to be (and some of them have been) actually used for criminal purposes. Every one is liable to develop into "a mischievous and unwholesome affair."

The trouble, as the Voice rightly says, is with "the secret methods." All organizations, however laudable their purposes, need the restraint of public examination and criticism.

Power to do evil with impunity always carries with it the possibility, if not the certainty, of evil. There is no class of men, or community of people, but need the restraints of civil law. If they are universally virtuous, such restraints will always be acceptable, but none the less needful. What is true of private character is true of all organizations. They need law and light. If praiseworthy, they will accept it. The A. P. A. is no exception to other secret orders. Whoever writes the condemnation of one, writes that of all.

*

MASONIC DEMITS, EXCLUSION, EXPULSION, ET CETERA.

QUERIES.

Do the lodges of the Freemasons' fraternity give a written dismissal to every member who withdraws from them?

If a man claims that he is no longer a member of a Freemasons' lodge, yet cannot show a certificate of dismissal given him by his lodge, is he not still in full membership?

Let Masonic authorities answer.

"A Mason is said to demit from the order when he withdraws from all connection with it. It relieves the individual from all pecuniary contributions, and debars him from pecuniary relief, but it does not cancel his Masonic obligations, nor exempt him from that wholesome control which the order exercises over the moral conduct of its members. In this respect the maxim is, once a Mason and always a Mason."—Mackey's Masonic Lexicon, art Demit.

"Where a brother wished to 'withdraw entirely from Masonry,' the Grand Master of Alabama (Wood, 1857) decided that a demit was the only means of withdrawal known to our institution. McCorkle (C. F. C, Kentucky, 1857), Adams (C. F. C., Louisiana, 1858), and Prescott (C. F. C., Minnesota, 1858), held that the views of the Grand Master (of Ala.) were correct. The decision was a wise one."—English, C. F. C., Ark., 1857.—Chase's Digest, p 267.

"A lodge has no right to retain from a brother a demit obtained from the lodge to which he was last affiliated, on any pretense whatever (Lawrence, Sig. and Jour., 1858). The Master has no right to withhold a demit from a member who has paid his dues and is square on the secretary's book."—Ibid.

"A vote taken to demit a brother is final, and he is, to all intents and purposes, lawfully demitted."—Hartsock, G. M., Iowa, 1859.

"An Entered Apprentice cannot demit. Only a Master Mason can demit."—Ill. Grand Lodge, 1856 —Chase's Digest, p. 268.

"A demit is simply a dismissal from membership."—G. L Miss., 1853

"A Masonic demit dates from the lodge record when the same was granted, and, consequently, membership ceases with said date."—Reg. Ill., Sandford, G. M. Iowa, 1857.

"No member is entitled to a demit, unless at the time of demanding it he be in good standing, and free from all charges, either for crime or for dues."—Mackey, U. M. L xvii., 287.

"After once joining a lodge, a Mason is always considered a member until he receives a demit, or until death."—Morris.

A demit is therefore a certificate of good Masonic character, but it separates its recipient from membership from any or all lodges of the fraternity. He thus becomes an

UNAFFILIATED MASON.

Many Masonic authorities agree:

"A subordinate lodge has complete Masonic jurisdiction over any and every Mason residing in its vicinity, though such Mason may not be a member of it or any other lodge; and it may exercise all the rights of discipline over him, the same as over one of its own members."—C. W. Moore.

"Every Freemason is amenable to the constitutions, laws and regulations of the Masonic jurisdiction in which he resides, whether he be a member of a lodge or not."—Const. Texas.

A demit permits, therefore, only separation from active membership in the fraternity. He is still a Mason and subject to the laws and penalties of the fraternity wherever and when he resides within any Masonic jurisdiction. He can be of Freemasonry only (in America) so far as his active membership in any lodge is lost by death, or forfeited by payment of dues. His can only be effected in this manner, and under one more regulation. As a brother with a demit, and, consequently, not in affiliation with any lodge, Mackey says (Lexicon, art. Visit, Right of): "A non-subscribing brother (a non-affiliate) is permitted to visit each lodge once, because it is supposed that this visit is made for the purpose of enabling him to make a selection of the one in which he may prefer working. But afterwards he is excluded, in order to discountenance those brethren who wish to continue members of the order, and to partake of its benefits, without contributing to its support."

STRICKEN FROM THE ROLLS

MASONIC EXCLUSION

So far his Masonic standing has not been broken; but if he becomes a breaker of Masonic law, rebellious to the principles of the fraternity, oblivious of his lodge obligations and obnoxious to the interests of the fraternity, the Grand Lodge of the Masonic jurisdiction may sentence him to and inflict upon him such Masonic punishment as his Masonic disobedience merits under Masonic law.

EXPULSION,

"Expulsion" (says Mackey's Lexicon, art. "Expulsion") "is the highest Masonic penalty that can be imposed by a lodge upon any of its delinquent members. We shall therefore treat (1), of its effects, (2), of the proper tribunal to impose it, (3), of the persons who my be subject to it, and (4) of the offenses for which it may be inflicted."

1. "Expulsion from a lodge deprives the party expelled of all the rights and privileges that he ever enjoyed, not only as a member of the particular lodge from which he has been ejected, but also of those which are inherent in him as a member of the fraternity at large. He is at once as completely divested of his Masonic character as though he had never been admitted, so far as regards his rights, while his duties and obligations remain as firm as ever, it being impossible for any human power to cancel them. He can no longer demand the aid of his brethren, nor require from them the performance of any of the duties to which he was formerly entitled, nor visit any lodge, nor unite in any of the public or private ceremonies of the order.... It would be criminal in any brethren, aware of his expulsion, even to hold communication with him on Masonic subjects."

2. "The only proper tribunal to impose this heavy punishment is a Grand Lodge. A subordinate lodge tries its delinquent member, and, if guilty, declares him expelled; but the sentence is of no force until the Grand Lodge under whose jurisdiction it is working has confirmed it."

3. "All Masons, whether members of lodges or not, are subject to the infliction of this punishment."

4. "Immoral conduct, such as would subject a candidate (for initiation) to rejection, should be the only offence visited with expulsion;" but in some cases it has been inflicted for even non-payment of dues. Masons, generally, however, disapprove of so heavy a punishment for so light an offence.

Expulsion from one of the higher degrees of Masonry does not affect the relations of the expelled person to Blue Lodge Masonry. This position is supported by high Masonic decisions; but an expulsion from a Blue lodge involves expulsion from all the higher degrees; because, as they are composed of Blue Lodge Masons, the members could not of right sit and hold communications on Masonic subjects with one who was an expelled Mason.

Thus we have given a synopsis of some of the most important Masonic decisions and rulings. We could quote many more, equally as authentic, in the same direction; but these should suffice to convince any man of the despotic power of Masonry, from which only death can relieve him unless he takes the Bible route to freedom and deliverance. He may be expelled, but he is still subject to his obligations, from which he cannot escape, except by repentance, renunciation and eternal and aggressive warfare against the evils of the secret system. The way is plainly set forth in the Bible; the guilt of the individual Mason is described in Lev. 5: 1, 4, 5; and in the New Testament is found the only method by which the soul can by cleansed from lodge contamination.

"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin"—Freemasonry included.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

W. McClelland, of Washington, Iowa, sends us the following: "I would like to write a few lines giving you my high appreciation of your paper (the Cynosure), but I am barely able to be out of bed."

Obadiah Hawkins, of Beaufort, N. C., writes thus, also, of the Cynosure: "I have been benefited more by this paper coming to me than by any other that I have ever read. I thank you for the good it has done me."

Rev. J. T. Cullor writes from Springfield, Mo., June 18: "I have given them (anti-secrecy tracts) to about 200 men, and have talked with 101, in all, on the subject. Some 50 have taken my advice and said they would write to you. I find but few unreasonable, and also, that this is a good way to advance the interest in the cause."

STRIKES AND THE PEOPLE AT LARGE.

The latest movement on the part of the American Railway Union, to boycott the Pullman sleeping-cars all over the country, because Geo. M. Pullman does not succumb to the demands of the strikers from his car-works, leads the Chicago Evening Journal to remark: "If the boycott should meet with the official approval of the A. R. U., railroad traffic would be impeded everywhere, and the greatest sufferer would again be the much-enduring public.

"The very specious arguments of strikers and their sympathizers cannot conceal the fact that in all extensive labor troubles the inconvenience of the public is the chief factor that is counted on to secure a triumph. These poor men, says a sentimental abettor of the coal strikers, are not fighting the public nor the railroad companies whose property they are destroying, but are simply making an effort to get higher wages; and he knows all the time that a deliberate attempt is being made to force the people and the railroads to cry out for peace at any price, and through them to affect the operators. The word rebels is not too strong to apply to the rioters under the circumstances. They are the very meanest kind of rebels, since they have no grievance of any sort against the people or the State, but resort to rebellion for the purpose of defeating the original contestants in the struggle against them, that is, their employers."

The Journal adds that State authority should be invoked to preserve the rights of an unoffending public.

—General Secretary Phillips requests that all churches, committees, and others who desire one, two or more anti-secrecy lectures delivered in their vicinities will notify him of the time and place, and arrangements for the success of the meetings will be made by mail or personal interview.

—The present pope of Rome appears to be in competition with Dickens' "Mr. Micawber," or a close imitator of him, as the writer of letters on all occasions, and on many topics. His latest official epistle is dated some time within the past fortnight, and is principally noteworthy for the coolness with which he addresses himself to Protestants as non-Christians, and his denunciation of the Freemasons.

—Jesuitic ideas of temperance reformation possess novelty if no other virtue. Imagine a man getting drunk daily and daily settling his offense with a prayer! "In the Church of the Jesu, Philadelphia, there is a temperance society with the following degrees: The first degree is for total abstinence for life; the second, for a definite time; the third is merely for a prayer to be said daily in reparation for the sin of intemperance."

—At its convention in this city, last week, the American Railway Union, by a vote of 112 to 100, excluded colored men from membership. For a society claiming to promote liberty, equality and fair play, this decision seems a little "off;" but then such action is eminently characteristic of the "brotherhood" principles of secret societies generally. A reconsideration of this question, however, is to be argued, and a different result may be recorded.

—The return to America of Miss Frances E. Willard, in improved health, is matter of congratulation. During her months of residence in Europe she has been not only active in the promotion of the temperance cause, but highly honored by the great and good with whom her labors brought her into contact. She will continue in active service at the various temperance gatherings in this country, and her influence will add interest and strength to their deliberations.

—Last week we noted the fact that the Chicago city council had passed an ordinance forbidding the opening of stores on Sunday except those that sell groceries and meats. This week we have to announce that the mayor has vetoed the ordinance, because it savored of "class legislation," and for other reasons satisfactory to "liberal" churchmen, infidels, etc. By the way, isn't it about time that Christians should combine for a little "class legislation" in the interest of social and moral reforms?

—In Rev. F. J. Davidson's, letter printed today, he refers to a bill in the Louisiana Legislature providing that sheriffs should keep bloodhounds for tracking and capturing fugitives from justice. We learn that the bill was ignominiously defeated, because, as one Representative remarked, its passage "would indicate a retrograde movement in the progress of Christian civilization, and that the institution of this relic of the old slave days and its incorporation in the statutes of the State would be an ugly blot upon the escutcheon of the State." It was wisely voted down.

—The pope in his most recent letter from the Vatican condemns the Freemasons, not so much because of their express opposition to Christianity, but because they are the enemies of Romanism, and for their so-called audacious activity in Rome. Further, he calls upon Italy and France to shake off the despotism of Freemasonry in order that religious concord may exorcise the evils of war, holding that Europe presents the appearance rather than the reality of peace, and that education in husbandry, the arts and commerce is seriously menaced. Well, we suppose Freemasonry is no more to be trusted, so far as political finesse is concerned, than the Church of Rome itself.

—The Coxey "Commonweal army" movement has seemingly "flattened out" for want of financial and moral support. Still some country sections of this "army" of shirks manage to attract local attention by stealing railway trains and being sent to jail. As for getting to Washington before Congress adjourns, their chances are very slim, and as for any good that will accrue to themselves or others from going there, even the possibilities in that direction are becoming smaller and more remote. Farm hands are wanted at good wages all along their various routes, and it would be more manly in them to work for bread than to beg or steal it.

—Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's vigorous attack upon the municipal roguery in New York City has had two good effects. In his investigations of the slums and slum methods and habits, he soon learned that his proposed system of gilded saloons to make liquor-selling a reputable business was an empty dream, and he has now become an earnest advocate of total abstinence. This is good news. Another discovery, of equal importance, which he made was that the police and other city guardians were systematically blackmailing the keepers of haunts of vice, and thus sharing in the profits of their wickedness. By his efforts this official protection of vice will probably come to a perpetual end.

—An unusual wave of morality recently swept over the Chicago council chamber, when an alderman introduced an ordinance absolutely forbidding the sale of cigarettes containing any hurtful material besides tobacco. It was passed by a fair majority, was vetoed by the mayor, and again passed over his veto. At a later meeting of the council the license for retailing any cigarettes in the city was fixed at $500. Since few of these "filthy weeds" are made from pure tobacco, and few dealers will care to sell them under so high a license, the two ordinances, if maintained by legal authority, will be well-nigh prohibitory; for which we cannot be too thankful. Whatever the motive that led to this legislation, it was praiseworthy in its outcome.

—The vigorous stand heretofore taken against secret societies by the Augustana Synod of the Lutheran church, and the unmistakable definition which it gives of them, show how little these organizations are in harmony with true Christianity: "Secret societies are organizations which use religious ceremonies but deny the trinity of God and the work of Christ and require from their members promises equal to an oath." Even though any secret society, Roman Catholic, Mormon or otherwise, should claim to confess "the trinity of God, and the work of Christ," the fact that it requires from its members "promises equal to an oath" is sufficient to condemn it as a child of the devil and not in harmony with the true meaning and interest of a Christian institution. See Matthew 5: 33–37 and John 12: 46.

—In his latest public epistle, the pope "appeals to Protestants and points out that they have no fixed rule of faith or authority, asserting that many of them even deny the divinity of Christ, the inspiration of the Scriptures, and end by falling into naturalism and materialism." With the records of the Spanish Inquisition, the lurid flames of Smithfield, and the triumphs of Luther, Calvin and Knox before them, Protestants (true Christians, we mean) will hardly accept the pope's appeal to return to the tyranny of Romanism. The descendants of the seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to Baal, and of those who laid down their lives for Christ's and the Gospel's sake, know in whom they have believed, and are persuaded that he can keep unharmed what they have committed to him against that day when the papal throne shall be shaken like a winnowing fan.

THE HOME.

BURDEN-BEARING.

Of all the joys which life affords,
From childhood's sunny morning,
Until the paling western sky
Of night's approach gives warning,
There's none that springs so swift and sure
Delights less pure to smother,
As that which thrills and warms the heart,
When helping one another.

If days and nights seem born to us
To be consumed by sorrow,
If hourly we have vainly craved
A happier to-morrow;
If from ourselves we loving turn
To some pain-stricken brother,
The sorriest night finds dawning bright,
With helping one another.

'Tis selfish grief that deadliest clings,
And Christ-like lessons heeding;
We'll find life's devious onward way
To sunnier heights still leading;
Till when these bodies, weak and worn,
Have sought the common mother,
Our souls more joyful sing and soar,
For having helped each other.

—Fanny McHarg.

COURAGE OF A BOY-MARTYR.

BY MISS M J. MIDDLETON.

The following incident, which occurred in the home of a little boy in Ireland, is very touching: His father was a most cruel man, and a Roman Catholic. But this little boy was a true convert from popery, with strong faith and noble Christian courage; and although the father became terribly angry at his son's turning Protestant, and leaving the "holy mother church," yet the little fellow was firm in the true Christian faith. Once when in a great rage his father commanded him to kneel down and worship the Virgin, the little boy respectfully, though firmly, made answer in the commands of God's Word: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve;" and "thou shalt not worship or bow down to any graven image, nor the likeness of anything that is in heaven above nor in the earth beneath, nor in the waters under the earth," etc.

The enraged father, finding that he could not even compel his son to worship the Virgin, then began to beat him in a most cruel and unmerciful manner; but the child's true faith remained unmoved; and though suffering intense pain from the blows inflicted by his cruel father, he cried out: "Father, you may cut me through, but I will never worship the Virgin."

Thus this Christian child was able, through the grace and help of our heavenly Father, to remain firm in true faith and loyalty to our Saviour through the severest pain and torture, thereby setting a noble example of faithful trust to older and stronger persons.

New Concord, Ohio.

POWER OF PRAYER.

"Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong—
Or others—that we are not always strong?
That we are ever overborne with care?
That we should ever weak or heartless be?
Anxious or troubled since with us is prayer,
And joy and strength and courage are with thee?"

These lines are from the "Sonnet on Prayer" so truly expressive of Christian experience, by Richard Chenevix Trench. It begins with the triplet:

"Lord, what a change within us one short hour
Spent in thy presence can suffice to make!
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take!"

The sentiments and spirit of that sonnet must have often thrilled and uplifted despondent souls that have repeated it with hope and enthusiasm. And they are quoted here as a basis for certain thoughts of the times, which should find expression in our household religious journals, as they are matter of devout consideration and testimony in the warm prayer meetings of many of God's people at the present time.

Six or seven years ago in a careful review of the life and writings of Madam Guyon, the present writer was led to ask: "Is it venturesome to predict that in the church of the future the sacred madness of inspired preachers like Paul, and of holy women like Madame Guyon, under the endowment of power by the Holy Ghost, will be the common normal type of Christian experience?" In the age to come of holiness by faith the high-water mark of present sanctification, hitherto reached only by the select few, and at wide intervals, may prove, by the grace of Christ, to be the common level for multitudes without number of heaven's elect. The upward gravitation of grace will be stronger than the downward drawing of depravity; and saintly men and women will be everywhere rising, as by a law of Christian evolution, from the death of sin into the life of holiness, through the uplifting power of faith. The glorious liberty of the sons of God will then be no vanishing dream of a future heaven, but the present realized possession of a victorious holy life on earth, through faith in the crucified! And then the melancholy wail of Wordsworth:

'Tis the most difficult of tasks to keep Heights which the soul is competent to gain, will give place to the apostle's exultant pæan, "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

That blessed victory will belong not to a choice few merely of the church militant, but to the rank and file of the sacramental host of God's elect that here on earth have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. The almost forgotten shout of Wesley and his followers in the class-meeting will then be in the mouth not of Primitive Methodists merely and Salvation Army enthusiasts, but of the whole household of faith:

O glorious hope of perfect love;
It lifts the happy soul above;
It bears on eagle's wings;
It gives my ravished soul a taste,
And makes me for some moments feast
With ransomed priests and kings.

Rejoicing now in earnest hope,
I stand, and from the mountain top
See all the land below;
Rivers of milk and honey rise,
And all the fruits of Paradise
In endless plenty grow.

A land of corn and wine and oil,
Favored with God's peculiar smile,
With every blessing blest,
There dwells the Lord our Righteousness,
And keeps his own in perfect peace
And soul-refreshing rest.

Now, O my Joshua, bring me in!
Cast out Thy foes; the inbred sin,
The carnal mind remove;
The purchase of Thy love divide,
And O with all the sanctified
Give me the lot of love.

The purchase of Christ's death, this legacy of our risen, ascended and reigning Lord, this blest experience of heaven-born peace and love, is not for the favored few, but for the blood-bought many, the multitude of mankind in the kingdom of grace. It is for us Gentiles as well as Jews, through the gift of the Holy Ghost, as in the Saviour's commission to Paul himself: "To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me."

Madame Guyon once said of her experience after the quickening and illumination received in answer to prayer: "It seemed to me that I experienced something of the state which the apostles were in after they had received the Holy Ghost. I knew, I comprehended, I was enabled to do intellectually as well as physically everything that was requisite to be done. I remembered that fine passage which is found in the Apocryphal Book called Wisdom of Solomon. Speaking of wisdom, the writer in the seventh chapter says: 'I prayed and understanding was given me. I called upon God, and the spirit of wisdom came to my heart.' Wisdom came to me in Christ. When the eternal wisdom is found in the soul after the death of the first Adam, it finds in him all good things communicated to it."

So in this our day, in the lively homespun literature and theology of the Salvation Army, plainly a providential form of aggressive Christianity suited to the times, and an invaluable working auxiliary to the church, there are lessons to be learned of utmost importance to God's people. Among them is this by an unknown army officer, "Why do I pray? Because Christ-like praying in private is the secret of Christ-like living in public. The only thing that can maintain us in effective and successful service for God is personal communion with God. When labor, even though it be for God, is allowed to take the place of prayer, degeneracy must come sooner or later in the spiritual quality of the laboring. One of the devil's greatest delusions which he puts before Salvation Army officers and soldiers is to persuade them to allow work to take the predominant place in their life instead of prayer. God never means to let our inner life be subordinate to our search after the souls of others; and the only way it can be maintained is by keeping it momently 'in touch' with our life-giving and soul-strengthening Lord Jesus."

This is in line with the testimony of that modern man of God and calm Christian philosopher, Professor T. C. Upham, who says: "I have continually what seems to me to be the witness of the Holy Spirit; that is to say, I have a firm and abiding conviction that I am wholly the Lord's, which does not seem to be introduced into the mind by reasoning, nor by any methods whatever of forced and self-made reflection, and which I can ascribe only to the spirit of God. It is an interior voice which speaks silently and effectively to the soul, and bids me be of good cheer."

The same was realized in the constant walk with God and the holy affluence of Christian consolation for his people, vouchsafed to the late Dr. Cullis under an unction from the Holy One, who had grace poured into his lips so abundantly for the setting at liberty of panting and hungry souls. The weekly meeting for personal testimony and consecration which he established in Boston and led for more than twenty successive years with most gracious and edifying results in the way of Christian enlargement and sanctification, still lives a power for good. And by it he, being dead, yet speaketh in the deeply spiritual and yet eminently practical volume of "Tuesday Afternoon Talks," published by the Willard Tract Repository, Boston.

In like manner, what is called a Christian or Evangelical Alliance now holds weekly and monthly meetings at different points throughout New England for the propagation of the Christian faith and the rooting and grounding of the people of God in the principles and practice of the higher life, and applied Christianity to the usages and evils of society at large. By all these and other providential agencies, including the present blessed revivals, under the guiding hand of God, the church and the ministry are being slowly but surely lifted to a higher plane of spirituality and oneness with Christ.

"Spirituality," said Mozoomdar in his last most impressive address at the Church of the Messiah, before sailing for India—to which address it was the high privilege of the writer to listen, mark, and endeavor to retain. "Spirituality, spirituality in man, what is it? Spirituality in man, my brethren, is simply oneness with the Spirit of God. It is identity of the human with the Divine; it is harmony of the creature with the Creator. It is likeness of the child to the father. It is conformity of the will of man to the will of God. It is the promised indwelling of the Holy Spirit in the spirit and body of man. It is the spiritualizing presence of the Holy One in the souls he has touched and claimed for himself. Let me urge you, my brethren, as my last message, to seek for yourselves and for these American churches this gracious indwelling of the Holy Ghost, in accordance with the German hymn of Charles Wesley, which we have just united in singing:

"'Thou hidden love of God, whose height,
Whose depth unfathomed, no man knows,
I see from far thy beauteous light,
Inly I sigh for thy repose;
My heart is pained, nor can it be
At rest, till it find rest in Thee.'"

—Rev. T. Cheever, D. D., in N. Y. Observer.

HOUSEHOLD RELIGION.

Surely this is the only kind worth mentioning; that is, the religion which is not felt in the household from day to day, the religion which confines itself to the church and to Sunday, or to a certain round of outward observances, must be spurious. It certainly will not pass muster as genuine Christianity.

The sort of piety on which Christ puts his stamp studies the comfort of all around. It is full of sympathy, brotherly kindness, and friendly aid. It is considerate for others' feelings, and scrupulous about others' rights. It carries a cheerful countenance, speaks pleasant words, and abounds in little deeds of love. It does not forget that happiness is made up mainly of trifles, being not a single magnificent gem, but a mosaic composed of a thousand pieces; and it resolves to enroll itself in the number of happiness-makers, burden-bearers, who scatter flowers, diffuse sunshine, and take all possible pains to give pleasure.

Of what vital importance it is to every household that it be a shrine of this religion! How otherwise can the children grow up good? Of what use is right instruction by the preacher one day in the week if it be offset by bad example at home six days? What avails a formal lecture from the parent now and then if it be not emphasized by a consistent life?

Blessed are the children of true Christian parents, day by day drinking in wholesome spiritual food and strengthening moral nutriment. Blessed are the parents of Christian children, sending forth into the future prolonged influences for good, permanently represented on the earth by intelligence and virtue long years after they themselves have passed away. How miserable the estate of those whose names must go down to posterity linked with creatures of wretchedness, vice and crime! Too late for repentance do such behold the legitimate outcome of the absence of household religion.

Some have we seen whose own parents had left in their hearts and lives a precious legacy of Christian faith and love divine. Yet they themselves were not pious, and so were making a break in the chain, and defrauding their children of that boon which should have passed on without diminution. Those children had no godly influences around them, and hence in the hour of temptation would have no sweet memories to hold them fast, and in the stress of the world's conflicts they would be almost sure to deteriorate. An impaired vitality of virtue would probably be passed on in turn to their children, and so the stock would degenerate. How sad!

Let every man that is a man, every woman that is a woman, reflect very seriously on these things, and in some moment of sacred silence answer honestly one or two questions: Will your children have as good a chance as you had, not merely in temporal but in spiritual matters? or will they reproach you some day, and say that they have been robbed of the best part of what should have been theirs? Are you doing by them as you would wish to be done by? They have a right to receive from you an example of positive piety. It will be worth to them more than lands and gold.

Household religion, something that shall brighten the eye, sweeten the voice, check the hasty word, alter the impatient tone, make the brow smoother, the heart happier, and the home a paradise—this is what we need. May it grow and prevail mightily throughout the land in this year of our Lord 1894.—Indian Witness.

BETTER THAN BEGGING.

An urchin nine years old, with a very dirty face and pair of bright eyes, accosted a woman as she was hurrying across Boston Common the other day.

"Please give me some money to get something to eat," he whined.

"No; I won't give you any money to get something to eat," was the reply. The lady mimicked his whine.

Finally she hired him to carry her umbrella to her office, and on their way thither she gave him a dissertation on labor and its fruits in phrases she thought he would understand. She advised him to go into the newspaper business, and loaned him twenty cents to invest in papers, after he had signed his name to a contract she drew up promising to pay her immediately when he had cleared that amount.

In an hour and a half he came back to the office proudly and deposited the money loaned on her desk. She took ten cents of it and he kept the other to make further investments. The next day he cleared $1.50. He was radiant.

"This is better than begging, isn't it?" she asked.

"You bet," he said.

"Now, if I give you this ten cents, will you promise to buy with it what I shall ask you?"

"Yes'm."

"Then buy a cake of soap and use it."

FROM MANY NATIONS.

Go on! Go on! The skies may lower,
The storm may burst;
Unshaken in the trial hour
Good purposes shall give thee power
To brave the worst. Go on!

Go on! Go on! Thou can'st not tell
Thy mission here;
Whate'er thou doest, labor well,
Nor let a doubt within thee dwell
Or coward fear. Go on!

Go on! Go on! Thy Master's ear
And constant eye,
Observe each groan, each struggling tear;
He, midst the shadows dark and drear,
Is standing by. Go on!

Go on! Go on! Thy onward way
Leads up to light.
The morning now begins to gray,
Anon the cheering beams of day
Shall chase the night. Go on!

—Rev. Dr. Kuhne.

TEMPERANCE.

JOSEPH COOK ON NEAL DOW'S PROGRAM.

"Every temperance blade should have a hilt, and every temperance hilt should have a blade. The Maine prohibitory law, as framed and executed by Neal Dow, was a sword with both blade and hilt. His principle of total abstinence and prohibition give that blade a double edge and make it invincible.

"In the rising tide of temperance agitation in modern days the wave of prohibition has a most strategic position. All the waves that rise behind it urge it on. All the waves that rise before it are urged on by it. It commands the sea. There is, no doubt, from time to time, a recession of minor billows and eddies. But as the horologe of time strikes the advancing, fateful years, the central idea of the temperance reform continually rises.

"1760. John Wesley denounces liquor-sellers as living in houses stained with blood, and driving men to perdition like sheep.

"1785. Dr. Rush, in co-operation with Franklin and Putnam, assails the drinking customs of his day in the name of science.

"1810. Lyman Beecher launches the thunderbolts of the church against intemperance.

"1826. Justin Edwards, in the American Society for the Promotion of Temperance, lifts the educated sentiment of the land to abhorrence of the liquor traffic and of the drinking customs of society.

"1838. Massachusetts adopts the famous law, forbidding the sale at any one time of any less quantity than fifteen gallons.

"1840. The Washingtonian movement commences, and John B. Gough becomes on both sides of the sea the foremost advocate of total abstinence.

"1851. Conserving the whole moral and political force of the previous movements, the Maine Law arrives with Neal Dow as its originator and champion.

"1874. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is organized, under the leadership of Frances E. Willard, and later of Lady Henry Somerset and their co-laborers, achieves a career of varied beneficence, unmatched among organizations of its class in the whole tide of time.

"1888. The Supreme Court of the United States decides in the Kansas cases that prohibition of the liquor traffic is constitutional.

"1893. Scientific Temperance Instruction is made mandatory in schools of thirty-eight American States and all the Territories.

"1894. Colorado grants to women equal suffrage, and woman's ballot is everywhere dreaded by the saloon as the ally of prohibition.

"1895. If it is permitted to forecast the future, may we not hope for a Congressional investigating commission vested with power to unveil the horrors of the charnel houses which the liquor traffic has filled with dead men's bones and all uncleanness?

"1900. May we not hope that before the close of the century scientific temperance education will have been spread over the entire Republic? Out of forty-four States it now covers thirty-eight, and all the Territories, with the District of Columbia, Annapolis and West Point.

"1910. At this date the cities are likely to contain a majority of the population of the land. Unless the liquor traffic is brought under control, some great disaster, caused by the political despotism of the dramshop, will probably occur and will become the basis of colossal reforms.

"Neal Dow was born March 20, 1804. This was a famous year, signalized by the coronation of Napoleon as Emperor of the French and the publication of his celebrated Civil Code. Washington had died only four years previously. In the year following Neal Dow's birth Jefferson was elected President for the second time, and Nelson achieved his victory at Trafalgar. Scott's 'Waverley' was published when Neal Dow was ten years old. The battle of New Orleans and that of Waterloo occurred in his eleventh year. All the stupendous events of this country are either within or within sight of the range of his life. He has lived under every American President except Washington and Adams.

"In spite of all hindrances, prohibition has had great triumphs. After thirty-three years' trial of the Maine Law, Neal Dow's State placed the prohibitory principles in her constitution, and no political party would dare to propose to repeal it. Kansas, Iowa, Vermont show the immense utility of prohibition.

"For one, I am profoundly convinced that only the Neal Dow program in the temperance reform is fit to be the watchword of the twentieth century. Only Neal Dow's program will prevent the division and misdirection of the temperance forces. United in support of Neal Dow's program, the temperance forces of the modern world, by the blessings of heaven, would be certain of educational, official, religious and political triumph."

EXPERIMENT AND EXPERIENCE.

At a recent public meeting in England, Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, M.D., reviewed the position taken by him twenty-five years ago with reference to alcohol, which may be summed up as follows:

"I can no more accept it as food than I can chloroform, or ether, or methylal. That alcohol produces a temporary excitement is true, but as its general action is to reduce animal heat I cannot see how it can supply animal force. I can see clearly how it reduces animal power, and can show a reason for using it in order to stop physical pain, or to stupefy mental pain; but that it gains strength, that it supplies material for construction of tissue, or throws force into tissues supplied by other material—must be an error as solemn as it is wide-spread. The true character of alcohol is that it is an agreeable temporary shroud. To resort for force to alcohol is, to my mind, equivalent to the act of searching for the sun in subterranean gloom, until all is night."

"These were the words of 1869," said the learned scientist, "and now that a quarter of a century has elapsed since they were written and spoken, I stand on the past, and without prejudice, without indifference, but with observation and research maintained up to the present moment, I do not see a single reason for changing one idea or one word. I have, however, something to add. I spoke, in 1869, on experiment without personal experience. I have been led by what I may call personal experiment, to confirm the past on the present, and after twenty-five years have come to the distinct conclusion, unhesitatingly and undoubtedly expressed, that by abstinence I have lost nothing, retained everything, and gained much. Practice has sustained theory, and experience experiment. . . . . When I had overcome the physiological difficulties I continued for some time to apply what I had originally learned to the treatment of disease, using alcohol as at least an exceptional remedy. Gradually it dawned upon me that the error here might be as great as the error relating to health and alcohol. When the London Temperance Hospital was opened to me I obtained a field such as I had never had before for scientific observation—with the result that 700 acute cases have come under my care, disease of the most varied kinds and acutest in character, all of which have been treated without any recourse to alcohol or to anything that may be called a substitute for it.

Recoveries from severest diseases are as good, if not better, under this method, than under the old one, and convalescence is unquestionably advanced. The truth, in short, holds good all through, that that which is best in health is best also in disease; and if it were in the power of any one to say, 'I remove from your reach alcohol as a medicine,' I should answer, 'There is not a medicine that you can remove from me with greater impunity.'"

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON II.—Third Quarter, 1894, July 8.

SUBJECT.—Presentation in the Temple.—Luke 2:25-38.

GOLDEN TEXT.—A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.—Luke 2:32.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 2:25-38. T.—Jno. 3:16-21. W.—Isaiah 49:5-12. Th.—1 Peter 2:1-10. F.—Heb. 12:1-6. S.—Jno. 19:25-30. Su.—Isaiah 42:1-8.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The aged disciple.—vs. 25–28. Christ was born under the Mosaic dispensation, and in spite of his miraculous conception and sinless nature, Mary was subject to the same ceremonial law of purification as other Hebrew mothers. She was so poor that she could only bring for her offering a pair of turtle-doves. God has always signally honored poverty. He has so ordered it that not only was his Son born to conditions of poverty and toil, but almost without exception every one whom he has called to fill the highest posts of usefulness in church or state. Poverty may often seem a galling fetter, but to the noble spirit it is only so in seeming. If the divine fire is really within, it is sure to burst out. If God really has a work for us to do, no conditions can possibly hinder it. The most unfavorable will be a spur and a help. "And behold there was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon." We know nothing more about him except the brief description which follows. He was "just and devout;" that is, he kept the law both on the divine and human side. He did his duty to God and man. He had a symmetrical, well-developed religious character. "Waiting for the consolation of Israel." This shows that there were devout men and women who waited for Christ's first advent, just as now all over the world, even to the uttermost isles of the sea, a faithful few are waiting for his second coming. Things were revealed to this simple, godly old man that were hidden from the wise and prudent doctors of the law. It seems to have been his one desire to see the Messiah before he died, and God graciously answered the prayer, giving him a blessed inward assurance that it should be so. Such an one would be ready to obey the slightest promptings of the Spirit, and it was in obedience to a divine impulse that he came into the temple at the very time when the infant Christ was brought there in the arms of his parents. He may not have expected to see a mere babe, the child of a peasant-mother; but whatever may have been his preconceived ideas, they had to bend to the word of God within his soul, that this was indeed the very Christ. So let us be careful not to bend Scripture to suit our prejudices in regard to his second coming or any other great truth, but to cast aside all prejudices, and let the Holy Spirit reveal to us what he wills of its hidden meaning.

2. Simeon's prophecy.—vs. 29–35. Simeon had a mighty faith indeed. No angel appeared to him as to the shepherds; no star guided him as it did the Magi, yet he never doubted or said, "How can this feeble infant, the child of parents so poor that they cannot even bring a lamb for an offering, be indeed the promised Deliverer?" He said, instead: "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." There was nothing very peaceful in the political outlook, either as it concerned Judea or the world at large; but Simeon looked beyond all that seemed dark and troubled to the great fact of Redemption, and with a grand catholicity he saw the Gentile nations, as well as his own people, embraced in its glorious light. "And Joseph and his mother marvelled." After the wonderous events which had surrounded his birth it would not seem possible for anything to have surprised them. But this only shows that Joseph and Mary were just as human as the rest of us. How often we misunderstand God's plainest messages, and marvel when our prayers are answered as if it was the last thing we expected. Jesus was "set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel." To some he would be only "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence." To others he would be the corner-stone of a new and spiritual temple, "elect, precious." "And for a sign which shall be spoken against." This was the case, as we know, with Christ and his followers. So the Roman Jews said to Paul, "As concerning this sect we know that everywhere it is spoken against." How many to-day are afraid to espouse an unpopular reform because they hear its advocates maligned and ridiculed, and fear the same for themselves. Yet the disciple is not better than his Lord. How can they hope to win the crown, if unwilling to bear the cross? or to sit down with Christ at the great supper above, if they refuse the cup of the fellowship of his sufferings here below? Every great reform is a testing time, "when the thoughts of many hearts are revealed." They show what a man is made of; whether he is a Nathaniel without guile, a Pilate, or a Judas.

3. Anna the prophetess.—The aged Anna was not behind Simeon in recognizing her Messiah, or in giving her public testimony, for she "spake of him to all that looked for redemption in Israel." Under the old dispensation holy women were allowed to exercise unforbidden the very highest spiritual function—that of prophecy:—much more are such gifts under the new without distinction of sex.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Some of the Christian Endeavor societies of Montreal are endeavoring to carry on temperance work by securing pledges against the patronage of licensed groceries and in favor of the patronage of those who do not sell liquor. It is said that both the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches have expressed sympathy with the movement.

—The Occident says what ought to be emphatically true: "The Protestant church knows that her strength does not rest on a priest, or pope, or any man, however great. . . . The strength of the Protestant Christian is in pure character, right living, and holy communion with God through Jesus Christ, the Saviour."

—Foreigners resident in Corea, including the missionaries, are in danger. The king has instructed his minister in Washington, D. C., to inform Mr. Gresham that a rebellion directed chiefly against his hospitality has broken out. He urges the government to send a war ship to Seoul for the protection of American citizens.

—An interesting department of mission work in Japan is the railway mission organized to evangelize men connected with the railway service in that country, there being thirty-four thousand employed in different ways.

—The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Darien Congregational church, Conn., occurred June 8, and the town celebrated the event with much joy. It is one hundred and fifty years since the church installed its first pastor, Rev. Moses Mather, who served for sixty-four years. Nearly half of those who took part in the celebration last week were the direct descendants of this old Colonial patriarch.

—A statement of financial returns from 12,875 beneficed Anglican clergymen in the United Kingdom, leaving only 687 unrepresented, shows that the Church of England provides a total of six and a half million sittings. The number of communicants is estimated at 1,607,930; the net income of the beneficed clergy is returned at $16,429,505, and the total of voluntary contributions at $27,009,910. Of the sittings in parish churches 1,361,800 are appropriated, and 3,925,944 are free; and in chapels of ease, 60,161 are appropriated, and 408,982 are free. The Sabbath-schools include 544,389 infants, 775,832 boys, and 885,328 girls, with 55,467 men and 132,544 women teachers. The various guilds contain 85,959 young men and 242,742 young women. Other church workers are 1,586 licensed and 2,274 unlicensed lay readers, 151 paid and 107 unpaid deaconesses, 72 paid and 416 unpaid sisters, 1,127 paid and 123 unpaid nurses, and 806 paid and 165 unpaid mission women. The average net income of the parochial clergy is little more than $1,200. The contributions for foreign missions were $1,179,525.

—A league has been formed in New York by the liberal element in the Presbyterian church, practically pledged to work for the overthrow of the existing authorities. The league has just announced its aims, in very plain terms. One of these is this: "The league aims to bring about, sooner or later, the reversal of burdensome and unjust action recently taken by courts of the Presbyterian church."

—The summer schools under the direction of the American Institute of Sacred Literature are announced for the approaching season as follows: At Chaptauqua, N. Y., July 2 to Aug. 16, where the English Bible study will be in charge of President Burroughs, of Wabash College, and others for the first three weeks' term, and by Professor Moore, of Richmond, Va., and others, for the second three weeks' term. There will also be courses in Hebrew and New Testament Greek. Other schools will be held with similar and more extensive courses of instruction in Chicago University, July 1 to Sept. 22; at Bay View, Mich., July 12 to Aug. 15; Crete, Neb., July 3 to 14; Spirit Lake, Ia., July 10 to 27; Lakeside, O., July 12 to Aug 14; Waseca, Minn., July 11 to 27, and at Waterloo, Ia., July 1 to 15. At all these schools study and recreation will be combined.

—It is significant of the tendency toward denominational union that the Methodist church of Canada has increased its membership more than 50 per cent since the various branches of the denomination united nine years ago. In 1884 the total membership of all branches was 160,000. Now the membership of the united church is 250,000.

—The corresponding secretary of the Reformed Church in America reports receipts for foreign missions as follows: The receipts for May were $5,205.90, being $1,249 83, in advance of May, 1893. This is nearly 32 per cent increase. If kept up during the year it would give the board the $140,000 which it sought and failed to receive last year, and which the General Synod has just recommended again for this year.

—The United Presbyterian General Assembly made the following appropriations: To foreign missions $104,300, home mission $90,425, freedmen's $50,000, church extension $45,000. Education—for ordinary work, $12,600, colleges $20,000, ministerial relief, $10,000, assembly's fund, $7,000, making a total of $338,725. This does not include the $20,000 promised for foreign missions by the women's board, nor the amounts promised by individuals.

—The Methodist bishops continue to ask of candidates for the ministry: "Will you wholly abstain from the use of tobacco?" There are no cases of negative reply reported.

LITERATURE.

NUMBER IN NATURE AN EVIDENCE OF CREATIVE INTELLIGENCE: A Lecture delivered at New College, London, by Edward White. Published at 47 Cornhill, Boston, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, pp. 29. Price, 5 cents.

Those who have given any especial attention to the subject need not be told of the importance placed on numbers in the Bible. Divine computation runs like a silver cord through the whole, and in the generality of cases there is significance often extending beyond the mere narration, and pervading the future as set forth in the prophecies. Again, this adherence to numbers is found in all departments of human life and labors. Mr. White has classified the instances in which divine wisdom has introduced and perpetuated this numerical influence, as in mechanism, in astronomy, in chemistry, in the force of gravitation, in planetary motion, in the organic world, in vegetation, in the plumage of birds, in relation to light and air, in the insect world, in the books of Moses, etc. The whole is a pungent argument against that form of infidelity which doubts the existence of a Creator and favors the operations of chance in the visible creation; since the frequent recurrence of a regular mathematical system in so many and diverse forms requires an infinite power to regulate and control it.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS IN THE LIGHT OF SCRIPTURE. By James Inglis. One vol., pp. 96. Published by H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass. Price, 75 cents.

Christian living in the home by husbands, and wives, and children, forms the burden of this excellent little work. It is not only comprehensive, but explicit, and based upon Scriptural experience and teaching.

There is a great need of works of this character in these degenerate days, when family relations are so loosely held by the masses. It is time that the Word of God should be brought to bear upon this subject, and the thoughtless reminded of the positive duties required at their hands. Mr. Hastings has written an introduction to this book which adds to its value.

Bound in delicate cloth, with red-and-gold ornamentation, it would make a very appropriate wedding present.

FACT OR FICTION IN THE NEW TESTAMENT NARRATIVES OF THE (CHRIST'S) RESURRECTION. By Geo. M. Harmon, A. M., Professor of Biblical Theology in Tufts College Divinity School. Paper, pp. 26.

This pamphlet comes to us from a Universalist publishing house in New England, is written by a professor in a Universalist college, and is one of the most logical defenses of the truth of the Scripture history of Christ's resurrection that we have recently seen. It enters into a consideration of the dullness of the apostles concerning the event before its occurrence, their unswerving testimony of its reality, and the power which it gave them to preach the living Saviour and his love to all generations. Any supposititious "fiction" about the event is thus completely swept away.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page.)

making Dr. Skriefsrud a member of that commission. This commission fixed the rate of interest, and the money-loaners refusing to loan their money at that rate, and the people being destitute of the necessary means to plant their fields, Dr. Skriefsrud appealed to a wealthy Englishman for the loans. The Englishman refused to loan them money, unless the missionary would pledge his own word as security. To this proposition the missionary consented and gave his word; then the money loaners—the usurers—came to the missionary and kneeling before him begged that they might loan the money at the rate fixed by the government. But now with the money in their hands, the people were exposed to the temptation of the saloon, and the rumsellers, lawyers and usurers would soon get the money away from the people again. Now the people had elected the missionary, Rev. L. A. Skreifsrud, supreme chief of Santhalistan, and he, in that capacity, assembled all the women in a convention. In that convention they decided to banish all the saloons from Santhalistan. Their decision was effectual and the liquor traffic is banished from that country. Now there is no place in Santhalistan where they have not a mission station for preaching the Gospel. The work had grown so large that it required much time to collect the necessary money to carry on the work; besides, the people were poor and hence it became necessary to appeal to Europe for aid. Accordingly, in 1882, Missionary Boerrensen went to Skandinavia for aid. All the missionaries are natives except those who conduct the educational work—translation, etc. Rev. L. A. Skreifsrud, Ph.D., now speaks twenty-two languages; has translated the Bible into the Santhalistan language, and has written grammars for the Indian languages. At the close of his address a collection, amounting to $100, was taken in the audience for him.

The convention devoted about an hour and half to the subject of secret societies, with the purpose of taking up the matter again; but they were so nervous and excited over the Augsburg seminary matter that no more time could be found for the discussion of secret societies. Their attitude toward all secret societies is virtually to exclude them from church fellowship. For they will require their secrets to be investigated by the church and pastor in order to determine whether they are in harmony with the church or not. Of course, to accept the word of a member of a lodge that there is "nothing wrong about his society" would be a ridiculous farce, however good that man or woman may appear to be.

I had the following from Rev. C. M. Larsen, of Little Cobb, Minn.: A few lodge-members had got a foothold in his church; and he had held six meetings, in which he had exposed the sin of lodgery, and he had introduced as testimony against the lodge the Grand Army ritual published by Ezra A. Cook. A member of his church, whom we will call Mr. A, belonged to the Grand Army of the Republic, and denied that ritual. The pastor firmly demanded proof for his denial, under a resolution of the church that it was wrong to belong to any secret society. Mr. A reported the matter to his lodge, and the lodge allowed the pastor to compare the two rituals for about the time of ten minutes and no longer; but it was enough for the purpose. It was found that the two rituals agreed, except in the matter of swearing to support each other for public offices. The pastor maintained his position. The false swearing, with the death penalty, ritual, prayers and burial service do not agree with membership in a Christian church.

I understood Bro. Larsen that the lodge members, unlike Rev. G. C. Lorimer, D. D., pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston, and others, have left their lodges and adhere to the Christian church.

Bro. Larsen subscribes for the Christian Cynosure, and has supplied himself with N. C. A. literature.

The Committee on Secret Societies recommend to the churches and pastors the Christian Cynosure and the literature of the N. C. A. Yours truly, W. FENTON.

Don't forget to subscribe for the new monthly.

A year's numbers of the Cynosure would make six good-sized volumes of valuable reform literature, containing 550 pages each.

AN EARLY NOTICE.

There will be a convention of Christian workers (D. V.) held at Camp Hebron, Mass., beginning August 11th, next, and continuing nine days. The 15th will be given to reforms and reforms along the lines of the N. C. A. and the N. E. C. A. work under the general topic of "Influence of clannish organizations upon good citizenship and a pure church." Sub-topics, with the names of speakers and other features of the program, will be given later.

Will friends, especially in New England, make a note of this date, August 11, and arrange to attend? JAMES P. STODDARD.

THE NEW ENGLAND SECRETARY RETURNS THANKS.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

BOSTON, June 20, 1894.

It is my privilege to chronicle another complete surprise, accompanied with the generous gift of fifty-seven dollars ($57) from forty-two friends in New England, in aid of the Christian reform cause in which they with us are deeply interested. Mrs. Stoddard and myself are the grateful recipients of this offering, to be invested in a roller-top desk, a case for books, and such articles of office furniture as may be most needful and helpful in the work. We appreciate this timely remembrance for its intrinsic worth, but, most of all, do we prize the words of sympathy and approval accompanying the offering. We are glad, no less for the sake of the cause than for our own sakes, to enjoy your confidence; and whatever of commendation we have justly merited has been by the unmerited grace of Him to whose loving care we commit each and all of you, with the cause for which we unitedly pray, labor and give, as the Lord hath appointed to us.

Dear friends, please accept this as a personal acknowledgment of your gifts and a note of thanks from your fellow-servants in the Lord,

J. P. & ANNA E. STODDARD.

—It has already been noticed in these columns that the United States refuses further to interfere in the Hawaiian revolution. Quite recently a convention met in the island to provide a substitute for the existing provisional government. The supposition was that the new government would be republican in constitution, permitting the majority to rule. It turns out, however, that the new constitution, if adopted, will practically disfranchise a majority of the people in the island, and establish a small oligarchy on a property basis. The "mighty dollar" seems to be getting in its work there as elsewhere, to the detriment of personal and political freedom.

STERLING TESTIMONIES.

CHARLES P. SUMNER, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL was the intimate friend and biographer of Washington, and was himself a Freemason in his youth. Marshall left the lodge in 1793. He had then for some sixteen years been acquainted with Washington, who died six years later. Marshall wrote to Hon. John Bailey from Richmond, Oct. 18, 1833, of Washington and Freemasonry: "I do not recollect ever to have heard him utter a syllable on the subject."

GEN. HENRY SEWELL, a Companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army..... I was led by the influence of this 'Perfect Rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its character appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion, deism, because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity, unsustainable; its titles, tulsome; its rites, barbarous and absurd; its oaths, extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken; and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

JOHN MARSHALL, Chief Justice, in a Letter to Edward Everett, July 22, 1833, said of Freemasonry: "That the institution ought to be abandoned, as one capable of producing much evil, and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

THURLOW WEED: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

HON. SAMUEL DEXTER, in an Open Letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

HON. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Speech in the Senate: "Secret societies, sir? Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow men. Swear, sir! I, a man, an American citizen, a Christian, swear to submit myself to the guidance and direction of other men, surrendering my own judgment to their judgments, and my own conscience to their keeping! No. No, sir. I know quite well the fallibility of my own judgment, and my liability to fall into error and temptation. But my life has been spent in breaking the bonds of the slavery of men. I, therefore, know too well the danger of confiding power to irresponsible hands, to make myself a willing slave."

GEORGE WASHINGTON, in Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish Government, pre-supposes the duty of every individual to obey the established Government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive to this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force, to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation, the will of a party, often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community..... However combinations and associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely, in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men, will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of Government; destroying, afterwards, the very engines which had lifted them to unjust dominion."

THANKS TO WASHINGTON.—Edward Livingston was the General Grand High Priest of the General Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States and the great Masonic champion of his day, and Andrew Jackson was also a high Mason. In view of Washington's non-affiliation and his farewell address there can be little doubt that General Jackson and Edward Livingston considered Washington a seceded Mason. The following is an article published in 1830 in the Pennsylvania Intelligencer, which is an evidence of striking import:

"Who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington?—When General Washington retired to private life, Congress passed resolutions giving thanks to this great man. Only three men were found in Congress at that day, that voted against these resolutions. One of these three is now dead, and we do not wish to disturb his ashes. The grave should cover the foibles of all men. But there are two men now alive, whose names are on the journals of Congress, denying the poor pittance of a vote of thanks to Gen. Washington. We ask who these two men are.

"We have asked this question without expecting an answer from those to whom it is addressed. But there is no reason why our readers should not be gratified with the fact. Let the journals of Congress reply—'They are Andrew Jackson and Edward Livingston!!'"

HOME AND HEALTH.

(From the Vanguard, St. Louis.)

The danger from infectious disease is the principal objection to buying secondhand clothing or house-furnishings.

A movement is being made to secure the repeal of all laws compelling people to submit to vaccination. The object to educate people as to the danger of introducing into the system diseased matter from some beast. The process often ends fatally.

Some signs of the times are propitious. Light is shining. The Sun of righteousness is rising with healing in His wings. Disease is being dispelled. The curse of sickness is yielding to the power of prayer. The clouds are slowly lifting and we see the dawn of a better day.

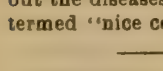
Idleness promotes poor health as well as sin. There is nothing that makes one feel their bad feelings like taking time to dwell on them. Keep the mind and hands employed and there will be no time to nourish sickness. There is philosophy as well as religion in this.

A writer says: "Always encourage, rather than hinder, the use of the left hand, for thus we acquire valuable and ever-increasing power which reacts upon the brain force." It also promotes equal circulation on both sides of the body, which is important to health.

Do not sweep the room where the sick are confined, and fill the air with dust. Wipe everything with a cloth wrung out of warm water in which put a few drops of ammonia. That will clean and sweeten everything. Banish the feather duster, which will only stir up and distribute the dust, which may be full of the germs of disease.

Rice is the principal article of diet of the Chinese, and oatmeal of the Scotch peasantry. Both of these nationalities are noted for health and longevity. These two vegetable foods should be common dishes in every household. If they took the place of pastry they would soon run out the diseases that come from what is termed "nice cooking."

If the hair is falling out and turning gray, the glands of the skin need stimulating and color-food, and the best remedy and stimulant is Hall's Hair Renewer.



THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

$2.75 Buys our $9 Natural Finish Baby Carriage complete with plated steel wheels, axle, springs, and one piece steam bent handle. Made of best material finely finished reed body, guaranteed for 5 years. Shipped on 10 days' trial. FREIGHT PAID, no money required in advance. Lots of fun in use. We are the oldest and best known concern of our kind, reliable and responsible. Reference furnished at any time. Make and sell nothing but what we guarantee to be as represented, sold at the lowest factory prices. WRITE TO DAY for our large FREE illustrated catalogue of latest designs and styles published.

OXFORD MFG. CO., 340 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

HOOD'S

Sarsaparilla is carefully prepared by experienced pharmacists from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipssisewa, Juniper Berries, and other well known vegetable remedies. The Combination, Proportion and Process are Peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla, giving it strength and curative power Peculiar to Itself, not possessed by other medicines. Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Sores, Boils, Pimples and all other affections caused by impure blood; Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints. It is Not What we Say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla Does, that Tells the Story — Hood's Sarsaparilla

CURES

Hood's Pills are gentle, mild and effective.

CINCINNATI CLEVELAND BIG 4 CHICAGO ROUTE ST. LOUIS RY. CO.

SUMMER TRIPS To The

MOUNTAINS, LAKES AND SEA SHORE

SHOULD BE ARRANGED VIA THE

BIG FOUR ROUTE

TO SECURE ALL THE

COMFORTS OF HOME

WHILE TRAVELING.

WRITE FOR TOURIST BOOK.

E. O. McCORMICK, Pass. Traffic Mgr. | D. B. MARTIN, Gen'l Pass & Tkt Agt

CINCINNATI.

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—o:o—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

The Nonesuch Professor,

In his Meridian Splendor. By William Secker (Puritan). With an introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. 16 mo, $1.00.

"It is a mine of sparkling gems."—Presbyterian Observer.

"A sheaf of golden grain, ripened by grace, and sweet with the flavor of rare simplicity and holy wisdom."—N. Y. Observer.

"It is a searching book."—Christian Intelligencer.

"This is a wonderful book. At whatever page you open it, your eye lights upon pithy aphorisms that combine the sententiousness of Benjamin Franklin with the sweet, holy savor of Samuel Rutherford. It contains hundreds of bright seed thoughts."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GUIDING HAND;

—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

—)o(—

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid ..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid ..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHAREOIN.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS OF

FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy,"—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

AGRICULTURE IN CHINA.

The two most characteristic features of Chinese agriculture, and to which its success is mainly due, are manure and the system of irrigation. Manures are gathered from every available source. Many devices are used for irrigation. Where there are no running streams water is laboriously raised by hands from wells and cisterns.

The agricultural implements are few in number and of the rudest character. They are chiefly the plow, the hoe, the harrow, the rake and the stone roller. A complete outfit for farming, including a water buffalo or a donkey, may be bought for twenty dollars or less. The principal crops are wheat, rice, beans, millet; sessamum, Indian corn, cotton, tobacco, poppy, barley and buckwheat. Large areas are devoted to the growth of mulberry trees for silk-worm culture. All cereals are carefully planted in furrows, wide distances apart and hand-cultivated. The yield is larger than the average in this country.

The condition of the farmers, in comparison with other classes, is one of reasonable comfort. The land holdings vary greatly in different provinces. In the southern provinces, where the land is most fertile, the farms are small, averaging not more than two acres. One-sixth of an acre supports one person, and five acres is a desirable farm, while it is a wealthy owner who can boast of seven acres. Notwithstanding the greater fertility of the soil in the south, the condition of the people is not equal to that of the north, where the land is less fertile and the farms are larger. There are farms here of 400 and 500 acres cultivated by families of unusual numbers, some having as many as 200 members living and working together in peace and prosperity.

The wages paid farm laborers vary considerably in the different provinces, running from $7 to $20 per annum, with food and lodging. It is possible for a farm laborer, commencing with nothing, to acquire a competency for the support of himself and wife—two-thirds of an acre of land and the necessary farming outfit—in twenty-six years.

At the invitation of W. B. Jerome, general western agent of the New York Central Road, a number of newspaper men examined a large picture of the company's fast Buffalo express which is now on exhibition in the Auditorium hotel. The picture is eight by twelve feet in dimensions and is an attractive piece of artistic work. It is from a photograph which was taken while the train was running at a speed of sixty miles an hour. Yet every feature is brought out as clearly and distinctly as if it had been at standstill and the most elaborate preparations had been made for taking it. This New York Central flyer has been running every day for the last three years between New York and Buffalo. The distance is 440 miles, and a regular schedule time of eight hours and forty minutes has been maintained for the trip. Four stops are made which require seventeen minutes, making the actual running time between the two cities eight hours and twenty-three minutes. This is the fastest time for such a long distance made anywhere in the world. After examining the picture and expressing their appreciation of its good points, Mr. Jerome's guests were entertained by him at an informal lunch in the annex to the Auditorium.—Chicago Evening Post.

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

TAKE AYER'S
the Only
Sarsaparilla
AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.
IT LEADS ALL OTHER
BLOOD
Purifiers.

AMERICAN HANDBOOK
AND
CITIZEN MANUAL.
BY
MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chic

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT
of the Holy Ghost,
BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested ,and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by persuing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S $12 AND AGENT'S PROFITS.
Buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc., free. OXFORD MFG. CO.
338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,
AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough
Edward Payson, James Caughey,
Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther,
C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso,
S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills,
D. L. Moody, Guy Fox,
Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts,
Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge,
and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

MY EXPERIENCES
WITH
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY A TRAVELER.
With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is

Fifteen Cents,

but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

Love, the Supreme Gift:
THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

The Perfected Life;
THE GREATEST NEED IN THE WORLD.

Both by Prof. Henry Drummond. Bound in chaste white vellum paper, each 20 cts.

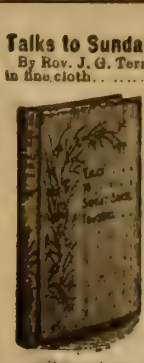
These are not to be judged by the size, unless rubies are counted for the weight thereof. The first has been very largely circulated, the second is now only just published and deserves the same wide reading—both are gems such as are only found at rare intervals. If you have not read them, do so at once, you will be a better man or woman for the reading.

"Best" Marriage Certificate. Size 14x17½. Price postpaid 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50.

This superb certificate meets a popular demand, and is rapidly becoming the favorite. Read what the people say of it: BRO. BEST: My attention having been called to your marriage certificate, I must pronounce it the neatest in design and execution of any I have seen. Rev. E. P. HART. E. C. BEST—Dear Brother: I am well pleased with the specimen copy of your marriage certificate, and shall use them hereafter. They are in good taste, well executed, on good material, and at a very reasonable price. Yours, M. V. CLUTE.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.
By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth.....75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3c	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 1 6 "
The Lily	" " 8 "	Pure Words	" " 8 "
Light & L Scholar's Qrly.	3 "	Light & L Inf Cl. wk.	4 "
Teacher's	" " 5 "	Lesson Leaf	" 1½ "
Golden Treasures	1 "	L. & L. Primary Qly	4 "

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr. 25c
& Sunshine, each Pr. Yr. 25c Scholar's " " 20c
The four to one address " 75c L. & L. Infant Class, weekly, 15c

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00

An Eden in England.	Life in Eagle's Nest.
Ned Franks.	White Bear's Den.
Sheer Off.	Fairy Spider's Web.
Braid of Chords.	Lake in the Woods.
Silver Keys.	Seven Perils Passed.
Grace Vernon.	Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set 2.10

Jessica's First Prayer.	Friends till Death.
No Place Like Home.	A Miserable Christmas
Under the Old Roof.	A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4 20

Claremont Tales.	A Wreath of Smoke.
Christian Conquests.	Pomegranates from
Tales Illustrative of Parables.	Punjab.
The Battle of Life.	Little Bullets from Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4 80

Cassy.	King's Servant.
Lost Gip.	Alone in London.
Max Kromer.	Little Meg's Children
Storm of Life	Crew of the Dolphin.

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

News of the Week.

CHICAGO.

Plans of attaching mail cars to cable trains are being considered by the postal authorities.

Medinah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, opened its new clubrooms with appropriate ceremonies.

At the Republican county convention Daniel H. Kochersperger was nominated for treasurer and James Pease for sheriff.

The trial of Eugene Prendergast for for insanity is in progress before Judge Payne and a jury.

Union carpenters in Evanston, numbering several hundred, threaten to strike if non-union men are given employment.

Ladies prominent in charitable work have undertaken to establish a home for Jewish orphans, and are meeting with success.

In a test, bicycles, as a means of delivering mails, were found to be superior to the ordinary transportation.

Judge Tuley has decided the Sturges-Farwell case, giving complainants cash and real estate worth $122,000.

Coal dealers are preparing to lay in large stores of fuel in anticipation of another strike by the miners.

Delegates to the National Underwriters' convention adopted a resolution condemning the income tax feature in the tariff bill.

Leading business, political and reform clubs will co-operate with the Civic Federation in improving the local government.

Of the 466,960 males over 21 years of age in Chicago the names of 236,711 do not appear on the lists of registered voters.

A population of 1,700,000 is estimated by the compilers of the city directory, the canvass for which has been completed.

The American Railway Union by a vote of 112 to 100 has excluded colored men from membership. Chicago was selected as the Union's headquarters.

Results more satisfactory than the most sanguine had hoped for were obtained from the test of oil as a fuel for tugboats.

Judge McConnell granted ex-Congressman Dunham a divorce from his wife, Elizabeth, who had previously secured a decree in South Dakota.

COUNTRY.

Railroads of Minnesota, encouraged by a Supreme Court decision, have begun active warfare on ticket scalpers.

According to Bradstreet's, the available stocks of wheat in the United States and Canada include 77,141,000 bushels.

Thirteen of the forty-three strikers arrested at Mount Olive, Ill., for interfering with coal trains were sentenced to terms of imprisonment.

Mrs. William Edwards, of Fairmount, Ill., tried to start a fire with kerosene. She is dead, her husband is fatally burned, and their home is in ashes.

Adjutant General Tarsney, of Colorado, who was kidnaped from his hotel by masked men was given a coat of tar and feathers. The governor has offered $1,000 reward for arrest and conviction of the participants.

Mrs. John Freeze, living near Joliet, Ill., has given birth to quadruplets—two girls and two boys.

Congressman Breckenridge was coldly received on returning to his district to prosecute his campaign.

Fruit canners of California have combined to reduce expenses and maintain prices.

Marietti Albani, the greatest contralto singer of the century, died in Paris. She was the wife of Count Pepolo.

Rev. Charles Warmkessle, of Shamokin, Pa. committed suicide, and at the same hour his nephew was killed by a train of cars.

Farmers of Minnesota are to be provided with means to propogate disease among chinch bugs, which overrun their fields.

Graduates of the Nebraska State Blind Institute refuse to leave the asylum, claiming they are entitled to maintenance.

Great damage was done by an overflow of the Arkansas river. Wichita, Kan., was almost under water.

Union stockyards officials at Sioux City are accused of stealing $900,000 by the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Trust Company.

According to Bradstreet's table, the bank clearings of the United States show a decrease of only 18 per cent for the week.

Railroad detectives routed General Cantwell's commonweal army of 200 men at Racine, Wis.

Pullman cars will be boycotted by the American Railway Union, beginning June 26, unless a compromise is effected.

Representative McRae, of Arkansas, has introduced a bill in Congress to forfeit land grants of roads which have not complied with the law.

Violent storms swept over Iowa, Minnesota and portions of Illinois and Indiana, doing much damage, Four persons were killed by lightning.

Several prominent citizens and officials of Oklahoma have been arrested for perjury and conspiracy.

Herbert Tuttle, professor of modern European history in Cornell University, is dead.

Three girls, aged about 17, were drowned while bathing in Rum river, near Anoka, Minn.

Erastus Wiman, convicted of forgery in New York, was sentenced to a term of five years and six months in Sing Sing.

Arrested for an old murder, Rev. B. B. Swartzbar, Livingston's African interpreter, cut his throat in a Cincinnati prison.

More than 2,000 men are now engaged in the ore miners' strike in Michigan, and the movement is constantly growing.

Governor Altgeld has declined to prevent the manufacture of cigars by the convicts at the northern Illinois penitentiary.

Gold reserve in the Treasury dwindled to $64,703,047, the lowest in its history.

Cyrus P. Leland, auditor of the Lake Shore railroad and associated with the line for thirty-four years, died at his home in Cleveland.

Wheat harvest has begun in Missouri. The grain is said to be of good quality. Corn and oats are also reported in good condition.

A terrific windstorm swept through Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota. At Chadron one man was killed and great damage inflicted.

More violent storms swept Western States, doing great damage to crops and property. A number of people were killed.

Secretary Smith has decided to maintain an Indian warehouse in Chicago in spite of adverse action in the House.

Schooner Rose was sunk in a collision with an iceberg off the Newfoundland coast. Twelve of her crew were drowned. Forty three jumped on the berg, from which they were rescued.

More than 100 members of Sanders' commonweal army were given fines and jail sentences by Judge Thomas, of Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Twenty-one miners were arrested by deputies at Mount Olive, Ill., after an exciting chase across country. The seventh regiment was ordered home.

Laflin & Rand's powder mill near Platteville, Wis., was blown up. It contained 400 kegs of powder. No one was hurt.

The Grand Lodge of Elks met at Jamestown, N. Y. After an exciting debate seventy members withdrew and went to Atlantic City.

General F. W. Butterfield, who fought gallantly throughout the civil war, died suddenly at Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Frank E. Allen was appointed receiver, by agreement, of the American Investment company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa. Liabilities are $3,285,000.

FOREIGN.

In a battle between Spanish troops and Mussulmans on one of the Philippine Islands many of the latter were killed.

Fire in London destroyed a number of factories and other buildings. The loss will be very heavy.

Earthquakes in Japan killed many natives at Yokohama and Tokio and destroyed much property.

University extension as practiced by the Chicago University will be considered at the London conference.

Forty-five of seventy passengers were drowned by the sinking of a boat on the river Jek in Russia.

The rebellion in Corea has assumed serious dimensions. Government forces were defeated in two engagements.

Two hundred miners were imprisoned by an explosion in a colliery near Port-y-Pridd, Wales. It is believed many were killed outright.

A son was born to the Duchess of York, wife of Prince George of Wales, the heir presumptive to the British throne.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR.
PRICE'S CREAM
BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

Subscription Letters.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 18 to June 23:

D Hopson, L E Reynolds, J W Margrave, J G Scott, Rev H Siemiller, Mrs E F Enlow, J Bradford, H W Utter, A Barkley, E S Bunce, S C Taylor, B Smith, S E Miller, J Crabs, D L Garver.

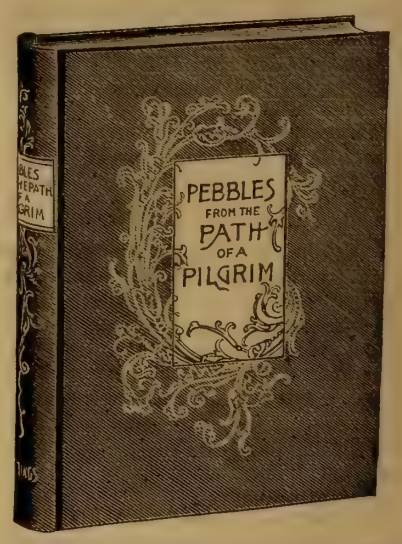
Ayer's Pills promote the natural motion of the bowels, without which there can be no regular, healthy operations. For the cure of biliousness, indigestion, sick headache, constipation, jaundice, and liver complaint, these pills have no equal. Every dose effective.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Market Reports.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	59⅛@	62
Winter No. 2	57 @	59⅛
Corn—No. 2	41¼@	43¾
Oats—No. 2	45 @	48
Rye—No. 2	48 @	50
Bran per ton	11 75
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@10	75
Butter, medium to best	11 @	17
Cheese	07⅞@	08¾
Beans	1 25 @	1	90
Eggs, fresh	09⅛@	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 65 @	4	90
Flax	1 43
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50 @	9	15
Broom corn (per ton)	80 00 @	70	00
Potatoes, (new, pr. bbl.)	1 75 @	2	25
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼@	06¾
Lumber—Common	15	50
Wool (unwashed)	12 @	26
Cattle—Choice to extra	2 80 @	4	50
Common to good	2 10 @	4	05
Hogs	4 75 @	5	20
Sheep	1 50 @	3	70

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	62¼@	62⅝
Corn No 2	41¼@	43¾
Oats	50 @	54
Rye	52 @	58
Eggs, Western fresh	11⅛@	12
Butter	09¾@	18
Wool	19 @	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 25	@ 4	75
Hogs	4 00	5	00

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI., No. 43. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,262.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Limping Logic..... 8
Anarchism..... 8
Prof. Garner and African Missions..... 8
About the "Elks"..... 8
A Satanic Sermon..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Christian Warfare..... 1
Altars, Right and Wrong 2
History of the Santhalistan Mission..... 2
SELECTED:
Reformed Presbyterians and the Lodge..... 2
Lynchings..... 3
Philadelphia "Sits Down on" Foul Literature... 3
Xt., Xtian., and Xmas... 3
The Lodge and the Church..... 3
Initiative and Referendum in Switzerland... 4
The Situation in Europe. 4
The Propagation of Anarchy..... 4
NEW ENGLAND LETTER....
REFORM NEWS:
Philomath College Commencement; From Rev. Wm. Fenton..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Letter from Rev. F. J. Davidson; Guarding Against Anarchy; Catholics and the A. P. A.—War Brewing .5,6
Thirty-fourth Anniversary of Wheaton College..... 9
LODGE NOTES..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
N. C. A..... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
LITERATURE.....12
OBITUARY.....13
Catalogue of Publications 13
MARKETS.....13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

Erastus Wiman, who has recently been sentenced to prison for five and a half years by a New York court, was a shrewd business man, standing high in financial and commercial circles. But he became a forger—no better than a thief—and is now a convicted criminal. His career is one to be avoided by the young men of the day.

The Midland reprints the following "from a local paper:" "When the assessor came around this spring a minister of the Gospel at Plymouth complained that he was assessed too heavily the year before. The records of the year were examined and it was found that by some mistake a saloon had been entered up as one of his belongings and he had paid the taxes on it." The incident is too ludicrous for any serious comment.

The arrest of "Gen." Kelly and "Col." Baker, of the former's corps of "commonwealers," will elicit little sympathy. As they were approaching Louisville, Ky., Col. Henry Waterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, warned the "army" to steer clear of that port, as there were "alligators in the river and work on the streets." But regardless of this warning, they landed, and the leaders were promptly arrested as "vagabonds," and placed under bonds for trial. Somehow the charge against them does not seem to be a misfit.

The first anniversary of the "Anti-saloon League of the District of Columbia" was celebrated last week in Washington by a public gathering. The annual report shows that the league has been instrumental in compelling saloon-keepers of the District to comply with at least the outward forms of law before they can obtain licenses. As a matter of news we are told that the league is composed of "representatives of thirty-five different churches, the Good Templars, Rechabites, Sons of Jonadab, Sons of Temperance, the W. C. T. U., the Father Matthew Total Abstinence Society, the Newman Loyal Temperance Legion of the Congregational Church, and the Central Union Mission." What a curious mixture!

The war upon the Italians in France by the outraged friends of Carnot and the government appears to have a deeper meaning than is seen upon the surface. Santo, the Italian slayer of the late President, is an avowed anarchist, and the people of France, always impulsive, will not hesitate to attribute the assassination, either directly or indirectly, to anarchistic influence. The previous outrages committed in the republic by the anarchists furnish an excellent basis for any new hatred that may be aroused against this lawless and dangerous class, and it will not be surprising to learn, at an early day, that anarchism no longer has a foothold in France. Later intelligence shows that Santo was the chosen instrument of a foul conspiracy.

A praisworthy effort for the promotion of social and moral reform was developed in Chicago last week, when the Trade and Labor Assembly, the Civic Federation and the Society for the Prevention of Crime united in action toward procuring evidence of the prevalence of open gambling and other forms of vice, to be presented to the Mayor. There are those who believe that such evidence will be no news to that official, who is said to be quite conversant with the undercurrents of crime in his bailiwick, but it is also understood that he lacks the stamina to enter upon its extermination. With all the power of his position at his command, and having the moral support of the three associations above named, there is hope that he will exhibit a proper energy and crush out the gamblers.

Immigration is not only falling off in numbers, but emigration to Europe has greatly increased within the past few months. The causes which have led to this change are two-fold. The financial depression, the decline of manufactures, and a consequent decrease of employment for workingmen and their families; these and the turning of the tide of emigration from the United States to Africa and other countries has wrought the difference between this and former years. Many foreigners, no doubt, who came with no other intention than that of making money and then returning to their native lands, are carrying out that intention, and will not come again, perhaps, unless the renewed prosperity here shall tempt them once more to cross the ocean. In the meantime it is a favorable opportunity for revising our immigration laws for our national benefit.

On Friday of last week the House of Representatives at Washington passed the bill admitting the Territory of New Mexico as a State into the Union, without a roll call, and with very few dissenting votes. The bill now goes to the Senate. An intelligent Washington correspondent writes: "It is beginning to look very doubtful as to whether the Senate will take up the bill for the admission of Utah as a State, at the present session. The bill has passed the House of Representatives and, although there was at first considerable opposition to it in the Senate Committee on Territories, an informal agreement was sometime ago reached that it should be favorably reported to the Senate with some amendments. But just as soon as the tariff bill is passed, the Senate will have to take up the regular appropriation bills, not one of which has yet been passed by that body, and there will hardly be time to take up the Utah bill, unless it could be passed without opposition, and that is not probable." The admission of New Mexico will be largely in the interest of Roman Catholicism, and the pending bill admitting Utah is suspiciously favored by the Mormons of that Territory. President Cleveland, it is reported, is opposed to the present admission of any more new States.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade of last Saturday thus outlines the situation of business the past week: "The great strike of coal miners has ended at most points, but another threatens to interrupt business more seriously for a time though the number of hands engaged is comparatively small. Travel and traffic are well-nigh arrested on about twenty western roads already, and strikes are threatened on all roads which use Pullman cars. On the whole, other changes during the week have been for the better. Many manufacturing establishments which were stopped by want of fuel have resumed. The depletion of the treasury reserve has been checked by the voluntary deposits of gold from New York banks. Exports of gold have almost ceased. Congress has made much progress toward final disposition of the tariff question. Crop prospects grow better as the harvest draws nearer. The resumption of work in mines and mills has made good progress, but the demand for products is as yet smaller and less urgent than was expected."

Elmwood, near the capital city of Nebraska, furnishes an excellent object-lesson for ministers of the Gospel, who "mean well," but are not "as wise as serpents," nor "as harmless as doves." The story is told by the Lincoln (Neb.) New Republic of last week. Rev. H. N. Allen is the pastor of the "Church of Christ" at Elmwood, and he gives his version of the affair as follows: "It has been strongly intimated if not directly charged that the Christian church of this place was in favor of a saloon. This is not true. I do not think that a single member of the church is in favor of a saloon in the town. Some of the members have said, if they must have either a saloon or a hole-in-the-wall, that they preferred a saloon. And as they felt certain that a hole-in-the-wall would be started if there was no saloon, six members signed the petition; not that they wanted a saloon, but they thought it better for the town." The New Republic adds: "It is a well-known fact that the applicant for a saloon (license) found it very difficult to obtain the required number of signatures, even including these church members. If these six members of the Christian church had refused to sign the petition, it would have been impossible for the petitioner to secure a license and open a saloon." It is noticeable that the pastor, in his statement of the affair, neither rebukes his members, nor offers a word of disapproval of their act. Thus the responsibility is divided equally between the church and the saloon for all the iniquity of the latter.

CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

To encourage you in pressing forward in the Christian course, often think of those who, through faith and patience, will inherit the promises. Turn to the first ages of Christianity. Christians then esteemed it an honor to suffer shame for the name of Jesus. They forced their passage to heaven through all that is most dreadful, and sought admission there through all that is most dear. Riches, health, ease, pleasures, and life, all were trifles in their esteem. Their tormentors were weary of inflicting pain before martyrs were weary of bearing it. Their path was no smooth and flowery way. No; sorrows beset its entrance and attended its course, and flames and tortures were at its end; and yet they trod it. These, indeed, seem like a different race of beings—like creatures of a different world. Ah, my friend, there lay the distinction between them and many that profess the same Gospel now. They were creatures of a different world. They lived on earth to be ready for heaven. Hence, they trod the path to glory, however thorny, and rejoiced in hastening to a martyr's crown. Polycarp, when condemned to martyrdom, was so fearful lest the prayers of his friends would prevent the execution of his sentence, that he begged them to forbear. "I fear," said he, "lest your love should injure me." Think you that one of all these martyred myriads would repent? But we need not go so far back to view the patience of the saints.

Look back a hundred and fifty or two hundred years, and see the persecutions endured by those of whom the world was not worthy. See dungeons filled with their captives, and deserts peopled with their exiles. See persecutors hunting out their little haunts, denying them the enjoyment of religious worship, even in solitary fields or lonely woods. Behold soldiers entering their assemblies, disturbing their meetings, silencing their ministers, and dragging hearers and preachers to fines, confiscations and prisons. Oh, be not slothful; though not called to endure their sorrows, imitate their lives, and when the world tempts you, and Satan suggests that your hope is vain, then think of them who once had all their trials and many more; but who overcame through the blood of the Lamb.

When tempted to despond, or shrink in the day of conflict, then hear your Lord saying: Will you go away—you for whom I died; to whom I have been a shepherd and friend; you who have professed so much love for me; who have taken on your soul such solemn vows and sealed them so often at the table of our Lord—will you go away—you who never found me faithless, and never will—will you go away?—will you? Shall Satan triumph? Have you considered the folly? Have you weighed the sin? Have you measured the ingratitude of listening to the tempter? And will you go away? Do you not reply, Where shall I go? If I left thee, where go for pardon, peace, salvation and eternal life? Keep me and I will not go away.

If tempted to give up religion, hear your Lord saying: "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." All the enemies thou hast been instructed to watch against will try to rob thee of that prize, but hold the beginning of thy confidence fast to the end. Think of the worth of that crown of which they would rob thee. Think of the love that would bestow it on thee. Think of the raptures of receiving and of the heaven of enjoying that thornless crown. Whatever thou mayst lose or suffer, or fear or dread, still hold this fast. Thy Lord's own hand will bestow the prize. Fear not lest thou shouldst not attain the blessing, for he will give it thee.

Look to that crown, and to him who gives it. Look to those promises that they are inheriting who, in his strength, have overcome. They felt all your trials; they knew all your sorrows; they encountered all your dangers, and struggled with all your enemies; had hearts as cold and groveling, enemies as many and as mighty, fears as painful, doubts as perplexing, and temptations as harassing; but they overcame through the blood of the Lamb. Now they inherit the promises, and opposition and danger, and death and temptation and sin are things unknown where they repose. A few years ago many of them were in the field of warfare, but now in the land of peace. Their pilgrimage is ended, their warfare done, their voyage of life is finished; they have reached the harbor, and landed on the peaceful shore of blest eternity. The crown of life, the rivers of pleasure, the fullness of joy, the house not made with hands, the mansions in Jehovah's dwelling, the heaven we desire, the eternity that fills our souls with conflicting hopes and fears—all, all are theirs. Happy conquerors—happy end of the struggles of a few fleeting years! And may you ere long enjoy the same? You may. Eternal love has opened to your soul the gate of heaven. Eternal love would place upon your head the crown of life. Your journey is no longer than theirs, your enemies no mightier, your helps are no less. Jehovah was their strength, and he would be yours. Your encouragements are no smaller. To them he promised immortality and eternal life, and he will give the same to you.

Oh, the heights and depths and lengths of that love which gives, as a free gift to all, that eternal life. Precious encouragement for following the Lamb through light and darkness, life or death. Look to him, and look to heaven; then onward go till Jesus comes and gives the crown.

Fight on, fight on, though fiercely rattle
The fiery arrows on the shield,
By faith uplifted, for the battle
Is still the Lord's, and who would yield?
Fight on, fight on, we dare not linger;
The bugle notes of the command
Call, and the cross, with solemn finger,
Our banner is, that none withstand.
Fight on, fight on, o'er ridge and hollow
Of foaming wave and furrowed shore;
God fights with us, and we must follow
When Christ has conquered all before.

Steamburgh, N. Y.

ALTARS, RIGHT AND WRONG.

BY CYRUS SMITH.

It is a great wrong to fallen humanity that altars other than Christian exist to attract and allow worshipers. But ever since Cain erected the wrong kind of an altar, his has been imitated in principle because "man is a worshiping animal," "prone to wander" religiously.

The principles involved in the worship of God at Christian altars are such as to enable lost and ruined humanity to escape the terrible doom of the ungodly—a self-imposed fate, though perhaps ignorantly done in disobedience to Christ. To worship at altars where wrong principles prevail is fatal to the best interests of the soul; this is as true as that to worship God through Christ secures the benefits of the atonement, the only sacrifice to take away sin.

To really worship at Christian altars, and not neglect "the throne of grace," has the best effects. To worship at wrong altars has the worst results. Christian altars only are the right kind; they are of the church of Christ, reached in principle only at a throne of grace through him. All other altars, in principle, are in the bad interests of the religion of Cain, and many, according to the Bible, but, contrary to its principles. "Ye worship ye know not what."

Lodge altars are not Christian altars, but very many worship there, unconscious of the fatal results. God, in his great mercy, is trying to give the churches the light, that they need not conform to the world on that line, or try to worship him at wrong altars.

How far the ministry of a church may ignore the secrecy question and not warn the people of the danger of false worship, and the "candlestick" not be removed, is not known. But there is danger that the blood of worshipers at wrong altars will be required of the watchman. God says: "My people perish for want of knowledge." But it is because many ministers do not impart the "knowledge" to the people as God ordained them to do.

DeKalb, Iowa.

HISTORY OF THE SANTHALISTAN MISSION.

At the recent synod of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, at St. Paul, Minn., Rev. L. A. Skriefsrud spoke of his missionary labors in Santhalistan, to which he was called twenty-seven years ago. Rev. Wm. Fenton has furnished us with the following interesting incidents related by the speaker: He said that soon after going to the mission he and his companion (Rev. Mr. Boerresen) had the pleasure of seeing thousands of that people converted to Christ.

Previous to that period they had been cursed with three things—money-loaners, lawyers and saloons. They had a tradition concerning the origin of man, that there was one God who created two holy people; that the devil came to these two holy people and told them that he was their grandfather, and that, although God had taught them many good things, there was one thing he had not taught them—that was how to make whisky; that the devil taught them how to make whisky, and that was the cause of their ruin. After they were thus ruined, God came to them and asked them to cease their rebellion against him and return unto him. But finding only two good people among them, he determined to destroy all the others, either by fire or by water, and they did not know which of the two elements were made use of for that purpose; but God instructed the two good people to hide themselves in a cave of a mountain until all the others were destroyed. Soon after the destruction, however, the descendants of the two good people fell into the very worst of sins—such as cannot be translated into other languages, they were so abominable. They seemed, however, to retain a regard for truth. (Probably the devil had not "come" the secret-society dodge on them.) They were held in a very low condition by lawyers and the kings of the Hindoos. In their struggle to free themselves from that despotism, the Hindoos had obtained soldiers from the government of India, whereby they produced an immense slaughter of the Santhalians, which slaughter, or the Spirit of God, or both, so moved the hear tof a Santhala chief that he made his confession and prayer to God for his mercy, confessing that they had sinned against him in serving other gods, and so brought all of the mischief upon themselves. He also prayed that God would send some one to them to tell them more about himself. This prayer and confession was offered about twenty-seven years ago, a short time before the two missionaries went to them. Soon after the arrival of the missionaries three were converted; upon which they were severely persecuted for their faith in Christ and ostracised from society; but, upheld by the power of God, they were enabled to propagate the Gospel so that thousands upon thousands were converted. There was, however, one supreme chief among them who became so bitterly enraged against Christianity that he determined to kill the two missionaries, Skriefsrud and Boerresen, on a certain day, and drive Christianity out of his province. Accordingly he bade all his people to execute his design on that day; but before that day came he himself was arrested by the governor of India for some crime he had committed, was tried, found guilty and imprisoned for one year. After his release from prison he was so ill that he had to be carried home on a litter- a distance of 150 miles. Arriving at his home, he soon grew so much worse that he was likely to die. The missionary, Bro. Skriefsrud, called to see him, and, while there, was impressed to ask the chief if he should pray for him, stating that he believed that God would save him if he prayed for him. The chief gave his consent. The missionary prayed, and the chief was not only saved but healed of his disease and became a most zealous and effectual advocate of Christianity, even in the daily functions of his office as a chief, and so was the means of saving many souls. And a little while before Dr. Skriefsrud left that country for America, in the month of March of this year, the chief died, full of faith, happy in the Lord.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIANS AND THE LODGE.

The following report of the Committee on Secret Societies was adopted by the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church at Philadelphia, June 5, 1894:

Our opposition to secret orders does not lie against organization, or pledges or privacy. Efficient work demands organization; a good life is full of promises and pledges; the best interests of society demand that many things be covered from view. It is by reference to such undeniable facts as these secret orders are generally defended. Let us notice that such defence is not complimentary to these orders; it implies either the absence of discretion or the presence of much that needs to be concealed. The fundamental objection to secret societies is, that they are social bodies, organized on the principle of secrecy and for the purpose of concealment, without previous knowledge of the things to be concealed. The evil is in organized secrecy among equals. Secret societies themselves suffer from the application of their own principle. It is a well-known fact that secret orders, within secret orders, are multiplying to the injury of the common interests of the larger body. To illustrate the evil workings and principles of these orders let us suppose that a family, a church or nation is organized, by solemnly pledging every member, before entering the door of such society, that he will "ever conceal and never reveal" the doings of that society. The nature and purpose of that social body cannot save it from public condemnation. That which would condemn a divine institution cannot be justified in a merely human society.

What then are the objections to organized secrecy?

I. Such a society is contrary to the spirit and letter of the religion of Jesus Christ. His words are: "In secret have I said nothing." "Let your light so shine before men." "He that doeth evil hateth the light." "He that doeth the truth, cometh to the light." Christianity is a religion of love and benevolence toward all men. Secret organizations are always selfish. The grip, the password, the darkened window, the guarded door are not Christ-like; and the Christian, especially the minister of Christ, is out of place amid such surroundings. Many of these orders boast of wisdom, of love and benevolence, but these good things are limited to their own members. Against this stand the injunction of the apostle: "As we have opportunity let us do good unto all men;" and the words of Jesus Christ: "Freely ye have received, freely give." "Go teach all nations." "Love thy neighbor as thyself." True, it is often boastingly said that secret, benevolent societies leave the church far behind in their deeds of charity. What has the church to learn from these societies? First. The church will learn to limit her deeds of love to her own members. Second. She will refuse membership to all except the able-bodied and those that have visible means of support. Third. She will require an initiation fee of all applicants for membership. Fourth. She will require of all, without regard to ability, a stated contribution, sufficient to provide for all future need. Fifth. Whenever any member fails to pay his annual or monthly fee, he shall forfeit all interest in or claims upon help from the church. Would such a church be worthy of the name of Christ? Would the world call this benevolence or charity?

II. Organized secrecy invites suspicion. If all the workings and purposes of secret orders are good, why should not the light be excluded? Good men and good purposes do not need pledges of secrecy. Organized secrecy is a menace to society. It naturally leads to ends and means and invites persons that need concealment. The history of secrecy is stained with blood, and is characterized by falsehood. Secrecy trains men to lie. These things were never more evident than to-day. They are the inevitable results of hidden methods. Scarcely a year passes that does not record maiming, beating and killing by those whose plans are laid and executed in darkness. Good men in these orders may regret these things, but they cannot prevent them.

III. Secrecy in organization leads to the loss of time, liberty and manhood. The pledge of secrecy subjects the member to the control of others, and takes from him freedom of action. This humiliation is well represented by the "cable-tow" around the neck and the sword's point at the breast. The natural and necessary result of this is the assumption, by the officers, of titles that surpass the prerogative of any human being. The titles of tyrants and oppressors are gathered from the darkest corners of the earth and from the history of the past, and the Supreme Being is robbed of his names and attributes, to find titles for the officers of these orders. The display of gaudy apparel is an imitation of the attire of oriental despots, that scorned and trampled under foot the rights of the common people. Who does not see that all this is at variance with liberty and republicanism? Whoever calls any man grand master makes himself a grand slave. No military discipline or tyrannical government surpasses the despotism of these orders. They not only lord it over their own members but undertake to dispute, on terms of death, the conduct of those outside of their organization. Just in proportion to their secrecy, so is their despotism. Is not this the explanation of the strange fact, that the inner organizations of secrecy out-Herod Herod in their obligations and titles? The Mystic Shriners, among the Masons, go to the Turkish government for their forms and titles. The new organization formed at Cincinnati last May, composed of Odd-fellows, patterned after the Russian government. Let every one that enters a secret lodge know that he parts with liberty, puts his neck under the yoke, fetters his feet, locks his lips and puts his hands between the hands of others. He virtually says I am your "beast," drive me. I am your slave, command me. I yield my own will and judgment to others.

The multiplication of independent and dependent secret orders gives the last hope of their overthrow. They are beginning to devour one another. The mother is eating up her own offspring. The evil nature and results of organized secrecy cannot much longer escape public reprobation.

Resolved, 1. That we continue to bear testimony by word and deed against this great and growing evil; that we co-operate in every practical way with all the true friends of Christian love, liberty and equality; that we continue to expose the evils of each particular organization as it appears.

2 In reference to the communication from the National Christian Association, referred to us, we recommend that, as in previous reports, we repeat our commendation of the work of this association and urge our congregations to contribute to the furtherance of their work.

Respectfully submitted,
J. S. THOMPSON,
J. CALVIN SMITH,
J. B. BAIRD,
WM. MCCULLOUGH, } Com.

LYNCHINGS.

The Chicago Tribune has for years compiled all cases of lynchings in the United States and recorded the details of every case, such as the date, locality, name of person, and nature of the alleged offense. The record shows that the total number of lynchings in the United States since 1885 is 1,622. During this period 262 persons have been lynched in the Northern and 1,360 in the Southern States. Of the 1,360 persons lynched in the South 952 have been Negroes. During this time thirty Negroes have been lynched in the North. These fearful records show that The Northwestern has not "slandered the South" when it has asked white people in both North and South to abate these revolting evidences of savage brutality, and for the sake alike of black and white men. The latest lynching is that of an accused Negro who was literally skinned alive, the victim dying in agony while alleged American citizens gloated over their victim's agony. Granting that the Negro deserved his death, it yet remains that white men should have been spared the spectacle of cruelty that would awaken the pity of a Sioux Indian. The Tribune says that white men are granted the right of trial by jury and are seldom lynched in the South, while Negroes are seldom tried by jury and are often lynched in that part of the Union. Miss Ida Wells is in England telling about the social wrongs of her race, and influential newspapers there are commenting upon tales of Southern injustice. Governor Stone, of Mississippi, has written to an English paper calling in question Miss Wells' accounts. The Tribune offers to prove the correctness of its figures if the governor will but challenge them. As that paper says, "If these outrages do not cease, and the murderous mob is not superseded by penalties pronounced by law, before long the South will find itself ostracized by capital and its growth seriously retarded." We are sure that even greater penalties will follow.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

PHILADELPHIA "SITS DOWN ON" FOUL LITERATURE.

Probably for the first time in the history of the Quaker City its news-stands have been entirely swept clean of those noisome and notorious crime-inciting sheets, the "police papers," one of them published in Boston, and the other two in the city of New York.

This welcome riddance was brought about as the result of a jury trial and judicial decision upon a test case, in which Mr. Josiah W. Leeds, of this city, appeared as complainant.

Three times he appeared before the Grand Jury, and eight times (extending throughout a whole year) the case was set for trial and as often postponed for various reasons or upon various pretexts, until finally, patience ceasing to be a virtue, he made specific appeal to the Quarter Sessions Court to have the trial day made mandatory. This was granted. The news-vender was convicted, and sentenced to pay a fine of twenty-five dollars and costs, Judge Bregy saying that he only imposed so light a sentence for so grave an offense because this was a first conviction, and the violation of the law had been universal. He made this notable point in the course of his remarks upon imposing sentence, that the law of 1887 was a "new one, in the sense that the Legislature had recently attached the penalty to that which has always been a crime." Being an offense against common decency, it seems a pertinent question to ask why any city in the whole land should tolerate for a single day these vile and brutalizing sheets admittedly so provocative of crime.

It is gratifying to know that Superintendent Linden, immediately after the decision, read the judge's charge and the text of the law to the lieutenants, and instructed them to notify the patrolmen that the "police papers" could no longer be exposed and sold.

For an entire year, without the help of a lawyer, other than the District Attorney, or the backing of an organization, and entirely at his own charges, Mr. Leeds has pressed the matter to an issue. In so doing he has conferred a great benefit upon the city of Philadelphia, and proved how much good can be accomplished by the persistent, conscientious energy of a single individual in a righteous cause. This is a most encouraging lesson, which should not be lost sight of.

The secular press has paid little attention to this most important decision, and it has not been telegraphed, so that from the country at large has been withheld the information that these vile "police papers" have been condemned. It is earnestly to be hoped that this decision, though only that of a local court, may aid the postal authorities in the efforts made by them to exclude from the mails as "indecent" these most objectionable publications. Should this be the case, the beneficial results of one man's efforts will extend to the whole country.—Episcopal Recorder.

XT., XTIAN., AND XMAS.

Of all abbreviations, those placed at the head of this note seem to us the most objectionable. If phonetic spelling were adopted, or phonography used, or a system of shorthand applied to all other words, or reduction for private memoranda, no serious fault could be found. But since these words represent the Saviour of the world, it seems to us they should be written and printed in full wherever they are intended to be seen by any other eye than that of the writer. We do not profess excessive reverence, but never have used abbreviations of any of the names of God or of Christ so far as can now be recalled, even in private memoranda. These names deserve a pause whenever uttered or written. If not profaneness such abbreviations are dangerously near the line which separates reverent recognition from flippant indifference.—Christian Neighbor.

THE LODGE AND THE CHURCH.

We are trying to account for the estrangement of laboring men from the church. Here is another reason for indifference and opposition: Fraternal organizations multiply. Their name is legion. Most of them have absorbed the humanitarian spirit of Christianity. In cases of sickness, accident or death, the "brothers" are on hand to do Good Samaritan work. All conventionality and stiffness vanish behind the portals of the lodge. A free, easy, social time is had. The lodge takes precedence of the church. In many cases it becomes a substitute. It has the right of way. "My lodge is good enough religion for me," said a man the other day, not remembering that the spirit of brotherhood as practiced in the lodge-room could have no existence if it were not for Christianity. It is sometimes the case that even the church members devote themselves to the lodge and merely attend their church. The lodge is the principal thing. If, after serving the lodge, they have a little time to give to the church duties, well and good. Said a gentleman recently: "I went into the city of N——, and the first thing I did was to present my church letter. After being formally received by the pastor I passed down the aisle to my seat. I noticed in one of the pews a fine-looking man. Many members of the church came to me at the close of the service and welcomed me, but this gentleman passed out without so much as noticing me. The next week I entered the —— lodge. The day after a gentleman came running across through the mud to meet me. Introducing himself he said, 'I saw you at the lodge last night; I want to welcome you.' It was the same man whom I had noticed in the church, of which he was a prominent member. He never thought of giving me a welcome as a member of the church, but as a member of the lodge he was prompt and profuse in his recognition." The anti-church influence exerted by the lodge is shared to even a larger extent by the federations and unions and knights of this and knights of that among the laboring men. To a perfectly alarming extent it is the fraternal organization against the church of Christ.—Epworth Herald.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM IN SWITZERLAND.

It has given them home rule in every community.

It has made it easy for the people at any time to alter their cantonal and federal constitutions.

It has wiped out all forms of monarchy and plutocracy.

It has enabled them to simplify their government and hold their officials as servants.

It has made their laws so plain and practical that a common citizen may be judge in the highest court.

It has abolished monopolies, improved and reduced taxation.

It has given a safe and economical administration by avoiding useless and large assessments and debts.

It has made her citizens prosperous and happy at home as they are not seeking homes in other lands as are the people of other nations.

It has calmed disturbing factional and political elements.

It has purified the ballot and press.

It has disarmed the boodle politician and enthroned the people to their natural rights.

It has made the best and purest republic on earth.

It has made two-thirds of her heads of families land-holders.

It has given her government control of all monopolies.—Anonymous.

THE SITUATION IN EUROPE.

A vast European war is to-day in actual progress —a war of endurance. Every nerve is tense with the strain, every back is bowed with the burden. Not a cannon belches forth its shot and shell, and no rattle of musketry is heard; but the war is going on none the less—a desperate, destructive, cruel war, that causes as sickening torture and as certain death as bayonet and saber could possibly cause. It is as if two pugilists, ceasing for the time being to strike blows, had locked themselves in a desperate embrace and were exerting every muscle and nerve to crush each other to the ground. The war budgets have increased at the rate of twenty-three per cent, for the last six years, and this year has witnessed a deficit in every budget in Europe. "In vain are more and more taxes levied upon the thickening populations struggling desperately for the means of subsistence," says the leading article in The Contemporary Review for June.

"State after State finds itself compelled in time of profound peace to discount the revenue of the future by raising loans which but temporarily postpone the evil day. To the people thus stumbling headlong down to destruction—and stumbling all the more recklessly because their movements are governed by no settled plan or purpose—it is necessary to address the one imperative 'Halt!' It is the word of the moment, the order of the day for the close of the century —'Halt!'"

"Profound peace," indeed! The condition in Europe is one of war, not of peace; only it is a war waged with new weapons, and the victims are not spangled soldiery marching to the fife and drum and spurred on by dreams of glory, but they are the toiling millions, crushed and dwarfed beneath the industrial burdens placed upon them. Over 130,000 more men are under arms in Europe this year than last; and in one nation—Italy—the burden has grown so great that an income-tax of twenty per cent is necessary in some parts, and even so the nation is toppling on the verge of bankruptcy. Every nation is facing the same precipice, and it is a silent but intense struggle between them to topple each other over into the abyss. The amazing part of it is that every sovereign in Europe is desirous of peace and for a termination to the struggle. M. de Blowitz, European correspondent for The London Times, writing in McClure's Magazine, quotes these sovereigns as follows:

"The Pope has said: 'Europe must first be allowed to breathe at its ease.'

"The Czar of Russia has said: 'My chief mission here below is the maintenance of peace.'

"The Emperor Francis Joseph has said: 'The hand of God has always impelled me toward peace.'

"The King of Italy said only the other day: 'Peace is for Italy an absolute necessity.'

"The King of Denmark has said: 'I hope to live long enough to see Europe diminish its war expenses in time of peace.'

"Prince Bismarck said to me, and the German Emperor has since made the same remark: 'After such a war as ours, after such a victory as ours, no man thinks of staking his winnings on a single card. The night before a battle, who knows who will be the victor?'"

It seems as though the great nations of Europe are being driven on and on by some grim Fate which they cannot resist. A great continental tragedy is being enacted, and a world watches shudderingly for the climax.—The N. Y. Voice.

THE PROPAGATION OF ANARCHY.

It seems that ex-President Harrison's plan for turning our schools and colleges into training camps for soldiers will surely tend to develop in this country a cumbrous, expensive and worse than useless military system, such as the wicked and despited governments of Europe have fastened upon the oppressed people.

Such a military system may be, and doubtless is, a necessary part of a government founded in injustice for the purpose of maintaining a privileged aristocracy at the expense of the common people; and, by the way, let us ask ex-President Harrison if such is not the real motive for the plan which he and the G. A. R. are trying to fasten upon this country?

But while we are proposing to follow the corrupt and oppressive policy of the decaying despotisms of Europe, let us never forget that while militarism is an inevitable accompaniment of such governments, there are other bitter fruits borne by this prolific tree of evil, such as discontent and disaffection among the people, revolution and anarchy.

Does ex-President Harrison's "protective" policy include the anarchy-producing industry? Would he by revision of our emigration laws exclude the ready-made foreign article, and by corrupting our schools with militarism so "diversify" their product that we would be enabled to produce our own anarchists for the "home market?"—A. Harvey, in Messenger of Peace.

HOME AT DARK.

Too much discipline possibly there was in the old Puritan upbringing of children; too little of it there certainly is in many modern households. Whoever has occasion to be out of doors in the evening, in most residence quarters of our towns, is made painfully aware that too many children are outside their homes when they ought to be in their beds. Often these children are girls just at the entrance of womanhood; more often boys from twelve to fifteen years. An expert has expressed the opinion that if the police had power to keep the children off the streets after dark it would diminish vice and crime by one-half. Might not our pastors add to their usefulness by specifically and pointedly admonishing parents on this subject, if they are not now doing it? In some towns the evil is a large one.—Selected.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A Japanese house —A Portland Parkhurst.—Grand Masonic celebration at Charlestown on Sunday —The Keeley League —Miss Willard's reception.—The Iron Hall. —"Sparring"—An unjust decision.—A novel idea.

Salem is a Mecca for everybody who loves to delve in the dusky past and call back to a ghostly life the men and women who played their part in the dark tragedy which makes Witches' Hill one of the most painfully interesting landmarks in this quaintest of seaside towns—the first settlement made after Plymouth. I do not know what they would have said, these good people who interpreted so literally the second commandment, to Mr. Matsuki's Japanese house, with its dragons, imitation of temple-doors, and other curios from a land they knew no more about than we do of Mars. I think they would have had grave doubts about permitting anything so heathenish in their midst. But it is very pretty; and with its light airy piazza, its graceful front staircase patterned after one in the Emperor's palace, and rooms panelled in Japanese wood with cypress finish, is suggestive enough of the land towards the sunrising to suit even Sir Edwin Arnold. This is to be the future home of a fair Salem maiden who, it is to be hoped, will not live to regret her choice, as have so many of her sisters who have married pauper noblemen of Europe. According to McAllister, Boston girls are "good students, but poor sweethearts," which may account for the facts that these titled paupers are, as a rule, rather shy of Hub society. In fact, according to him, New England in general, and Boston in particular, has no "society" worth considering, and even the few who have large fortunes do not know how to spend their money. Probably not, according to his ideas. New England people have smiled quietly over the criticism, considering "from whence it comes." It would be a difficult thing for even Ward McAllister to add another row of bells to the foolscap with which public opinion has already crowned him.

And now it is a Portland minister who is stirring up the people of that city to take a more radical stand for better enforcement of the liquor law. This is Rev. Matthew S. Hughes, of the Chestnut Street Methodist Episcopal church. About a year ago, a special effort was made to collect evidence against the rumsellers of that city. Two bushel-baskets full of liquor were obtained by the detectives, each bottle having been bought in a Portland saloon; yet, with all this mass of evidence before them, but one indictment was found! Lodge officials on one side, and Masonic liquor-sellers on the other, have quite as much to do as the Republican party in reducing Portland to its present low status as a rum-ridden city.

The fact that St. John's Day happened this year to fall on Sunday, and also the anniversary of the Masonic dedication of the Warren Monument at Bunker Hill, in 1794, gave the Charlestown Masons that grand opportunity, which the lodge never misses, of showing forth their religion and patriotism by attending church in a body in all the glory of full regalia. The special service was held in Winthrop Congregational church, the sermon being preached by the pastor, Rev. Chas. R. Brown. Some of the statements would be a little hard to verify, as, for instance, that all our Presidents but one have been members of the Masonic lodge. And it must have struck rather oddly on the ears of some of the members of the fraternity who listened to him, with the memory of the last Masonic banquet they had attended fresh in their minds, wine and cigars ad libitum, to learn that it was John the Baptist's life of self-denial that made him a typical Mason!

The Keeley State League has just held an enthusiastic convention, electing a State organizer, and passing resolutions urging the adoption of the Keeley cure in the State Dipsomaniac Hospital at Foxboro. The National League claims to have a membership already of 30,000, generally officered by "Keeley graduates," and may even become a political factor ere long, although they propose at present only an educational campaign. The opening of Keeley institutes all over the country, provided the saloons could be permanently closed at the same time, would doubtless be a good thing, but they become only a ridiculous farce under any other system than that of strict prohibition.

The reception and breakfast given to Miss Willard at the Hotel Vendome was a very brilliant affair, at which every New England State was represented. The heat was most intense, but a large throng of noted and un-noted people were presented to "the uncrowned queen of America," who certainly had every reason to feel gratified at the warmth of the greeting accorded her as she stepped on her native shores.

The Iron Hall members of Massachusetts are in further trouble. Fifty-four branches, which is more than one-third of the whole, have been notified that there is a shortage in their accounts which, unless paid by June 30th, will cause them to forfeit all their money. One branch in Cambridge will lose $21,000 by this means.

A petition to abolish the so-called "sparring" matches, in reality prize fights, which disgrace the South End has been presented to the Board of Aldermen. It contains the signatures of her best people, as well as many of her most prominent ministers, and it is to be hoped will be heeded by the authorities. I suppose there is a wolf, in the shape of an untamed animal nature, that has never been eliminated from a large portion of Boston's population; but a great deal can be done to render him harmless by feeding him on the sparest possible diet.

One of the strangest of legal decisions and certainly the most unrighteous that has been lately made, is that recently rendered by the Supreme Judicial Court, that a landlord, when aware of any defect in the drain, however serious, is under no obligation to repair it, or to say anything about it to his tenant. In the case which called forth this decision a penurious landlord had covered up all knowledge of the defective drain from the family which rented his premises until their head sickened and died from typhoid fever, and his widow applied for damages. A law which can be so construed is a disgrace to our Christian civilization. The new Bicycle Act is another senseless piece of law-making, by which pedestrians are likely to pay the penalty in broken limbs; for, among other dangerous privileges, it allows wheelmen to ride on the sidewalk in our suburban districts. We shall soon begin to ask the question: "Have pedestrians no rights that bicyclers are bound to respect?"

The newest of Yankee notions comes from Middleboro, and it is a good one, with no patent right on it. The minister in that place has established a church nursery, where mothers can leave their babies while attending service. The only wonder to me is that no one has ever thought of it before. It looks now as if the non-church-going class would soon be left without excuse.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG

—A pleasant friend who sometimes comes to see us is most thoroughly and righteously disgusted with the outbreak of "new theology" recently established in Chicago by Thomas, Jones & Co., under the title of "The Church of the Isolated"—whatever that may mean. "Mongrels" he calls them. We have already given publicity to its aims and purposes—the ignoring of Christ and his atonement, and the building up of salvation on "the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." In the address of the leaders of this precious "new religion" membership is offered and secured for $1 00, and life-membership for $25. The composition of the directory is unique. The president is an expelled Methodist and high Mason; the secretary is a Unitarian; its vice-presidents include scientists, Jews, Universalists, etc., from many States—seven men and two women, one of whom is the well-known Susan B Anthony. Our friend judiciously considers them mongrels.

REFORM NEWS.

PHILOMATH COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

LABORS OF THE PACIFIC COAST AGENT.

ROSEBURG, Ore., June 25, 1894.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—It was my privilege to be present and participate in the closing exercises of the College of Philomath at Philomath, Ore., June 21st. The auditorium was tastefully decorated with floral and artistic work. The exercises consisted of instrumental and vocal music and addresses. All the students acquitted themselves nobly, showing that excellent work had been accomplished during the year.

There was one classical graduate this year, Prof. Lauren B. Baldwin. His address was excellent; theme, 'Energy." He is a young man for whom we predict a bright future. We wish to say that for thoroughness this school has no superior on this coast. May the college witness many entertainments of like character.

On the 22nd I started for Roseburg. On the train I fell in with a Presbyterian minister, who is a Mason and a member of the G. A. R. He made a sorry effort at defending the order, and finally when completely cornered, he said: "I want you to know that I have no interest at all in the lodges. I am not affiliating with them." He further said: "The titles of Freemasonry are such as no man can use without violating the command of Jesus, 'Call no man Master.'"

I spoke in the U. B. church in Roseburg on Saturday night, Sunday morning and evening. Rev. Walter Reynolds is the pastor. On Saturday night the theme was the "Evil of Intemperance," touching pretty strongly on the only remedy. On Sunday morning, after the young pastor had married his first couple, I spoke on the lodge question. Some of the leading lodgeites were out to hear. The truth aroused them. Quite a number of ladies were more than pleased. They were heard to remark: "Well, I always thought I was right on the subject; now I know I am."

I tried to show that it is not only wrong for Christians to unite with the lodge, but it is also wrong for them to keep silent on the subject. We must "reprove them."

I distributed tracts to each person in the house, and secured twelve yearly subscriptions to the Cynosure.

In the evening I spoke on "The Empire of the Pulpit, as it Relates to the Moral Issue of Prohibition." The address was seemingly appreciated. A brother said: "I wish my pastor could have heard that address; and I wish all ministers were as bold in condemning evil."

At the close of this service it was my privilege to baptize and receive into the church a very bright, intelligent young lady of the Umqua Indian nation. I trust that she may be faithful and true to her vow.

I was very hospitably entertained at Roseburg by Bro. and Sister Van Order. I shall ever remember them kindly.

I leave Roseburg in the morning for Myrtle Point, where I am to speak in the Southern Methodist church. The trip will be a hard one by stage over the Coast Range mountains.

PHILOMATH, June 21.—On the 17th I spoke to a fair audience in the United Brethren church at Oregon City; theme: "The relation of the lodge to the church." As we unearthed the wickedness of organized secrecy, some lodgemen and their families could not stand it, and fled. Their very action was a strong argument against them. They hate the light. They love darkness. They are in bondage to sin and in love with their bondage. Intelligent people see the evil in the very act of their withdrawing when the light is turned on them. The sermon was well received by most of the congregation.

Rev W. H. McLain is the pastor of the church, a young man of great moral worth, as true as steel to the magnet—a man willing to obey God, regardless of what men may think or say. He has a number of true and tried members—the Surfus, Boylans, Storys, Greens, Cosads, Hendersons, Parks, Kerns, Williams, Carsons, Chutes, Cadanaws, Wares, Martins, and many others who have no use for secret societies. I received five yearly subscriptions to the Cynosure

After having been pastor to this people for two years, it was a treat to get back and preach to them, once more, the sure way to life eternal through the blood of Christ and a life of self-denial.

In the evening I spoke in the Methodist Episcopal church at Canby, to a very nice congregation, who listened to the Word with marked attention. Christ was our theme. We took the position that any system of religion that does not acknowledge Christ as all should be spurned from us. We cannot, we dare not, rest our imperishable souls, with all their vast interests for time and eternity, on any short of the finished work of Jesus. We took the position that Christ was the author of the physical universe, and instead of being the "G. A. O. T. U." of Masonry, "He spake and the world was formed." He is everything in heaven; therefore, as it would break up the whole institution to take Christ out of heaven, so it should break up the institutions of Masonry and Odd-fellowship to exclude Christ.

That dear old veteran reformer, Father Mathes, was present and gave his hearty approval of our address. I have a standing invitation to return to Canby when opportunity affords and deliver a series of addresses and sermons; a thing I very much desire to do as soon as possible.

On Tuesday night, the 19th, I had an appointment at the little city of Turner; but a former pastor had an appointment at the same hour in the Baptist church; so we made it a union service, he speaking thirty minutes, and then turning the meeting over to me. I spoke thirty minutes or more. There was a very good attendance, and very good attention. Quite a number regretted the confliction, and said they would be pleased to have me return again some time.

I start to-morrow (D. V.) on an extended tour, which will last one month or six weeks. I ask the Cynosure readers to pray for me that success may attend my efforts. P. B. WILLIAMS.

FROM REV. WILLIAM FENTON.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 29, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I question if you can name another city in the United States, of the size of this, that reeks more with hypocrisy. The devil's schools of piety for pirates, cut-throats, blacklegs, gamblers and libertines are very popular, especially with the churches [see Mackey's "Mystic Tie," p. 217, where one of the devil's preachers says: "A Mason's lodge is a school of piety"]. And I am sure that Odd-fellows and other secret society lodges are no less such schools of piety, although they do not all have the death penalty for failing to deceive the people about their devil-worship; they have other means nearly as effectual for the accomplishment of their purpose. Whole companies from these schools of piety assemble in the churches to receive the eulogies and plaudits of pastors in the presence of all the people; after which they retire to their skulking-places to take in more recruits for their schools of piety. Thus the devil works in the lodges, sleeps in the churches, and the pastors rock the cradle.

Lately, the Odd-fellows, on a Sabbath morning, marched through the streets in regalia, and almost filled the Plymouth Congregational church, while the pastor of that church, who gloried in being one of them, Odd-fellow Heath, glorified and exalted Odd-fellowship, until it seemed as if the Holy Ghost would have lifted one upon his feet to denounce Heath as a "shamefully wicked idolater."

Not long ago, the First Baptist church nearly filled its house, on one Sabbath morning, with the Grand Army of the Republic, to be advertised, twaddled and boosted into notice by the pastor. The pastor preached a great patriotic sermon on the occasion, exalting and glorifying our country in the highest, but at the same time he expressed his regret that he could not be one of them, and actually deplored his unworthiness to belong to this un-American, unpatriotic, anti-Christian institution—an institution against which General Washington's Farewell Address warns the nation to be on its guard; an institution which dares not let its ritual come to the light because its deeds are evil, as fully appears in my letter of last week in the experience of pastor Rev. C. M. Larsen in dealing with the Grand Army men who had got into his church.

Is it not time to awake and take God's warning—"Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins?" Isaiah 58: 1. W. FENTON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER FROM REV. F. J. DAVIDSON.

BILOXI, Miss., June 20, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I left New Orleans, last Saturday, via the Shell-Beach Railroad. To my surprise and delight, there was no "Jim-Crow" law enforced on the train, both races riding together.

I reached Violet at 5:50 P. M., and was kindly received by Rev. Levi Leach, the pastor of Morning Star Baptist church. St. Bernard parish has always been, and is still, a stronghold of Republicanism; but the "bulldozer," midnight marauder and ballot-box stuffer have transferred the majority vote to the Democrats. Bro. Leach is a very cordial and earnest minister. He has never joined any secret lodge, and says: "I have always thought there was too much of the devil's grace in them for me." There is a slight sprinkling of secretism around Violet, but even the secretists seem to care but little for their lodges. I preached for Elder Leach. Quite a crowd was present and seemed to enjoy my sermon.

Here, at Biloxi, I have met Rev. Messrs. A. Alexander and Locker. The former has the leading congregation. Biloxi is a famous watering-place, and a great many Northern people have residences here, in which they winter. The place contains about 2,500 inhabitants. Rev. Mr. Alexander is a Knight of Pythias, but he has found the lodge an unsavory nettle. His church is a fine stone structure, 65x30 feet. His active membership is 100. Elder Locker is an ex-Mason, Odd-fellow and Knight of Pythias, but has found them unprofitable. He is principal of the public school, which has about 100 pupils enrolled.

This is a very quiet place, although the chief town between Mobile and New Orleans. Secrecy has a pretty strong foothold here. I have been invited to preach for Elder Alexander's people. I think some good can be done here.

I return to New Orleans this evening. I expect to attend the Gulf Coast Baptist Association at Pearlington, Miss., July 4th, and then go to Mobile, Ala.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 21.—I reached the city last night at 10 o'clock. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad, as compared with the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley routes, has superior accommodations for colored people. I expect to go to Grand Prairie, La, very soon. Yours in the work, FRANCIS J DAVIDSON.

GUARDING AGAINST ANARCHY.

CHICAGO, June 28, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The mode of warfare carried on by the anarchists places them outside the pale of civilization or sympathy.

On the part of society the anarchist problem is one of self-preservation. When the assassination of Carnot, and the recent other outrages in France, are duly considered, one may well ask whether these wretches are men, who ought to be treated as such, or man-eating tigers, to be promptly deprived of their lawless power and sacrificed to public justice for the safety of the common people. The governments of Europe are evidently fast becoming properly prejudiced against these bloodthirsty reptiles, and it may be that a general movement will be inaugurated to drive them from the continent of Europe. Naturally many of them will seek for refuge in the United States, to swell the ranks of those who are already here. This brings again into prominence the duty of our government to prevent, by every known means, the landing of these outlaws upon our shores. Their only aim, as exhibited in their acts, is to break down all existing forms of government, and to tear up the very foundations upon which society now rests. To exclude them from the countries whose peace they threaten to destroy is no encroachment on the liberty of the citizen. It is merely barring out the burglar.

DESERET.

CATHOLICS AND THE A. P. A.—WAR BREWING.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 22, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Cynosure is a welcome visitor to my table, and as I read the stirring articles of the various contributors, I feel as though I ought to take a more active part in this line of work. I am in full sympathy with the N. C. A. work, and in vain do I look for the reports of a worker from St. Louis. This is, indeed, a very needy field. The influence of secrecy is felt on every hand. "Legion" is the name of the orders that hold their regular conclaves in this city. They manage to bring some of their influence to bear on me almost daily. The Catholics have a very large following in this city, and, up to 1892, they held the majority of the political offices here; but in that year through the influence of the A. P. A., they were defeated and still remain in the minority.

Last Tuesday the financial secretary of one of the councils, A. P. A., was assaulted by two men, evidently Catholics, while returning from the meeting of the lodge and forcibly deprived of his books which contained the names and addresses of all the members of the order; and it is expected that several boycotts will soon be inaugurated against a number of their members. Trouble of a more serious nature is expected. A brotherhood man told me that the members were well-armed, and promised to make it interesting, should the guilty party be brought to light. The A. P. A. claims a very strong membership here.

W. A. BACKENSTOE.

CYNOSURE OFFER!

Any of the Books sold by the N. C. A. in this paper, ordered, with subscription to the Cynosure, at one-fourth off from list price, sent postpaid.

The New Volume of Pen and Pencil Series.

WELSH PICTURES Drawn with Pen and Pencil.

By D. Lewis Jones, Morris Jones, Edward Ffoulkes, H. Elvet Lewis, D. Tyssil Evans, D. Davies and O. M. Edwards. Edited by Richard Lovett, M. A. With many Illustrations. Imperial 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, boxed..... 3.20

"'Welsh pictures' is the work of ten Welshmen, among whom illustrating the beauties of Wales has been parcelled out according to the special familiarity of each. The result is a pleasing volume."—London Times.

THE EARTHLY FOOTPRINTS OF OUR RISEN LORD, Illumined.

A continuous narrative of the Four Gospels according to The Revised Version, with introduction by Rev. John Hall, D. D. Illustrated by 113 full-page half tone re-productions. Small 4to, cloth.....net 1.50
Gilt edge, with silk book mark, boxed.....net 2.00
Full morocco, flexible, gilt edges, round corners, boxed.....net 3.75

Pictures reflecting the best in sacred art from Raphael to the present day are scattered profusely through the book.

"To many the life of the Christ will be a new book in this form. Though beyond the introduction it contains no word except what is found in the four Gospels, yet when read continuously, without the breaks necessarily made by the different stories of the four evangelists, the narrative takes on new force and lifelikeness. The very fact that this is not our usual method of reading the Word will give it a new reality."—Golden Rule.

A GIFT OF LOVE, and Loving Greetings for 365 Days.

By Rose Porter. Long 18mo. Paper cloth..... 1.00
White cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.25
Decorated silk, silver top, in box..... 1.75

"'A Gift of Love' is the work of a loving heart. It contains a text of Scripture for every day of the year with the addition of an appropriate thought in poetry of prose all bearing on the theme of love. The work must have called for a great amount of patient toil. But it has not been spent in vain, for the volume will prove a blessing to many a soul. To use it day by day for a year thoughtfully and prayerfully, must result in a rich growth in love on the part of the user. The author is well known and esteemed for her previous works' sake."—The N. Y. Observer.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE SERIES.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer, containing CHRISTIAN LIVING, THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE, AND THE SHEPHERD PSALM. 3 vols. in box. 18mo, cloth..... 1.50
White vellum cloth, silver top, in box..... 1.75

D. L. Moody says: "Few books of recent years are better adapted to instruct and help Christians than those of this author. He is a man mighty in the scriptures, saturated with Bible facts and truths."

PRAYERS FROM THE POETS.

By Martha Harger. 16mo, two colored cloth, gilt top..... 1.00
Leatherette, boxed..... 1.50

"This volume is admirable. The Prayer are better suited to some of our moods than formal Litanies and are selected from excellent sources. The book will be a dear treasure to many hearts."—The Churchman.

KIN-DA-SHON'S WIFE.

An Alaskan Story. By Mrs. Eugene S. Willard, Home Missionary of the Presbyterian Board of America to Alaska. With illustrations. 8vo, cloth..... 1.50

"Being a close observer and in deep sympathy with the native population in their struggles towards a Christian Civilization, Mrs. Willard has gained a more intelligent knowledge of their character, of their needs and hindrances, than perhaps any other person."—Dr. Sheldon Jackson.

HEROES OF THE GOODWIN SANDS.

By Rev. Thomas Stanley Treanor. With many illustrations. 8vo, Cloth..... 1.50

"It is a book of most engrossing interest, and as stimulating as it is readable."—The Record.
"The deeds of daring are thrilling in the extreme. Suitable for the public library or for the home."—Times.

THE GREAT LONDON DAILIES.

By H. W. Massingham. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth..... 1.00

Very welcome to all who like to look behind the scenes and see how the great London dailies are worked.

New Editions.

The Prayer Meeting and Its Improvement.

By Rev. LEWIS O. THOMPSON. Eighth edition, cloth, $1.25.

"Most heartily do we wish this work a wide circulation, both among pastors and people, and we hope it may do much toward the lifting of the prayer-meeting into that higher place which it ought to hold among the grand instrumentalities in the kingdom of the Master."—Congregationalist.

"We do not remember to have met with a work so suggestive, and we heartily commend it to both pastors and private members."—Baptist Weekly.

The Crisis of Missions. By Rev. ARTHUR T. PIERSON, D. D. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 35c.

"We do not hesitate to say that this book is the most purposeful, earnest, and intelligent review of the mission work and field which has ever been given to the church."—Christian Statesman.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.

By HANNAH WHITALL SMITH. One hundredth thousand. Issued in fourteen styles, from 50c. to $2.50. Send for circular.

"To commend this work would seem almost superfluous; and yet to young Christians who may not know it, we cannot refrain from saying, Buy this book, and keep it with your Bible for constant study, until you have thoroughly mastered, in your own experience, the 'secret' of which it tells. It will transform the dark days of your life, as it has transformed those of thousands before you, into days of heavenly light."—New York Evangelist.

The Topical Text Book. Fourth edition.

16 mo., cloth, 60c.

This little volume is a worker's most useful tool. It collates all Scripture passages under their topical headings, and for this reason proves far more helpful in studying a subject than the best concordance.

"I find one of the very best ways to study the Scripture is to study topically."—D. L. Moody.

Stalker's Life of Christ. Twelfth edition.

Stalker's Life of St. Paul. Fourth edition.

12 mo., cloth, each, 60c.

These works by Professor James Stalker, M. A., are unique in their compact putting of these lives into such condensed form without injurious brevity. They are being taken up as text books by Biblical classes in all parts of the country, thus proving their practical value.

Grace and Truth under Twelve Different Aspects. By W. P. MACKAY, M. A. Paper, 35c.; cloth, 75c. Two hundred and fiftieth thousand.

This remarkable sale can only be attributed to the very practical character of this work as a guide to the inquirer and a work of helpful instruction for the immature Christian. It is of this volume Mr. D. L. Moody said: "I know of no work in print better adapted to place in the hands of the inquirer."

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

By S. R. BRIGGS. Sixtieth thousand. 8 vo, cloth. $1.00; flexible, 75c.

Edition after edition of this work has been called for until it would seem the demand must be supplied. The sales however, increase rather than otherwise.

Feathers for Arrows. By Rev. C. H. SPURGEON. 16 mo., cloth, $1.00.

Few preachers have made such effective use of pointed illustrations as the well known pastor of the great Metropolitan Tabernacle. Here he has given us a large cluster of his best with liberty to enjoy and employ.

Revell's Record for Church Treasurers.

Size No. 1, $1.50; Size No. 2, $2.00.

Popular because practical—valuable because time saving—the only record for weekly envelope system that reduces the treasurer's work to the minimum.

For sale by the

National Christian Association;

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

LODGE NOTES.

(From secret society papers.)

Col. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, who has recently filled so much space in the public attention throughout the country, is a Mason, but was suspended for non payment of his dues to his lodge in Kentucky in August, 1886. His last action was to refuse to contribute to the beneficent charities of that State the insignificant sum required by his lodge. As suspension still leaves him entitled to the general appellation of Mason or supposed connection with organized Masonry, we think it a duty that the lodge holding jurisdiction should take cognizance of his legally established offense against decency and morality.—Square and Compass.

We hold that speculative Freemasonry never demanded the physical perfection that the operative, or Mason guilds, did. No such perfection is demanded anywhere on earth to day but by American Freemasonry, and only by a portion of these jurisdictions. Therefore there is no landmark standing to confront the claims we approve.—Geo. C. Connor, in Masonic Chronicle.

The wise men of the craft have settled the question of Masonic jurisdiction thus: "A grand lodge duly organized in a State or other autonomous territory is rightfully possessed of absolute Masonic sovereignty therein." It is thus set forth by the great Masonic congress that two bodies of equal power and authority cannot exist within the same boundaries.

Perhaps you didn't know that George Washington's death occurred during the last hour of the day, the last day of the week, the last week of the month, the last month of the year, the last year of the century.—Michigan Masonic Year Book. [Nobody knows it, for it isn't true.—ED. CYNOSURE]

The grand total of Odd fellowship stands in round numbers—10,500 Subordinate Lodges, 825,000 members; 2,700 Encampments, 150,000 patriarchs; 3,000 Rebekah Lodges, 200,000 members.

England has 80,000 Masons to 35,000,000 population. The United States has 700,000 Masons to 66,000,000 population.

The Only Medicine.

My mother has been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and finds it very beneficial. She thinks it to be the only medicine. MERRILL BELT, Bellbrook, Ohio.

One Fare Excursions South Via C. & E. I. R. R.

Round trip tickets will be sold from all stations on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R. on July 5th, August 7th. Sept, 4th, Oct. 2nd, Nov. 6th and Dec. 4th, 1894, at one fare, to points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. Tickets good to return for twenty days from date of sale. Stopover allowed on going or returning journey. For further particulars apply to any C. & E. I. R. R. agent or Chas. W. Humphrey, Northern passenger agent, 170 E. Third street, St. Paul. Chicago City Ticket Office, 230 Clark street, or to Chas. L. Stone, G. P. & T. A., Chicago, Ill.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S

—]-oo-[—

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.

Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THE SCHOOL BOY

—is often a sufferer from headache. The seat of sick headache is not in the brain, for if you regulate the stomach and bowels you'll cure it. Too much brain-work and brain-tire brings on a rush of blood to the head with headache, dizziness or "nose bleed."

MISS WOLFE.

Miss BERTHA WOLFE, of Dayton, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "I suffered from loss of appetite, constipation, neuralgia, and great weakness, and had terrible attacks of sick headache very frequently; also nose bleed. My health was so poor that I was not able to go to school for two years. I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and in a short time I was strong and well. Many friends are taking your medicines, seeing what they have done for me."

$5 TO $20 per day at home. The work is easy, pleasant and adapted to both young and old of either sex. Any one can do the work. GEO. STINSON & CO., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house. THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention the Cynosure when writing.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST

A Secret Empire;

Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.

By Rev. Richard Horton.

Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.

Price, 60 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address Box 277. S. C. KIMBALL, Newmarket, N. H.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ransseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY M. HUGUNIN - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1894.

LIMPING LOGIC.

We always dislike to dissent from our excellent contemporary, the Union Signal, but the reply to a querist in a late number is surely misleading: "Query—Can a temperance man raise hops or a W. C. T. U. woman pick them, without breaking their pledges; as hops are so extensively used in making beer?" The Union Signal's answer is: "If hops were only used for beer, we should answer, most emphatically, No. But there are other uses. They are used in the manufacture of yeast; they are used for medicinal purposes, and very largely in the process of dyeing cloth. If the temperance men or the W. C. T. U. women know that the hops they are selling or picking are to be sent to a brewery, then they are violating the spirit, if not the letter, of their pledge; but if they are raised and picked for the general market, we cannot see how they are breaking their pledges any more than by husking corn or picking grapes. Corn is largely made into whisky, and grapes into wine, but each has its beneficent function, and if we are to examine thus microscopically all the good things of life, there will be little room for anything else....Be not righteous overmuch."

The mistake of the good editress is in confounding responsibility for the possible with the probable use of the article that is made and sold. Let us see what else such logic would prove: Query—Is it right to make alcohol and sell it in the general market? Answer—If it is known that the alcohol so made will be used to produce drunkenness, No; but since alcohol is largely used in the arts, and may be applied to beneficent purposes; and since no one can absolutely know just what will become of the article that he puts on sale, therefore it is right to make and sell it in the general market. For otherwise it would be wrong to raise and sell corn.

But such logic would prove prohibition to be wrong, and the W. C. T. U. uncalled for. No one it responsible for the possible use of what he may make or sell, but he is responsible for the probable use of what he sells. Axes and knives may be used to commit murder, but it is not probable that they will be so used. Nearly all are used for good purposes. Corn may possibly be made into whisky, but the great bulk of it is used for the food of men and beasts. Its probable use is beneficent. Not so with alcohol. The vast proportion of what is made and sold is used for the injury of mankind. All men who make and sell it do so regardless of the consequences to others. So, too, with the hops. About ninety-eight per cent of all the hops that go into the general market are used in the manufacture of whisky and beer. Brewers and distillers control the price. The probable use of every bale of hops that is thus sold is that it will be made into intoxicating drinks. The man who raises and sells them is responsible for this probable use. We ask to amend the Union Signal's conclusions, by saying that every man ought to have good reason to believe that every article that he makes or sells will be used to promote human well-being. *

ANARCHISM.

The recent assassination of President Carnot, by an anarchist, perhaps insane, since all anarchism is a species of madness, shows how widespread and how terrible is this plague-spot on the body politic of nearly all the great nations of the world. In our country it manifests itself in lynchings, in riots, and, in a milder way, in Coxeyism. The real danger all over the civilized world is in the disregard of law. The responsibility for this danger in our own country is not so much from the men of the Herr Most stamp, or from the rank and file of the rioters, as from those leaders of public opinion who proclaim and countenance anarchistic principles.

The governor of South Carolina is reported to have said recently: "I would head a mob that should lynch any man, white or black, that would commit a crime against female virtue." Terrible as are such crimes, the man who countenances lynch-law for their suppression virtually repudiates all law; and when a governor who has sworn to execute the laws of his country makes such a declaration, he not only tramples on his official oath, but virtually places himself in the ranks of the anarchists. Many of our leading men, including some ministers and college professors, in their zeal to promote certain reforms, give their approval to methods as unwarrantable and anarchistic in their tendency as the declaration of the South Carolina governor.

What we need from the pulpit and the press is a steadfast reiteration of the Pauline doctrine: "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers;" not always in the sense of approval or in active support, but always in the sense of passive obedience and submission. No modern government, however grievous, can be more tyrannical than that of Nero, or less worthy of active support, yet resistance to government is nowhere countenanced under the Gospel system, except by purely moral influences. *

PROF. GARNER AND AFRICAN MISSIONS.

The testimony of Prof. Garner in reference to African missions must have been instigated by profound ignorance or hatred towards those who had failed to appreciate the value of his mission to the apes and chimpanzees. We would give him the benefit of the least culpable motive. In saying that "the Christian religion has had a bad effect on the African," he contradicts the uniform testimony of all those who have had the amplest opportunities for investigation, and have been actuated by the highest regard both for the Africans and for the people who are represented by the missionaries. The testimonies of Moffatt, Livingstone, Stanley, Bishop Wm. Taylor, of Mackay of Uganda, and a host of others, will far outweigh these one-sided statements.

He says: The Christian religion "divides families." Properly speaking, there is no such thing as family life in pagan Africa. It is scarcely possible where polygamy and slavery prevail. But this is certain—that if you find any happy families in Africa, it is where the benign and saving power of the Gospel has been manifested. Of the pagan Africans, he says: "They have a code of ethics similar to ours, only it is practiced more generally, and infractions are punished more surely and severely. The truth is, that though the moral law is written on the heart of every African, just as truly as in the hearts of all other men, yet from the influence of ages of heathenism, its impress is fainter, and its practical influence much weaker than in any Christian land. It is for this reason that African converts are often weak and need careful training. But when we find that great numbers have (in Uganda and Madagascar) suffered martyrdom—choosing to be cut to pieces, or burned alive, rather than renounce their faith in Christ—we should be very slow to say, as does the professor, that "the people have no religious convictions."

Again, he says: "Such a thing as murder is not heard of among the people visited. They cannot understand how such crimes are committed in this country." But we can understand how a brief and superficial examination of the facts should have left a false impression on Prof. Garner's mind. Even Mr. Stanley, with his far wider observation, was often deceived. He thought Mtesa, King of Uganda, to be a wise and excellent prince. He hoped that he had become a Christian. Subsequent events proved him a dreadful tyrant, addicted to every form of cruelty and vice.

Let us ask what is the testimony of A. M. Mackey, who, after twelve years of most laborious and successful missionary work, laid down his life in Central Africa, and we shall find how much value is placed on human life among the most advanced of the pagan Africans. He says that a sorcerer came to King Mtesa and said that to hasten his recovery it was necessary to slaughter people on several hills around the capital. "For days the dozen or more executioners, each with his gang of twenty or thirty men, have been lying in wait for the people on the roads. Bakopi (or common people) are caught, while sons of petty chiefs can generally secure their release, by the gift of a goat or a cow. . . . Several days are said to elapse before the slaughter takes place. Some will have their throats cut, while others will be tortured to death—their eyes dug out, their noses and ears cut off, the sinews of their arms and thighs cut out and roasted before their eyes; and, finally, the unhappy victims are burned alive. Others are tied hand and foot, dry reeds are heaped on them, and then ignited." And this is done for no crime whatever. Such is the value of human life in Uganda, Dahomey and other parts of pagan Africa. Paul's description of heathenism, in Romans 1: 29–32, is far more accurate than Prof. Garner's. He says they are "full of envy, murder," etc.

But the professor says he advised the Africans to beware of the missionaries, but to treat kindly the white men who come to them and ask to deal with them commercially." Never was worse advice. We have no ill-will to the traders, but know them, and that, as a rule, they are a curse to Africa. Their most important articles of traffic are rum and gin, and these are sold without restriction. The influence is dreadful. European and American traders take African women as concubines, and leave behind many half-caste children, to be brought up in heathenism. Almost everywhere the trader pulls down what the missionary is seeking to build up. We trust no one will be deceived by Prof. Garner's false testimony. *

ABOUT THE "ELKS."

The Grand Lodge of "Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks" (B. P. O. E.), a secret society, whose doings and quarrels have recently filled a large space in the secular press (without rebuke), met in special session at Jamestown, N. Y., June 19, remaining there until a split in the order occurred and the seceders went off to Atlantic City, to hold a similar session on their own account.

We are indebted to a thoughtful friend in the vicinity of Jamestown for the printed report of a sermon delivered to the local lodge of Elks, on the previous Sunday, by "Rev." L. H. Squires, pastor of the Independent Congregational church of Jamestown—himself an Elk. "The reverend doctor," writes our correspondent, "is one of the 'new theology,' 'new religion' men." Yes, his sermon is full of the Thomas-Jones "Church of the Isolated" doctrines recently exposed in the Cynosure. After reading Squires' sermon we have no hesitation in saying that he belongs to the new "mongrel" denomination referred to. Our correspondent adds: "Also send clipping from the Maysville Sentinel, whose editor, by the way, is an Odd-fellow, and I do not know but a member of other secret societies: 'Let a number of Chautauqua's farmers go to Jamestown and get intoxicated as did so many of the Elks, this week, and they would be arrested and fined $5 or $10 without warning, but the B. P. O. E.s—best people on earth—are permitted to do as they please and nothing is said.' It seems that a number of the 'best men' indulged freely in intoxicants on different occasions, and appeared as other drinking men, or drunkards, do; but of course the Jamestown papers say nothing about that." The allusion to "best men" is the facetious rendering of the initial letters in the name of the order—B. P. O. E.—"Best People On Earth;" but they will get drunk!

Seriously, under such preaching as they heard from Squires, we see no reason why they should not get drunk or indulge in any other social vice without fear of reproach or shame. Here is a specimen of his Satanic sermon: "If we must go to heaven either way, we had rather go by church social dyspepsia than by the old-time hell-fire insanity!"

That is the "new theology." How does the reader like it?

A SATANIC SERMON.

The Grand Lodge of Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks" (B. P. O. E), a secret society whose doings and quarrels have recently filled a large space in the secular press, met in special session at Jamestown, N. Y., a few days ago, and remained there until a split in the order occurred and the seceders went off to Atlantic City to hold a similar session on their own account.

We are indebted to a kind friend in the vicinity of Jamestown for a printed report of a sermon delivered to the local lodge of Elks, on the previous Sunday, by Rev. L. H. Squires, pastor of the Independent Congregational church of Jamestown. We do not intend to inflict the whole of this un-Christian discourse upon the readers of the Cynosure, but to cull some choice specimens of it, in order to show the kind of preaching that the Elks admire. We may remark, in passing, that the Elks facetiously explain the initials (B. P. O. E.) of their order thus: "Best People on Earth," and it is understood that no people on earth have a better opinion of themselves. Mr. Squires is one of them.

The reporter of the Jamestown Journal (June 19) writes: "The pastor took for his subject the Age of Brotherhood and chose as his text the words found in Matthew third chapter and second verse: 'The kingdom of heaven is at hand.'"

Now for the extracts: He has been reviewing the ages before the Great Reformation. Then he says:

"Unquestionably the moral character of the age following the reformation was better than that of the dark ages preceding. Righteousness was the watchword, but it was a cold, hard, puritanical righteousness, sadly wanting in certain essentials of the heavenly kingdom.... These were the people who assisted the devil by burning heretics here, whipped their cider barrels for working on Sunday, fined men for kissing their wives too often, and put people who did not go to church into the ducking-pond. It wouldn't have been a very good time for Elks in those days. But another change is coming. We have passed recently through the era of sectarian controversies. Theological strife has spent its fury and the clouds of conflict are passing away. Recently I attended a great religious convention where the Jew, the Hindoo, the American and the Christian—Unitarian, Universalist, Congregationalist, Presbyterian, Ethical Culturist, Independent, etc., all mingled together for days in perfect harmony and mutual helpfulness; and through it all I wore the badge of an Elk without being shot by anything worse than the soft glance of an eye..... Men are beginning to learn that this life is something to be lived, and this world the place to live it in. That they had better give a little more attention to humanity, and that God can take care of himself.. Human brotherhood is the central fact of all that is most desirable in earth or heaven. As hell cools off men grow more kind. Once as the minister stood in his pulpit and pointed down below there was nothing to be suggested but the regions of the damned, and the people shuddered, while the milk of human kindness almost froze in their veins. Now, in almost every well-regulated church, "down below" means "oyster suppers," "ice cream socials," "festivals," a place for happy human fellowship. Of course the social church may have its defects. The modern oyster may not be an improvement on the Puritan devil in getting people to church. And an oyster-stew religion may become rather thin and weak. But with all thy faults I love thee, stew! If we must go to heaven either way, we had rather go by church social dyspepsia than by the old-time hell-fire insanity. . . . . The spirit of the age is most clearly indicated in the wonderful growth and development of what is known as the fraternal and co-operative associations. Everywhere there seems to be a tendency towards union from the international unions of law, religion, or commerce down to the rag-pickers' union in the city of New York. It is emphatically "the age of brotherhood." Especially do such social and fraternal orders as you represent here to-day in common with others, the Masons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, Maccabees, G. A. R, etc., hold an advanced position in the new era of social development, and may be said to be pioneers in the growing religion of human brotherhood.

So much for this Satanic sermon.

—Here is a temperance sermon in five lines: "While suffering from the effects of indulgence in liquor, Joseph Misterman fatally stabbed his wife, attacked two men who endeavored to restrain him and inflicted a mortal wound on himself." This was in Chicago.

—E. M. Trowbridge, of New Haven, Conn., sends us the following incident: "In a trial before a court, the lawyer on the defendant's side wore the badge of a Knight Templar, and during his cross-examination of me as a witness, flaunted a book before the judge, claiming me as the author, and unworthy of giving evidence in the case, because, as he claimed, I had violated the oaths of Masonry; but the judge promptly overruled his attempt to disfranchise me on account of Masonry." Bro. Trowbridge is now working in the interest of our reform, and we expect to hear a good report from him.

—The Philadelphia Banner—an able Afro-American paper, makes honorable mention of Rev. L. G. Jordan, formerly a successful anti-secrecy lecturer, and now pastor of the Union Baptist church in the city of brotherly love. About the middle of June his congregation joyfully celebrated his forty-third birthday, which event resulted in his financial benefit to a gratifying degree. Another honor bestowed upon this faithful pastor is his nomination, by the Prohibition party of Pennsylvania, for Congressman-at-large. The people will find him a worthy representative of their interests.

—At Washington, last week, in the course of a sermon in behalf of missionary work in the island of Cuba, Rev. Arthur C. Mellen, who has just returned from there, made a statement that among all the 1,500,000 inhabitants there is not a single descendant of the Cuban aborigines, the Spanish enslavement having resulted in destroying an entire race of people. He spoke of the large number of Bibles that have been sold in Cuba since 1882, when a certain degree of religious toleration was established, and expressed his belief that grand results would follow the sending of young and enthusiastic missionaries to work among the benighted people, who are neglected by the State-paid priests, by whom Sunday bull-fights and other heathenish amusements are openly countenanced. Many of these priests, it is alleged, lead immoral lives. There is evidently a good opening for a godly ministry among the Cubans.

THIRTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

Another successful year closed at Wheaton on Thursday last. The anniversary exercises opened on the Sabbath by the Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. Dr. Rubinkam of the University Congregational church, Chicago. His theme was, "A Secret of Human Power," and his text, Prov. 27:19: "As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man." The address was an able and earnest plea for the church of Christ to save herself from the ruts and deadness of formalism by closely following the example of the Lord in reaching men's hearts.

President C. A. Blanchard followed with a brief address to the graduating class in words of tender sympathy and strong counsel. Miss Florence Patterson, of the missionary committee of the Christian Endeavor societies of Illinois, addressed a great audience in the evening on the cry of the heathen abroad for the light of life.

The Musical Conservatory and Art School joined on Tuesday evening in a fine anniversary program, and the work of Professors Rice, Coffin and Nutting were warmly appreciated by a host of friends. The latter held a three days' reception in the rooms of her department, which were a center of attraction to art lovers.

The Board of Trustees met Wednesday morning and reviewed the work of the year. Since the effort to increase the endowment by the addition of $100,000, nearly one-half the amount has been raised. The Board extended the time for the completion of this work. The $1,400 needed to meet current expenses and salaries for the year has been assumed by the board of instruction and no debt is allowed against the institution. Prof. H. A. Fischer, having served as treasurer for over twenty years, resigned, in order to give his attention more fully to his department of mathematics. Prof. E. Whipple was elected to the place. Dr. A. H. Hiatt of Chicago also resigned, having been for thirty-five years professor of physiology. There has been a marked increase in the regular college classes, although many obvious causes have cut down the general attendance during the year to 253.

The Preparatory Department graduated a class of fifteen in the afternoon of Wednesday, among them a son of Rev. Alexander Thomson, former chairman of the N. C. A. Board. Several additions are expected to the class when it begins Freshman studies in September.

The Alumni Association filled the later hours of the day and evening with an old-time reunion. The address of the occasion was by Rev. Edgar B. Wylie of Summerdale Congregational church, Chicago, and secretary of the N. C. A. Board. It was a vindication of the judgment of the Lord Jesus Christ on the Old Testament Scriptures and eloquent refutation of the "Higher" criticism which has been worming itself into our theological schools from the saturated walls of German institutions. Miss W. H. Jacobs of the Illinois Training School and Rev. Charles Fletcher of Rock River M. E. Conference were the other speakers.

Commencement day put on its brightest colors and called up its freshest breezes to greet the multitude of friends of the college and the class. Miss Katherine Dresser presided at the organ and opened the program with an inspiring number. Rev. Dr. J. E. Roy of the American Missionary Association, and also of our own N. C. A., offered prayer in which was a tender remembrance of the "vanished hand" whose work was seen on every side,—the great soul of the first President Blanchard, whose impress becomes rather more distinct on the institution than dimmed by the hand of time.

The class put forward Miss J. E. Armstrong of Glidden, Iowa, to give their salutatory, followed by an oration, "The Sunday Car," which was an earnest plea for the Sabbath sanctity and rest against the traffic of travel.

Miss Myra B. Porter of Jamestown, Maryland, followed with an essay, "Modern Idolatry." Some of the great principles of worship were clearly stated, and the heathenism of our land of Bibles sharply contrasted with the superstition and cruelty which we freely denounce among the benighted people of remote lands.

Henry M. Triplett, Warrenville, Ill., followed closely in his discussion of "The Golden Calf." Man is always religious after some sort, always worshiping; and whether he bows before a golden eagle or golden calf, there is a likeness in the effect. The enslavement of wealth is most criminally manifest in the liquor traffic and he is a real anarchist who will not support a reform against such an evil.

"Animate" was the theme of Miss Harriet West, of Greenvale, Ill. The method of Socrates was commendable in that it inspired to active service and real helpfulness among men and discarded the veneer of fashion or frivolity.

J. I. Ellsworth, of Wheaton, spoke of a minor character in George Eliot's "Romola." Tito Melema's career, especially when contrasted with the noble contemporary life of Savonarola, well illustrates the lines,—

> "Ah, what a tangled web we weave
> When first we practice to deceive."

From Andrew Erickson, who comes to our good land from Apenrade, Denmark, came a full-souled oration on "Our Era." This foreign-born youth made the best plea of the day for our American institutions, and urged that we must Christianize the foreign immigrant before he heathenizes us.

"The Modern Despot," through the calm but earnest oratory of Oscar G. Fischer, Elmhurst, Ill., appeared to be the great liquor traffic, before which, as we view it in every relation, old time and old world tyrannies shrink and pale.

"The Land Tax," and especially Henry George's theory of it, was the topic which engrossed William R. Morrow, of Chicago. The theme ought not to be very popular in Wheaton after the experiences that ended in the trial of a former professor for insanity; nevertheless, the speaker was clear in his exposition of the benefits of the systems, if its demerits were not worth extended notice. Mr. Morrow gave the valedictory of the class in an earnest and feeling manner.

The degrees being conferred by President Blanchard, the audience separated, friend with friend, to continue in the quiet hospitality of Wheaton homes the delights of a festival day.

The senior concert by the Schubert Quartette and the President's reception prolonged the day and its enjoyment into the late evening. K.

"I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the 'grip' of Masonry and all other secret and un-Christian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Letter to Conference of Christians on Secret Societies, Chicago, 1887.

THE HOME.

WHEN WORK IS DONE.

It is as if the world were glad!
Whether in light or darkness clad,
The hour is never dull or sad
When work is done.

The very voices in the street
Are tuned to notes more soft and sweet;
We love all things we chance to meet
When work is done.

The gentle music of the breeze,
The tender whispers of the trees,
And every sound has power to please
When work is done.

Upon each dear, familiar face
Rests some new trait of winsome grace,
And joy lights up the old home-place
When work is done.

Life's tumult suddenly grows still,
And love and gladness and good-will Come with their peace the heart to fill
When work is done.

But when the hours of labor close,
And earth is wrapped in sweet repose,
And all things sleep—alas for those
With work undone!

Oh, kind Taskmaster, let thy rest
Be to tired workers manifest,
And unto all who do their best,
Say thou, "Well done!"

—Marianne Farningham.

WHY WILL YOU?

Why will you keep caring for what the world says? Try, oh, try to be no longer a slave to it! You can have little idea of the comfort of freedom from it—it is bliss! All this caring for what people will say is from pride. Hoist your flag and abide by it. In an infinitely short space of time all secrets will be divulged. Therefore if you are misjudged, why trouble to put yourself right? You have no idea what a great deal of trouble it will save you. Roll your burden on Him, and he will make straight your mistakes. He will set you right with those with whom you have set yourself wrong. Here am I a lump of clay; thou art the potter. Mould me as thou in thy wisdom wilt. Never mind my cries. Cut my life off—so be it. Prolong it—so be it. Just as thou wilt, but I rely on thy unchanging guidance during the trial. Oh, the comfort that comes from this!—Gen. Gordon.

"THE STRANGER WITHIN THY GATES."

Some years ago, in a town in the West, a new teacher was added to those employed in the public school. She was a pale, silent, sad-eyed girl, of whom no one knew anything except that she was a faithful teacher. She boarded herself in a distant part of the town. Her one school dress, a gray flannel, was old and thin, but it was kept scrupulously darned and cleaned.

"She has only one collar and white apron," said a pupil, scornfully, "and she washes them out on Saturdays."

"No wonder she coughs," said another, "wearing that little pinched walking-jacket and straw hat."

"She looks as if she lived on tea and crackers one week and crackers and tea the next," said rich Lulu Armitage. "Where does her salary go? Perhaps she has to hire some one to keep still about her history, or, perhaps she is paying a a lawyer to get some disgraced relatives out of trouble."

"It's very peculiar, to say the least," chimed in another. "We can't take her into our set until we know more about her."

Young Mrs. Allen, who usually decided the social status for new comers, said:

"She has a good face; I pride myself on being a judge of character, and I despise such gossip about her. But the truth is, she is a sort of social betwixt and between, and I can't see where she can be placed properly."

So the new teacher remained unplaced, and, as she did not seek companionship herself, she went on her way alone. She never remained in the library to chat with the other teachers. "Perhaps she would if we had asked her," they said afterward.

She sat in a back seat in church, and slipped quietly out as soon as service was over. Perhaps she would not have hurried so had those in the same pew kindly detained her. They too thought of this afterward.

The minister noticed her one day and asked who she was, and was told:

"Oh, that's the queer new school teacher, Miss Mansfield; she boards herself; does all her housekeeping in one room and washes on Saturdays, so she will hardly expect you to call on her.

The minister also wished afterward that he had asked some one besides Mrs. Allen about her.

The pupils of the new teacher soon began to reflect in their conduct the partly expressed and partly suppressed suspicion regarding her. They grew saucy and neglectful of lessons, and some of the bolder ones went to the principal with complaints. He reproved them mildly and reminded Miss Mansfield rather severely that she must "maintain a good standard of discipline or her work would not be successful."

One Friday Miss Mansfield did not come to school as usual. A substitute was provided for the day, and again on Monday, when Miss Mansfield did not come.

"I noticed that she had a severe cold, last Thursday," said the principal; "I suppose she expected to be here and then found that she was not able, and had no way of sending me word. She will doubtless be in her place in the morning.

One of the teachers said, "If I thought she was really ill I would go to see her, but she does live so far out and I don't know exactly where the house is. I guess she'll be here all right tomorrow in that everlasting black turban."

Tuesday morning came bitterly cold, but the thin figure of Miss Mansfield was not seen struggling along in the wind towards the school building. The principal dismissed Miss Mansfield's room for the day and sent the substitute teacher and a high-school girl to find out the reason of her continued absence. The family owning the house where she rented a room was away. The house itself was in a large yard of trees, and stood at some distance from others. The young ladies went as they had been told to the "north wing," the room opening on the porch, and knocked. Getting no response they pushed open the door. In the dim light of the room, with drawn curtains, they saw Miss Mansfield, half sitting on the bed-lounge, with her little old jacket on over a faded wrapper. She had a school record book in her hand and examination papers were scattered about. There was no fire, no carpet on the floor, no furniture except two chairs and a little table beside the bed-lounge, on which were school books and a Bible, and a plate of crackers and a cup and saucer. All these surroundings the visitors took in at a glance, and hurried to the bed-side shocked and full of pity.

But the "new teacher" did not need their pity now. She did not feel the cold desolation of the room. There was a smile on the poor, pinched face, and the dark eyes had lost their feverish expression, as they seemed now to be looking upward upon unseen things. A pencil had fallen from her hand. She had left a few lines feebly traced: "I feel strangely to-night. My head swims and I cannot think. If anything should happen to me, please send my month's salary to my mother at her address." The name of an out-of-the-way little country place was given. On the open page of her Bible was pinned a poem clipped from a newspaper:

If I should die to-night the eyes that chill me with averted glance
Would look upon me pityingly, perchance,
And soften in a kindly way,
For who would war with dumb, unconscious clay?
Oh, keep not your kindness for my cold, dead brow!
My path is lonely. Let me feel your kindness now.
Think kindly of me. I am travel-worn.
My faltering feet are pierced with many a thorn.
For friendship and for love I plead,
When dreamless rest is mine I shall not need
The sympathy for which I long to-day,
To give some brightness to my weary way.

The room was soon filled with tearful, conscience-smitten neighbors. The physician said, "Death from cold and lack of proper nourishment causing collapse or complete exhaustion." The nearest neighbor said, "She froze and starved to death and I living within a stone's throw."

They found that her salary had been sent home every month to a bedridden father and mother and a feeble sister, to keep them out of the poor-house and to pay back-bills for medicines.

The town where this happened is no less charitable or social than others. The teachers and the church people are no less kind. They sent a sum of money to the poor parents, and the papers spoke of the "many mementoes in memory of Miss Mansfield, whose sudden and sad death has cast a gloom over the whole community." Many kind-hearted people said, "If we had only known about her in time!"

Said the teacher who related this story to me: "To think that I kept still when people talked about her. I used to see that they had no ground for it, but because some of the prominent ladies slighted her I never said a word in her favor. It makes me feel as if I had helped kill her by my cowardly silence." As the minister said, "We saw her a stranger and we took her not in; now it is too late."—Mrs. Clara Smith Colton, in the Congregationalist.

THE MORAL USE OF HELPLESSNESS.

God allows us to exhaust ourselves before he interposes. Premature relief would be injurious to depth of character. We must first despair of ourselves before we can utterly put our trust in God. The prodigal began to be in want before he came to himself; painful pressures of circumstances awoke him to repentance. It is never any loss to come to great extremities in spiritual experience, but an infinite spiritual gain. "When we were yet without strength, Christ died for the ungodly." Rom. 5: 6. We are always without strength in reality, but we are not always so in consciousness. The strengthlessness of our condition is one of the first lessons God sets himself to teach. And he teaches us, not by coming to our aid at the moment we cry, but leaving us to find out the measure of our power, and the extent of our ability to help ourselves. Christ stilled the tempest on the sea after the disciples were so terrified that they cried: "Lord, save us; we perish." Not until they had lost hope in themselves did he display his power. "Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the sea; and there was a great calm." Their fearfulness of heart enhanced the impressiveness of his command, and led to a profounder appreciation of his majesty. "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him?" Matt. 8: 24–27. The experience is bitter and often protracted, which issues in the soul ceasing from itself and turning in helplessness to God; but it comes forth with a poverty of spirit, a contrition of feeling, a dependence on the Saviour, which it could not otherwise have acquired. God's manner of dealing with the individual is his manner of dealing with the race. It was human helpfulness he meant to teach and prove by delaying the coming of Christ to the world. He allowed intellect, philosophy, art, civilization, to do their best before he sent his Son upon the scene. They brought the world to despair. Then Christ came. So is it now, and so is it ever. God only saves when we feel he must save us, or we shall surely perish. The moment we abandon hope in ourselves, the outstretched arm delivers. "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." While we struggle to achieve self-extrication from our sins, we, like the man in the morass, only sink deeper and deeper. To be rescued by God, we must resign ourselves to God.—Rev. John Baird.

"A SHOEMAKER BY THE GRACE OF GOD."

We seldom find men in the lower walks of life who are satisfied with their condition. There is a restless life throbbing among our laboring classes, and this causes men to despair. We do not know when we were so strongly impressed with a book as the one entitled "Hiram Golf; a Shoemaker by the Grace of God." In this title we have in brief the conception this man had of his trade. He claimed to be a shoemaker by the grace and help of God, and into this he must put his noblest and best efforts. Anyone who has not read this book would be pleased with its spirit and quaintness. Rev. Mr. Mills, the evangelist, says: "I came across, the other day, a little book, out of which I read a few sentences. I read the title-page, and it was this: 'Hiram Golf; a shoemaker by the grace of God,'

Then I read the last page, and it was stated that when this man died they put on his tombstone that which he had requested: 'Hiram Golf; a shoemaker by the grace of God.'

"I looked to see what was in the middle of the book, and I read this, that a young stripling of a minister, who had just come to be pastor in the town, went down to talk to Hiram, because he had heard that he was a spiritual man, and he said: 'Mr. Golf,' and Mr. Golf said: 'Don't call me 'Mr. Golf, call me Hiram.' 'Well, Hiram,' said the minister, 'I have come to talk with you about the things of God, and I am very glad that a man can be in a humble occupation and yet be a godly man.' The shoemaker stopped and looked up at him and said: 'Don't call this occupation humble!' The minister thought he had made a mistake, and he said: 'Excuse me, I did not mean to reflect on what you do for a living.' The man replied, 'You didn't hurt me, but I was afraid you might have hurt the Lord Jesus Christ. I believe the making of that shoe is just as holy a thing as your making a sermon. I believe that when I come to stand before the throne of God, he is going to say: 'What kind of shoes did you make down on earth?' and he might pick out this very pair, in order to let me look at them in the blazing light of the great white throne; and he is going to say to you: 'What kind of sermons did you make?' and you will have to show him one of your sermons. Now, if I made better shoes than you did sermons, I will have a better place in the kingdom of God. From the depths of my soul I believe that.' "

If everybody had a sincere view of life like this we would live in a veritable paradise, and this would be "heaven upon earth begun."—Christian World.

WORTHY OF FREQUENT REPETITION.

A Puritan divine named Sibbs wrote a booklet called "The Bruised Reed." A copy of this was given by a humble layman to a little boy at whose father's house he had been entertained overnight. That boy was Richard Baxter, and the book was the means of his conversion. Baxter wrote his "Call to the Unconverted," and among the multitude led to Christ by it was Philip Doddridge. Doddridge wrote "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," and "the time would fail to tell" its blessed influence. By it Wilberforce was converted, and of his life and labors volumes could be written. Wilberforce wrote his "Practical View of Christianity," and this led not only Dr. Chalmers into the truth, but Legh Richmond to Christ. Richmond wrote "The Dairyman's Daughter," which has been published in a hundred languages and many million copies have been sold.—Selected.

"FETCH" BRINGING UP THE COWS.

Old "Fetch" was a shepherd dog, and lived in the highlands of the Hudson. His master kept nearly a dozen cows, and they ranged at will among the hills during the day. When the sun was low in the west, his master would say to "Fetch:" "Bring the cows home," and it was because the dog did his task so well that he was called "Fetch."

One sultry day he departed as usual upon his evening task. From scattered shady and grassy nooks he at last gathered all the cattle into the mountain road leading to the barnyard. A part of the road ran through a low, moist spot bordered by a thicket of black alder, and into this one of the cows pushed her way and stood quietly. The others passed on, followed some distance in the rear by "Fetch."

As the cows approached the barnyard gate, he quickened his pace, and hurried forward as if to say: "I'm here, attending to business." But his complacency was disturbed as the cows filed through the gate. He whined a little, and growled a little, attracting his master's attention. Then he went to the high fence surrounding the yard, and, standing on his hind feet, peered between two of the rails. After looking at the herd carefully for a time, he started off down the road again on a full run. His master now observed that one of the cows was missing, and he sat down on a rock to see what "Fetch" was going to do about it.

Before long he heard the curious tinkling of a bell, and soon "Fetch" appeared bringing in the perverse cow at a rapid pace. The gate was thrown open, and the cow went through it. "Fetch" then lay down quietly to cool off in time for supper.—Dog Stories and Dog Lore.

A CHILD'S STORY.

[The following comes to the Cynosure from Mary E. Coon, of Newtonville, Mass., who describes herself as "a little girl." She seems to be a little missionary as well.—EDITOR.]

"There were three girls who met together for a religious meeting. The one who led had written a small sermon to preach, taking the text from John 3:16. The sermon lasted about five minutes. Then the leader read a tract on the same subject. Then she spoke awhile to the other two, who were not converted. The meeting ended by and by, and then they all talked about getting converted and joining the church. After a few minutes the leader went away and left the other two. That night they all went to meeting, which was unusual for the unconverted girls. They both got up and gave a testimony. They are converted now, and will soon join the church."

Well may we rejoice that "the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe." It never fails.

LITTLE BROWN HANDS.

They drove home the cows from the pasture
Up through the long shady lane,
Where the quail whistles loud in the wheatfield,
All yellow with ripening grain.

They find in the thick waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-dipped strawberry grows;
They gather the earliest snowdrops
And the first crimson buds of the rose.

They toss the hay in the meadow,
They gather the elder blooms white,
They find where the dusky grapes purple
In the soft-tinted autumn light.

They know where the apples hang ripest
And are sweeter than Italy's wines;
They know where the fruit is the thickest
On the long thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate seaweeds
And build tiny castles of sand;
They pick up the beautiful seashells—
Fair barks that have drifted to land.

They wave from the tall, rocking treetops,
Where the oriole's hammock nest swings;
And at night-time are folded in slumber
By a song that a fond mother sings.

Those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great;
And from those brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.

The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and wise of our land;
The sword and the chisel and palette
Shall be held in the little brown hand.

—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

TEMPERANCE.

HOW HIS CHILD LED HIM.

Several years ago my brother was in Springfield one cheerless day, with about half an hour on his hands before train time. Strolling along near the depot, he noticed a tidy restaurant, and went in for lunch. A bright boy came to take his order, and as soon as he brought it sat down to his lessons. A remarkable man, evidently the proprietor, was seated near the fire, with a disabled foot propped up on a chair. When my brother finished his meal, he approached him, saying—"You have a bright boy to wait on your customers." "Yes, indeed," said the man, with parental pride, "I couldn't hire so good a boy as that; he is my son, and was the means of me opening this place instead of keeping a saloon, which was the way I got a living for some years; and I'll tell you how it was. He came from school one day heavy-hearted, and when I asked what was the matter he began to cry, but couldn't speak. After I had urged him, he said that in recess some of the boys asked each other what their fathers did. One said his father was a plumber; another that his was a carpenter; and when they came to my boy, who said his father kept a saloon, one of them said, 'That's the meanest kind of business.' 'And I could see they all felt the same way. That made me feel awfully ashamed; so, father, if you will only give up the saloon I'll do anything I can to help you.' With that he threw his arms around my neck, and, sobbing, begged me to give it up. Well, the end of it was I sold out. I don't make so much money as I did selling liquors, but it goes farther, and we have a happy home. My wife can help along, because decent people come here for their meals, but before I did not like to have her around, there was so much low talk. My boy has been as good as his word. I couldn't ask for a better son."

My brother thanked the man for his confidence, and after giving his hearty approval, went his way.—The Little Christian.

MOODY ON WHISKY.

Mr. Moody, in one his recent great meetings in Washington, preaching from the text, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man shall sow that also shall he reap," referred to whisky by way of illustration. He said:

"You cannot sow whisky without reaping drunkards. A man cannot sell whisky without reaping drunkenness. If I sold a drink of whisky to a man, that man would sell a drink of the same to my son or one of my kinsmen, and I would surely reap what I had sown. No man who sells whisky is pure and happy. He has a skeleton in the closet somewhere. He has some relative who is a drunkard. I do not say this to denounce the saloon-keepers, I simply want to remonstrate with them and plead with them to quit the business. Don't sell out. Don't sell the stuff. Knock out the bung and let it waste. Don't let any man talk to me about his Christianity while he has connection with the traffic. No man has ever been in the business but who has been cursed for it in various ways. No man should rent his property, at no matter how high a figure, for a saloon. The man who does this will reap just as surely as the man who sells the whisky. I am talking facts, not poetry. I once knew a man who rented property to a rumseller, because the temptation of the rent was too much for him to withstand, and all the sons of the renter, four of them, died drunkards. Let us see what kind of seed we are sowing."

A BUSHEL OF CORN.

Illinois is the great corn State, and Peoria is the center of its most prolific belt. Peoria is a great grain market, and especially for corn. Vast quantities of the golden grain are shipped into this city for general distribution and loaded into its mammoth elevators by the hundreds of thousands of bushels. A great deal of corn is shipped from Peoria, but a vast quantity is used at home. There is more corn used in Peoria than in any three cities in the Union, even though those cities be New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. The reason is obvious. Peoria is not only the center of the great distilling interests, but here are located two of the greatest sugar houses in the country. Down the capacious maws of the great distilleries are poured every day 20,000 bushels of corn. The sugar houses use from 5,000 to 10,000 bushels more each day in the year. To supply this demand the product of 1,000 acres of rich corn lands are duly shipped into Peoria for home consumption. Aside from these fully 5,000 bushels are used daily for other purposes. So that it is safe to estimate that fully 9,000,000 bushels of corn are used in this city annually for manufacturing and other purposes. The greater part of this is manufactured into spirits.

It is wonderful to consider the changes made by a bushel of corn in its transition from the owner's crib to the glass of the consumer. These changes are various and far-reaching. They are other than the financial. But consider simply the mere element of value. Corn was selling, we will say for 35 cents per bushel. It came all the way from Nebraska, perhaps, where it brought but 25 cents. In transit two dealers received a commission of a cent each. The railroad company received 8 cents for its freight and other charges. The distiller paid 35 cents. He took and converted it into 4½ gallons of finished spirits and fed one of his steers on the refuse. The distiller sold the spirits to a local dealer for $5.12, of which Uncle Sam received $4.05 as tax on the spirits, leaving a balance to the distiller of 72 cents after he had paid 35 cents for his corn.

The spirits, after being well watered and compounded, are sold at a profit by the compounder and rectifier to the dealer, who sells it out at 15 cents a drink. The 4½ gallons have swelled to nine, and before it gets through it swells many a head and also the revenue of the city where its lines may be cast.

So that in its travels from the Nebraska crib to the Chicago saloon that bushel of corn has increased in value from 25 cents to many dollars, and with its constant running mates has furnished employment at least to 50 men or more and has contributed to both the national and municipal revenues.

To resume, that bushel of corn was thus scattered on the highways of business and pleasure: Farmer 25 cents; railroads, 88 cents; commission men, 2 cents; distillers, 72 cents; feeder, 10 cents; Uncle Sam, $4 05, compounder and rectifier, 25 cents; retail dealer, $10; city, $3 The consumer got whatever was left in the spirits, each according to his strength or weakness.—Peoria Herald.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON III.—Third Quarter, 1894, July 15.

SUBJECT.—Visit of the Wise Men.—Matt. 2: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—They saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down and worshipped him.—Matt. 2: 11.

| Open the Bible and read the lesson. |

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Matt. 2: 1-12. T.—Isa. 60: 1-7. W.—Micah 5: 1-4. Th.—Psalm 72: 1-15. F.—Phil. 2: 1-11. S.—Jno. 5: 17-23. Su.—Rev. 5: 8-14.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The coming of the wise men.—v. 1, 2 "In the days of Herod the king"—known in history as Herod the Great, but worthy of this title only because of the enormity of his crimes—"there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem" Scripture has not preserved their names, and the legendary accounts are worthy of but little credence. They were Persians, disciples of Zoroaster, who had prophesied centuries before that a star would arise in the east, and remain there fifteen days. But Balaam, who was an eastern soothsayer, had made the same prophecy, only more specific and detailed, long before Zoroaster; and the rabbis asserted, not without reason, that it was borrowed from Balaam in the first place. Naturally the Magi directed their steps to the capital city, Jerusalem, and in their simplicity made inquiries in the court of Herod. We find many important suggestions in this lesson. (1) The star of Bethlehem has never set. We, too, may have its rays to guide us. In history, science, art, and still more in the revealed Word, and the daily providences of life, that star still shines. (2) Let us be obedient unto the heavenly vision, and, like the Magi, show ourselves truly wise, counting no effort or self denial too great which shall lead us to the cradle of the world's Redeemer.

2 Herod is troubled at the tidings.—vs. 3–6. It was not strange that Herod was troubled. Like Henry VIII., he grew more morose and cruel as his age and infirmities increased. A conspiracy against his life and throne, involving some of the most noted in Jerusalem, had just been discovered and put down in the usual summary manner of tyrants, and it was not strange that all Jerusalem was troubled with him, for the people had reason to dread every political overturn which would certainly cause confusion and bloodshed. So there are two classes to whom the thought of Christ's second coming is always terrible,—wicked men and careless, worldly professors. The former, in their secret souls, cannot help that fearful looking-for of judgment and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries; while the latter are satisfied with their selfish, ease-loving lives and desire no such unwelcome interruption. Herod was a foreigner, and unacquainted with the Hebrew Scriptures. So the Sanhedrim had to be hastily convened before the wise men could receive their answer—"in Bethlehem of Judah." This was a small and obscure village, yet it was the birth-place of a line of kings culminating in the Messiah himself. The greatness of a town or city does not consist in the figure it makes on the census-roll. God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty. "That shall rule;" rather, shall "feed." Israel's rulers had hitherto been as wolves, scattering and devouring. The expression must have wakened a keener sense of fear in Herod's bosom. He knew very well that his tyranny and monstrous cruelties had made him universally hated. The prospect of a king whose rule would be so gentle and kindly that it could be compared to that of a shepherd over his flock, and who was a lineal descendant of their own ancient line of princes, was enough in itself to induce a revolt as soon as the birth of the royal Child should be generally known.

3. Herod's plot.—vs. 7, 8, 12. Cruelty and hypocrisy often go together. Herod, without doubt, impressed the simple-minded Magi as a very pious king, sincerely desirous of paying his homage to the new-born Messiah. They, however, received a divine warning, and returned into their country another way, thus escaping the vengeance of Herod. God will not leave the pure in heart to be deceived by the guile of wicked men. It is recorded of Madame Guyon that among others who visited her for spiritual counsel, there was a certain man who bore every outward semblance of being a sincere seeker for the truth, but while conversing with him she mysteriously lost all her freedom and liberty. The Spirit seemed to set a seal on her lips. It was afterwards proved that the man was a spy, who was sent by her enemies to draw out heretical utterances which would be used to deprive her of liberty, if not of life.

4 The guiding star.—vs. 9–11. "The star went before them." We are to find the Christ, not by going backward, but forward. While making inquiries at the court of Herod, they seem to have lost their supernatural guide. It is possible that they turned aside from the divine leading to follow a preconceived idea that "he who was born King of the Jews" must necessarily be found among the environments and trappings of royalty. So when we try to walk by the light of our own natural understandings, the star of truth will vanish, and we risk being drawn into the quagmires of error. "They rejoiced with exceeding great joy." There is no joy like that of finding the Lord. They presented gifts to the new-found Christ, the most precious products of their country; so let us worship him by giving him of our best, the gold of consecrated life, the frankincense of habitual devotion, the myrrh of self-sacrifice.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Baptists are increasing in this country at the rate of 300 a day.

—Rev. F. J. Paton, Dr. J. G Paton's son, and the first white child born in Aniwa, New Hebrides, is now settled as a missionary at Malekula, in the same group.

—The Reformed Presbyterian Synod appointed a committee to act with other psalm singing churches, in preparing a universal version of the Psalms in meter.

—The total value of church property in the State of New York is $140,122,002. The Protestant Episcopal church represents $31,142,613; the Roman Catholic, $25,769,478; the Presbyterian, $22,727,192; the Methodist, $18,305,200, and the Baptist, $13,625,588.

—At the recent General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church which met at Eugene, Ore., Mrs. Woolsey of Kentucky presented credentials as commissioner. The assembly refused to admit her, declaring that the church cannot endorse the ordination of women to the full ministry.

—The Lutheran Synod of Wisconsin and other States has commenced mission work among the Indians of Arizona. The Mission Board met recently at Watertown, Wis., and adopted a resolution to build a school and a dwelling-house for the sum of $1,600.

—There are six Lutherans in Congress, viz: Hon. Michael D. Harter, of Mansfield, Ohio; Hon. Jacob Augustus Geissenhainer, LL D,, of Freehold, N. J.; Hon. Constantine J. Erdman, of Allentown, Pa.; Hon. Charles Baewig, of Maysville, Wis.; Hon. Haldor E. Been, of Fergus Falls, Minn.; Hon. Geo. F. Kribbs, of Clarion, Pennsylvania.

—The Union Theological seminary changed its constitution so as to give the board of trustees power to employ others than ordained ministers as members of the faculty. The object of this was to retain Dr. Briggs in his chair of Biblical theology, in case he was deposed from the Presbyterian ministry by the Saratoga general assembly.

—Some time ago a prominent Roman Catholic died in Mobile. Ala., and bequeathed $2,000 to be used for the masses for his soul. The supreme court holds the bequest void, because there is no living beneficiary of the trust endeavored to be created, the soul not being an entity in contemplation of the law.

—At a recent yearly meeting of the Society of Friends, says the Philadelphia Press, some marked changes in discipline were adopted. It is now permissible for a member to marry outside of the society without permission. Another point is that members must abstain from the use, cultivation, manufacture, and sale of tobacco. The article in relation to slavery is stricken out, and many obsolete expressions are moderated.

—A ministerial congress of all the ministers of Kansas, regardless of denomination, will be held at Emporia, Kan., commencing July 10. The object is to formulate some plans for the better enforcement of the prohibitory law of that State. Arrangements will be made to board clergymen at low rates. Address W. W. Andrews, Neosho Falls, Kan.

—The most exciting topic before the recent Cumberland Presbyterian Assembly was the ordaining of women to preach. The minority report, favoring ordination, was lost by four votes. The matter will be brought up at the next General Assembly.

—A stranger at the Fulton street Methodist church, Chicago, detained the congregation while at prayer-meeting by a lengthy account of how precious religion was to him, while his confederate robbed the parsonage.

LITERATURE.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

McClure's Magazine for July, with its copious illustrations and varied letter-press, is replete with interest. Bret Harte contributes a characteristic story—An Ingenue of the Sierras; The Ebb-Tide, the serial by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne, is concluded; The Heraldry of the Plains is a comprehensive sketch of the "brands" used by cattle herders, and their habits and methods; the "Human Documents," with numerous portraits, are Lord and Lady Aberdeen and Capt, Chas. King, of the U. S. Army; Alphonse Daudet furnishes his own account of his life and work as a famous French writer; Homestead as Seen by One of its Workmen is a practical paper, forming a fine industrial picture; A Chemical Detective Bureau, by Ida M. Tarbell, introduces to the reader the Paris Municipal Laboratory, and tells what it does for the public health; The Revolt of the ——— is "a page from the domestic history of the twentieth century" by Robert Barr, that is pleasant summer reading; "Told in Confidence" is an illustrated prize story, by Celia E. Shute, and Wm. Whitehead and Gilbert Parker provide the poetry that adds to the interest of the entire contents. Published by S. S. McClure (Ltd), 30 Lafayette place, New York. Price, 15 cents.

There is more of the man and woman than of the infant in the July number of St Nicholas. The improvement in this direction, within two years, in this magazine, is very noticeable, and it is becoming more of a family visitor than a baby's chance playmate. There is a growing seriousness and solidity about its contents that carry as much of instruction as of mirthfulness. Yet the latter is by no means wanting. Sir Morven's Hunt, the opening poem, is a ballad of the medieval ages, done by a modern poet in excellent form and spirit. The story of Commodores Decatur and Somers deals with an interesting period in our national history. The Bears of North America; The Drum Major; A Young Hero—the story of Nathan Hale, the American patriot; The Last of the Kearsarge; "Charles Carroll of Carrollton," and A Visit to the North Pole—all by competent authors and illustrators, are excellent features, while the Brownies and jingles and funny sketches for the younger ones maintain the reputation for this class of literature originally gained by St Nicholas in its earlier days. Published by the Century Co., 33 East 17th street, New York City. Price, 25 cents.

Possibly the paper that will receive most attention in Scribner's Magazine for July, on account of its timely character, is The Gettysburg Week, the story of that terrible conflict as told by the late Dr. Philip Schaff. It needs no illustrations. Illustrated articles, however, are plentiful and attractive. Among these are: The North Shore of Massachusetts, by Robert Grant; The American Cave-dwellers, by Carl Lumholtz; The French in Holland, by Philip Gilbert Hamerton; A Man Without a Memory, by Wm. H. Shelton; Beasts of Burden, by N. S. Shaler; American Types of the Workingman, and the New York Tenement-House Evil and its Cure (with plans) Geo. W. Cable's serial story, John March, Southerner, is continued. Other contributions include: By the Sea, a poem, by Anna M. Maclean; The Sleep, by M. L. Van Vorst; Mirage, by Graham R. Tomson; Aut Cæsar, Aut Nihil, by Agnes Repplier, and An Ally of Mr. Cross, by John J. a'Becket, with editorial comments, etc. Published by Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York City. Price, 25 cents.

NOTES.

"An interesting literary find" is announced, in the discovery of a number of unpublished letters by Edgar Allan Poe. These were found among the papers of Poe's biographer, Dr. Rufus W. Griswold, by his son, W. M. Griswold, of Cambridge. The correspondence has been placed for editing in the hands of Prof. George E. Woodberry, the author of the standard life of Poe, and it will appear in The Century in three parts, dealing, respectively, with Poe's life in Richmond, Philadelphia, and New York. The correspondence includes many letters to Poe by the leading literary men of his time, and the whole is said to throw much new light on Poe's life and character.

OBITUARY.

ALBERT HOLT

passed away from his earthly home, at Carthage, N. Y., to the rest promised to the people of God, on the 7th day of June, 1894, aged 80 years, 8 months and 28 days, after nine weeks of suffering, which he endured with Christian patience.

He was born in Hampton, Windom county, Conn., September 9, 1813. In 1814 his parents removed to DeKalb, St. Lawrence county, N. Y. The country then being new, they endured the hardships incident to pioneer life.

At an early age Albert gave his heart to God, and when 16 years old, living then in a hotel where there was a bar, he had an opportunity of standing uprightly in his Christian profession, by refusing to offer the intoxicating glass to his neighbor. All through his life he had the courage to be true to his convictions of rights; whether it made him appear "odd" to others, or not, he would be true to God. The Word says, "My people shall be a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Such was Albert Holt.

For twenty-five years he made his home in Carthage, seven months of which time he was confined to the house.

His thoughtfulness of friends and neighbors, manifested in constant acts of kindness, winning their esteem and respect, showed that his life had not been lived in vain.

He was a strong advocate of the Cynosure, having taken it ever since its first publication, and he watched for and read it with increasing interest, using all his powers to oppose secret societies and every other evil that is robbing the church of its power for good and souls of their peace with God.

A good man, a kind and loving husband and father, has ceased from his toils and cares on earth, to receive the reward promised by the Lord to his faithful ones. To us the words of his chosen text, "He is not here—he is risen," are the bright star of hope in our sadness.

M H.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	57¼	@	60¼
Winter No. 2	50	@	57⅛
Corn—No. 2	40¾	@	41⅝
Oats—No. 2	35	@	42½
Rye—No. 2	48	@	50
Bran per ton	11 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@10	75
Butter, medium to best	11	@	17
Cheese	06	@	08½
Beans	1 25	@ 1	90
Eggs, fresh	09½	@	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 65	@ 4	90
Flax	1 43
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50	@ 9	15
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@70	00
Potatoes, (new, pr. bbl.)	1 65	@ 2	10
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼	@	06½
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	8	@	16
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 50	@ 5	00
Common to good	2 40	@ 4	30
Hogs	4 65	@ 5	10
Sheep	3 00	@ 4	85

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	60¼	@	88¼
Corn No 2	45½	@	45¼
Oats	49	@	57
Rye	52	@	55
Eggs, Western fresh	11½	@	12
Butter	09½	@	18
Wool	19	@	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 25	@ 4	25
Hogs	4 50	4	92½

Love, the Supreme Gift:

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

The Perfected Life;

THE GREATEST NEED IN THE WORLD.

Both by Prof. Henry Drummond. Bound in chaste white vellum paper, each 20 cts.

These are not to be judged by the size, unless rubies are counted for the weight thereof. The first has been very largely circulated, the second is now only just published and deserves the same wide reading—both are gems such as are only found at rare intervals. If you have not read them, do so at once, you will be a better man or woman for the reading.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MASONIC CORNER-STONE LAYING.

The Masonic Lodge having been invited to lay the corner-stone of the new Illinois State Fair buildings at Springfield, the N. C. A. Board at its meeting last Saturday adopted the following PROTEST.

CHICAGO, June 30, 1894.

To the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois:

The Board of Directors of the National Christian Association, having its central office in Chicago, Illinois, learning that it is proposed to lay the corner-stone of the State Fair building with Masonic ceremonies, respectfully represent, that under our constitution and laws, no society, sect, or order is entitled to official or other public preferment over any other order, sect or society; and we, therefore, do earnestly protest that the secret society, to which it is thus proposed to delegate a work of public interest, should not be allowed such recognition, either in its rites, ceremonies or festivals, which are justly offensive to the great body of the American people.

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD, President.
EDGAR B. WYLIE, Secretary.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Associat'n
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated" the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the Fast. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2 50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords [illegible] 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

HOME AND HEALTH.

(From Farm, Field and Fireside.)

HOME HINTS.

Clean willow with salt water.

Use chlorinated soda for ink stains.

Wash colored matting with salt water.

Rub out grease on a carpet with corn meal.

Use weak lye, or saleratus water, for cleaning paint.

Darn thin places in blankets as you would stockings.

Whiting and benzine mixed together will clean marble.

Shut a boiler of boiling water in a room from which the paper is to be removed.

Have all flannel or broadcloth goods sponged before making up, to prevent spotting.

Clean brass with hot water, rubbing then with a soft cloth and lemon juice, rinse in hot water and polish with a chamois.

A good grease eradicator: Two ounces of ammonia, one ounce of soap shavings, one quart of soft water, and one teaspoonful of saltpeter.

Meat balls are made of lean beef finely chopped, together with a small onion. Press the meat firmly into small cakes or balls with the hands, dust liberally with flour, and fry in a little butter or drippings.

Celery salt for seasoning soups, gravies, etc., may be made by drying the roots of the celery plant, and then grating and mixing with one-third of its quantity of salt. It should be kept in well corked bottles.

To make Astor House rolls, boil one pint of sweet milk, and while still warm, add butter the size of an egg, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little salt, and half a yeast cake. When light, knead and let rise again, and form into cakes, spread each half with butter and fold over on the other half; put into pans, let stand a few minutes to rise again, and bake in a quick oven.

To make tutti-frutti jelly soak half a box of gelatin in half a pint of cold water. Then dissolve with one pint of boiling water, add the juice of three lemons, one and a half cups of sugar and strain. When it begins to stiffen put a layer of the jelly in a dish, then a layer of sliced bananas, another of jelly, one of sliced orange, one of jelly, and one of grated cocoanut, finishing with one of jelly.

Dandruff forms when the glands of the skin are weakened, and if neglected, baldness is sure to follow. Hall's Hair Renewer is the best preventive.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Illustrated.

THE FULL

ILLUSTRATED RITUAL

OF THE

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine

PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—

Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The Past
Guarantees
The Future

The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured thousands of others is certainly sufficient reason for belief that it will cure you. It makes pure, rich, healthy blood, tones and strengthens the nerves, and builds up the whole system. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Cures

Be Sure to get HOOD'S and Only HOOD'S.

Hood's Pills are especially prepared to be taken with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c. per box.

CINCINNATI — Big 4 Route — CHICAGO — CLEVELAND — ST. LOUIS Ry. Co.

SUMMER TRIPS To The

MOUNTAINS, LAKES AND SEA SHORE

SHOULD BE ARRANGED VIA THE

BIG FOUR ROUTE

TO SECURE ALL THE

COMFORTS OF HOME

WHILE TRAVELING.

WRITE FOR TOURIST BOOK.

E. O. McCORMICK, Pass. Traffic Mgr. | D. B. MARTIN, Gen'l Pass & Tkt Agt

CINCINNATI.

THE CELEBRATED OXFORD ORGANS.—CONTAINS 122 CELEBRATED ORCHESTRAL TONED REEDS.

When you buy from us you pay the factory profit, and not agents' dealers' or middlemens' enormous profits. This beautiful Oxford Columbia Organ for $45.00.

COMPASS:—Five Octaves, 11 Necessary Stops, 2 of 3-Octave, 2 of 2-Octave Each.

ONLY $45.00

11 NECESSARY STOPS— All that can be put on a 4 set reed action without attaching bogus stops, viz.: Diapason, Principal, Melodia, Dulcet, Cremona, Vox-Angelica, Echo Horn, Celeste, Treble Coupler, Bass Coupler, Grand Organ and Right Knee Swell and Left Knee Swell. The above 4 set reeds and 11 necessary stops are placed at the disposal of the performer and the action is characterized by greater power, variety and brilliancy of tone, combined with the most exquisitive purity and sweetness, in addition to the music contained in an ordinary organ.

DESCRIPTION OF CASE— Constructed of the best grade of solid black walnut, handsomely finished, hand-rubbed with oil, durable and strong, thoroughly seasoned, kiln dried, and made on scientific principles, each component part being paneled to prevent warping or splitting, with veneered panels, elegantly carved and ornamented; center panel on top fitted with a large beveled French plate glass mirror, with veneer panels on each side; exquisite fret work, brocade silk velvet trimmings back of all fret work, large music cabinet, swinging front fall board, two lamp stands, convenient handles for moving. It is entirely new in design, and is as illustrated in cut. The case stands on castors.

INTERIOR CONSTRUCTION— is simple yet scientific and durable, not liable to get out of order and easily adjusted in case of any disarrangement; working parts are free from friction and will neither break nor wear. Nothing but the best of material used, and you will never find in one of the Oxford organs blotting paper instead of felt; cloth instead of leather; oil-cloth instead of rubber; common board instead of three-ply stock.

THE TONE— which is the most important part of an instrument, is full, sweet, round, sympathetic, and harmonious, with volume, variety and brilliancy, combined with great power.

THE BELLOWS— a very important part of a good organ, are of the very best and strongest material, best quality of rubber cloth and best quality of felt, with perfect stop action. They have an immense capacity and furnished, with the automatic valve for preventing an over supply of air, will never leak or wear out.

THE WARRANT— By our warrant we pledge ourselves in case our organ should prove defective in material or workmanship during a term of fifteen years to put the same in proper condition or refund money.

FREE—Our Wholesale Catalogue of Organs, Baby Carriages, Sewing Machines and Bicycles, quoting cash and time prices. Write for Catalogue at once and state which to send.

THE OXFORD MFG. CO. | Old Established and reliable.... | 338 TO 334 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

MY EXPERIENCES
WITH
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY A TRAVELER.

With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

—o-o—

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is

Fifteen Cents,

but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf.....1⅞c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅞c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.

LIGHT AND LIFE	TEACHER'S QUARTERLY	5c.
" " "	SCHOLAR'S "	3c.
" " "	INTERMEDIATE "	3c.
" " "	PRIMARY "	3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING

Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—o:o—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.

By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth.....75

This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	3 "
The Lily	"	3 "	Pure Words	"	3 "
Light & L	Scholar's Qrly.	3 "	Light & L	Inf Cl. wk.	4 "
	Teacher's "	5 "		Lesson Leaf "	1⅞ "
Golden Treasures		1 "	L. & L. Primary	Qrly	4 "

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, & Sunshine, each Pr. Yr.	25c	Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr.	25c
		Scholar's " "	20c
The four to one address "	75c	L. & L. Infant Class, weekly,	25c

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

Make up your mind to have better roads this summer between your farm and the depot from which you do your shipping.

The nitrogen or ammonia of manures and the potash are easily lost. The former is volatile and goes off in the air and the latter is carried into the earth by water.

Feed farm stock separately if possible, using the halter for the horses and stanchions for cattle. If this is not practicable, separate into small groups, putting animals of like physical strength and dispositions together. Do this with hogs and sheep as well as cattle and horses.

When the clover is wet with dew, keep the stock away from it. Many a good dairy cow has been lost because of a little carelessness in this respect. Dew-wet clover taken into the stomach generates gas with marvelous rapidity, and the animal dies quickly and in great agony. Clover is all right in its place, and all wrong out of place.

All soils contain enormous quantities of plant food, even the most unproductive, and crops require but little. The reason why some soils are so barren is that the essential elements, often abundant in them, are not in such form as to be available. By thorough working of the soil to a good depth the farmer can do much to improve the condition of things.

If you work the horses hard, and if their harness happens not to fit perfectly, you will have galled shoulders. Some relief, and a measure of prevention, is afforded by bathing the shoulders thoroughly with cold water as soon as the harness is removed. Take good care of the horses, even in little things, if you expect them to do a good full season's labor.

It is an entirely wrong practice, in the care of work horses, to give them drink only at morning, noon and night. Yet a great many farmers never think of giving water except at these times, no matter how hot the weather nor how hard the work. How would you like to go without water yourself from morning until noon, and from noon until night, with the mercury at ninety? It is not a very difficult thing to put a barrel of water in the wagon, or on a sled, and take it to the field with you And it will help to keep the team in better condition, and they will do more work than without it.—Selected.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer, Ennis, Texas.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

Prevents BALDNESS

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR FOR GROWTH AND COLOR

REMOVES DANDRUFF AND Restores Color TO Faded and Gray HAIR

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR FOR GROWTH AND COLOR

THE Best Dressing

AMERICAN HANDBOOK AND CITIZEN MANUAL.

BY

MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chic

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT of the Holy Ghost,

BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by persuing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE GUIDING HAND;

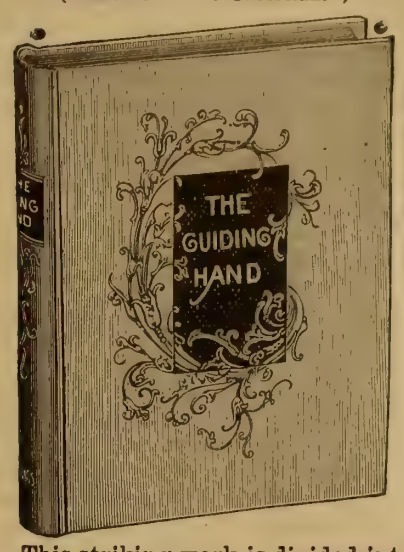
—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

-——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")



This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARROIN.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS
OF
FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trust worthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem"—Illustrated Christian Weekly

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy,"—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

CHICAGO.

The secretary of the State board of health is investigating the methods of Faith Healer Dowie and he may be prosecuted.

Mrs. Carrie Reid was shot and killed in the office where she was employed by an unknown man, who then killed himself.

The Woman's Alliance, the Humane Society and the Municipal Order League have joined hands to suppress street begging by children.

The veto of the Sunday closing ordinance by the mayor was condemned at a meeting at Central Music Hall under the auspices of the Sunday Rest Association.

John Randolph Hibbard, D D., the first pastor of the Chicago Society of the New Jerusalem, is dead. He came to Illinois in 1843.

Prof. Walter Sims has accepted a challenge from the Catholic Truth Society to a debate on the principles of the A. P. A. in Chicago.

A laboratory for the manufacture of drugs will be established at the county hospital.

Joseph Cornelius stopped shaving a man, shot James Simmons dead and resumed his work.

PROGRESS OF THE PULLMAN BOYCOTT.

Monday—General managers of the twenty-two Chicago terminal lines resolved to unitedly oppose the boycott on Pullman cars.

Employes in the Pullman shops at St. Louis and at Ludlow, Ky., struck in obedience to orders of the A. R. U.

Tuesday—The boycott against the cars of the Pullman company went into effect at noon. At midnight the switchmen along the line of the Illinois Central quit work.

A Santa Fe train was tied up at Raton, Colo., because it had a Pullman attached. At no other point was there serious delay.

Wednesday—Two hundred men on the Baltimore & Ohio, at South Chicago, struck.

Passenger travel by rail was practically stopped in California by the boycott against the Pullman cars, the Southern Pacific refusing to run any trains without them.

As a result of the boycott by the American Railway Union the Illinois freight service was paralyzed in Chicago and the suburban passenger service was suspended at 8 P. M. Pullman cars went out on the various lines except one.

The American Railway Union ordered a general strike on the Santa Fe, and trains were tied up in Colorado and New Mexico.

The America Railway Union ordered a general strike on the Northern Pacific to go into effect at 10 to night because of the discharge of switchmen who refused to handle Pullman cars.

A boycott on Pullman cars was declared at St. Louis.

The West Indiana switchmen and 1,100 men in the Illinois Central's Chicago shops struck to help along the Pullman boycott. The firemen's brotherhood threatens a strike and the Knights of Labor promise aid.

Thursday—Railroad employes at Minneapolis notified all lines to abandon Pullman cars, threatening to strike.

All through trains on the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe, in California, were tied up.

The Chicago general managers selected John M. Egan to lead their fight. They ordered 200 switchmen from the east.

All Northern Pacific employes at St. Paul and Minneapolis struck and not a west-bound train was moved.

The freight service on many Chicago lines was crippled by the strike, the number of strikers being considerably increased.

Friday—Judge Woods issued an order restraining strikers from interfering with the Santa Fe in Illinois.

The strike spread to many railroad centers and more than twenty railroads are involved.

Gov. Altgeld ordered militia to be in readiness to help the Illinois Central at Cairo, Ill.

The Mobile & Ohio surrendered to the strikers, agreeing to run no Pullman cars until the strike is settled.

Knights of Labor asked Senator Kyle to introduce a bill in Congress to permit the detachment of Pullman cars from trains.

COUNTRY.

Nine persons are reported killed by the tornado which swept the northwest Wednesday night.

The University of Michigan conferred degrees on 689 at its commencement.

Mormons have secured land and money to establish a college at Lamoni, Iowa.

Mrs. Betsy Smith, of Des Moines, Iowa, was found guilty of poisoning her blind husband and punishment fixed at life imprisonment.

Secretary Carlisle has rejected St. Gaudens' new design for the World's Fair medal and adopted one by E. S. Barber, of the Philadelphia mint.

The interstate commence commission announced that its order to reduce railroad freight rates from Chicago to the South would go into effect July 10.

The President has awarded medals of honor to five war heroes, among them William Toomer, of Chicago, and James Henry, of Maywood, Ill.

A detective has been assigned the duty of following President Cleveland when abroad to protect him from possible assault.

Prohibitionists at Des Moines have begun a suit to test the constitutionality of the new Iowa mulct law.

A cyclone is said to have swept over Keighly, Kan., doing great damage and killing many persons.

Forty-two lives are now thought to have been lost by the sinking of the tug Nicoll near New York.

Frank Bonguhr, of Aurora, Ill., shot and killed his wife, whom he mistook for a burglar. She had arisen to close a window.

President Cleveland says the financial situation does not justify apprehension and denies that payment of matured obligations to a large amount has been postponed.

Railroad officials have discovered a conspiracy among their own detectives by which the Western Indiana was robbed of property valued at more than $50,000.

A cyclone swept over southern Ohio, doing great damage. At Washington Court House many buildings were wrecked.

E. B. Christopher has been arrested for defrauding the Prudential Insurance Company of $11,000 through fictitious bills for supplies.

Indiana mine operators have yielded to the demand of their men for increased pay and work has been resumed.

The League of Republican Clubs at Denver declared for bimetalism and the admisson of Utah, New Mexico, Arizona, and Oklahoma, and advised its members to study up on female suffrage. W. W. Tracy, of Illinois, was re-elected president.

A mass meeting at Atlantic City, N. J, denounced the arrest of Justus Rice, the "cowboy evangelist," and his wife.

John L. Gilbert, of Burlington, N. J., seized a mad dog by the throat and choked it to death.

Officers of the Penn Steel Casting and Machine Company, Chester, Pa., were arrested on charges of frauds against the government.

The committee of the New York constitutional convention will report against female suffrage but advise its discussion.

Illinois has 6,400,000 acres in corn, an increase of 3 per cent, and its condition is exceptionally good.

Internal revenue receipts for June will exceed those of May by about $1,000,000.

Superintendent Corey, of the Carnegie works, who had charge of armor plates, admitted receiving presents of suits of clothes from his company.

E. R. Chapman and John McCartney were indicted for refusing to answer questions of the Senate sugar investigating committee.

FOREIGN.

Casimir-Perier was chosen President of France on the first ballot in the national assembly.

The trial of Santo, the assassin of President Carnot, has been set for July 23.

An accomplice of Santo named Granier committed suicide to escape arrest.

In Parliament James Keir Hardie made a sensation by a fierce attack on royalty.

While a mob was pillaging the Italian quarter in Lyons a barrel of petroleum exploded and three men were burned to death.

Italians in Grenoble were attacked by enraged Frenchmen who sacked wine shops and cafes and invaded the consulate.

London anarchists were charged by a crowd while denouncing royalty and fled for their lives.

Daniel Shehan made a deathbed confession that he and not his brother, who is now in prison, attempted to blow up the parliament buildings in 1875.

The new Bering Sea regulations were officially proclaimed by publication in London.

Santo was selected by lot from among a number of conspirators to assassinate President Carnot.

A workingman was arrested in Rome for threatening to kill Premier Crispi.

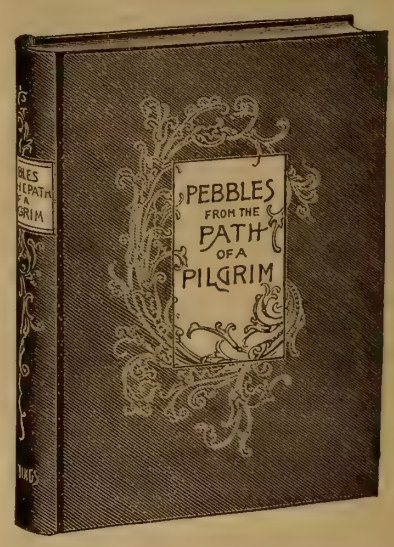
Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

"One of my sick headaches," you will hear people frequently say, as if the complaint was hopelessly incurable. As a matter of fact, Ayer's Pills not only relieve sick headache but effectually remove the cause of this distressing complaint, and so bring about a permanent cure.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50
Twelve Soul Winning Sermons, ... 50
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection 50
Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50
Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.
Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."
Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each.
Separate volumes may be had if desired.
The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI., No. 44 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,263.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
To the Cynosure Readers 8
The Debs' Civil War.... 8
Arbitrate! Arbitrate!... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
Pres. Jonathan Blanchard Remembered..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
A Sunday-school Travesty..... 1
Character and Teaching. 2
Trust in God and do the Right (Poetry)..... 3
Light and Character..... 3
SELECTED:
The Practice and Precept of Rome..... 3
Mysteries: Real and Spurious..... 3
Press Comment..... 3
Why the Strike will Fail 4
The New Paper 9
Commencement at Berea.. 4
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
Debs and the Debses..... 5
REFORM NEWS:
Work among Southern Baptists; The Far Northwest..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Boston to Berea; Practical Work in Southwest Missouri; Pith and Point..... 6
LITERATURE 6
IN BRIEF..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
N. C. A..... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16
MARKETS 16

At the commencement at Erskine College, Due West, S. C., fifty dollars was raised for a big Confederate monument to be set up on the college campus. It is questionable for what part of a liberal education such a structure would provide. It can only testify to brave and devoted deeds in behalf of an unholy cause. But would it not be wiser to promote the study of righteousness in some less equivocal way?

In the great strike of 1877 when Pittsburgh was for days at the mercy of the mob, and had later to pay millions for destroyed property, a Roman Catholic bishop appeased the wild frenzy of the rioters from the pilot of a locomotive. Last Saturday Archbishop Feehan of this city sent a letter to all the priests in his jurisdiction which was read in their churches next day. The message urged peace and good order on the part of all communicants of that church. This is well. But the simple fact that such a message is given in Romanist churches and not in Protestant ought to suggest to Archbishop Feehan something about "an ounce oi prevention." Why are his people found in mobs? Is there anything in Protestant Christianity that saves our sheriffs the trouble of reading riot acts?

The controversy between the anarchistic Governor of Illinois and President Cleveland will soon be a part of political history. The President wants the strike over, riot suppressed and the business of peace restored to its usual channels. The United States court has issued a strong injunction. Mr. Cleveland knows his business when he stands ready to enforce the order, as well as maintain inter-state commerce and the forwarding of the mails. Mr. Altgeld makes himself more obnoxious every time he says anything about the strike. His letter of Friday is a disgrace to his office. It is wise advice Senator Palmer sends him from Washington to—"shut up." The Senator was Governor of Illinois once himself. It was in 1871, when Chicago burned. An energetic Federal officer here, Geneal Sheridan, used his troops to blow up buildings to stop the fire, and afterward to keep the peace in our dismembered city. The Governor quarreled with the General on the petty question of functionary rights. Governor Altgeld may never be able to see the folly of his position, but most of the ten-year old boys of this great State can.

Dr. George F. Pentecost has given the "higher critics" a little problem. One of them lately approaching him with the argument that we cannot accept as true any book of which the author is unknown. The Pentateuch must be cast into the intellectual cavern of doubt because we don't know that Moses wrote the five books. We must not credit the book of Isaiah, because the prophet of that name did not write the whole of it. "Did you ever happen," said Dr. Pentecost to the doubter, "to see a a little mathematical treatise called the multiplication table?" He had. "Do you regard it as a work of authority?" He did, of course. "Well, do you know its author?" The man collapsed. "My friend," said Dr. Pentecost, "let us say that we know that the Bible is an authority, whether or not we know the human authors, because it works well."

The burning of the World's Fair buildings Thursday evening was a final and fitting answer to the question of their removal. As Dr. John Brown says of the grim old mastiff of his touching story: "Fit end for Rab, quick and complete. His teeth and his friends gone, why should he keep the peace and be civil?" So of the Taj Mahal of America, the most beautiful dream that architect and artist ever saw grow into material form. It had one mission, and but one. When the vast halls were emptied of their costly and beautiful wares; when the gay and curious crowd was gone, so long entranced, wondering and weary with the almost infinite variety and boundlessness of the display, why should these majestic and beautiful buildings be degraded to the scrap heap and the junk-dealer. Their cremation was a fit end—quick, complete, romantic.

On the 29th of June the Pullman company, it is said, sent to the U. S. revenue collector in Chicago the sum of $12,500.00 to pay the government license of $25 00 each on 500 buffet cars on which liquor is sold. This is an indictment which the whole array of secret labor unions ignore, whether in the strike or out of it. Another indictment, more fearful still, they utterly set aside. There are no railway trains more constantly run on the Sabbath day than those with Pullman cars. Whatever loss may fall to the Pullman corporation we hold to be a judgment for the crimes of liquor-selling and Sabbath desecration. Even if the employes make clear the case of too low wages, there may be no criminality in it. The greatest wrong done them is in the two instances above. When will our workingmen see this? Let the pastors and their arbitration committee begin here, and get things right with God.

The reply of Senator Davis of Minnesota to the railway men of his State, we read with thanks. It is a manly and states-manly word. A certain Mc-somebody from a lodge of the American Railway Union telegraphed him to support the Nebraska minister Kyle in his attempt to attach the U. S. Senate to Mr. Debs' train. Mr. Davis returned answer: "I have received your telegram. I will not support Senator Kyle's resolution. It is against your own real welfare. It is also a blow at the security, peace and rights of millions of people who never harmed you or your associates. My duty to the Constitution and the laws forbids me to sustain a resolution to legalize lawlessness. The aame duty rests upon yourself and your associates. The power to regulate commerce among the several States is vested by the Constitution in Congress. Your associates have usurped that power by force at Hammond and other places, and have destroyed commerce between the States in those particular instances. You are rapidly approaching the overt act of levying war against the United States; and you will find the definition of that act in the Constitution. I trust that wiser thoughts will regain control. You might as well ask me to vote to dissolve this government." The railway men of the country should be grateful for such advice. Mr. Davis is much more their friend than Mr. Debs.

Miss Frances E. Willard, whose return to this country after two years' recruiting in England has been marked by continual ovation, will tarry in Montreal until Chicago's angry hive is settled once more. New York and Boston have vied in doing her honor. The Interior has it that Miss Willard and Lady Somerset are to start on their trip around the world next fall with a monster petition which already contains three million names, covers twenty miles of paper and is signed in fifty different languages. This great polyglot petition was begun in 1883, and when it becomes sufficiently formidable in point of size it will be presented to the various governments of the world with befitting ceremonies. Arrangements for the presentation have already been partly made. The official delegation, consisting of Miss Willard, Lady Somerset, Mrs. Woodbridge, of Ohio, Mrs. Williams, of Canada, and Miss Anna Gordon, after arrangements for their itinerary have been completed, will start on a nine months' tour of the world to present the petition, and it is expected that there will be enrolled as delegates in this remarkable crusade one from every State in the Union and every province of Canada. Mr. William Pipe, who acted as Secretary of the Parliament of Religions last summer, will accompany the party and take charge of everything.

No man will ever feel right until he believes right and behaves right.

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL TRAVESTY.

BY REV. H H HINMAN.

It is with great surprise and regret that I see the following in an article in the Advance of June 28:

"It is true that things seem to be in a pretty bad way in our beloved country just now; but I see yonder a great army of boys coming to the rescue. They are the Boys' Brigade. They come marching from all directions in companies and battalions and regiments, dressed in soldiers' caps and army blue, with guns and drums and fifes and colors flying. ...Some one in writing about these brigades deplored them because they fostered the military spirit in the boys, which he thought might be harmful. But how much better it would have been for our country in the war, if citizen soldiers had only had such military drill as these boys are getting.....If we should have another war in the future I am sure there will go to the fields from these brigades a much better disciplined body of soldiers than there went the last time.....Already they are contributing more than their share to the interest of our patriotic days. On Decoration Day their (military) appearance was the best feature in many processions; on Flag Day they were out again.....On June 19 there was organized in Chicago the Illinois State Council of the Boys' Brigade which will enroll companies, issue charters, offices and commissions and membership."

I greatly deprecate this entire movement and especially that it has become a State institution, similar to that which gives to grand lodges power to "issue charters, offices and commissions." And mainly for two reasons:

1. Because of its demoralizing influence on the boys. I am aware that religious instruction is associated with the military drill and am not insensible to the value of Bible teaching; but it ought to be appreciated for its own sake and not as the price paid for the privilege of learning an art that, if used at all, shall be for the slaughter of human beings, and the incalculable demoralization of society: for such is war, and such are its results. Surely nothing can be in more striking contrast than the spirit and practice of war and the spirit of the Gospel of Christ. To affirm that to learn the arts of war will not tend to its practice is as absurd as to say that teaching these same lads to be proficient at cards or at baseball will not lead to the practice of such games. The case is even stronger; for war calls into exercise all the baser instincts of humanity.

Then, too, a large proportion, if not the large majority, of those brought into these brigades were already in the Sunday-school. They needed no such inducement and have, to say the least, received no moral benefit from the military instruction. That boys so trained will in the end come to have a perverted idea not only of war but also of Christianity, is one of the natural if not the inevitable results. Surely it will be in no wise helpful to our young men in their purpose to become disciples of the Prince of Peace, whose law requires them to "follow peace with all men," that they shall learn the art of fratricide.

2. Such a system of instruction is to be deprecated because we greatly desire that we may never "have another war in the future." Nothing is better established than the fact that the cultivation of the arts of war tends to the development of a military spirit, which is almost sure to find occasion for its exercise. Had there been more of Christianity and less of military enthusiasm, Great Britain and her American colonies would have solved their differences without seven years of bloodshed, suffering and demoralization. Surely the wars of 1812–14 and of 1846–48, to say nothing of our disgraceful Seminole war, would have been avoided if there had been more of justice, patience and humanity and less knowledge of and glory in the military art.

It may not be generally known that in those parts of the South in which the slave population was greatest, there had been for some years a system of military drill which included nearly all the white men of military age. It was known as the "patrol" system. But for this preparation the secession would have never been undertaken, and armed warfare against the general government would not have been the result. Slavery and militarism were morally identical and went hand in hand. It was the military skill and preparation that brought on that terrible conflict between France and Germany in 1870–71, and the vast armies of Europe are not only the perpetual menace of her peace, but the intolerable burden of her people.

If we are ever to reach that period when men "shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither learn war any more," it will be after we cease to teach our young men the arts of war, and have ourselves more of the spirit of Him who taught us to love our enemies and to do good unto them that hate us.

Oberlin, O.

CHARACTER AND TEACHING.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER

HOW THEY AFFECT OUR BELIEF.

Phillips Brooks said: "The preacher is the message plus the personality of the messenger." It is important that he proclaim the truth. This is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto the salvation of those that believe. It is the divinely appointed vehicle by which the Holy Spirit enters the sinful heart and accomplishes that moral transformation by which he is changed from dead works to the service of the living God. But it is of greater importance that he be an embodiment of the doctrines he proclaims; a living example of their quickening, uplifting, purifying power. "Be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity."

It is admitted that a man may state the truth without experiencing its power. There is a difference between theory and practice. To master the principles of a science is one thing; to practice the correlated art is another. A man may have the knowledge of the principles, while he is utterly deficient in their practical application. I have known a man who graduated with high honors in his class, who inherited a large and rich farm, and who wrote able and lucid articles in a farmer's magazine on the way a farm should be kept and the principles of agriculture that would make the most out of a given number of acres. And yet there was not a more conspicuous failure as a practical farmer in all the State. He seemed absolutely wanting in the faculty of applying the principles he could so clearly state. A man may be well versed in the principles of financiering and able to instruct others, and yet he may not be able to manage his own affairs so as to make ends meet. A man may master the theory of music and be able to instruct others in its principles, and yet not be able to sing a single note.

So an unsaved man may have an intellectual knowledge of God's Word, he may set in order its teachings, and enforce them by logical arrangement, intellectual acumen, rhetorical adornment and eloquent presentation; but it is still true that the influence of these truths upon his life and character is the most potent factor in his ability to reach the hearts and direct the lives of men.

The teacher cannot be separated from the doctrines taught, any more than the printed matter from the fabric upon which the impressions are made. He is not simply the censer which holds the burning coals and the incense, but the flower that exhales the fragrance that itself inherently possesses. The principle is this, in order to do good, we must first be good. Character and life are the measure of the power of the doctrines we preach. We must be saved ourselves in order to save those who hear us.

1. Character and life modify our views of doctrine. Two men look out upon a beautiful landscape. One has a cultivated taste, a poetical spirit, a sensitive nature, responsive to nature's voices; the other is cold, dull, phlegmatic, with no eye for beauty and no soul to enjoy it. The latter sees only a combination of dirt and wood and grass and water. The other sees the harmonious combination of divers excellencies producing a beauty that enraptures his soul and suggests the prayer to Him whose hand created all this: "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us!"

So two men look into God's Word and study it. One is a saved man. He has believed on the Lord Jesus Christ. His sins have been pardoned through the righteousness of Christ. He has been delivered from the power and love and pollution of sin by the grace of Christ. The Holy Spirit has revealed to him the deep, hidden meaning of the doctrines of his holy Word, taking the things that are Christ's and showing them unto him. The other is an unbeliever. He knows not the efficacy of Christ's death to deliver from the guilt of sin, nor the power of Christ's life to free from the love and pollution of sin. His eye hath not seen, nor his ear heard, neither hath it entered into his heart, the things that God hath prepared for his people. A veil is upon his heart while he reads. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." To the latter Christ is without form or comeliness; there is no beauty that we should desire him. To the other he is the chiefest among ten thousand, the one altogether lovely.

Nathaniel Hawthorne says: "Christianity is a grand cathedral with divinely-pictured windows; standing without we can see no beauty nor possibly can imagine any; standing within every ray of light reveals a harmony of unspeakable splendor." The man who has not recognized Christ as Saviour and Lord stands without; the believer stands within the temple.

We all know how difficult it is to be candid in our judgments when passion and prejudice are involved. Assail some time-honored custom that may be working great harm, and see how unfair and unjust its defenders are in sustaining it! They cannot weigh your arguments dispassionately. Let two good men become alienated, and how impossible it is for them to judge righteous judgment! How natural for one to discount any good that is seen in the other, and to magnify any fault! The sinner is far from God. He regards God as his enemy. "The natural heart is enmity against God, not subject to his law, neither indeed can be." The study of God's Word and the discovery of its teachings respecting sin, and holiness, and obedience, and rewards and penalties, and atonement and sanctification and glorification, stir the deepest passions of the soul and awaken every smouldering ember of prejudice. His views of divine truth are necessarily distorted and fragmentary, unreal and false. It is necessary to have these prejudices removed and these passions subdued by the impulsive power of a divine affection before we can see light clearly in that clearest light of God. The lenses of the telescope must be cleansed and freed from all particles of impurity that would interfere with the clearest vision before observations are made through it. So the human soul must be cleansed in the blood of Christ and sanctified by the Spirit through the Word before the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ is seen. We all, as unveiled mirrors, exposed to the glory of the Lord, are made glorious reflectors of his glory.

Boston, Mass.

TRUST IN GOD AND DO THE RIGHT.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

Why sigh for the days that are vanished and gone?
Why mourn when life's journey is over and done?
Why yield to forebodings? be up and away!
The best and the brightest is with us to-day.
The sun that is shining, the zephyrs that blow,
The birds that are singing, the rivers that flow—
All call thee, and bid thee arise from the dust.
Awake, O ye dreamers! look forward and trust.

Are thy spirits cast down? do thy moments seem drear?
Has death claimed for his what thou cherished most dear?
Is the tempest around thee? do storm lightnings play;
While God and his Providence seem far away?
O pilgrim to Zion, the day may seem long,
The night may be dark and the enemy strong,
But wake from thy slumbers, glad tidings we bring;
So gird on thine armor, look upward and sing.

Here's balm for the wounded, and joy for the sad,
And hope for the fallen, and life for the dead.
O love, pure and tender, how sacred shall be
Thy gift to the fallen on Calvary's tree!
Then why should we murmur, or why should we fear
The best of all days are the days that are here.
So with eyes still upturned to His mountains untrod,
Look forward, and onward, and upward to God.

Steamburgh, N. Y.

LIGHT AND CHARACTER.

BY CYRUS SMITH.

If secret societies were good, the best and most noble thing they could do would be to let their light shine. But this they can not do without a change of character, because their light is under the ban of secrecy. The light that is in them is darkness, because guarded by secret oaths and obligations, so that those needing it most, however destitute, are debarred. Their light is so selfishly controled that cripples, women, fools and all poor unable to pay are excluded. "If the light that is in thee be darkness how great is that darkness."

For a lodge to let its light shine would change its character so that it would no longer be a secret society. So that to obey God would destroy lodge character as truly as water runs down hill.

A lodge is so dark in character that it cannot reflect the light of Christ. The attempt is to shine in borrowed light, only to deceive. On this point it has been severely remarked of lodge ministers, "They steal the livery of heaven to serve the devil in."

God understands the light of those principles which give character; consequently he commands all Christians everywhere to "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." It is as unpopular to "reprove them" as it is to follow Christ, yet "if we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another," and the atonement made by his blood "cleanses us from all sin." Christ and his church are all we need depend on for light and Christian character, and "in him is no darkness at all."

Christians must be in principle the same as Christ to have the right character and partake of his nature. His nature is that of light, both human and divine, and perfectly different from that of the lodge, as there is no darkness in him at all. He is "the light of the world"—the right kind of a human light and the right kind of a divine light, and the right character to be held up by the Gospel to draw men to the light of life, away from the darkness of secrecy, and away from the principles and character of the lodge.

De Kalb, Ia.

THE PRACTICE AND PRECEPT OF ROME.

Why should we not follow the fashion; join the multitude who dread the sneer, "illiberal in religion;" and accept the Romanist as a Christian church to be so accepted and admitted to the fellowship of evangelical churches? Some instances quoted below from Messiah's Herald are a reason why not:

The Christian Advocate publishes the following statement: "Every error against which Martin Luther lifted up his voice is held tenaciously by Romanists, and several have been added. Here is a case in point. 'The Apostleship of Prayer,' 1611 Girard avenue, Philadelphia, publishes a calendar of monthly intentions. We have consulted the announcement for April, 1893. It is an interesting document. At the close it offers General Indulgences, which are 'applicable to the souls in purgatory,' and those who make the morning offerings of the day the first degree can gain 'a plenary indulgence on the day of admission, and one Friday and one other day in each month.' An indulgence of one hundred days each time that an associate, wearing the badge of the Apostleship, repeats orally or mentally the aspiration, 'Thy kingdom come,' is promised. On the third Sunday after Easter they are instructed to invoke the patronage of St. Joseph in every trial, and on the Wednesday after that they are 'to seek our lady's help in doubt.' Reading these things one might suppose himself in Austria, Chili, or Old Spain in the Middle ages.

"The English Churchman calls attention to a letter in the Universe from a Leicester Roman Catholic priest, who 'offers to sell his spiritual wares at a remarkably cheap rate;' or, to put it more correctly, he 'offers to give these wares to those who will send him the paltry sum of sixpence'—which amounts to the same thing. The money is to be applied to help the local school. This is what the Rev. Father Holland writes, his letter headed 'A Generous Return for Sixpence;' —'For all who send me even the small sum of sixpence, I offer the Holy Mass three times each week, and, besides, I send them a raffle ticket for my watch, which will be raffled on August 7.' 'Three masses for sixpence—only twopence each —and a raffle ticket thrown into the bargain!' This combination of masses and gambling is noteworthy, says our contemporary. The masses would, from our point of view, be dear even at this low price. If we were given to gambling practices, we should be tempted to inquire, before parting with our sixpence, what is the money value of this priest's watch? Is it made of gold, or silver, or is it merely a seven-and-sixpenny 'Waterbury'? In any case, we marvel that Rome is not ashamed to thus make a trade in sacraments, and at the same time unblushingly promote gambling."

Sir Robert Peel, of England, said nearly sixty years ago, "The day is not distant, and may be very near, when we shall all have to fight the battle of the Reformation again." Rev. H. Grattan Guinness, commenting on the statement, has said: "That day has come. It has been upon us for some time. It has found us unprepared, and as a result the battle is to some extent going against us." Again he says: "The Reformation of the sixteenth century which gave birth to Protestantism was based on Scripture. It gave back to the world the Bible. It taught the Scriptures; it exposed the errors and corruptions of Rome by the use of the sword of the Spirit. It applied the prophecies, and accepted their practical guidance. Such reformation work requires to be done afresh."

Here is another item of evidence from the New York Observer:

"In a letter recently written to a prominent man in New York City by a friend visiting Naples, Italy, a ceremony presumably unheard of by most of our readers is recorded. 'It was St. Anthony's day,' says the correspondent, 'and I went to the great church of St. Anthony to see the young horses baptized and blessed. Every young horse in Naples, before entering upon his life-work, must be baptized, blessed, consecrated and brought into the church as fully as a horse can be. Indeed the ceremony is just what it is with a person; not only fine horses, but cab, cart and car horses, decorated with tall plumes and silver ornaments, were led by hundreds to the court of the church, each having a separate groom. Race horses are taken to the altar in the church; the priests read to the horses in Latin, each one by himself, and then sprinkle his face, his shoulders and back with the holy water, which is carried in an urn by an assistant. When the ceremony is ended, a cord strung with thirty or forty small cakes is placed about his neck, and he is walked away in a slow and becoming manner. I secured a position close to the priests, and watched their faces and manner intently. They looked like intelligent, good men, and I am quite sure they thought they were doing their duty. I would give anything if I could look at the matter for a moment from their standpoint.' And this passes for a religious ceremony!"

MYSTERIES: REAL AND SPURIOUS.

[One of the earliest lecturers in the reform urged by the National Christian Association was Rev. J. R. Baird. His original and pithy Scotch arguments will be remembered by many of our older readers. They will be well pleased to renew their acquaintance in the following article sent by him to the Christian Nation from his home in Indiana, Pennsylvania.]

In the year of our Lord 54, the Apostle Paul, in 2 Thess. 2: 7, tells us that the mystery of iniquity doth already work, and those heathen mysteries, many of which appear to have been the crafty work of ancient heathen philosophy, those of whom the Apostle speaks, who for a pretence make long prayers which are Christless in name and character. And when a man dies who is a member of a secret order, and has paid his dues regularly into the lodge, they invariably succeed by crafty work, in time of grief, to obtain the consent of the widow and family to allow the lodge to bury him, and then in lodge construe her's and the family's consent into a request, and charge his funeral expenses to the home, and collect it at the settlement of his estate, and most generally that claim was in first. And thus we have often seen the exact fulfilment of Luke 20: 47, "Which devour widows' houses, and for a shew make long prayers, the same shall receive greater damnation." But thanks be unto God who by his grace did call us out of the darkness and delusion of the mystery of iniquity, and hath called us with a holy calling into the mystery of grace. As the Greeks and Romans had their mysteries, so had the Christian faith which the Apostle Paul preached. He spoke of the mystery of iniquity, and the mystery of grace, of the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience, of the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom which God ordained before the world, which none of the princes of this world knew. He regarded the calling of the Gentiles and the rejection of the Jews, the relation between Christ and the church, under the symbol of marriage, and the resurrection from the dead as mysteries. And he says, "Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness:" God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory. The heathen mysteries were the concealment of things of which it was a shame even to speak. But the kingdom of heaven which he brought near to his converts had the highest of all mysteries: mysteries that were kept from the foundation of the world, mysteries which concerned man's highest welfare for time and for eternity, mysteries for which the candidates had to prepare, not by a long and elaborate course of outward ceremonies, but by a total change of heart and life. And unlike the heathen mysteries, the Christian mysteries were made known to every one, and revealed to the humblest capacity. It was not the wise and the learned and the noble only who were made to know the deep things of God, the unsearchable riches of Christ Jesus, the love that passeth knowledge; but the ignorant and simple-minded, the lowly in disposition and in circumstances, those who were converted, and had become as little children. The things that were hid from the wise and prudent were revealed unto babes. Those who were initiated into the Eleusinian mysteries, as I have seen and have said, were forbidden on pain of death to disclose them. Members of Freemason and other secret societies are sworn to the utmost secrecy in regard to what takes place in their assemblies. But it is not so in regard to those who are initiated into the mysteries of grace. They are commanded to publish them everywhere, so that every one may be partaker with them of like precious faith. These mysteries are not esoteric mysteries for the favored few: they are for all, for all need them, as they need the vital air, and the vital light of heaven, and the vital food of earth. Unlike Plato, or Socrates, or Gamaliel, Jesus Christ came not to win a few devoted followers, to found a school of philosophy, or to form a narrow sect. He says to every one that hath ears to hear, and hearts to understand: "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven."

PRESS COMMENT.

The expulsion of Powderly from the Knights of Labor calls attention to the downfall of both the man and the organization. Eight years ago both were at the height of their power. The Knights of Labor were precipitating strikes all over the country in the spring of 1886, and the master-workman was treated by the politicians as the head of a new power in the government of the country. During the month of April, Powderly was invited to appear before a House committee, and a member suggested that it might be well "to consider what, in your judgment, can be constitutionally done [in the interest of labor], and what might be done and ought to be done by amendments to the Constitution." The master-workman thanked the Congressman for the suggestion, and he also promised to comply with the request of another member of the committee that, in considering this question, he would "take into view the complex nature of this government, and the divided responsibility between federal and State legislation, so as to make your suggestions such as the national legislation can duly act upon." Now that the organization has practically collapsed and Powderly himself is expelled by those who cling to the wreck, it is hard to believe that only a few years ago the leader of the Knights of Labor was regarded as one of the "great powers."—The Nation.

The Covenanters, who recently met in annual synod in this city, says the Philadelphia Call, are men terribly in earnest. They refuse to vote, holding that no Christian should, even to that extent, support a government which they claim upholds the liquor business by licensing it, by its laws permits divorce, and does other things equally reprehensible in their eyes. These churchmen are also opposed to secret societies, and they stand up for their opinions on these and all subjects most manfully and enthusiastically. The Covenanters are a comparatively small denomination, but they certainly make up in earnestness what they lack numerically. They come from widely separated parts of the country and wear clothes not always of the latest cut or most stylish material; their hair and beards are not always trimmed according to city fashions, but there are among them many countenances, many venerable heads, which would attract the attention of the artist or the physiognomist; heads full of character, striking and sometimes noble; evidently these are men who, in times calling for great actions, great sacrifices and great fidelity, will not be found wanting.

We are sorry to note that the Board of Trustees of Franklin and Marshall College disapproves of the co-education. Though they have applicants to enter the institution, they persist that it is unwise and connected with danger. We are proud of the record of Heidelberg, and believe to day that institution stands higher than ever because of the refining and ennobling influence of the young ladies. There is an atmosphere about a college where young ladies and gentlemen attend that you never find where only young men attend. There is no opportunity for such young men to become familiar with the best rules of etiquette where they are denied the association of the ladies. There are more advantages in favor of co-education than there are dangers attending it. Dr. Mosser well said: "The question of higher female education is in the air. Out of 169 colleges in the West and Northwest 130 are co-educational. In the East tradition is against it. It is not a question of sex; it is a question of intelligence. Women are forging ahead in all our institutions, and we ought to give the matter consideration."— Christian World.

This is a time of "bosses." One of the Chicago dailies has just given us a picture of Mr. Debs seated on top of the city with the railroad lines which terminate here gathered up in his lap while he ties them in a knot. At this writing Mr. Debs is boss. His reign may be over before this article reaches the reader, but just now he is commanding things to stand still. Fortunately he has not tried his hand on the sun, and the corn is permitted to grow, the wheat and oats to ripen, and the new-mown hay to dry. A fortnight ago it was Mr. McBride who had the country in his hands, while miners loafed and drank and knocked down deputy sheriffs, and factories stopped, and business men groaned, and the price of coal went up a hundred times faster and higher than wages. ....The employes have pooled their interests in the American Railway Union and other organizations. These organizations are linking themselves to other organizations. If they should all get together and have one Cæsar, what would the result be? The question is painful, for the answer is obvious. The men who are now forced back by a regiment of militia or federal troops, will no longer yield when their numbers equal all who can be brought against them. The social organizations have already adopted Cæsarism; what they now wait and work for is sufficient numbers to win the battle. The capitalists have also adopted Cæsarism, and the politicians are getting there as fast as circumstances will permit. Cæsar seems to be the coming man.—The Advance.

WHY THE STRIKE WILL FAIL.

THE GRAND MASTER OF A LABOR UNION GIVES AN EMPHATIC OPINION

"The triumph of this railroad strike would be a triumph of anarchy," said Grand Master Wilkinson of the Brotherhood of Trainmen to-day, says the Daily News of Saturday afternoon.

"The time has arrived when things must be called by their right names, without any foolish delicacy. It is a foregone conclusion though that the movement must fail. That is my conviction. Any other termination would be a concession that the government cannot control the nation, and that the lawless elements can have the upper hand."

For ten years Mr. Wilkinson has been the Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Trainmen. He is one of the most intelligent railroad men in the whole country. Without the least maliciousness or vindictiveness he deplores the actions of those who have led the men to the recent destructive demonstrations. Mr. Wilkinson dissected the situation this morning in a style that indicated his thorough comprehension of the present conditions.

"The termination of this strike," continued Mr. Wilkinson, "will demonstrate the fallacy and inefficiency of sympathetic strikes. They are wrong, misconceived and cannot win. You might as well say you would go and commit suicide because you were much attached to your cousin who committed suicide. Every man in our order who has joined this strike has by his own act expelled himself from the brotherhood. Our union has ordered no strike and the member who joins the sympathy demonstration violates his oath. His action is but that of an individual. If I were the owner of a railroad, and an engineer should refuse to work with a non-union firemean put on in the place of such an individual, I wouldn't let such an engineer even walk on my road. Should an engineer refuse to work with a non-union fireman, when the firemen have been ordered out by their union for a grievance, that is an entirely different matter.

"Instead of being a struggle for the supremacy of organized labor, this strike is a terrible blow at workingmen's unions. Unions have made some of these men in this movement, and before I would aim the dastardly blow they are delivering at the life of the unions, I would be hung on a rack and torn limb from limb. In strikes of this nature they strike first and afterward ask for arbitration, instead of asking first for arbitration.

(Continued on 12th page.)

COMMENCEMENT AT BEREA.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 29, 1894.

Commencement week at Berea, Ky., is a laborious one for the busy housewife. They feast their guests on "the fat of the land." It is a spot of historic adventure where a few cabins of the ante-bellum era remain. These mementoes of a crude state of society are fast disappearing before the general thrift and enterprise clustering about the college since the days and deeds of dark and bloody memory have passed. Father Fee retains a few specimen "shot and shell" near his front door, silent but suggestive reminders that time and change sometimes convert the missiles of war into tributes of peace.

The founder of Berea, a true Kentuckian, has defied the rage of hell's deepest hate and still lives in his "old Kentucky home," blessed and a blessing to all who look upon his genial face. It is true that the twilight of life's autumn deepens as he nears the incorruptible and eternal, but he is the same energetic, uncompromising Spartan who defied opposition and defended the oppressed when very few had courage to stand with him in the breach. Life to him has been earnest and real, and his long career will ever be memorable in the annals of freedom when he is sharing in the victories of heaven.

President Frost is in labors abundant, and with the co-operation of the members of his faculty has given a marked impetus to every department of the institution since his installation. He is putting the whole energy of his cultured, consecrated manhood into the enterprise, and the inspiration of his example sends a new thrill of vigor through every avenue in the entire body.

My first contact with teachers and pupils was at Ladies' Hall on Tuesday evening, when all shared in a repast creditable to those who spread the feast of thought for their invited guests.

A protracted drouth was relieved by an early shower on commencement morning, to the delight of all. Very soon the sun was shining in his strength, and every thoroughfare was thronged with eager expectants moving towards the college campus. The focal center for annual reunion was at the "Tabernacle," capable of sheltering three thousand people, which proved "a shelter in the time of storm" before the day was passed.

Looking upon the gathering multitude the Bible student could hardly fail to recall the prophetic words of Isaiah: "The mountain of the Lord's house shall be exalted and shall be established in the tops of the mountains and all nations shall flow into it." The caravan entering Noah's Ark presented a catalogue of animals scarcely more complete, while diversity in the human species must have been equal to that of the family that God shut into the Ark, and all had gathered to grace the occasion of an annual commencement of an Abolition college in Kentucky.

Eight o'clock was the appointed hour for service, but nearly an hour passed in preliminaries before Pres. Frost got his forces marshalled for business. Without exaggeration, it may be claimed for the graduating classes in the collegiate and normal departments that they acquitted themselves with honor, without regard to "color, sex, or previous condition." The remarks by the President in conferring the diplomas were appropriate and brief, and his words were evidently spoken with deep emotion.

Following the benediction came the picnic hour, which, though not down on the printed program, was accepted by common consent, and proved to be one of the most popular extemporized features of the occasion.

Dr. Arthur Little, of Boston, was the orator of the afternoon. Fully three thousand people had gathered to listen to his words; but he had scarcely "lifted up his voice" when the echoing heavens responded with a terrific "down pour" and cannonade of a regular old-fashioned thunder storm. The doctor contended obstinately for the floor, but after a sharp contest yielded the platform and gracefully subsided for a season. The band and chorus took up and urged on the contest until the elements became placid, and after a forty-minutes' rest the doctor resumed and fought the battle through to a finish. I doubt if a clearer, more appropriate, or really eloquent and instructive address on living questions has graced the commencement of any American college than that given by Dr. Little at Berea. Bombast or self-adulation have no place in the doctor's conception of a life worth living, either in college or out of it; and the scathing he gave to Colonel Breckenridge, for his confessed and shameless social impurity, struck a responsive chord in his audience voiced by hearty applause.

Short impromptu speeches followed, and then the crowd dispersed as quietly and orderly as if retiring from church, with very rare exceptions.

Thursday, the 28th, was given to trustee work; and though there were well-defined differences and sharp encounters, it may be truthfully affirmed that the sessions, protracted from 8 A. M. until 2 o'clock of the morning following, were begun in love, continued in close application to business, and ended in good will and substantial harmony.

The outlook for Berea is hopeful, and the pioneer Abolition college of the South is deserving of the liberal support of the friends of education in every part of our common country.

J. P. STODDARD.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The weather —Yale 'ssecret societies —Legislative matters. Untaxed property —A curious treasure trove.

There is something wonderfully fascinating to the average mind in weather prognostications. It is a kind of innocent fortune-telling concerning a subject in which every body is interested. If the old saw holds true, "as July, so the next January," we can confidently expect our "January thaw" in the season of it. The intense heat, however, has been tempered by the coolness of the nights. And the saintly calm of these July mornings before the sounds of labor have begun; of that roseate blue in which the stars slowly dissolve one by one like earthly hopes in their heavenly fulfillment; when the first level beams strike across the open spaces between the hills, and send golden arrows of light through the trees, and raise in our minds the wonder how many shades and combinations of green there are in the world, and why artists do not occasionally give us a green landscape instead of gray and brown and yellow ones. They gives us wonderful imitations of skyey effects, but not so when it comes to treating more mundane things, like grass and foliage. I have often wondered why, but perhaps it is only another illustration of the fact that the simplest and nearest things are not always the easiest of attainment.

One of Boston's wealthy club men played a a hand-organ on the Common for a wager of $50 recently, another member of the club having dared him to do it while they were indulging in a "smoke talk" over the ludicrous incidents attending initiations when they were members of secret societies at college. Yet these very men who will make buffoons of themselves for a wager and go through the most ridiculous ceremonies in a secret society are the ones who are the most afraid of incurring the least shadow of ridicule by espousing any unpopular cause. I notice that the June number of Munsey's Magazine has an interesting article on Yale secret societies, with fine illustrations of their club-houses where no light of day is suffered to penetrate. The policy of the faculty, though on the whole adverse to these orders, has not seemed to check them in any material degree. The oldest and richest, the order of Skull and Bones, has one fund of $41,000. The expense of joining the Greek-Letter societies is about $75 a year for each student; so the Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Psi Upsilon, which takes in about 35 members annually, not to say anything of the others, largely augments the cost of college life, making it proportionately harder for indigent students, and fathers and and mothers in humble circumstances, who do not realize what snares are set up for their boys in these secret haunts of darkness.

The bill increasing the stock of the Bell Telephone Company to $50,000,000 has been vetoed by the Governor; but they speedily introduced another bill with some changes which it was claimed would meet all his objections, and it was promptly passed. These big corporations have a grip on our Legislature not pleasant to contemplate. But the one all-engrossing subject is the Meigs Railway bill, which, after much tinkering, has just been passed with a referendum clause. When first introduced it had many obnoxious features. It provided for State aid to the amount of $10,000,000; it gave no guarantee for the payment of damages, and it gave to the company a permanent right-of-way without any other return than the expected benefit to the public in relieving the congested districts of Boston. This would have created a far worse and more unscrupulous monopoly than even the West End. The referendum, while it is an excellent thing in many respects, may be abused. Our legislators are elected and paid to make laws. Why should they expect the people to do their business. The temptation will be to rush through other "crude and complicated pieces of legislative patchwork," as the Journal calls the Meigs bill, and then look to the public vote to take up the dropped stitches, and undo the evils resulting from their own laziness and lack of wise insight.

The House has voted to use the Gold Cure at the Hospital for Dipsomaniacs. Yet, as one of the members remarked, the State provides no hospital for epileptics, whose infirmity is often a heritage from intemperate parents. No owners of patent medicine nostrums were ever more persistent in advertising than the proprietors of the various gold cures who can now claim the State's endorsement.

About $500,000,000 of taxable property escapes taxation in Boston every year. At least, so it is estimated. The wealthy men who thus evade the assessor do not probably look upon themselves as thieves and robbers; but to what better title can they lay claim, who thus shirk paying their honest dues to the State, leaving it to others who are poor and obliged to labor for their modest incomes, to make up the deficit.

Any one of an observing turn of mind who passes in the vicinity of the dump at East Boston, would be likely to wonder if somebody had been dreaming that Capt. Kidd's money was hidden there, as he sees the army of little ragmuffins swarming over it, digging with might and main under the rubbish and filth. Many old government documents were partially destroyed in the State street fire, and burying them in the dump was the rather peculiar method which the government officials took to complete the work. But the urchins aforesaid were shrewder than Uncle Sam's employes, and unearthed the papers for the sake of the precious revenue stamps, which are now yielding them rich returns. They have already obtained from one single dealer in old stamps, an aggregate of between three and five hundred dollars. Some future Jay Gould among them may be laying the foundation of a colossal fortune. The great fortunes of the world have in many cases originated quite as humbly.

Elizabeth E Flagg.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The assassination of President Carnot as a text—Socialism, anarchy and secret societies not dangerous in Europe only—The battle with the papacy.

Washington, July 4, 1894.

It is not surprising that at the hour when a large number of distinguished officials of our government, and the diplomatic corps, should have been gathered together in one Washington church to hear services in memory of the assassinated French President, several ministers in other Washington churches should have been preaching sermons in which the assassination was referred to and the danger of the spread of anarchy in the United States pointed out. It would have been strange under the circumstances had it been otherwise. Our ministers are the sentinels upon the public watch towers, and they are expected to see coming dangers and to warn people who do not occupy places so elevated.

Rev. Dr. T. S. Hamlin's sermon was on "Liberty and Anarchy," and the subject was treated in his usual exhaustive manner, beginning with Macauley's warning that the time might come when it would be necessary to destroy liberty in order to preserve civilization. He called attention to the fact that socialism, an organized and mighty force in every leading nation of the world, which cast 1,800,000 at the last German parliamentary election and seated 40 members of the Reichstag, has an active group in the British House of Commons and another in the French Chamber of Deputies, and secret organizations in Russia, Italy and Spain, appears to be ripening into anarchy.

Speaking of the foothold which anarchy has obtained in the United States, Dr. Hamlin said: "We have been looking at these phenomena across the Atlantic; but it is time for us to turn our eyes to our own country. We have flattered ourselves that our free institutions; our thorough equality of all citizens before the law; our vast extent of territory, putting the ownership of soil within the reach of every man; our public schools and separation of church and state, would safeguard us against the development of extreme socialism in these United States.....But we are being rapidly undeceived.....When Lincoln fell, we said, 'This is an incident of war; it signifies nothing as to our civilization.' When Garfield was murdered we called the assassin insane. The slayer of Carter Harrison is now having his sanity officially determined, a sad commentary on our criminal jurisprudence. We have refused to see in cases like these anything more than freaks of cranks. But these men were murdered in office, and because they were in office. No public man of his day was purer, more humane, or more patriotic than Carnot. When his assassin was asked whether he had a personal grievance against the President, he replied, 'No, but he was a tyrant, and I killed him for that reason.' Victoria is as hateful to the anarchist as Alexander of Russia; William of Germany as his iron chancellor, Bismarck; Crispi, one of the most enlightened statesmen of Europe, as the Sultan of Turkey; the president of a republic as the hold of a military despotism."

After pointing out how demagogues have taken advantage of the existing discontent to preach anarchy to Americans, Dr. Hamlin said: "We have spent time on hair-splitting theologies and ecclesiastical politics that should have been given to solving the problems of our Christian civilization. Good citizens, within and without the churches; order-loving, law-abiding men, can no longer afford to whistle socialism and anarchy down the wind or to commit them to the policemen and the sheriff. The wise cannot afford to be so absorbed in metaphysics and ancient history as to be oblivious to conditions on the next square or in the adjoining alley The rich cannot afford to ostentatiously display their wealth in hunting for fresh luxuries and new sensations, thinking to quiet by a dole of bread the sense of injustice in the thousands that are starving in enforced idleness."

Rev. Dr. McKim preached a similar sermon on "The danger and the hope of the Republic," in which he impressed upon his hearers the power exerted by those who lead pure domestic lives, and the danger of selfishness and greed in dealing with their fellow men.

Rev. J. J. Muir preached on the duty of the citizen to the official, and insisted that the official should at all times be properly protected against assassination, and that the dissemination of Christian intelligence among the masses should be increased.

Dr. Sunderland, the President's pastor, preached a powerful sermon on the text, "The powers that be are ordained of God," closing with an attack upon the Roman Catholic church and the Jesuits, and predicting thus: "We have had our battles on various vital questions in the past, but the battle with the papacy is yet to come, and may even now be at the doors."

The railroad strikes are exciting the interest of Congress. Resolutions have been introduced in both House and Senate bearing on the question and some action is probable, but it is not likely to be of the hands-off nature asked for by the strike leaders, although there are a few demagogues in Congress who are willing for the sake of votes to do or not do anything; but they are too few in number to be a factor in the matter.

*

DEBS AND THE DEBSES.

Hinsdale, N. H., July 6, 1894

Editor Cynosure:—Owing no doubt to Mr. President Debs and his strike the Cynosure is not received and I am forced to read other papers. I find in to-day's New York Sun an editorial headed "Why Don't They Speak." After telling how squarely the strike is directed against the people in general and what an outrage it would have been to the people had the railways yielded to Debs' demands, the Sun continues: "Why is it that from not a single labor organization, whose name is thus misused by Debs in his impossible despotism, do we hear a voice condemning Debs and standing up for the simple rights of the mass of people thus indefensibly assaulted?"

Is it possible this leading newspaper does not know the reason? Is not the "Railway Union" (though not even one year old) a secret organization? Are not all such "labor organizations" secret? Are not all the rank and file of these societies sworn to obey their superiors? And is it likely that these superiors, whether "Grand Master Workmen," "Exalted" something-or-other, or others who glory in their high-sounding titles, —is it likely any of these will speak against Debs when no one knows how soon he may be, in fact, dictator of the secrecy-ruled—and likely to be ruined—United States of America, once supposed to be the land of the free?" H. E. Hunter.

REFORM NEWS.

WORK AMONG SOUTHERN BAPTISTS.

COLORED CHURCHES HEAR, BUT SOMETIMES HATE, THE TRUTH.

New Orleans, July 6, 1894.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—I have been very much ailing since I last wrote you. Although I have not been confined, I have nevertheless been sufficiently ill as to necessitate my staying in the city, and did not attend the Gulf Coast Baptist Association at Pearlington, Miss., as I intended, but have sent some tracts for distribution.

I have preached three anti-lodge sermons and delivered three lectures since last writing. The same old animosities are beginning to bud out against me again as in 1887–88. I have privately conversed with and given tracts to quite a number, and believe I have made a very favorable impression on an intelligent and ardent Odd-fellow. He acknowledged that he was prejudiced against me and did not want to hear me speak against his lodge; but conversing with him he calmed down and confessed all I said was true, but that it was not necessary to publicly denounce the lodge.

Another one said the lodge had given him $735, more than any church ever will give him. He don't like to kear the lodge denounced, and if I continue thus I will drive people from my church. Truly men "love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

I have been invited to West Point and other places in Mississippi to lecture, and hope to be able to make an extended tour in August. Pray for me. F. J. Davidson.

THE FAR NORTHWEST.

FROM A FORMER PASTOR AT ROSEBURG, OREGON.

Cleveland, Ore., June 28, 1894.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—I wish to say that Rev. P. B. Williams of the Oregon Christian Association, was at Roseburg, Douglas county, the 23d and 24th inst.

He gave us a grand lecture on temperance on the night of the 23d, in which he portrayed the evils and the remedy. It was received with great applause. Roseburg is a city of saloons and secret orders.

On Sabbath, the 24th, he spoke on Masonry and kindred societies. He set forth the evils of the orders in a very clear light, giving to saints and sinners "their portion in due season." Some of the leading Masons were present. Judging from their appearance they felt the sword of truth enter their souls. But some have said that they would leave the church rather than their lodge. I think the sooner the church gets rid of such ministers and members the better it will be for the world. Lord hasten the time.

Bro. Williams was to lecture Sabbath night on prohibition. Your correspondent and wife had to return home and did not hear him, as we live at Cleveland, some 12 miles distant, but we feel confident that he did the subject justice, as we have all confidence in his ability. He had the use of the U. B. church, which is in full sympathy with moral reform.

Your brother in Christ, E. M. Marsters.

Bridgeport, Conn., has a wholesale brewer as a member and chairman of its board of education, and a poor outlook for scientific temperance instruction in its schools.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON TO BEREA.

WAY NOTES BY THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

NEW YORK, June 23, 1894.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Speaking of "roasters," let it be noted that Boston has her hot days and the 22d was one of them. Off for Berea, Ky., I took the "Boat train" at 6 P. M., which dumps its lively freight from eight elegant coaches on the "Fall River" wharf at precisely 7:20. Without ceremony we boarded the "Pilgrim" for New York and swung out into the pathless highway of nations at eight o'clock. The air was delightfully refreshing, and the evening seemed a translation from dusty city thoroughfare to an elysium of genial elements. The six hundred or more passengers crowded the outer courts on upper and lower decks in appreciation of the situation, where they exchanged congratulations and talked of the fiery furnace behind. To some on board the outing was evidently a new experience, while "old stagers" smoked and joked, and talked business and politics as much at ease as if in the counting-room or parlor at home.

I was not "mousing around" in quest of "sequestered nooks," but looked and listened with an eye to business. Soon a specimen from the devil's gin-mill and "benevolent" man-trap made himself offensively conspicuous, exhibiting "three links" in honor of the craft. The man was just drunk enough to be disgustingly familiar. His heart and hand were open to bestow that "blessed charity," of which we hear so often. Failing to find an object upon whom to bestow his sweet charity among the gentlemanly employes on the steamer, he turned to those near in quest of some thirsty mortal who would go below and take a drink at his expense. Whether or not he detected some tell-tale mystic sign of brotherhood I am not supposed to know (as these are profound secrets), but for some reason I was singled out as a "brother beloved" deserving of his favor. Declining his generous proffer of sweet charity, his pressing invitation gave an opportunity to speak of the evil, and of the suicidal course he was pursuing. At first he resented the admonition, but later acknowledged that liquor clouded his brain, thickened his tongue and tangled his feet when he "took too much."

When I met the man this morning he was considerably "sobered up," but evidently quite unfit for the test of a hot, busy day in this great commercial metropolis. He seemed "a man of means," and if his "dues are paid" I presume his brethren will charitably succor him, should he meet with reverses. They often tell me that secret societies "help a man in traveling;" but I notice that some of the brethren take the "down grade," and if they do make rapid progress, it is with a through pass to a drunkard's doom. Surely it is better to take the "up grade" with a through ticket to glory, even if the passage is a little rough and the end a few years further along.

Since "discretion is the better part of valor," I don't propose to take any chances of a "sun stroke," but to abide my time for the next through train to Washington. Waiting in a depot is not specially exhilarating, but then it gives an opportunity to see how people act when they are away from home. Taking notes by the way "kills time," and is not a difficult occupation, but to make those notes interesting or profitable to readers is the test of reportorial genius.

For example, who cares to know that the latest arrival is a fleshy, red-faced woman holding a fat baby on her arm (possibly an embryo president under future Bourbon rule) and a capacious valise in her hand (doubtless stored with indispensable nursery articles), followed by three hopeful urchins, whose strict obedience furnish a model worthy of the "Infantile corps" of the G. A. R. Who can tell but that this little troop in military training is a section of the Grand Army who shall save the republic, and that this maternal discipline is indispensable to a grand heroic future?

An introduction to the slim, trim, perspiring woman, "adorned with gold and costly apparel, lugging a panting pug in her arms, would disgust rather than interest a practical mother, and yet even this object lesson furnishes a study. It reveals the possibility of devotion and love in a human heart, for even a dog, and shows a willingness to sacrifice personal comfort for the supreme object of affection, though that object is simply a bob-tailed, pug-nosed brute. As "idolaters and dogs" are shut out of heaven, I sometimes wonder how such erratic specimens of womanhood would find occupation should they ever pass the portal. Possibly they might find some relief among the flowers and fruits abounding in that far-away city.

The man in uniform announces, "Express to Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore and Washington!" and so I am off to the city of perpetual schemings and windy, wordy warfare.

J. P. STODDARD.

PRACTICAL WORK IN SOUTHWEST MISSOURI.

SEDALIA, Mo., June 29, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—While traveling for several weeks, I have made it a special effort to find out the mind of the people. I have talked to about one hundred and fifty men, nearly all individually. Sixteen or more were Freemasons, many of them were Odd-fellows, and of other secret orders; while a goodly number of all held a Christian faith. I have talked with many preachers and men holding high positions in the church, and I seem to find more of the spirit of the devil in the churches than in the lodges.

At Bentonville, Ark., while in the land office of F. C. Hawkins and his friend Dr. J. C. Gish, I made myself known as a Mason. We talked Masonically a while, and then I told them I had given it up, and why; and that they had no right to talk to me. But they said they thought they had, for the purpose of gaining me back. They plead with me on the oath, while I talked from a Bible standpoint. One was an avowed infidel, the other a Missionary Baptist, and I also a Baptist, believing the Word of God as it reads. I use the Word and God helps me.

In Springfield I visited the colored Baptist minister. He is a Freemason, but said God had opened his eyes in the last three weeks; that secret societies were doing more harm than any other thing to the church. They can't get an audience at church, while the societies are full. He had already proposed and had got the consent of all but one of the ministers that they leave the town for thirty days and then see which their people want, the church or the lodges. But he is afraid to take up public action without backing.

I then went to the worshipful master of the colored lodge and tried to sell him "Freemasonry Illustrated" for a lodge guide. He acknowledged it to be better than the one he had (Richardson's), being more fully illustrated. Though he was not a Christian, I gradually convinced him of the uselessness of the order. I think in time I could have taken several subscriptions for the Cynosure, but money is very scarce.

If the church would do her part and not invite men affiliating with condemned worldly institutions into her fold, we would soon see a change.

Yours in the reform, J. T. CULLOR.

PITH AND POINT.

THE FOLLY OF INFIDELITY.

In the interest of truth I wish to speak of the reasonings of Thomas Paine, of Robert G. Ingersoll, and of O. B. Whitford, M. D. and Past Grand Master of the Masonic order. The writings of these parties are published by the Truth Seeker Company of New York. I claim they are a disgrace to the publishers and to the men who wrote them:

1. Because void of sound reasonings.

2. In that they are scoffers and abusers of the Bible, especially the Grand Master Mason, O. B. Whitford. While he in a foolish manner condemns the Bible, the lodge he represents claims it has taken its "Mystic Key" from that very book.

Ingersoll, while he says he worships nature's God, in the next breath says he never will worship such a cruel God. Folly! Folly! The colonel has neglected to think before he made his expressions; for a sound, reasoning mind would not make such a fool of himself. Thomas Paine's Age of Reason! Why, a second-grade common school boy ought to have more reasoning power than his pamphlets contain.—A. F. F. JENSEN, Dorchester, Wis.

Miss Willard has returned to the treasury of the Woman's Christian Temperance union her salary for the last two years. This she does on account of the financial stress in this country.

LITERATURE.

EBENEZERS, or Records of Prevailing Prayer. Written and selected by H. L. Hastings, editor of the Christian. Pp. 382. New edition, price, $1.50. H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston.

This is a Hallelujah book. One reads as if in a camp meeting, when hearts are open to the Holy Spirit, and tongues are loosed to speak forth the praise of a promise-keeping Jehovah. "Ebenezer"—"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." Since he began the publication of the Christian in 1866 Bro. Hastings has been gathering these proofs of God's mercy. Here is a story of 157 of them in three parts: 1. Prayers for rescue, relief and blessing; 2. for healing; 3. for conversion. How many such answers to prayer do we find in the life of Pres. C. G. Finney; how many in the experience of Mr. Moody; of how many did Pres. Jonathan Blanchard tell us! How many, too, can every true child of God, who lives by faith and the commandment, relate with beaming eye and thankful heart! This is a good book to put in a handy place for frequent reading at spare moments. Faith is strengthened, joy deepened, hope inspired, love set aglow by these little incidents of Christian life. They are better than a sea-side sojourn to give health and promote long life.

The papers presented at the "International Congress on Sunday Rest," held in connection with the Columbian Exposition last September, have been published in an inexpensive volume entitled: "The Sunday Problem: Its Present-Day Aspects, Physiological, Industrial, Social, Political, Religious." They discuss the question in all its aspects, by authors who are recognized authorities. They give, therefore, a broad and intelligent, as well as authoritative, view of the whole question of Sunday rest.

The well-known and standard work on the Sabbath question, "The Sabbath for Man," by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, has been issued in a new edition, much enlarged, and brought down to date. It contains a full report of the World's Fair Sabbath-closing struggle. This revised edition will greatly enhance the value of this work.

In 1888 Mr. Nathan F. Graves, an elder of the Reformed church of Syracuse, N. Y., wrote to Prof. L. W. V. B. Mabon of the theological seminary, New Brunswick, N. J.: "I understand there is no seminary or professorship of missions in the United States." The result of the letter was the establishment of the Graves' course of lectures on missions. The fifth and last course was delivered by George Smith, author of the lives of Carey, Henry Martin, Duff, Wilson, etc., on a general subject, "The Conversion of India." The lectures are published in a volume.

THE MAGAZINES.

The Century for July opens with a striking portrait of Thomas William Parsons, the translator of Dante, with a short biographical article by Thomas Baily Aldrich. An entertaining paper on "Coasting by Sorrento and Amalfi," relating to the picturesque and charming peninsula southeast of Naples, is followed by a supplementary article on the recently completed "Highroad from Salerno to Sorrento." Magnificent views of the entire region are contributed by Harry Fenn. In "The Star Spangled Banner" John C. Carpenter retells the history of the national hymn, and there is a portrait of Francis Scott Key, and a fac simile of the poem, now published, it is believed, for the first time.

Our Day opens its current number with a fine photo-portrait of Bishop Vincent of Chautuaqua fame, who is esteemed one of the first of modern educators, through the popularity of the Chautauqua idea. Another is of Hermann Lotze, the German philosopher whom Joseph Cook has so favorably introduced to American thinkers. The articles of the number are "Strategic Points in Christian Sociology," by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts; "The Church and Civic Reform," by Rev. L. S. Bean; and Negro Emigration to Liberia, by Pres. J. E. Rankin of Howard University. Mr. Cook's Monday lecture discusses the Statehood of Mormonism and self-surrender to the self-evident in Science and Scripture.

The Preacher's Magazine for July contains a choice sermon by Joseph Agar Beet, D. D., upon "The Father's Business." Mark Guy Pearse, the editor, has a sermon upon "Balaam," which is one of a course of sermons upon "Moses: His Life and Its Lessons." In the Homiletical Department are found the names of Rev. John Telford, B. A., John Edwards, Rev. Robert A. Watson, Joseph Parker, D. D., and Rev. I. E. Page, and various outlines of vigorous thought presented. Published at 2 Cooper Union, N. Y., $1.50.

The Review of Reviews gives a large section of its July number to the Populists, Coxeyites, trades-unions, etc. Portraits of Jerry Simpson, Senators Allen and Kyle, Coxey, Pepper, Davis and Gompers are interspersed, serving in several instances to advertise characters with who will soon be lost and forgotten. The Review has also secured a number of letters from gentlemen living west of the Mississippi discussing various social questions uppermost in that vast district. The approaching Christian Endeavor meeting at Cleveland, O., to which we turn with more satisfaction. The survey of the leading magazine articles of the month show but a low per cent given to the topics above.

The Journal of Hygiene gives way to sentiment and philosophy in "Muscular Rhythm" by C. S. Wake. The editor's "Health Notes," and "Hygiene for Women" are practical and suggestive.

IN BRIEF.

Bishop Potter says the one argument to which the Church of Rome is amenable, and the only one, is the argument of numbers: "When it believes that it has them it threatens, when it is conscious that it has not it cringes, and so the lesson which 50,000,000 people need to teach 10,000,000, more or less, is that the reunion of Christendom, on this continent at any rate, when it comes will not be on terms dictated by one-sixth to five-sixths."

Prince Bismarck, whose left leg has become so feeble that he can stand on it but a few moments in succession, says: "Upon the recommendation of one of the Russian grand duchesses, I consulted a Russian doctor some time ago. I have since learned that he was an idle and ignorant fellow—the head of a children's hospital in St. Petersburg, where he killed off 3,000 patients annually. He ruined my leg and I have suffered the consequences ever since."

There are 25,530 Negro schools now in the South, where 2,250,000 Negroes have learned to read, and most of them to write. In the colored schools are 238,000 pupils and 20,000 Negro teachers. There are 150 schools for advanced education, and seven colleges administered by Negro presidents and faculties, and of these presidents three were formerly slaves. There are 154 Negro editors, 250 lawyers, 740 physicians, and there are now educating themselves in European universities 247 Negroes from the South.

The first data on conjugal life in the United States ever gathered by the government is given in a census bulletin. It shows that of a total population of 62,672,250 in 1890 almost three-fifths were single, a little more than one-third married and not quite one-twentieth were widowed. The divorces constituted a small fraction of one per cent. The actual number of the classes are as follows: Single, 37,129,564; married, 22,331,424; widowed, 2,970,052; divorced, 120,996, and unknown, 70,214. The males constituted over fifty-one per cent of the total population. Of 32,067,880 males in the country, 19,945,576 were single and 11,205,228 married, 815,437 widowed and 49,101 divorced. Of the females 17,183,988 were single, 11,126,196 married, 2 154,615 widowed and 71,895 divorced. The proportion of widows, says the report, was nearly three times as great as of widowers, indicating that a greater portion of widowers remarried than widows, while figures show that divorced men have remarried to a greater extent than divorced women.

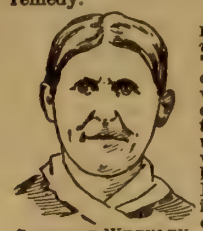
If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be persuaded to take any other. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which possesses peculiar strength and curative power.

One Fare Excursions South Via C. & E. I. R. R.

Round trip tickets will be sold from all stations on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R. on July 5th, August 7th. Sept, 4th, Oct. 2nd, Nov. 6th and Dec. 4th, 1894, at one fare, to points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. Tickets good to return for twenty days from date of sale. Stopover allowed on going or returning journey. For further particulars apply to any C. & E. I. R. R. agent or Chas. W. Humphrey, Northern passenger agent, 170 E. Third street, St. Paul. Chicago City Ticket Office, 230 Clark street, or to Chas. L. Stone, G. P. & T. A., Chicago, Ill.

STAMPED OUT

—blood-poisons of every name and nature, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It rouses every organ into healthy action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses and renews the whole system. All Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. For Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, and Carbuncles, the "Discovery" is a direct remedy.



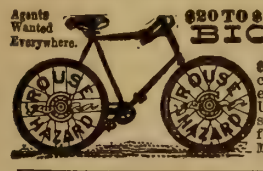
CAROLINE WEEKLEY.

Mrs. CAROLINE WEEKLEY, of Carney, Baldwin Co., Ala., writes: "I suffered for one quarter of a century with "fever-sore" (ulcer) on my leg and eczematous eruptions and gave up all hope of ever being well again, But I am happy to say that your Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery made a complete cure of my ailments, although I had tried different doctors and almost all known remedies without effect.

PIERCE Guarantees a CURE.

$5 TO $20 per day at home. The work is easy, pleasant and adapted to both young and old of either sex. Any one can do the work. GEO. STINSON & CO., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.



$20 TO $60 SAVED ON NEW BICYCLES

$125 high grade Safety $50; $100 pneu. $60; $40 cush. ball $20 etc. Largest and oldest dealers in U. S. Easy payments We sell everywhere. Catafree. Rouse, Hazard & Co., Mfrs., 4 G St., Peoria, Ill.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house. THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention the Cynosure when writing.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CABRADINE, D. D.

—oo—

Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1893.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——, ——, Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1894.

The N. C. A. annual meeting referred the election of editor of the Cynosure to the Directors. The Board voted to return the former editor, and adopted the following commendatory minute respecting Bro. Hugunin and the excellent work he has given the reform:

WHEREAS, Henry M. Hugunin has with marked ability and with great faithfulness served as editor of the Cynosure for the past three years; therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby express our appreciation of his untiring efforts in behalf of our common cause.

Resolved, That we hereby cheerfully commend Mr. Hugunin as an earnest, sincere, and faithful Christian gentleman, worthy of the confidence of the public.

TO THE CYNOSURE READERS:—Returning to your company and employ after a long vacation, you will expect the word of greeting which I am moved to give you.

After more than twenty years of intimate acquaintance through the paper, ill health in my family commanded a change. A release of a year was given by the Board, and with wife and children I went to the west slope of the Sierras. Returning in time for a last word with the father of our reform (and to my household also), Jonathan Blanchard, a year and some months have been given to the work of bringing our cause directly before the churches and colleges.

It was twenty-six years ago this month that the first number of the Cynosure was sent out. As I look over the twenty-five bound volumes, you will pardon the glow of thankfulness that my life has been put into so great and so good a work.

We are yet too near to measure the importance of this paper or the reform. It is not from its foot that you measure Bunker Hill monument, but from Boston bay. Years ago men who had traveled widest and spoken most, like James P. Stoddard, Horace H. Hinman and Edmond Ronayne, assured us that in our movement no more important factor could be found than its paper. Of no other single agency could so much be expected. No other was so essential to ultimate success. Therefore our best endeavors should be given to make the paper a power for Christ and his church. What the Union Signal has been for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Cynosure should become for our reform—not only an organ, publishing reports and exchange of views; but a source of profit from an enlarged circulation, and above all an agency for investigation, enlargement, leadership.

Our best united effort will not therefore be too much to give our paper. It deserves, it needs the best. While the hand of the first editor was with us, the Cynosure seemed to be attaining its place. God has not, as I judge, yet given the reform a man for his place. The paper has the best of men among its readers, it deserves the best of editors. That God may call him out shall be my prayer. Until then, or so long at least as we can agree, I shall thankfully serve you to the utmost.

Let me not feel that I am alone. Let us have a thousand correspondents and contributors. If you are on your feet, or on your knees, about this reform you will have something to say. ANTI-MASONS, WRITE FOR YOUR PAPER!

"Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the WORD OF THE LORD may have free course and be glorified." 2 Thess. 3: 1.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

THE DEBS CIVIL WAR.

It is a habit of the secret lodges, when two or three have become successful in their particular line, for a new order to spring, Minerva-like, from the head of some Freemason, which shall combine all the excellencies, and members also, of the rest. The Good Templars, for instance, hoped to organize all temperance organizations into itself. The Knights of Labor began in Philadelphia with the hope of bringing men of all trades under one control.

So, three or four years since, the American Railway Union began. It was to combine all branches of the railway service; to bring them under one secret oath, and one secret grip, so that when the next strike occurred the whole force of the railway employes of the country would be thrown against the managers and bury them out of sight. The practical end would be, not government, but irresponsible lodge control of the railway system of America.

The Union had a paper, the Railway Times, of which Eugene V. Debs was editor. Besides being editor he became president of the order; and we do not misjudge him, if a score of incidents are any proof, in saying that he has the ambition to be a young Napoleon.

The Union had increased to over 300,000 members. Hogan, one of its subordinate chiefs, had scored a partial success in ordering a strike on the Great Northern road in Minnesota. The great coal strike made the situation more tempting. There were questions of difference between the Pullman company and its men. On the 5th of May the carpenters and blacksmiths joined the Railway Union, and urged an increase of wages or a strike. On the 9th a delegation waited on Mr. Pullman, who went over the grounds of difference with them. He then gave a statement to all the employes, that it was not practicable to raise their wages. The company employed 4,300 men at a loss of $20,000 per month and $79 for each car turned out. On the same day Mr. Debs' lieutenant, Howard, urged the men to strike, promising them the aid of a boycott. That is, the managers of the Railway Union planned the whole desperate game, and could not have been blind to its horrible effects upon the life and peace of thousands of their fellow citizens. This boycott was even to go so far as to reach business men who used coal brought to Chicago by roads running Pullman cars.

May 11th, 2,000 men at Pullman struck, the works were closed, and the fight begun. On the 20th the men asked for an arbitration, and Mr. Pullman agreed to deal with them individually, but not with their secret unions. June 15th Debs called a meeting of the A. R. U. and a committee was sent to ask arbitration at Pullman, and were told there was nothing to arbitrate.

The struggle has continued, until Saturday afternoon the State militia fired into a mob in the vicinity of the Stock Yards in this city, killing two and wounding a large number; at Hammond, Ind., next day the regular troops fired into the mob with fatal effect; ten thousand men armed and in the employ of the Government, the State or the city are trying to preserve peace and protect property and life; and President Cleveland was led to issue an order Monday morning which has nearly the effect of martial law for Chicago.

Such, in brief, is the history of this strike, as we have it from the press. Mr. Pullman does not need the sympathy of the public. He is rich and lives in luxury. Debs does not deserve it. He is a conspirator and practical anarchist who should be punished for his crimes. But the masses of workingmen, and the mobs of poor foreigners, demoralized by Sunday work and frenzied by the saloon,—they command our pity and must have the best counsel of our wisest men to prevent these periodical outbreaks, in which they are always the greatest sufferers.

ARBITRATE! ARBITRATE!

Last Friday Bishop Fellows, acting, it is said, in behalf of the pastors of Chicago, called a mass meeting for Sabbath afternoon, to be addressed by Mayor Hopkins, in favor of arbitration of the disputes that have caused the strike.

It may be observed also that a number of excellent journals are demanding an arbitration. Some are calling on Mr. Pullman to come forward and agree to arbitrate. Mr. Pullman has wealth, success and pride on his side. He makes no reply.

We do not learn that he or the men who left his shops asked for arbitration before the trouble really began. They are reported to have gone over the questions of difference together. The carpenters wanted an increase of wages. He showed them that the Pullman company was employing 4,300 men at a loss of $20,000 per month, and that cars were being built at a loss of $79 each, just to keep the works running. This would seem to be all the contribution reasonable men ought to ask of an employer.

If these are facts, and they are given as such in several papers, Mr. Pullman could have well afforded to submit his case to arbitration. But at the time it would have seemed like a joke to the men. Why did they not ask for arbitrament? Whether they were excited, or angry, or for what reason does not appear, yet the carpenters struck. War was begun, and after they began to reap its bitter harvest, arbitration is asked for.

It is not the time for such a demand. Debs, the leader of the strike, is constantly harping upon arbitration. It helps him to popularity with good people who believe in it. But before arbitration can arbitrate, before it can secure peace and the settlement of difficulties, there must be SUBMISSION TO LAW.

We suggest to brethren editors and preachers that your demand for arbitration is made in the wrong time. When outbreaks are quelled, the savage passions of men subdued, the war that rages in our city over, and we can talk calmly and reasonably, let an arbitration law be passed, if you please.

Our courts were intended for the settlement of difficulties and the protection of the poor. Wherein they err, let us set them right. Wherein they fail, let us supplement them. It should be made a most difficult matter in America that a laboring man should be oppressed. Our Congressmen, who are rushing to the aid of lawless men, are trampling on human rights. Let them demand a submission to law and lawful authority by all parties and then their endeavors may secure a reasonable and peaceful end.

MONDAY.—The arbitration meeting was not held yesterday. Bishop Fallows found that he was ten days too late, but he now hopes to organize a committee of one hundred who shall make peace between warring factions. Bishop Fallows may be excused for his zeal. He has long been a disciple of Masonry. He helped other Freemasons lay the cornerstone of a People's Institute in this city a few days ago. The Institute is a public enterprise to aid men and women who are refused the benefits of Masonry.

—A Congregational (so-called) preacher in the east lately addressing a lodge meeting said the secret orders would bring men together in peace and good will: "You may tie men's pockets together and their hearts will not be far off." The sentiment was more truthful and expressive than was intended. The lodges are bound together by sordid interests, and the men who yield themselves to such influences are too apt to have hearts and lives inseparable from the "mighty dollar."

—Elder I. T. Rosenberger of Covington, Ohio, contributed some time since to the Gospel Messenger a series of articles on the secret orders and why members of Christian churches cannot belong to them. He stated that the Brethren church (Dunkers) as early as 1804 took action against such orders, and has frequently reaffirmed her testimony since that time. The reform movement, which is bringing up the testimony of our ablest and best men into line against the orders, is hailed by this church for its co-operation.

—The Midland has this note worth remembering upon the effect of secret-order exclusion and discussion upon the United Presbyterian church: "Some are inclined to think that the position of our church on secret societies hinders our growth. The figures show that the ratio of men to women in our membership is greater than in any other evangelical denomination. If our anti-secret principles are keeping men out of our communion, the lodge is having a greater influence in keeping them out of other denominations."

—Our Banner was the appropriate title of a brave Covenanter monthly, begun some years in New York by Dr. Milligan, and continued in Philadelphia by Rev. N. R. Johnston, who came on from his Chinese mission work in California to undertake the publication. Bro. Johnston, finding the task too severe for rapidly advancing age, has turned over his list and labor to the Christian Nation of New York and has retired to Beaver Falls, Pa., where Geneva College forms a congenial community. But our friend and co-worker, Rev. J. M. Foster, of the historic Chambers St. church, Boston, catches the standard before the blue banner of the Covenant falls, and sends out the first number of "Our Banner displayed by the Second Reformed Presbyterian church." It begins with a monthly issue, but a weekly is soon promised. The Cynosure hails the enterprise.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Elder Nathan Callender, the old hero of our reform in northeastern Pennsylvania, is suffering from a broken leg and other ills. The Lord sustains him— may he also heal.

—Rev. C. W. Hiatt, pastor of the old First Congregational church, Peoria, Ill., expected to sail for Europe on the 4th inst. With State Sabbath-school secretary McMillen, he will make a bicycle trip about England and then visit the continent.

—Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, Tarkio, Mo., and his family, expect to spend a month camping in the Rocky Mountains, somewhere in the South Park. Prof. J. C. Adair, of Tarkio College, will be of the company.

—An elders' conference was held during the late meeting of the U. P. General Assembly at Albany, Oregon. The first speaker was T. H. Gault, Esq., of Chicago, long a member of the N. C. A. Board. His subject was, "The Offering—a Part of Worship."

—Rev. Thomas M. Chalmers, not long since pastor of a United Presbyterian church in Kansas, and occasional contributor to the Cynosure, is now studying the German language in this city, and lecturing twice a week in the Light and Hope Mission, a training school for Christian workers.

—Rev. Dr. H. H. George, the worthy friend of the N. C. A. reform, has been acting as field secretary of the Sabbath Union since retiring from the presidency of Geneva College. He has recently added to this duty the pastorate of the Reformed Presbyterian congregation of East End, Pittsburgh.

—Prof. W. M. Sloane, of Princeton College, son of the late beloved Prof. J. R. W. Sloane of the Covenanter church, is preparing a biography of Napoleon, which will shortly begin publication in the Century. It will occupy middle ground between the eulogy of John S. C. Abbott, and condemnation of Sir Walter Scott. Prof. Sloane believes that Napoleon was a very human personage of monumental genius,—not a demigod nor yet a monster.

—The friend of our own and every good cause, Josiah W. Leeds of Philadelphia, has been prosecuting a case in behalf of good morals before the courts of that city for a year past. He has been successful and has secured the legal authority for the banishment of the atrocious Police Gazette and other immoral sheets from the news-stands and all public places of the city. Mr. Leeds writes: "It is such papers as the Police Gazette that are the favorite reading in the houses of ill-fame, and this reading does a great deal to keep up the supply of inmates and patrons." Would that every city had a Josiah Leeds to sweep away this crime-breeding and mind-polluting literature from the news-stands and free reading-rooms!

—Rev. Herman A. Preus, well known among the Scandinavians of Chicago and the northwest as the presiding officer of the Norwegian Lutheran synod, died rather suddenly on the 2d inst., at Lee, Ill., from heart disease. Mr. Preus was born in Christiansand, Norway, June 16, 1825. He studied theology, and in 1851, on receiving a call from Spring Prairie, Wis., emigrated to America. Though his services were in demand at various points, he remained faithful to the people who first summoned him, and occupied the same pulpit for forty-three years. He speedily became prominent in the denomination to which he belonged, and in 1862 was elected chairman of the Norwegian synod, holding the position up to the day of his death.

—James Sullivan, political editor of the Chicago Tribune, died suddenly on the afternoon of the 4th in the rooms of the Newspaper club. He came to this country about twenty years ago from Ireland, and was for years a teacher in the public schools of this city. In 1884 he went to the Tribune, where he had been employed ever since. He was considered the best-posted man on the political situation in the city among all his fellow-reporters. Mr. Sullivan was also deeply interested in the Irish Home-rule movement, and was familiar with the early history of the Clan-na-Gael in which he took an active part. He had no sympathy, however, with Alexander Sullivan and his murderous methods; and after the assassination of Dr. Cronin he assured the Cynosure of the correctness of the Clan-na Gael oath as published at the time in our columns.

PRESIDENT JONATHAN BLANCHARD REMEMBERED.

At the recent meeting of the Board of Trust in Knox College, upon motion of Rev. Dr. J. E. Roy, the following minute was put on record:

"Rev. Jonathan Blanchard, the second president of Knox College, who graduated the first thirteen classes, having passed away not long ago, at the age of fourscore or more years, it is meet that we should put on record and send to his son, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, a word as to his enthusiasm in the college work, his stimulating influence in opening unto themselves the minds of his students, his devotement to the anti-slavery reform, and his zeal for the spiritual welfare of the multitudes of young people who came under his care, and whose character received from him life-long impressions for good."

At the Alumni banquet the Hon. Clark. E. Carr, one of the trustees, lately U. S. representative to Denmark, in his glowing address paid this tribute to his old president:

"In recalling the good and the wise and the great who have given vigor and success to Knox College who does not recognize the imperious form and majestic tread of Jonathan Blanchard, whose virile and rugged character still animates the institution? Some of us remember how generously he opened to us his abounding and unfailing storehouse of priceless treasures of learning gathered from realms of history and poetry and art and inspiration, illuminated and irradiated by the splendors of his own genius; and how his burning eloquence kindled in our bosoms Promethean fires which can never be extinguished. We who sat at his feet will always hold him in loving andgrateful remembrance for the aspirations awakened within us and for what he taught us, realizing that our indebtedness to that great man is beyond calculation or estimation."

At the Founder's meeting, held last February, in Galesburg, Rev. C. W. Hiatt, being one of the speakers, as also a graduate under Pres. Jonathan Blanchard at Wheaton, in his eloquent address upon "The Church and the College," had this tribute:

"I am grateful, because, indirectly, this college has influenced my own career, by calling into educational work, more than forty years ago, the great and inspiring man under whom it was my fortune to receive the academic tutelage. A man who brought to the prairies of Illinois somewhat of the granite of his own New England hills; who never suffered a pupil to pass beyond his care without receiving the impression of his own heroic soul; the man who wrote your college diploma, graduating thirteen classes here, the second president of Knox, and the first president of Wheaton—Jonathan Blanchard."

The Advance, of last week, in referring to these matters, said:

"At the recent meeting of the board of trustees of Knox College, in connection with the celebration of Founders' Day, very appropriate recognition was made and put on record of the eminent services and unique personal influence of the late President Jonathan Blanchard. He was not indeed one of the founders of that college but it was under him as its president that the first thirteen classes were graduated. His enthusiasm in college work, his thought-awakening influence on the minds of the students, his heroic and contagious devotion to the cause of anti-slavery and his zeal for the individual spiritual welfare of all the young people who came under his care, were such as seldom failed to make a life-long impression on them; as Hon. Clark E. Carr, late United States Minister to Denmark, remarked, 'kindling Promethean fires never to be extinguished.' Dr. C. W. Hiatt also spoke of the peculiar inspiring power of his heroic spirit as awakening in every student his own deeper, nobler manhood. And it is worth while to remember this matter of the personal influence of the college president as something which is in its value above that of all mere money endowment."

The weakest man is the one who is a slave to his own desires.

THE NEW PAPER.

At the annual meeting of corporate members of the National Christian Association on May 16, 1894, it was recommended:

That the Association issue regularly a four-page monthly paper (each page measuring eight by eleven inches), to be used by the friends as a cheap method of disseminating facts relating to the secret lodge system. It is expected that friends will subscribe for this paper in clubs chiefly; and in this belief we recommend that in clubs of twenty or more the price per annum be fixed at ten cents per copy, and for single subscriptions, twenty cents per copy. It is also recommended that all subscriptions for this monthly paper begin on the first day of either January, April, July or October.

Hence the Board of Directors have issued the first number, which has been sent to those ordering it. The name given is the "Lodge Lamp." Single copies, two cents; twenty-five copies of the July number, twenty-five cents. This number of the Lodge Lamp contains Stephen Merritt's experience, the 138 degree Freemason whose address at our convention in New York last year created so much interest; the Lodge and the Church; an affidavit by Rev. Ebenezer White and wife as to the murder of a stranger by the lodge; and an interesting article by Miss Flagg.

Please remember that the July number costs one cent per copy for postage. If the subscription list becomes large enough to allow it to be entered as second-class matter then fifty copies can be sent for one cent. Could you not make it possible by using a part of your tithing for this purpose? Your desire to reach your neighbors on this subject can now be fulfilled at very little cost. No work of benevolence is more important at the present time. Shall we have a list of 10,000? Write and fill out the pledge attached hereto and return at once and the matter is decided.

THIS IS OUR PROPOSITION.

We will supply the Lodge Lamp to be sent to such persons for 10 cents for twelve months for each person, provided we can secure pledges for 10,000 subscriptions.

What we wish you to do is this: Please fill out and sign and return to us immediately the pledge below, telling us how many copies of the needed 10,000 you will be responsible for. You are not to send us the names or money now. You are at liberty, however, to designate the names of the persons to whom the papers for which you pledged are to go.

Please remember that it will be necessary for us to know immediately whether we can secure a sufficient number of pledges to undertake the plan. Please sign for at least twenty; that would cost you $2 00. If you can sign for 100 or more, do so. If you increase or decrease the number (in the printed blank) be particular to erase the number and write above it the number which you are willing to pledge for.

PLEDGE.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

I pledge for 20 names to whom the Lodge Lamp is to be sent for twelve months, at ten cents for each name. I will send the money when you notify me that the plan is successful. It is understood that if I do not send you the names to whom the papers are to go you will be at liberty to select out of your list the requisite number.

(Signed) Name,.....

Post Office,.....

Date,.....1894. State,.....

If you increase or decrease the number, please erase this figure and write plainly the number for which you will pay.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Secretary and Treasurer.

—In the course of a sermon in Washington City appealing for funds for missionary work in Cuba, Rev. Arthur C. Mellen, who has lately returned from the island, made a statement that will doubtless be new to our readers. He said that in all the 1,500,000 inhabitants of the island there was not a single descendant of the Cuban race, the Spanish enslavement having resulted in destroying an entire race of people. He spoke of the large number of Bibles that have been sold in Cuba since 1882, when a certain degree of religious toleration was established, and expressed the belief that grand results would follow the sending of young and enthusiastic missionaries to work among the benighted beings, who are neglected by the State paid priests, who openly countenance Sunday bull-fights and other heathen amusements, and many of whom lead immoral lives,

THE HOME.

HE WEARIES NOT.

Ofttimes I grow impatient with the day
Which brings new worries and the weight of fears;
Ofttimes my soul repines; I chiding say:
"Who shall atone for sadness and for tears?"
Ofttimes my heart grows weary, and in pain
I see the ones who falter or who fall;
Ofttimes my tears fall down like winter rain;
We are tired, doubting, anxious children all;
He wearies not.

I see the little ones whose forms are clad
In garments thin through cold and dreary days;
I see a world where brothers, selfish, mad,
War with each other down life's weary ways;
I hear the voices and the cries of pain;
I see men tempting other men to fall;
And doubting, wondering, fearing, sick at heart and brain,
I scarce dare trust the Father—knowing, guiding all.
He wearies not.

He wearies not. Mine eyes are blurred with tears,
And in life's misty dimness I am blind;
He wearies not; but all my doubts and fears
He yet will answer with a purpose kind.
My hands are tired; He will give me rest.
My heart is heavy; He will comfort give.
The ones who sorrow shall be joyous, blessed:
Who sadly die shall glad, eternal live.
He wearies not.

—Selected.

WHAT A BLIND BOY ACCOMPLISHED.

It was a glorious May morning, and the old orchard in the valley at the foot of the Tennessee Mountains was shining with the early dew. Everything seemed full of life and hope and promise. The apple-blossoms and the violets, the woody ferns and a thousand other flowers that had awakened from a long winter's rest, poured forth their delicious fragrance and sprinkled the green earth with touches of brilliant color,—pink and blue and red and purple. Buttercups and dandelions shone like stars among the grass. The robins and the blue jays and the whippoorwills were all settled for the summer. The robin's cheerful song awoke the children in the morning, and the whippoorwill's mournful plaint lulled them to sleep at night.

It was on such a day, in such an orchard, that a group of children, having finished their lessons and thrown aside their books, had gone out with happy hearts and merry voices, to hunt bird's nests, to gather wild flowers, to play at football, and to climb the trees in the old orchard where it was their custom to hold high carnival on the soft green grass, in the shade of the pink and white boughs, and in sight of many a tempting bird's nest and squirrel's hiding-place. They were shouting as only happy country boys can shout; they were turning somersaults, and daring each other to climb yet higher in the trees and run yet faster on the greensward; and a jollier set of boys could not be found in all that beautiful Tennessee valley.

The little three-year-old pet, who has been awakened from his noon slumbers by the uproarious merriment of the older children, came running toward them. Some one broke a branch of an acacia-tree, with its bright yellow blossoms, and handed it to the baby; and he, full of glee, ran to join his brothers, and running, he stumbled, as babies will, and fell on the branch he had in his hand. A thorn on the stem of acacia pierced his eye.

The merry laugh of the little fellow was quickly changed into a bitter cry, and the children, dropping their bats and balls, ran to comfort him. He was taken to his mother, and every voice was hushed and all thought of play was forgotten, and baby's plaintive moan was all that could be heard.

Long days of suffering followed, and, as the inflammation in the wounded eye increased and extended to the other eye, hope grew less each day. Day after day dragged on; the whole life of the old farmhouse was changed. The father was broken-hearted, the mother went about sad and silent; the older children were softened and subdued, and they vied with each other in trying to comfort and cheer the baby boy, whose eyes were now forever closed upon the beautiful things which had filled his heart with joy. As sight was fading and darkness shutting in around him, and the family realized the sad truth that nothing more could be done, the first thought of every one was to minister to little Joseph. He was the center of every interest, and all plans were made with reference to his comfort. His physical health was robust, and he soon developed the instincts of an active, healthy boy. He entered into all the pastimes and frolics of his older brothers with as much zest and pleasure as if he could see as well as they. But with his physical development came a mental activity which made him long for school and books, and for the occupations as well as the pastimes of his brothers.

Joseph said in after years: "I cannot tell you anything approaching the anguish of those long, weary days, when my brothers were in school. Long before the time for their return I would wander far on the way to school, and, with constantly growing impatience, would wait for the voices of the merry boys and girls on their return, that they might repeat to me what they had learned in school."

The little blind boy spent many hours alone, picturing to himself the old orchard with its trees of apple and peach and cherry, and the broad expanse of cloverfields, with its white and red blossoms stretching far away in the distance.

He said in after years: "I can see them all before me, and I can see my dear mother's face and the old orchard as it was, in full bloom, at the time the curtain was drawn over my eyes. How I loved the stars! When my dear mother took me on her knee and talked to me about them, I said, 'Why do not the stars twinkle and shine, and why does not the dear God light them for your little boy?' And, for answer, the hot, silent tears fell upon my face, telling me of my mother's anguish."

When Joseph was ten years old, a school for the blind was established in Tennessee. It was announced in the newspapers that ten blind children would be received and instructed at the State's expense, in Nashville. This was startling news. The parents of Joseph had been praying for some opportunity for their blind boy, and immediately they set about doing what they could to prepare him for the school. The neighbors gathered together and contributed from their small resources all they could spare, a sewing-bee prepared his little wardrobe, and in one week Joseph started for Nashville, a long and tiresome journey in those days. The parting was sad.

"My mother wept and prayed," said Joseph, "my father sobbed aloud, and my brothers ran away to hide in the haymows, because they could not bear to say goodbye to the household pet."

It was a bright October day when Joseph started with a neighbor, whose business called him to Nashville, and the journey in the old stage-coach was a sorrowful one to the blind boy who had never left his mother's side for a day.

His joy knew no bounds when, for the first time, he had the books printed in raised letters put into his hands. In three-quarters of an hour he mastered the alphabet. His opportunities were unusual; the first few months the pupils were so few, the teacher could give much of his time to Joseph. His enthusiasm for learning was so great that his progress was phenomenal, and in two months' time he could read everything that was put into his hands.

He made great headway in all that he undertook except music. This, his teacher said, he could not master, and he had better give it up and devote himself to basket and brush-making. These were the industries taught at the school. As the music-teacher refused to give him lessons, he bargained with one of his fellow-pupils to repeat to him the lessons as he took them from the teacher. This he did, and Joseph improved the moments when the teacher was away to practice what he had learned from his schoolfellow. One day the school was to take a holiday, and the boys were to go with their teacher for a day in the woods. Joseph thought this would be a good time for him to practice. Accordingly he hid away in the barn, and when the party was ready to start, nothing could be found of Joseph. After hunting and calling in vain for a long time, they decided to go without him. No sooner had they gone than the blind boy took his seat at the piano, and there he sat, only changing his position now and then for rest, until the party returned.

The next day as Joseph was practicing, the music-teacher, who was himself blind, unexpectedly entered the room and said, "Who is that playing the new lesson so well? Who is at the piano?"

"I, sir," said Joseph.

"You cannot play. Tell me who is at the piano. Come here and let me hear you play that lesson."

"After repeating the short study I had been playing," says Joseph in relating the story, "I was asked what else I knew. 'All that you have given the other boys, sir,' I said."

"Let me hear you play from the instruction book," said the teacher.

There was but one piano in the school, and, by special permission, Joseph practiced from four to seven in the morning. Fifteen months later he took the prize for pianoforte-playing. Some years later Joseph was teaching with great success, in a large institution in New England, and could play with ease the most difficult compositions, after hearing the notes once or twice read.

During the years he had spent at Nashville, he, with a faithful guide and a well-trained horse, had ridden through forests, had scaled mountains, and forded rivers, and searched every corner of the State in pursuit of blind children. He had taken little blind children from wretched homes in the forest, strapped them on the saddle behind him, and ridden forty or fifty miles over untrodden paths, through an unknown country, till he reached a stage route; and he left the little blind child in the care of the stage-driver, to start again for some other blind child of whom he had heard, perhaps through a traveling peddler, or by consulting the census.

Thus several years passed at the Nashville institution, and Joseph thought he had accumulated enough to justify him in resigning his position and going forth to realize the golden dream of his life—a college education at Harvard. But obstacle appeared in his way; his health gave way, and, through the unfaithfulness and treachery of a trusted friend, his money was lost, and he was obliged to give up his cherished plan for a college education, and take a position as teacher.

After teaching some years he was advised to go to Europe for a year of rest. What he accomplished abroad every American citizen should be proud of.

Joseph's first thought, when he reached London, was for the little blind children. He at once began to investigate the institutions for the blind, and to study the methods that were in use for their instruction and improvement. He found them very unsatisfactory.

He had been but a few days in London when he learned that there was to be a meeting of gentlemen to consult about the educational advantages for the blind, and, if possible, to improve their condition. This meeting was composed of gentlemen of high standing and influence. The Duke of Westminster and Dr. Armitage, with others greatly respected for their philanthropy and benevolence, were of the number. Our friend Joseph, a penniless, friendless, sightless American, an unknown foreigner, appeared among the noted gentlemen, and modestly expressed his views upon the subject of educating the blind. He had nothing to recommend him but his earnest, heartfelt interest in his unfortunate brothers, and his exceptional voice, full of pathos and feeling. He gave his views, and every one listened with bated breath to his eloquent appeal. As soon as he had spoken, he quietly left the room.

A moment after he had disappeared, the duke inquired for the blind American who had just spoken, and was told that he had gone to the Charing Cross Station.

"Who led him?" said the duke.

"No one, replied a person who had noticed his leaving the room unattended; "he went by himself."

"I will take my carriage and follow him," said the duke; "it is not possible that a blind man, and a stranger in the streets of London, can reach the station, more than a mile distant, without accident."

Accordingly, he was followed to the station, all unconscious that the eye of the richest duke in England was upon him; for the duke became so impressed with his skill and wisdom in making his way through the crowded streets that he did not ask him to drive with him, but watched his movements from the carriage until he reached his destination, and then invited him to a place where they could have an interview. The interview resulted in a promise from the duke to give our blind friend every aid in his power, both moral and financial, to establish a school where the blind should be taught according to his ideas.

Our blind American friend now set in earnest about establishing a school for the better training and education of the blind. He secured a building in London in the neighborhood of the Crystal Palace, and there began his labors, working with untiring zeal and enthusiasm to carry out his favorite theory that the blind are to be treated exactly like other people, and that they are to be inspired with self-respect and made self-supporting.

His institution in Upper Norwood (London) is now one of the largest in Europe. It combines all the facilities and advantages of the best-appointed institutions for seeing people. It has skating-rinks, gymnasiums, bicycle clubs, tennis-courts, grounds for ball-playing, and swimming-tanks. Dr. Campbell (for by this name is our Joseph known to the world) goes with his pupils on long bicycle tours through the green lanes and byways of England, and no company of sight-seers ever enjoyed more than the blind boys, who seem to take in through their keen senses of smell and touch as much pleasure as those who have sight. They examine the flowers and the foliage along the hedgerows; and exclaim with delight at every new specimen of flower or shrub.

Dr. Campbell was the first blind man to ascend Mont Blanc, and when asked why he attempted so perilous an undertaking, he replied: "To bring my school into more prominent notice. The fact of my accomplishing this feat, the only blind man who has attempted it, has been largely written up in the London newspapers, and the inquiry is made, 'Who is the man and what does he do?' Hence my school is brought to notice."

The pupils of this institution are scattered throughout the country as music-teachers, organists, and piano-tuners, and so superior are they in their various departments that they are constantly sought above those who have sight.

A large church in a city of Scotland advertised for an organist, and Dr. Campbell, always on the alert for the advancement of his pupils, at once answered the advertisement and recommended one of his number for the position. Answer came that the church would not think of employing a blind organist. Dr. Campbell again wrote, asking that his pupil might be given a chance to compete with others for the situation. A very curt reply came back saying that the church would not incur the traveling expenses of a blind man, whom they were quite sure would not answer their purpose. Nothing daunted, Dr. Campbell replied that he would defray all the expenses, if his pupil might have the privilege of trying. This the church committee could not refuse, and the sightless man started to accomplish what seemed almost a hopeless task. Arriving in the city he went at once to the church to study its location and to ascertain the exact position of the organ.

When the evening came for the trial test, the critics were all there, with their preconceived judgment and their determined opposition. It was a trying place for our blind friend. As if to dispose of him as soon as possible, he was asked to play first.

"Play," said the committee, "tune two hundred and twenty."

Immediately, with great force and beauty, the tune was played.

The gentlemen of the committee looked at each other in surprise, and said, "That was an accident, of course, we will ask for another tune; play three hundred."

Now, conscious of the favorable impression he had made, the blind man, quick as thought, made the organ pour forth in soul-stirring melody the tune that was called for. Tune after tune was played with wondrous power and artistic variations, and the old Scotch deacons shook their heads with astonishment. Other organists followed, and tried their skill to the utmost. But to the blind man was given the position, which he has held for a decade with constantly increasing satisfaction to the church. He had learned the tunes most often used in the churches before he left the institution, and could play them as they were called for, having in mind not only the notes, but the number of each tune as well.

One little incident shows Dr. Campbell's loyalty to his own country and to republican principles. The tutor of a blind prince from Germany was sent out to investigate the various institutions in Europe, that he might decide upon the one he thought best for the education of the young prince. He came at last to London to the school in Upper Norwood, and after remaining there a few weeks, he decided that that was the place, above all others, for his charge. Accordingly he informed Dr. Campbell that he should go back to his own country and inform the parents of the prince that this was the school for their son.

"I am sorry to tell you," said Dr. Campbell, "that I shall not be able to take the prince. My school is established upon American principles, and to introduce a prince with his attendants among my pupils, most of whom are from the poorer classes, would involve changes in my family menange which I should not like to make. My school is thoroughly democratic, and we have no distinction of rank and position."

The tutor was greatly surprised, feeling, as he did, that it would be a great honor to have one of the royal family in the school. The matter was laid before the Duke of Westminster, who was president of the board of trustees.

The duke said: "Dr Campbell, this is carrying your American notions too far. Nothing would give our institution such notoriety as to have a prince among its inmates."

Dr. Campbell quietly and modestly said: "Your highness will pardon me. I have weighed the question well, and I have decided that it will be impossible for me to accede to your wishes. I cannot change my decision."

Seeing it useless to pursue the subject, the tutor, as he was about to take his departure, said: "If you will not take my charge as a prince, will you take him as a beggar? He must come to this school, for there is none to compare with it in Europe."

The prince entered the school upon exactly the same conditions that a waif from the streets of London would have been received, and he remained, a happy and contented inmate, for several years.

Who could foresee that this blind boy was to be the chosen of God to bring his fellow-sufferers all over the world out of helpless darkness into self-helpfulness? His methods are such as to elevate the blind and make them self-supporting and self-respecting. It was by the force of Joseph Campbell's character that all this has been accomplished; and is it not a great achievement for a blind, penniless, friendless American to establish one of the best schools in Europe, and perhaps one of the best in the world, for the education of sightless people? Through his efforts a bill, for which he has been laboring many years, has just passed Parliament, ordering all blind and deaf and dumb children to be taught at the expense of the state.—Mary B. Claflin, in the Outlook.

TEMPERANCE.

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT IN ENGLAND.

In a recent number of the North American Review, Justin McCarthy, M. P., writing of the growth of the temperance movement in England, says:

The temperance party, as the party in favor of prohibitory legislation as regards the sale of intoxicating liquors, has grown to an immense power in the state. Thus far its members have habitually acted with the Liberals, because they believe there is better hope for their cause from the Liberals than from the Tories. But they would at any moment forsake the Liberals and stand by the Tories if the Tories were to promise them a full measure of local option and the Liberals were to refuse it. They would be justified in such action by the very conditions of their existence. They are, like the Irish Nationalists, a party formed for one distinct purpose, to the promotion of which all other considerations are secondary. A few years ago they were, like the old-fashioned Home Rulers, a party that merely got up an annual debate, and took an annual division. This, at least, they seemed to be to most members of the House of Commons. Once in each session they brought in a bill for the prevention or restriction of the sale of intoxicating liquors, and the question was discussed and a division was taken, and the Prohibitionists were left in a small minority, and the House heard no more about the matter until the next session. I know men who used to vote with the Prohibitionists because they said it looked well to be on the side of temperance, and the prohibition bill could not possibly do any harm, because it could not pass. In the meanwhile, the temperance men were exerting themselves all over the country, in every city, and in every village, and at every election. The press was for the most against them, but the pulpits were for the most part with them. They got hold of a new and taking principle, a new and taking name. They made their agitation one in favor of "local option." It was to be left to a certain majority, in each community, to say whether the sale of intoxicating drinks should or should not be permitted there. Many a man who has no particular faith in the suppression of drunkenness by legislation finds it hard to say why the majority in any community should not be allowed to determine whether they will or will not allow drinking-shops to be established among them. At one time it was thought that the power of the publicans was irresistible at the elections, but of late many people have begun to doubt whether the temperance men are not the stronger influence of the two. It is certain that of recent years the official leaders of the Liberal party have determined to defy the publicans, and to translate, as soon as they can, the principle of local option into legislation. The present government is pledged to some adaptation of the principle.

CHICAGO, WHAT SHE HAS.

Seven thousand saloons and places where liquors are sold.

By careful estimate the daily receipts for each place must average $27.50 per day, a total of $192,500.

A total per year of $70,262,500.

WHAT SHE MIGHT HAVE:

For Education.

Build fifty new school-houses, cost each $50,000, $2,500,000. Daily paper, each family, $1,500,000.

For Health and Comfort.

Put water and sewers in 250 streets and alleys, $2,500,000; pave 200 miles of streets and alleys, $6,000,000; clean city streets, every day, 5,000 men and 250 teams, $2,500,000; build five new hospitals at $100,000 each, $500,000; endow them, free, $1,500,000.

For Culture, Art, etc.

Build three children's museums, $300,000; endow them, $1,500,000; build three children's libraries, $300,000; endow them, $1,500,000: build one art gallery, $500,000; endow it, $1,500,000.

For Religion.

Build fifty chapels, costing $20,000, $1,000,000; support 500 city missionaries, $1,000 each, 500 000; spend for Bibles and religious papers, $1,000,000.

Charity.

Build 25,000 cottages for the poor, $1,000 each, $25,000,000; furnish each at $300, $7,500,000; clothe 100,000 poor persons at $20, $2,000,000; give $50 to each of 50,000 deserving persons, $2 500,000; help other cities in emergency, $2,500,000.

To Perpetuate the Fair.

For an annual exhibition, $5,662,500.—The Citizen.

The city council of Joliet has refused to grant any saloon licenses for the ensuing year, beginning July 1.

General Bidwell, of California, has been nominated for United States Senator from that State by the Prohibitionists.

It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth or is made weak.—Paul the Apostle, 50 A. D.

The police department of New York City has resolved to close the all-night saloons. An order has been issued compelling them to close at 1 o'clock A. M.

In New York a society to promote moderation in drinking as well as total abstinence has been organized, it is reported, under the direction of the Episcopal church. This is temperance after the saloon model. We hope the report is untrue that any church of Christ has undertaken such an enterprise.

WHY THE STRIKE WILL FAIL (Continued from 4th page).

They asked no advice or sanction from us when they began this warfare, but after they had entered upon it they solicited our aid to help them fight it out. The men made no grievance known to the railroads, but struck simply out of sympathy for the Pullman strike, which was a good, well-grounded strike. It can only result in great injury to our unions.

"The uprising is a disease, like the smallpox—contagious to a terrible degree. The disease has spread and seems to have infected a great number of those who have even come in contact with the malady. The violent inciters have persuaded the men to come into the fold and now they have driven them into a chute which ends on the brink of a precipice. Most of them will go over and they will never quit falling. I am sure these unfortunate men have made the worst mistake of their lives, and they won't live long enough to ever cease regretting it. There can be but one end; that will be the absolute overthrow of the lawless demonstrations and the triumph of the law, which has been trampled under foot. Any other end would land the nation in anarchy. A crisis is here. There must be no demagogy or cowardice. We must call a spade a spade. I may be cursed and reviled for the stand I have taken in the matter, but I am not afraid to stand up for what I think is right. I don't court notoriety or seek notice in the least, but simply go ahead and do what I conceive to be my duty."

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON IV.—Third Quarter, 1894, July 22.

SUBJECT.—Flight into Egypt.—Matt. 2:13-23.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Lord shall preserve thy going out, and thy coming in.—Psa. 121:8.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Matt. 2:13-23. T.—Psa. 124. W.—Psa. 125. Th.—Psalm 55:16-23. F.—Psa. 31:15-24. S.—Job 5:8-16. Su.—Psa. 27:1-6.

[The notes usually prepared by Miss Flagg not having reached Chicago in time, the following excellent analysis of the lesson is borrowed from the "Light and Life" series published by Rev. T. B. Arnold, Chicago.]

Three thoughts in our lesson invite our attention. First, God's special care of his Son. Second, h's use of human means to exercise it, wherever possible. Third, the character of those means.

1. The whole lesson is proof that the eternal Father had an especial oversight of all matters in any way pertaining to the child Jesus. There were no "hair-breadth" escapes in his case. It was just as impossible for any ill to befall this divine infant as it would be for a new universe to spring into being. There was an infinite distance, in the eye of God, between him and serious harm. The application of this truth to us is grand. For his sake every child of his is divinely cherished as the apple of his eye. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about them that fear him. As Elisha beheld the mountains full of horses and chariots of fire, so the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them. Satan felt the force of this in Job's case, and complained that the Lord had set a hedge all about him, so that he could not get at him. And the Egyptian host realized it when the fiery cloudy pillar came between them and the hosts of Israel. Surely our defence is of the Lord.

2. God's use of human means.—vs. 13, 19, 22. There are in this one lesson no less than three supernatural dreams. Joseph was the divinely appointed guardian of the holy infant. It is the only relation he ever sustained to him; and when his services in this direction were no longer needed, we hear no more of Joseph. Happily he was a man who feared God. Being a just man, he believed all that was spoken from on high concerning the immaculate conception. He believed the Son of Mary to be the Son of God. And he rejoiced that, being counted worthy to be her life partner, he was the God-appointed protector, both of herself and her precious babe. All his spiritual powers were in acute sympathy with God's holy will concerning them. And his was a life of sacrifice. To do all in his power to perfect that divine will in the redemption of the world by Him who was now in his infancy, he was willing, if necessary, to sacrifice his life. What two things—a spiritual intuition and a spirit of self-sacrifice—could constitute a more fitting medium of communication between God and man? It requires a close communion with God to always tell when God is speaking. But there is a relation that mortals may sustain to him where they "can hear

The softest whisper of his voice."

Such was the sanctified channel through which God chose to reveal his will concerning the infant Christ. God could have smitten Herod in his tracks; could have killed all his assassins who came to murder the innocents of Bethlehem's coasts ere they reached the place; or, what might seem more feasible to us, he could have rendered the babe miraculously invulnerable to sword or spear or bludgeon. The wisdom of his ways is far beyond our own. The thing which he did was wisest, simplest and best. His resources are illimitable. It is a pre-eminent point in his economy to press everything and everybody into his service. Yet, at no point is truth more liable to be misapprehended. God compels the repentance and faith of no man; but he does compel men to do his pleasure in forwarding the ends of his moral government. Thrice blessed he who, like Joseph, comprehends the will of his Master and gladly obeys it without hesitation. But four times miserable the man, who, like Herod, is blind to every interest but his own, and who therefore is a blind tool of the Most High in perfecting his righteous plans through the bitter disappointment of his own.

3. The means employed. That God has used dreams to communicate with men is sufficiently proven in the lesson. All dreams so used are supernatural. Spiritists and other low-minded men have so grossly abused this important subject that the majority of Christian ministers have come to say little or nothing about it. But because impressionists and fanatics have made capital out it, is not sufficient reason why this matter should be so totally ignored by Christians. This course gives our common foe a tremendous advantage in swelling the ranks of rationalists, free-thinkers and infidels. It helps to take all that supernatural out of our holy Christianity, and degrade its principles from the exalted realm of spiritual power into a material thing, inert, insipid and dead.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The late United Presbyterian General Assembly did not adjourn on "Decoration day," as G A. R. sympathizers would have desired, but simply had a special season of prayer led by Rev. J. D. Brownlee.

—There are 522 churches in New York City. Of these the Episcopalians have 103; the Roman Catholics, 84; Presbyterians, of all names, 70; Methodists, 65; Baptists, 50; Jews, 46; Lutherans, 21.

—An interesting department of mission work in Japan is the railway mission, organized to evangelize men connected with the railway service in that country, there being 34,000 employed in different ways.

—Mr. David Baron, a Hebrew, having severed his connection with the Midway Mission to the Jews, has gone to Glasgow to initiate the Bonar Memorial Mission to the Jews in that city.

—The buildings of the Norwegian mission station in China has been destroyed by the natives, the missionaries barely escaping with their lives. The mission was founded five years ago.

—The Illinois District meeting connected with the Missouri Lutheran Synod has recommended the beginning of a mission in India, and the employment of two missionaries, Revs. Naether and Mohn, recently in the employ of the Leipzig society.

—This Assembly, in adopting the report of its committee on reforms, declared on the temperance question that "no Christian can be held innocent of wrong-doing, who, when a moral question is at issue, so votes as to be counted against the side of righteousness."

—The Fifth Annual Institute of the Young People of the United Presbyterian denomination will be held in the Second United Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, July 5-8. Among the speakers Prof. R. A. Torrey of the Moody Institute, this city, is prominent.

—Years ago, says Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost, a common drunken sweeper in India died, leaving his twelve-year-old daughter to the missionaries. She was educated, taking the degree of A. M , and is now the accomplished principal of an educational institution in India.

—The Independent rebukes Prof. Swing for preaching on the "decline of revivals." The Professor is shown to be much misinformed, since the recruits to the Methodist Episcopal church, as the result of revival effort, have risen from 240,000 in 1892 to 326,000 in 1894. A similar outcome of revivals is believed to hold for the other denominations. It is certain that the magnitude of revival machinery was never before equal to its present proportion, and it accords with our observation that the general result of operating it is effective.

—Death has been busy among the older ministers of the United Presbyterian churches. The past year has taken from their number such names as Drs. Dales, David Thompson, Logue, McAyeal, and others. These names, long recognized as among the foremost workers not only in that denomination but of the anti-lodge reform also, will be long deservedly treasured in memory for their faithful testimony for Christ.

—The Lake Bluff camp-meeting began July 6th, and will continue through the 15th. Among those announced to participate are Bishop Mallalieu, Bishop Fowler, Dr. W. A. Spencer, Presiding-elders Jackson, Hardin, and Burns, Rev. Drs. Mandeville, Caldwell, and many others. Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Boynton, well-known as successful workers for the promotion of holiness, will have charge of the early morning meeting.

—There are 686 Student Volunteers now in the foreign field, and they are distributed as follows: North, South, and East Central Africa, 45; West Central Africa, 33; Arabia, 5; Armenia, 5; Austria, 5; Brazil, 32; Bulgaria, 8; Burmah, 24; Central America, 3; Ceylon 4; China, 135; Corea, 38; India, 129; Japan, 88; Laos, 11; Maylaysia, 3; Mexico, 17; Micronesia, 12; Palestine, 3; Russia, 32; Siam, 15; Syria, 13; Turkey, 19; United States of Colombia, 7.

—In Uganda Bishop Tucker says that where a few years ago the people were sunk in the lowest heathenism, he has seen 5,000 at one time worshiping the true God in a noble building erected by their own hands. He says, too, that he never saw more order or reverence in an English cathedral than at these Sabbath services. The thirst for reading put into them by Alexander Mackay has grown almost into a popular passion.

—One hundred and fifty years ago the first Hottentot was baptized by the Moravian missionary, George Schmidt. Now there are in Cape Colony under the Moravian church twenty-two missionaries with 9,300 souls under their care. Yet in spite of all the encouraging things about the work in Africa, it is said that in America the bills for the importation of African ostrich feathers alone far exceed the contributions of the entire Protestant church for the support of the Gospel in foreign lands.

—Rev. H. T. Ferguson, of the United Presbyterian church, of Sunbeam, Ill., was struck by lightning and instantly killed late in the evening of the 21st inst. His son and himself were in the barn when it was struck. The Instructor says, the lightning prostrated the son also. Mrs. Ferguson ran to the barn which was set on fire, and but for the timely interference of a neighbor both wife and son would have perished in the flames as she was overwhelmed and prostrated with the sudden providence.

—Rev. D. McAllister, who continues in charge of the Chinese Mission, founded by Rev. N. R. Johnston in San Francisco, reports that during the past year it has been as prosperous as could be expected. An intense anti-Chinese sentiment operates against all schools of this character. The enrollment of scholars is 110, with an average attendance of about twenty-one. Seventeen are members of the church. On account of the anti-Chinese legislation it is feared the school will be decreased in numbers.

—The question of taxation of church property came up before a court in Philadelphia recently on the claim that certain rooms in a church building leased to the Board of Education and used as a public school were exempt. The judge held that the law of exemption is limited to such property as is in actual use and occupation for religious purposes, and that all other property, even the church itself, from which any income or revenue should be derived is subject to taxation. Actual use, he understands to mean exclusive use, and a mere concurrent or alternative occupation does not come within the requirements of exemption. He thus reverses the judgment of a lower court and a new trial is ordered.

—Fred Perry Powers, writing in the Forum, testifies for one important thing, "that Protestant Christianity is growing in India as fast as in the United States, and that the growth of the missionary churches has exceeded the estimates, or rather the conjectures, of the missionaries twenty-three years ago." He quotes from figures of the Bombay Missionary Conference of 1893, to the effect that "the communicants of churches in India numbered 182,722, at the end of 1890, which was a little more than the communicants of the Presbyterian church, South, in the United States." The rate of increase in the churches of India, of various denominations had been, between the two dates 1881 and 1890, 67.24 per cent over against Methodist increase in nearly the same period in the United States of thirty-one per cent; Congregationalist, thirty-three per cent; Presbyterian, North, thirty-seven per cent. "The ordained ministers," he says, "both native and foreign, are not much in excess of one to 200,000 of the population; but the number of ordained natives is rapidly increasing. In 1880 there were nearly 300,000 pupils in the mission schools."

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2.50.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geaslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 10cts each.

Home and Health.

ATTRACTIVE COUNTRY HOMES.

A writer in The New England Farmer has some excellent ideas upon the subject of farm life, which may suggest some topics not often thought of by tillers of the soil:

We want to see farmers' homes as comfortable, as convenient, and as beautiful as it is possible to make them. A painted house not only looks better than an unpainted one, but it is warmer and will last longer. Some men with extreme ideas of economy claim that it is cheaper to reclapboard the walls of a house when the clapboards are worn out than to keep them painted. We do not care whether it is cheaper or not. We are willing to pay something for the good looks of a well-painted dwelling house.

The grounds around a farmers' home should be kept clean and the walks dry and in good order. Let the grass-plots be enriched by a top dressing of old, fine manure, that will make the grass look thrifty and green after frequent cuttings all the summer through.

And who, if not farmers, should decorate their homes with shrubs and flowers? It need not cost much money to collect enough flowers and flowering shrubs to set in all the warm nooks and corners around our buildings.

The inside of a farmer's home ought to be both attractive and convenient, and so arranged and furnished that it may be kept so with but little labor. Woodwork that is well coated with paint and varnish requires much less labor in cleaning than if left unpainted, and carpets add a great deal to the warmth and home-like appearance of our sitting-rooms. But do not make the mistake of furnishing your house so well that you cannot afford to use it. Our sitting-rooms should be light and airy, and open to all the members of the family who are willing to leave their stable shoes in their appropriate places.

We wish we could see a good musical instrument in every farmer's home. It adds so much to the attractions of the home circle and its strains are so quieting to the nerves of the tired body when the day's work is ended.

Encourage your children to make such collections of natural curiosity as your locality affords. If near the sea, beautiful specimens of shell-work may ornament your rooms, and everywhere collections of insects and butterflies may be made, that will add to the attractions of your home and at the same time afford subjects for study to both children and friends. The study of the habits of insects and the arranging of collections may lead some young person in the neighborhood to take up that higher art of collecting and stuffing, for preservation, specimens of our native birds and animals.

We like to see a country home look as if it was of the country, and not imported from or imitation of the city; but we would make it so tasteful that our city friends can enjoy a visit with us. We need their influence. They help polish us up, so we can feel a little more easy when we visit them.

One thing more must be added to your home to make it what a home should be, which, although mentioned last, is really of the first importance. This is to provide a suitable place for an abundance of good books, magazines, and newspapers, and then see that the books, magazines, and newspapers are provided, and the children induced to ascertain what is in them. It is entirely too late in the day to expect an ignorant man to be a prosperous farmer. He must study his business by means of books and newspapers, as well as by experiments in the field. He must know what others are doing and what others have learned in his business. A well-selected agricultural library in a farmer's home is a pretty sure indication that there is no mortgage on those premises.

Much is said in the papers, nowadays, about specialties in farming. While we readily admit that it is better for each farmer to make leading articles of such crops as are best adapted to his soil, circumstances, and the peculiarities of his location and market, the conclusion that this or that product can be paid for more easily than it can be produced is liable to be reached without full estimation of the time and expense involved in the selection, purchase, and transportation, which would be avoided by growing them on our own farms. The wool, or dairy, or other like specialty may be overdone, or some malady among the cows or sheep may make fearful havoc with the profits, and the farmer see cause to regret that his products were not more diversified. But there is one specialty that each one may adopt, and enlist in its prosecution his whole energies—and that is the raising of himself to the ownership of a pleasant country home. Each may make that a specialty, and have no fear of glutting the market or of injuring his neighbors."

It Is Not What We Say But What Hood's Sarsaparilla Does

That Tells the Story. Its record is unequalled in the history of medicine. Even when other preparations fail

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

Hood's Pills act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla and are gentle, mild and effective.

FREE TRIAL

$2.75 Buys our $9 Natural Finish Baby Carriage complete with plated steel wheels, axle, springs, and one piece steam bent handle. Made of best material, finely finished, reliable, and guaranteed for 3 years. Shipped on 10 days' trial. FREIGHT PAID; no money required in advance. 75,000 in use. We are the oldest and best known concern of our kind, reliable and responsible. Reference furnished at any time. Make and sell nothing but what we guarantee to be as represented, sold at the lowest factory prices. WRITE TO-DAY for our large FREE illustrated catalogue of latest designs and styles published.

OXFORD MFG. CO., 340 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST

A Secret Empire;

Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.

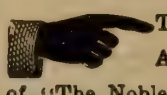
By Rev. Richard Horton.

Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.

Price, 60 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

There is no excuse for any man to appear in society with a grizzly beard since the introduction of Buckingham's Dye, which colors natural brown or black.

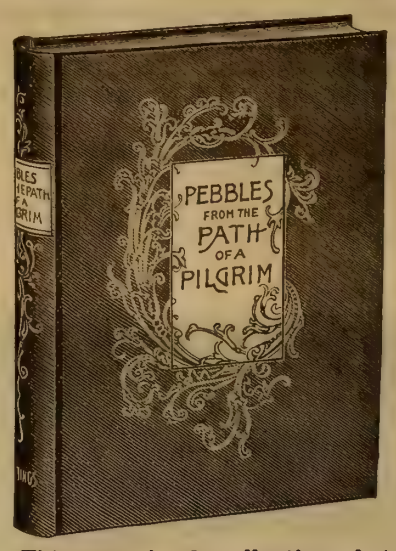


THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book.... No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. Kimball,
Box 277. Newmarket, N. H.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S

—]-oo-[—

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.

Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS

OF

FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—Matthew Henry. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

By the Same Author:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy,"—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Other Works by C. H. Spurgeon:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

BOYS ON THE FARM.

The following paper on farming for boys was written by Justus Dent, of Weathersfield, Vt., and read before a meeting of the Vermont Board of Agriculture. We second so grand an appeal for the encouragement and help of country boys:

"The inefficiency of hired help has caused farmers much perplexity, and the difficulty is not growing any less. Although wages are much higher proportionately than the products of the farm, still good help is scarcer every year. How often we hear the remark: 'I must sell my farm. My boys are not contented to stay with me, and I can get no hired help that is worth anything.' It is true that there are those among farmers' boys who are not adapted to farm labor. The whole inclination of their mind is toward some other occupation, and it is well for the interests of all classes that this is so. Many of our best mechanics, business men, and members of the different professions were farmers' boys, and they carried with them into their business and professions habits of industry and principles of true honesty, inherited from their ancestors and developed by them in their judicious training on the New England homestead. But a large class of young men annually leave the farm for some other occupation, to the great detriment of their own interests as well as of the interests of our farming communities. What is the remedy? is a question often asked, and as often answered in many different ways.

"Progress has been the watchword of our nation. We boast of the rapid advancement made in arts and sciences, and manufactures and facilities for trade, and in the means of education and culture; and, when we compare our system of farming with that practiced when our fathers were boys, we can but feel a degree of satisfaction in the improvement made in the manner and means of tilling the soil. Although it has not been possible to induce many to leave the beaten track of their fathers, and branch out into new experiments and modes of cultivation, yet a few have done so, with profit to themselves and to the communities in which they live. The influence of these has not been lost upon our farmer boys; but we are not educating them into farmers. True, we have formed farmers' clubs and agricultural societies, we have legislated upon it, made land grants and established agricultural colleges; but all these have failed to influence the minds of the great mass of our farmer boys in favor of agricultural pursuits. This must be done, if done at all, by 'home culture.'

"Boys generally have poorer tools to work with. We do not take pains enough to furnish them with those that are suited to their age and strength. They have to use a wornout scythe, a clumsy fork, a hoe that has been thrown by as unfit for use, and then are often censured because they have not done more work. And then, with chores in the house, as well as out of doors, they usually work more hours than the men, while they should not work as many. They are often sent to do disagreeable jobs alone—picking up stones, clearing the fields of brush, or pulling weeds among the potatoes. All this is necessary to be done; but we should work with them. Boys like company, and if we send them to do this work, when we go to the village, it will create in them a dislike for the work. We give them too few play-days. Their very nature demands an occasional release from work, and a day for enjoyment in their own way, even though it be harder for them than work. There must be relaxation for them oftener than we give it.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA — WORLD'S FAIR Chicago 1893

Cures OTHERS, WILL Cure You.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
THE GRAND RAPIDS SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
GRAND RAPIDS MICH.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S AND AGENT'S PROFITS.

$12 buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc., free. OXFORD MFG. CO.

338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

CINCINNATI — BIG FOUR ROUTE — CHICAGO — CLEVELAND — ST. LOUIS RY.

SUMMER TRIPS To The

MOUNTAINS, LAKES AND SEA SHORE

SHOULD BE ARRANGED VIA THE

BIG FOUR ROUTE

TO SECURE ALL THE

COMFORTS OF HOME

WHILE TRAVELING.

WRITE FOR TOURIST BOOK.

E. O. McCORMICK, Pass. Traffic Mgr. | D. B. MARTIN, Gen'l Pass & Tkt Agt

CINCINNATI.

THE

Folly, Expense & Danger

OF

SECRET SOCIETIES

BY

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.

(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago

AMERICAN HANDBOOK AND CITIZEN MANUAL.

BY

MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Ch

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS AND REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

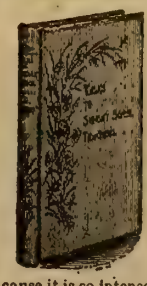
Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw, Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.

By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth..... .75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3	c.
The Lily "	" 3 "	Pure Words "	" 3	"
Light & L Scholar's	Qrly. 3 "	Light & L Inf Cl. wk.	4	"
" " Teacher's	" 5 "	" " Lesson Leaf	" 1½	"
Golden Treasures	1 "	L. & L. Primary	Qly 4	"

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, & Sunshine, each Pr. Yr.	25c	Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr.	75c
The four to one address	75c	Scholar's " "	20c
		L. & L. Infant Class, weekly,	25c

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back..... .50c.
Paper cover..... .30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT of the Holy Ghost,

BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY, Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by perusing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polemical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.

L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf..... 1½c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1½c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.

LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING

Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,

104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

"Best" Marriage Certificate. Size 14x17½. Price postpaid 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50.

This superb certificate meets a popular demand, and is rapidly becoming the favorite. Read what the people say of it: BRO. BEST: My attention having been called to your marriage certificate, I must pronounce it the neatest in design and execution of any I have seen. Rev. E. P. HART. E. C. BEST—Dear Brother: I am well pleased with the specimen copy of your marriage certificate, and shall use them hereafter. They are in good taste, well executed, on good material, and at a very reasonable price. Yours, M. V. CLUTE.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chica

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE GREAT STRIKE IN CHICAGO

MONDAY:—United States Judges Woods and Grosscup granted a sweeping order enjoining all strikers, their friends, sympathizers and those whom they may incite from interfering in any way in the United States court district of Northern Illinois with the United States mails or with any interstate commerce traffic, either passenger or freight. Those arrested for violation of the order will be brought before the court and required to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court.

At Blue Island, just outside the limits, an epidemic of lawlessness broke out Saturday with the wrecking of a through train on the Rock Island road at the depot.

The largest mob that has assembled here since the inauguration of the big strike is in possession of the railroad crossings, despite the fact that the village is swarming with armed deputy sheriffs and United States marshals.

Five companies of the 7th regiment United States army, stationed at Fort Logan, left for Trinidad, where over 100 deputy marshals were disarmed yesterday by a mob.

An extended conference was held at the White House, Washington, lasting from 9 o'clock until midnight. There were present besides the President, Secretary of War Lamont, Attorney-General Olney, Maj.-General Schofield, Secretary Gresham and Gen. Miles, who has been on leave, and will return to his headquarters at Chicago to-morrow morning.

It was decided that the government will take charge of the transportation problem, and the interruption of travel and traffic from this time on will be revolution against federal authority. The authority for the action is found in that clause of the Constitution which gives the Federal Government power to regulate commerce between the States.

TUESDAY:—The Chicago & Northwestern road made a summary move in discharging every man in every department whose services could possibly be dispensed with. The order affects fully 10,000 men and will be in force while the strike continues. Firemen and engineers quit their posts Monday afternoon on several branches of the road. At a meeting of 600 members of the American Railway union and other railway employes at Detroit, it was decided to inaugurate a strike on all railroads in the city.

Mayor Hopkins, of Chicago, appealed to Debs of the A. R. Union to allow a train load of dead animals to be removed from the stockyards. Permission was given.

WEDNESDAY:—The first detachment of regular troops reached the Union Stock Yards at 6 o'clock A. M. Companies B and D of the 15th regiment, on a Lake Shore train, disembarked at 40th street, and went at once into camp, in Dexter park.

The celebration of the national holiday, at Sacramento, Cal., was completely overshadowed by the stirring events arising from the desperate struggle between the Southern Pacific and the American Railway union. At 10 o'clock A. M., two regiments of State militia from San Francisco and two companies from Stockton marched into the city. At 1 o'clock they were moved to the depot where a large force of deputies under the sheriff and U. S. marshal were on guard. The militia was ordered to drive the strikers from the station. The soldiers hesitated, wavered and in a few minutes turned their backs and went back to the armory. Strikers are arming in different parts of California, and the trains are all abandoned.

THURSDAY:—The Illinois Central and Northwestern resumed business in Chicago. The Michigan Central, Northern Pacific, Ft. Wayne and Burlington have kept the passenger service intact, and the latter has had little trouble with freight.

This morning an order was entered in the United States Court for a special grand jury to investigate the railroad strikes. The investigation will be directed not merely against the strikers who have resorted to actual violence, but against the leaders of the boycott. District Attorney Milchrist said an effort would be made to procure the indictment of Debs, Howard and the whole executive committee of the American Railway Union.

Regular troops assisted in moving trains at the stock yards all day yesterday. Mobs were violent but respected the U. S. troops.

FRIDAY:—President Cleveland replied briefly to a long screed from Gov. Altgeld demanding that U. S. troops be withdrawn from Chicago as the police and State militia would control. The President says his men are attending to government business and have a perfect right under the Constitution and laws.

Mobs ruled in a large district about the stock yards. Neither police, deputies or troops could stop their work of overturning and burning cars and destroying property in large amounts in savage triumph.

Chief Arthur, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at Columbus, O., advised the engineers of the Hocking Valley railway to return to work, as they had no grievance. The firemen decided to return to work also. The American Railway Union, by refusing arbitration, has lost the strike.

At Kansas City the strikers were reinforced by a walkout of the switchmen in the Hannibal and St. Joseph yards. This is particularly damaging to the Burlington company, which has been doing an enormous freight business since the beginning of the strike, owing to the fact that no trouble of any magnitude had been felt on any part of the system.

Gov. Shortridge, of N. Dakota, requested the American Railway Union lodge at Jamestown to permit trains to run for the transportation of the militia returning home from encampment. The request was refused as being out of the jurisdiction of the local lodge, and the Governor was referred to Debs, at Chicago. Debs was wired accordingly, but no reply has been received.

Debs sent the following message at noon to chairmen of committees in Texas and several other points, ordering all railroad employes to withdraw at once: "You are requested to request all employes of all roads, particularly Southern Pacific system, to withdraw from the service in a body. El Paso to Ogden and Portland is now out solid. Elect a good committee and wire name of chairman, mentioning name of road he represents. We will all stand together. We will win."

Mayor Hopkins, of Chicago, issued a proclamation declaring his intention to enforce order.

Gen. Miles encamped all his U. S. regulars on the Lake front. Considerable reinforcements came in from Michigan and the west.

SATURDAY:—Up to date three men have been killed and five wounded in the strike in Chicago.

The Building Trades council, comprising twenty-four secret unions, voted last night to join the strike. It made this declaration after recounting that it represented 25,000 men and affirming that capital is arrayed on the side of Pullman and the railroad companies and against just demands for arbitration.

Mobs were burning cars and ravaging in a large section of the South Side, Chicago, all night. Some estimates make the loss $2,000,000, a large portion being Burlington freight trains which have been running with little interruption.

WASHINGTON.

The House on Monday passed a resolution directing the commissioner of labor to investigate the work and wages of women and children, and adjourned till Thursday.

The Senate passed Hill's amendment to the Wilson bill making the repeal of the sugar bounty take immediate effect.

In the Senate on the 2nd, Mr. Call offered a resolution for the appointment of a joint committee to inquire into the cause of the existing Pullman strike, the justice of the demands of the workingmen and to report by bill or otherwise, and Mr. Kyle offered the resolution indorsed by Pres. Debs of the American Railway union and General Secretary-Treasurer Hayes, of the Knights of Labor, looking to the protection of strikers from federal interference except to insure the transportation of United States mails and declaring that the detachment of Pullman's or other parlor or sleeping cars from a train shall not constitute an offense against the United States.

GENERAL.

The White City of the World's Fair was almost wiped out of existence Thursday night in three hours by fire. In the following order the buildings named were burned: Terminal Station, Administration Building, Mines and Mining Building, Electricity Building, Manufactures Building, Agricultural Building, Machinery Hall. The Transportation Building was badly scorched, but hard work by the firemen saved the Government Building from the flames. The loss will fall upon the Columbian Exposition Salvage company, to which the buildings were sold by the Exposition company, May 5, last. The price paid was $80,000. The fire began in the Terminal station.

Four churches in Mississippi were blown down by a tornado on Monday and several persons killed.

A Canadian Pacific bridge went down under a train, killing five persons and injuring eight.

On Tuesday the jury deliberating on the sanity of Prendergast, the assassin, gave the verdict that he is not insane. The sentence of death will therefore be executed if there is not further stay of proceedings.

Few medicines have held their ground so successfully as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. During the past fifty years, it has been the most popular of all cough-cures and the demand for it to day is greater than ever before. Prompt to act and sure to cure.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

A BOOKLET.
107 pages, 5x7 inches.
Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents
—o:o—
The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:
THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.
CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.
THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.
This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MY EXPERIENCES
WITH
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY A TRAVELER.
With a Key to Masonry Illustrated
—o-o—
A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is
Fifteen Cents,
but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.
BY REV. S. F. PORTER,
A Study of Christ's Comings.
Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.
For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	55¼	@	58¼
Winter No. 2	50	@	56
Corn—No. 2	40⅜	@	41⅛
Oats—No. 2	40	@	48
Rye—No. 2	45	@	46
Bran per ton	12 00
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@	10 75
Butter, medium to best	11	@	17⅛
Cheese	06	@	08¼
Beans	1 25	@	1 90
Eggs, fresh	09⅛	@	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 00	@	4 85
Flax	1 20
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 00	@	9 10
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@	70 00
Potatoes, (new, pr. bbl.)	1 65	@	2 10
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼	@	06⅛
Lumber—Common			15 50
Wool (unwashed)	7	@	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 50	@	5 00
Common to good	2 40	@	4 30
Hogs	4 65	@	5 65
Sheep	4 00	@	4 50

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	59¼	@	68⅜
Corn No 2	45⅝	@	46¼
Oats	49	@	57
Rye	52	@	55
Eggs, Western fresh	13	@	14⅛
Butter	09⅛	@	18⅜
Wool	19	@	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 40	@	4 90
Hogs	4 60		4 95

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI., No. 45 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,264.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Woman's Part in the Reform..... 8
Page Ten..... 8
The Endeavor Movement as an Antidote..... 8
Pullman, Debs, et al.... 8
Utah a State..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Heroine of France.. 1
Character and Teaching. 2
Secret Societies in the Light of Scripture..... 2
SELECTED:
Our Country (Poetry)... 3
A History of Strikes.... 3
The Church and Social Problems..... 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
The Floating Chapel; Over the Oregon Coast Range; The Scandinavians of Sioux Falls... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
The A. P. A Know-nothing Oath; Judge Longenecker on Strikes and Disorders; Pith and Point..... 6
Strike Notes 6
N. C. A 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

The announcement that Ingersoll, the champion of infidelity, will act, through personal friendship, as attorney for Mr. Debs, will not increase public confidence either in the leader of the late strike or in his methods.

It was a famous saying of Charles Sumner: "If we would fortify, we must sanctify the Republic, making it at once Citadel and Temple." This is a profound truth, a watchword for our beloved land. Protestant Christianity, which Webster so grandly put as the foundation of our laws, is at the same time the means of their preservation. Supreme love to God and equal love to man is our banner of victory and peace. The American system can prosper under no other.

Dr. Briggs of New York and his sympathizers cannot thank Robert G. Ingersoll for his late declaration that "Paine stood, in his day, where Dr. Briggs stands to-day. The only men in the church worth attention are the heretics. To be tried for heresy is to be immortalized. Paine was just a hundred years older than Briggs." It may be unwelcome truth, but it is truth nevertheless, that the teachings of the two men tend to produce the same ultimate result in the minds of men.

The official announcement Friday morning that President Cleveland would not wait for the action of Congress for an investigation of the strike, gave great satisfaction throughout the country. Some of the local labor union leaders were enraged by it, but sober men among them rejoiced. The commission will be appointed under the O'Neill arbitration law adopted by Congress in 1888 Carroll D. Wright, the Commissioner of Labor, will be ex officio a member of the committee of inquiry. Two others are to be named. They report to the President and to Congress. Mr. Cleveland lays peculiar emphasis, however, on the fact that no step in the investigation shall be taken until lawlessness has ceased. It is greatly to the credit of some of the officials of the Knights of Labor that they personally urged the appointment of the commission, and the President made the whole matter contingent on the pledge of these leaders to see to it that so far as organized labor is concerned, the trouble at Chicago and elsewhere shall immediately disappear.

Significant discussions of the Sabbath question have arisen lately: (1) from the proposal to open the Smithsonian Institute, the National Museum, Washington Monument, and the Botanic Garden in our national capital on the Lord's day. Protestant ministers oppose, Romish priests urge the scheme. (2) The faculty of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct., has forbidden the managers of all athletic games to arrange any game in the future that will require Sunday traveling. (3) W. G. Bessler, superintendent of the St. Louis division of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, has ordered that all trains be rushed to destination on Saturday and no trains are to be ordered out between midnight Saturday night and midnight Sunday night. (4) In Canada the canals are to be closed at 12 o'clock on Saturday night and kept closed until the same hour on Sunday night.

From reports coming back to Chicago in the press it might be easily contended that the city has a martial air, with cannon guarding the streets and bayonets bristling on every corner. Quite the contrary, there are few places in the city where the strike has made any unusual stir. The Lake front, ball ground and two or three other places where troops are quartered, and a few buildings kept under guard are the only places where there is any reminder of the strike outside the district adjoining the Stock Yards. There the fighting and burning and wrecking of cars took place. In the rest of the city men go about their business as usual. There are two significant facts about the Stock Yards neighborhood that makes it a terror to the city authorities: in a strip forty rods wide around the yards there are 183 saloons, every one a nest for riot and anarchy, and the people are almost exclusively foreign. The names of the rioters shot in the battle of the 7th were such as these: Englethaler, Grejeioski, Kusmusku, Icrijanski, Klingenberger, Schwosky.

George R. Scott, the well-known Prohibitionist, says of Debs, the railway strike leader: "Who is Debs? He is a man who came to Dr. T. S Robertson, of 28th East Twentieth street, with a letter of introduction from Col. "Bob" Ingersoll, 'a physical wreck under the influence of liquor, and a victim of hallucinations." He is a graduate of the Keeley Bi-Chloride of Gold Institute of Dwight, Ill. Debs' physician has sent him the following telegram: 'The condition of your nervous system and the great strain upon it make you irresponsible for your own orders." Surely he is not the kind of man to whom intelligent citizens should look up for advice as to what to do or what not to do. The crazy speeches of the strike leader reported in several Monday morning papers confirm the above. The men at Pullman have given up the strike, the Labor Union Federation and Knights of Labor wash their hands of it, and business generally is resumed; yet Debs declares he is still for war, and threatens as wildly as ever that all railways in the West shall be blocked. In charity let us hope he is not responsible for his vaporings.

The owner of a large and successful system of electric lighting remarked the other day that there must soon come a change in our methods with electricity. Instead of shipping coal all over the country to make steam, and then force, and then electricity, the work must be done at the mines, and the electric force distributed to its purchasers far and near. Immense quantities of unmerchantable coal, now waisting in mountainous heaps, can provide a cheaper light and power than the small plants distributed over the country. The same idea was suggested when Niagara began to serve men with a large portion of its tremendous energy last year. A water power greater than that of all the steam engines of New York waits to be harnessed there. Engineers tell us that the locomotive has about reached its limit, and a new and greater motive power must be provided from a central station by electric current. One of the elevated railways of Chicago is arranging for this power, and the successful experiment in England of road-wagons run by storage batteries, suggest the day when horse power shall give way to the electric wire.

THE HEROINE OF FRANCE.

JOAN OF ARC AND THE FREEMASONS OF PARIS.

BY KNEBVILLE

Masonry in Europe is notoriously infidel. German, Italian and French lodges make no concealment of their disavowal of revealed religion. The edict of the Grand Orient of France striking the name of God from all Masonic documents in the Republic, adopted years ago, is still in force. The cordial hatred and mutual enmity existing between the lodge and the Church of Rome has followed as a matter of course since the latter has for centuries exercised the controlling influence in religion in large parts of Europe. Indeed, the attacks of infidelity everywhere for centuries have been aimed at false teachings and spurious rites of Romanism rather than against Protestant faith.

These facts explain much of bitter antagonism of the two systems of false worship most powerful in Christendom to-day. The Paris Figaro of May 31st gives an account of a disturbance in the streets of that city caused by this hatred between Freemasons and Romanists. In the Place des Pyramides of Paris is a statue of Joan of Arc, the deliverer of France in the fifteenth century.

The piety of this wonderful peasant Maid of Orleans was remarkable. Her deep religious conviction was the controlling power which marked out her course. She heard voices as of God, calling her from her humble tasks in the field. She followed the promptings of an inner spirit. Her course was a series of almost miraculous and apparently providential incidents.

Her whole life she committed to God with a simple faith; and her almost unparalleled successes she rightly attributed to the favor and blessings of the Almighty.

The Paris Freemasons, bold rejectors of Deity, resolved on this occasion to use the memory of Joan of Arc to spite French Romanists, and secure a little cheap notoriety for themselves. The conception and the attempt was not merely a farce,—it was an insult. But the Figaro tell us of the attempt and a correspondent of the Catholic Review writes of the result.

"The lodges had resolved to hang crowns before the statue; one of these, as notified, bore this inscription: 'A Jeanne d'Arc heretique et relapse abandonnee par la royante, brulee par l' Eglise.' (To Joan of Arc, the relapsed heretic, abandoned by royalty, burnt by the church). The Catholic students had declared that they would not permit the crown bearing this inscription to remain. Three Freemason dignitaries, one of them Doctor Forties, a venerable of the lodge, 'The Light of Tory,' had called on Mr. Gaillot, chief of the municipal police, to have an understanding about the proposed demonstration. The chief told them he would allow no speech-making and earnestly advised them to suppress the words of the inscription which might occasion a disturbance, and informed them that a group of Catholic students had called upon him to enter protest against this intended Masonic proceeding of which they had knowledge. But Doctor Forties would not yield the point, alleging that the suppression of the words objected to would take away the real character of the manifestation.

"Accordingly at 5 P. M. the Freemasons appeared, and, after marching in single file with heads uncovered around the statue, they hung their crowns on the railing encompassing it. At that moment one hundred and fifty students came on the scene, and one of them, a Mr. Labore, president of the Œuvre des tuberculeux (an association for the relief of consumptives), broke the inscription in pieces, exclaiming 'C' est une infamie.' (It is infamous.) The Freemasons then began the fight and fell upon the students with their walking sticks, and the latter trying to give their adversaries as good as they brought; the fight became so lively that it was only by a very energetic intervention of the police that the combatants could be separated and quiet restored. Two students were arrested and taken to the police station, where they were immediately released by the Prefect of Police, whose efforts at conciliation proved very efficacious. Despite them, nevertheless, several other scuffles kept going on in the neighborhood, with outcries of 'Conspuez les loges,' of which the substantial meaning is 'Shame on the lodges.' So that in order to restore perfect quiet and order it became necessary to have the Place des Pyramides occupied by a strong police force. The students then deputed two delegates to the Prefect of Police with a request to be allowed to hang a crown tied with a plain tri-colored ribbon and without any inscription. The permission asked for was granted, upon the condition that only two students would attend to the matter; which they did, crying out when leaving, 'Vive Jeanne d' Arc.'"

CHARACTER AND TEACHING.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

II. PRACTICE STRONGER THAN PRECEPT.

Character and life exert an influence where doctrines taught could not reach. Sinful men will not read and study the Bible. But they read and study the lives of God's people.

The reason is obvious. Doctrines transmuted into life are more easily understood. The average mind will not follow a long chain of reasoning, no matter how logical. They soon tire of a doctrinal sermon; and didactic statements are soon lost unless clinched by a striking illustration. But truth embodied in a holy life is a sermon which they cannot help listening to and understanding. And a conviction arises in their minds that the truth that produces such results must be from God.

Doctrines transmuted into life are more convincing. A man may dispute your theory, but if you produce facts verifying it he is satisfied.

A man wrote an able book demonstrating that a steamship could not carry coal enough to keep the furnace fires going during a voyage across the Atlantic. The first steamer crossed soon after it appeared and brought the book along. Men said the Suez canal could not be dug. But De Lesseps did it, and that ended the opposition. Men said a submarine telegraph was impossible. But Cyrus Field laid the cable and that ended the argument.

A man may deny the power of divine truth to quiet the human conscience and give peace and joy to the sin-troubled soul. But if he sees in you an example of one freed from guilt by the blood of the Lamb and delivered from the love of sin by grace, he believes of a truth that God is with you.

Doctrines transmuted into life speak where the tongue must be silent. The man to whom you would speak may be above you in social position and intellectual attainments. You may shrink from speaking because the disparity between you and him is so great. But the voice of your upright life and heavenly disposition, your fear of God and regard for others rings through the chambers of his soul and awakens his attention. Perhaps he is giving rein to his lusts and rushing madly on to destruction. You know that your words would not be heeded. But the power of your self-restraint and self-control, your watchfulness against temptation and your jealous care to keep your garments unspotted from the world, gives him pause and authoritatively demand that he cease to do evil and learn to do well. Perhaps he is a moral man, of social uprightness and commercial integrity, but utterly indifferent to religious duties. How shall we do that "they who obey not the Word may without the Word be won by your chaste conversation coupled with fear!"

Caird observed: "Then in this case, too, if reasoning or remonstrance be possible let not the painfulness of the task tempt you to cowardly silence. A brother's life is at stake; a brother's step is trembling on the awful brink, and will you not, for his truer good, brave his transient displeasure? There are times when tenderness is more cruel than harshness—reserve more criminal than savage barbarity; and surely, of all such occasions this is the one on which most of all a true friend feels himself impelled to throw false shame aside and manfully to speak out. But here, too, where words may not be spoken, or if spoken would be uttered in vain, another resource is open to you; preach by the life. Let your daily life be an unuttered yet perpetual pleading with man for God. Let men feel, in contact with you, the grandeur of that religion to whose claims they will not listen, and the glory of that Saviour whose name you may not name. Let the sacredness of God's slighted law be proclaimed by your uniform sacrifice of inclination to duty, by your repression of every unkind word, your scorn of every undue or base advantage, your stern and uncompromising resistance to the temptation of appetite and sense.

"Preach the preciousness of time by your husbanding of its rapid hours, and your crowding of its days with duties. Though eternity with its fast-approaching realities be a forbidden topic to the ear, constrain the unwilling mind to think of it by the spectacle of a life ordered with perpetual reference to hopes and destinies beyond the grave. Though no warning against an unspiritual, no exhortation to a holy life, might be tolerated, let your own pure, earnest, unworldly character and bearing be to the careless soul a perpetual atmosphere of spirituality haunting and hovering round it."

This is taking heed to yourself and to the doctrine. It is continuing in them. And it both saves yourself and them that hear you.

Boston.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN THE LIGHT OF THE SCRIPTURES.

BY REV. J. F. FLINT.

The following arraignment of the entire lodge hocus pocus, from a Biblical standpoint, we find in the last (German) edition of Rev. A. Krafft's "Captain William Morgan." The points are well taken, and should have great weight, especially with all clergymen and believers in the Bible. How any religious man can read them and still retain membership in the Masonic order, is a mystery:

1. All oath-bound secret societies demand an oath or a vow, instead of being satisfied with a continuous affirmation.

Whereas, the Word of God says, Matt. 5: 34, 35, "But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne: nor by the earth, for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King." Ex. 20: 7, "Thou shall not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

2. They exact such oath-bound promises before the person to be received knows what is demanded of him.

Whereas, the Word of God says, Rom. 14: 23, "And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not with faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

3. The very genius of these societies is dabbling in mysteries, through which great harm is wrought.

Whereas, the Word of God says, John 3: 20, "For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be reproved." Eph. 5: 11, 12, "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."

4. Their God is not the true God, but a deistic pagan idol.

Whereas, the Word of God says, Isa. 42: 8, "I am the Lord; that is my name: and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images." John 5: 23, "That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him."

5. For this reason they enter into close brotherhood with Jews and Turks; and pray together, but of course not in the name of Jesus.

Whereas, the Word of God says, 2 Cor. 6: 14–18, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of the living God with idols?.... Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate." Psa. 1: 1, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly; nor standeth in the way of sinners; nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." John 16: 23, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you."

6. As constituting a world-embracing church alongside the Church of Christ, they purpose to make men good, and usually have high-priests, chaplains, and various ceremonies.

Whereas, the Word of God says, Matt. 15: 9, "But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." 1 John 2: 15, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him."

7. The quintessence of their teaching is, "Do right." Man is supposed to be able, even after the fall, to do good and thereby to earn heaven.

Whereas, the Word of God says, 2 Cor. 3: 5, "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God." Rom. 3: 12, "They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." John 15: 5, "He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing."

8. They demand unreasonable obedience on the part of their members.

Whereas, the Word of God says, 1 Cor. 7: 23, "Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men."

9. Their alleged benevolence is sheer selfishness, and a temptation to idolatry, in that it detracts in the confidence in God's care over his creatures.

Whereas, the Word of God says, Matt. 5: 28, "But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." Gal. 6: 10, "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." Jer. 17: 5, "Thus saith the Lord, Cursed be the man that trusteth in man and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the living God." Matt. 10: 32, 33, "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven."

Harvey, Ill.

This so-called sympathy strike is one of the most cruel, unreasonable, outrageous proceedings imaginable. At the same time it is a clear and forcible illustration of the tyranny of secret labor unions. At the word of five or six men thousands of men stop work, travel and traffic are suspended, business is paralyzed, and untold distress visited upon those in no way connected with the Pullman company. "Sympathy" of a certain kind is shown for Pullman company employes, but where is the sympathy for the rest of the human family? Do these secret orders owe nothing to the public? Does initiation into a labor union circumscribe one's duty in the application of the Golden Rule and the Decalogue? Is there no moral obligation toward those outside the order? The divine law imposing social as well as individual duties existed before secret orders. This law is from God, while all secret orders have another origin. They cannot, therefore, limit the sphere in which that law is to be applied. But this sympathy strike is an attempt to benefit a secret order by committing a stupendous outrage on the community. Possibly these secret orders will work their own destruction by such extreme measures.—Christian Reformer.

OUR COUNTRY.

The power that broke their prison bar
And set the dusky millions free
And welded in the flame of war
The Union fast to liberty.

Shall it not deal with other ills—
Redress the red man's grievance, break
The Circean cup which shames and kills,
And labor full requittal make?

Alone to such as fitly bear
Thy civic honors bid them fall?
And call thy daughters forth to share
The rights and duties pledged to all?

With peace that comes of purity,
And strength to simple justice due,
So runs our loyal dream of thee;
God of our fathers, make it true.

—John G. Whittier.

A HISTORY OF STRIKES.

WHAT THEY HAVE COST OUR COUNTRY.

[From the Inter-Ocean, Oct. 1, 1892.]

The first American strike on record occurred in New York City in 1741, when the journeymen bakers, having their demand for higher wages refused, left their work in a body. Their action aroused great public indignation and the men were arrested and tried on the charge of "conspiracy against the King," and were punished with fines. Fifty years passed before another strike was inaugurated by the the boot and shoe makers of Philadelphia, who struck in 1796 for higher wages. They were unsuccessful, but struck again in 1798 and carried their point. The following year it was proposed by the employers to reduce wages to the old scale, whereupon a third strike was precipitated, which was compromised.

In the meantime the value of the strike impressed itself on other trades. In 1803 there was a strike of sailors in New York that bore several serious riots. Another strike of Philadelphia shoemakers occurred in 1805. After seven weeks of struggle the men lost their fight and the ringleaders were arrested, tried, and convicted of a "conspiracy to raise their wages." History does not tell us what their punishment was for this black offense. In 1815 there was another unsuccessful strike on the part of the Pittsburg shoemakers, and the men in this case were tried for conspiracy and were fined $8 each.

The first printers' strike occurred in 1821 in Albany. A strong typographical society existed then, and an attempt to introduce non-union men in one of the offices was followed by a complete cessation of work on the part of the union men. Of course the latter won their point. The first strike for shorter hours was made in Boston in 1830 by the carpenters and masons, who wished to reduce their working day from twelve to ten hours. They were not successful.

The first time militia were called out to suppress a strike was in April, 1834, when a riot occurred among the dissatisfied laborers on the Providence Railroad at Mansfield, Mass. No shots were fired, but several of the rioters were sent to prison. Then strikes began to reach something like their present importance. In August, 1835, twenty mills at Paterson, N. J., were closed by labor troubles. The movement was for the purpose of bringing shorter hours. The strike lasted six weeks, and after the operatives were beaten they found that they had lost $24,000. This loss to labor was partially offset by the strike of the laborers in Philadelphia coal yards, which was compromised after it had cost the employers $10,000. The contention was over the length of the working day, and was finally settled when the men agreed to work from sunrise to sunset, with three hours' intermission in the middle of the day. This strike started a movement which reduced the hours of labor in that city generally to twelve, and raised the wages from an average of 87½ cents to $1 a day.

Between 1836 and 1842 there were fifteen important strikes, ten of which were unsuccessful, two successful, and in three, concessions were made by both sides. In three of these strikes the militia were called out, and in two, women were involved. The iron industry, around which the great strikes of this country have since centered, began to incite labor disturbances in 1842. February 5 of that year, the employes of the mills in the Pittsburg district struck against a reduction of wages. There was no fixed wage scale then, and the men were but imperfectly organized, and they were soon defeated.

In the following August, a strike occurred among Philadelphia weavers, which lasted six months, and was marked by rioting and destruction of property. The strikers won. In May, 1843, during a strike in the same city, an enormous brickyard was wrecked. In May, 1845, the quarrel between the Pittsburg iron masters and their employes was renewed. The bolters demanded an increase of $1 a ton, and were supported by their fellow workmen. By this time the men had perfected an organization of some strength, and, after three months of idleness, won their strike. In 1848 occured a five weeks' strike among the mill hands at Fall River, which was the occasion of much disorder.

In 1850 a depression in the iron trade brought about strikes in the Pittsburg iron mills, and frightful riots, in which men fought like wild animals and women like fiends. The public was horrified, and the strikers were obliged to yield. The famous shoemakers' strike in Massachusetts occurred during the first year of the war. The industry throughout the State was affected and many riots occurred, but the militia was called out to quiet the difficulty and the men were forced to return to their work at lower wages than before. As the war went on, attention was turned to the scene of conflict in the South so entirely, that although industries were depressed and there was much suffering among operators, little notice was taken of them.

In February, 1865, the society known as the United Sons of Vulcan was formed, which inaugurated the sliding scale plan, and this plan proved so very successful that nine years passed without a strike in the iron trade. In 1868 there was a strike among the spinners and weavers of Fall River, Mass., which lasted two weeks and attacted much public notice. During 1869 there were about twenty noteworthy strikes, of which half were successful. The first strike in the Pennsylvania coal fields occurred in 1859. Others came in 1861, 1862, 1863, and 1864. In 1868 great strikes came from the refusal of the operators to obey the eight hour law, which had just been passed by the Legislature.

In 1871 the Schuylkill miners struck against a reduction in wages, and out of this grew the great strike of 1871, which spread throughout the anthracite region, and during which Molly Maguireism did its worst in murder, in arson, and in pillage. At about that time the cigarmakers came to the front among the agitated laborers, and struck nearly eighty times in the four years preceding 1875. The cotton, woolen, printing, mining, and shoe industries were the cause of frequent strife between employed and employer in all parts of the country, but it was not until 1877 that railroading was seriously involved.

The terrible strikes of that year were brought about by a proposed reduction of 10 per cent in the wages of employes on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The riots began in Martinsburg, W. Va. Then fighting began in Baltimore and Philadelphia, in both of which cities there was loss of life. Thence it spread to other cities, and in Toledo, Cincinnati, Chicago, and elsewhere business was practically suspended. The fiercest struggle between the authorities and organized lawlessness occurred in Pittsburg where, for several days, the city was at the mercy of the mob and over $5,000,000 worth of property was destroyed.

In 1886 occurred the great railroad and other strikes. The Philadelphia and Reading railroad employes struck because the company would not recognize the Knights of Labor. The men were beaten by importation of 3,000 men to take their places. Early in the same year, the employes on the Missouri Pacific road struck for a similar reason and the trouble thence spread to other roads in the South and West. The labor organizations then took occasion to incite a general demand among the workmen of the country for an eight-hour day. This demand led to much trouble in the large cities, especially in Chicago, where it was followed by the anarchist outbreak.

In 1887 the glass-workers' strike occurred which lasted five months, and cost the men nearly half a million dollars. In 1888 the strike in the Edgar Thomson Steel Works, at Bradford, Pa., grew out of Mr. Carnegie's refusal to sign the sliding scale. The strike lasted four months, and was compromised after the men had lost $560,000 in wages. In 1889 occurred the great miners' strike in Spring Valley, Ill., which resulted in utter ruin to the men, but a triumphant victory for the employers. In 1890 a great number of strikes grew out of the eight-hour movement, but in them all no such grave disturbance as that at the Carnegie mills in the most important strike of 1891.

Since 1880 the government has issued an annual report of strikes. Between 1796 and 1880, according to this report, 1,491 important strikes occurred, besides many times that number of small ones. From Jan. 1, 1881, to Dec. 25, 1886, there were 3,902 strikes, involving 1,323,203 men and 22,304 business firms. In the last named year were 1,900 strikes that caused a wage loss of $2,858,191 to the men and $3,000,000 to the employers.

THE CHURCH'S PRESENT DUTY TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

(Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, in Union Signal.)

It is quite generally admitted by labor leaders that what is most needed in industrial reform is the application of the spirit and law of Christ to business life.

Movements in behalf of the poor have always been chiefly supported by those who have learned justice and charity from the Bible. A few years since the editor of the directory of New York charities wrote in response to a question, that there was not then a public charity in that city of ten years' standing that had not been founded and chiefly supported by Bible men, that is, by Christians or Jews. Moral reforms are almost wholly carried on by Christian people.

But these applications of Christianity to politics, industry, charity and reform are not made by the churches as such, but by a small minority of their most earnest members acting as individuals. There is Christian unity on a small scale, in social reform, where there ought to be church union on a much larger scale for the world's sake and for the church's sake. Because the work of social reform is done by Christians as individuals rather than by the churches as such, the latter lose the credit of even what is done and incur much censure from those who have a high ideal of the church's duty to society, many of whom contrast unfavorably the "kingdom" Christ proclaimed a divinely-ordered society of brotherhood and justice and purity with the church's small efforts toward the realization of such social conditions.

It is clearly seen by students of the times that the most stupendous evils of the day could and should be swept away by the united forces of the churches, massing their lessons, sermons, literature, letters, petitions, and especially their ballots, on such scandals of Christian nations as legalized opium and liquor, tolerated prostitution and gambling, lax divorce laws, corrupt elections and monopoly, any or all of which could be at once overthrown in the United States and British Empire if the controlling Christian votes were themselves unitedly controlled by loyalty to Christ and his laws of purity and humanity.

The real difficulty seems to be not so much lack of sympathy with social reforms, as failure to adjust ancient church creeds and discipline to the new social conditions of our times. The chief denominations were organized in the age of individualism, before the ages of cities and of social solidarity, when environment did not need to be converted as well as character. It should also be noted that the churches mostly originated in doctrinal controversies, before Christian ethics had been fully developed, when liquors and lotteries were neither of them ethically heterodox, and when Sunday trains, Sunday mails and Sunday papers were unknown.

Charity was an early flower of Christianity, and so has a recognized place in church work, though only in the outgrown, unscientific charity of the "poor fund;" but moral reform, the last and most consummate flower of Christian faith, has as yet only found welcome to the unofficial ante-room of advisory resolutions, being mostly left out of binding creeds and rules and official schedules of benevolence; indeed, reform is shut out of the household, allowed only the place of a Lazarus begging for resolutions and casual offerings at the door.

Denominational conferences should hasten to adjust their creeds to the new developments in Christian ethics: (1) by establishing ethical "standards" not less specific and binding than their doctrinal standards, providing also for teaching them in theological seminaries, and for their use in examinations of preachers and of candidates for church membership; (2) by giving moral reform as well as charity a place in the official schedules of benevolence; and (3) by providing for efficient and official co-operation with other denominations in reforms—nationally, locally, and by States, through the appointment and support of active committees for that purpose.

When the Louisiana lottery's plots roused the churches of North Dakota and of Louisiana they showed a controlling moral power, as the churches have done in other States in like cases, a power that ought to be used regularly and systematically, for instance, now toward the suppression of the new Florida lottery. Every Christian should at once write his Congressman to help to secure concurrence of the House with the Senate which has passed the Hoar bill.

On such questions as the churches have reached no definite agreement, the labor problem, for instance, church conference should be held and earnest efforts made to find a Christian remedy and apply it.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

An old church—New England unaffected by the strike—The State records—A revival among the Romanists of Clinton, Mass—The A. P. A. 'not a temperance society"—Cremation.

A peculiar interest centers about our old New England churches. Saintly memories of just men made perfect haunt their pews and aisles; ghosts of the good-wife carrying her foot-stove; of the Squire with his gold snuff-box and his bevy of fair daughters, one of whom as old chronicles tell became Lady Somebody and was presented at court; of the minister, awful in the dignity of his full wig and spotless ruffles, who preached faithfully according to his lights, and lived and died among his people leaving a blessed memory behind,—an old church is a conserver of many little sheds of history and romance from the days gone by. And among our oldest is the Baptist church in Winthrop, Conn., which on the 18th will celebrate the 150th anniversary of its founding by followers of Roger Williams in the days when Baptists and Quakers were regarded with such an unfriendly eye. Its first members had all the amiable obstinacy of Williams himself, and received worse treatment than the Salvation Army do now, being on one occasion marched through the snow to New London jail where they languished in confinement several months. But let it be remembered that even then for general tolerance New England was far in advance of Europe. One hundred and fifty years ago Raymbault was opening up a region around Lakes Huron and Superior far more full of savage mystery and unknown terrors than Africa is to-day, but there were no newspapers to publish his discoveries, no telegraph to flash across the waters the latest European news. No wonder our forefathers could sit in fireless meeting houses and listen with unabated interest to the preacher's "nineteenthly." Life must have flowed on in those quiet farm houses in a rather monotonous current, when the savage foe had ceased to terrify, and the Revolutionary struggle had not yet begun.

But to turn to a subject more in keeping with the feverish rush and turmoil of to-day. Boston's workingmen seem to realize that they would gain little and lose much by a "sympathetic" strike. They are formed of different elements from the unreasoning and unreasonable foreign scum which crowd the great labor centers at the West, as was evidenced the other day when the local brick-layers struck, but both sides agreed to leave the matter to an arbitrator, choosing William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., to this office, and cheerfully abiding by his decision. The present railroad strike ought to make hosts of Nationalists. With the railroads where the mail-service is—in the hands of the Government—the people would not have to bear on one hand the grievous exactions of such a monopoly as the Pullman, which charges in going from New York to San Francisco about $4 67 a day above the railroad fare which is more than leading hotels think of charging; or on the other be stopped in their travels and see all business paralyzed by a general tie-up at the command of a drinking, blatant follower of Ingersoll like Debs. Municipal control of electric railways, for instance, would greatly diminish the list of casualties almost daily reported, for new inventions to prevent accidents would be introduced. One has been lately patented and tried with perfect success in Newark, N. J., but the inventor unfortunately is a poor man without the means to put his ingenious device on the market, and the companies as a rule do not care to patronize life-saving apparatus, preferring to take the risk, and run their cars with as little outlay as possible.

Massachusetts has found that her State records are fading, and is going into the business of supplying ink of standard quality in "original packages," according to an act passed by the late legislature which empowers the Secretary of the Commonwealth to furnish such ink to all keepers of State, town, or city records. It has been found on investigation that her oldest records are best preserved, while many of modern date have already grown totally illegible. Other causes, however, besides poor ink have led to this deterioration. Our fathers used a softer kind of paper, which absorbed a larger quantity, and the blotting pad they knew not of, never being in too much hurry to let the ink dry naturally.

There is much religious interest among the Romanists of Clinton, Mass., and a number of converts have been received into the Baptist church in that place. Their experience, as related before the prudential committee, was exceedingly interesting, and brought out most vividly the utter incapacity of such a system to help the spiritual needs of its votaries. One man who had been a drunkard and profane swearer when in the agony of conviction was told to "go to his rosary." A woman too poor to pay her tithes, was refused absolution, but finally the priest granted it on condition of her running around the church twice! She performed the penance but failed to receive any inward assurance that her sins were forgiven. To quote with a slight difference the language of Lincoln, Rome cannot humbug all her members all the time.

The A. P. A. is making its hand felt considerably in local politics. In view of this fact some of the remarks made by Rev. Adam Fawcett, Supreme Vice-president, at an open meeting at the People's church, are interesting. After trying to defend it from the accusation of secrecy by glorifying Masonry, and denouncing Washington Gladden who seems to have drawn on himself all the lightnings of A. P. A. wrath, he answered various questions put to him by the audience. The great point brought out to all discerning minds by these questions and answers must have been that as regards the great moral issues of the day the A. P. A. is decidedly "on the fence." To the inquiry, "What are the A. P. As. going to do for Woman Suffrage?" he replied that though the subject had been debated, they "could not see the way clear to indorse or hinder." "How on the Prohibition question?" was asked. Mr. Fawcett replied, "We are not a temperance society," adding that their work was to solve the question of Rome in American politics. But to prove that the influence of the A. P. A. was on the whole inimical to rum-selling, he said that he knew of seven members of the organization in various parts of the country who were saloon-keepers, but had been so boycotted in consequence that five out of the seven had been forced to give up their business in less than three months. But obligatory conversions like the above only prove what Mr. Fawcett took pains to assert twice: that "the A. P. A. is not a temperance organization." Thinking Prohibitionists who were present must have doubted the consistency of supporting an order which freely admits saloon-keepers, and at the same time through its "supreme" official head boasts that it "is not a temperance society."

Cremation is certainly beginning to grow in popularity. In five months from the time Lucy Stone, with her ruling passion for pioneering in reforms, strong to the last, chose this method for herself, there have been forty incinerations at Forest Hills. It looks as if this was to be the future way of disposing of the dead. It is certainly a far more unpleasant thought to the individual mourner—or would be if early education had not accustomed us to it—to think of his or her beloved as "food for worms" than as a "handful of clean ashes," gathered in an urn and set among blossoming flowers or under the waving boughs of o'ershadowing trees where friends can sit and talk lovingly of the dead. Sentiment and science are for once agreed.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Only demagogues defend the work of the secret labor unions.—Will Congress investigate the liquor traffic?—Not yet ready to wipe off the disgrace of the Chinese business.

WASHINGTON, July 11, 1894.

Although there have been few outward indications of the fact, there has been intense excitement in Washington during the past few days, on account of the disorder and bloodshed which have accompanied the strikes in various sections of the country. While no one here has or has had any doubt of the final triumph of law and order, many fear that the conduct of ill-advised men may cause a further loss of life and property before the desired end is reached. Many both in and out of Congress sympathized with the original strikers, but when rioting and the destruction of property and the interruption of communication was resorted to that sympathy was lost sight of, and, with the exception of a few demagogues among the professional politicians, the demand that the strong arm of Federal authority should be interposed was unanimous.

Even before that demand could be formulated the Federal government had begun to act. The two proclamations issued by President Cleveland this week are generally regarded as timely and entirely justified by the circumstances under which they are issued. As one of the most pronounced advocates of the doctrine of State's rights in Congress aptly put it, "Let us all aid the National government to put down the spirit of anarchy and restore the authority of law. There will be time enough afterward to quibble about how it was done."

A number of our ministers touched upon the labor troubles in their sermons last Sabbath and, as usual, the pulpit took the right and only patriotic and Christian side. Space forbids any extended comment on or quotations from those sermons, but the following words of Dr. Joseph T. Kelly, of the Fourth Presbyterian church, are too straight to the point to be left out:

"Both in precept and example, on many a page, God's Word bears witness to the duty of men with relation to government. Not merely when those laws in every way commend them to their judgment and approval; not only when they enure to their profit and comfort; but even when they bear upon them in restraint and possibly with loss, their one and only duty is submission and loyal obedience. For government, after all, has as its ultimate end the punishment of the evil and the guardianship of the good. Under no circumstances can the freedom which has been the boast of our civilization be construed to mean a freedom to infringe the rights of others or break the laws of the land."

The temperance people have appealed to Congress after Congress to pass a bill authorizing an official investigation of the alcoholic liquor traffic, its relations to revenue and taxation and its general economic, criminal, moral and scientific aspects in connection with pauperism, crime, social vice, the public health and general welfare of the people, but they have never succeeded in having it done. The Senate Committee on Appropriations has provided in an amendment to the Legislative, Executive and Judicial appropriation bill, which was yesterday reported to the Senate, that the investigation be made by the U. S. Bureau of Labor. It remains to be seen whether the liquor men can kill the amendment.

Washington's delegation to the Cleveland Christian Endeavor Convention left yesterday morning on a special train, although on Monday it had been decided to abandon the special train and send only the regular delegates, on account of the probability of delay by reason of the strikes. It is probable that many more would have gone had it not been for the fear of delay. The party numbered nearly two hundred and will enthusiastically work to bring the convention of 1896 to Washington.

Senator Morgan, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, obtained an indefinite leave of absence this week; and although he stated before leaving that Senator Gray was left in charge of the Chinese treaty, there are reasons for the belief that his departure means no further consideration of the treaty at this session of Congress. While the friends of the treaty are confident that it would receive more than the two-third vote necessary to its ratification, some of them are of the opinion that the antagonism of the secret labor lodges makes its ratification inadvisable at this time.

It is expected that the House Committee on Interstate Commerce will make a favorable report to the House on a resolution authorizing that committee to make a thorough investigation of the present railroad strike in all its various ramifications. Many believe that such an investigation made during the Congressional recess would be productive of information that would be valuable should Congress decide to legislate on the subject. *

REFORM NEWS.

THE FLOATING CHAPEL.

UP AND DOWN THE CUMBERLAND.

We have completed, in seven months, the trip two hundred miles up the Cumberland and back, and are now at Cairo, Ill. There probably has not been a time in the history of the Floating Chapel when it has been so useful in reaching places destitute of the Gospel. Several places were visited where there are no religious services.

Large quantities of literature have been distributed, and it has been a pleasure to speak to so many who were destitute. Our little steam tug has been of great service in coming down the river. Am now very busy, but will try soon to write about some of our interesting experiences along the Cumberland. Paducah, Ky., is our present postoffice. I. R. B. ARNOLD.

OVER THE OREGON COAST RANGE.

THE REFORM HAS FRIENDS IN REMOTE PLACES.

While at Roseburg I attended the Southern Methodist District Conference; was introduced and invited to speak in behalf of our reform. When I touched the subject of secret societies, quite a flutter was made in the audience, especially among the ministers.

The pastor at Myrtle Point came to me afterward and said: "You are billed to speak in my church on the 28th. Be careful on the subject of the Good Templars; we have organized a lodge and are trying to get rid of the saloons in that way." I answered him: "I think you are up a stump for temperance when you depend on Good Templars. While I have positive evidence that they have made many drunkards (by their social qualities), I have no evidence that they have saved any. A very prominent business man in Portland told me that he, as worthy chief, had initiated many men into the order, but had the first one yet to see saved from intemperance by the lodge; while he could point to many who had been made drunkards by the social qualities of Good Templarism." All this was said before he knew that I was opposed to secret orders.

On Tuesday, the 26th, I boarded the stage for Myrtle Point, seventy miles from Roseburg. This I consider the hardest ride of my life. No rest from 6 A M. until 1:30 A. M next day. Through valleys, over mountains, across streams, one constant jolt and jostle. I think I am safe in saying that I saw in one day timber enough to fence in the United States, Canada, and Mexico, and have an abundance to spare. Trees, by the thousand, three hundred feet high, ten and twelve feet through and two hundred feet to a limb. What kind? Red and white fir, red and white cedar, besides many other qualities of smaller timber.

On the very summit of the coast range mountains is the beautiful Camas Prairie, a valley about five miles in length. After leaving this we strike the Coquille river, or the middle fork of the same which we followed all the way down to Myrtle Point, where we arrived at the hour above stated.

On my arrival I was invited by the landlord to go out into the saloon and "have something." Understanding that to mean something that intoxicates, I soon made the gentleman understand that I was against the whole business. How impudent saloon men are! How a man of principle feels insulted when invited to throw himself away. From what I could gather by my own eyes and ears, they carry on a regular gambling den there in defiance of all law.

I spoke in the M. E Church, South, to a very crowded house, and had splendid attention all the way through. Quite a number of the lodgemen were present. When I read the very threatening letter received by Father Mathew some years ago, I said: "I now have the honor to stand for the first time in the little city where that letter was prepared and sent through the mail to that noble, aged father; and perhaps I will address some person who was implicated in the same. I pray God to help me to be faithful."

Here I met with Rev. C. B. Marsters and his faithful Christian wife, both of whom are true reformers. They have been standing for years in behalf of the work we are engaged in. They are much encouraged by my visit.

At Myrtle Point lives Elder John Bonewitz, of the German Baptists, and also Elder Barklow, both "true blue" anti-secrecy men, who are not ashamed or afraid to support by their presence and means the cause of moral reform. Mr. Thos. Barklow, a merchant of the place, did more than any other one man toward filling the house with anxious hearers. He told everybody who came to his store; also sent out notices. I hope to be able to give these brethren another lift at another point when I return from down the coast. Rev. C. B. Marsters brought me to Denmark, where I am at present.

To describe the journey of twenty-five miles over the mountains is more than I am able to do. Suffice it to say, that for timber I thought: "Well, here's enough to fence the balance of the world, and some to spare." As we came to the mountain top I thought of Nebuchadnezzar's artificial mountain in Babylon. Stretched out before us, far as the eye could look, were the most beautiful flowers I ever saw. Scarcely a tame flower in all the east and south where I have traveled but you will see here growing wild, and that in the greatest abundance,—oleanders, foxglove, lily, honeysuckle, cumfrey, laurel, etc., etc. Then again, I saw bushels and tons of wild fruit, thimble berries, salmon berries, huckle berries, goose berries, black berries, raspberries, etc. I ate so many I thought they would sicken me, but when we came to another hundred-acre patch I was ready for more. Some of my eastern friends will wish they were here to help eat them. Rough?—oh, yes. I am nearly jolted to death already, and the journey not half done. I am stopping to-day with a very nice family by the name of Farrier, where I am writing.

JULY 2, 1894 —If the Lord should come suddenly (as he will) and call for this people, I fear he would find many of them not ready. Many people in southern Oregon are like the Sodomites, except in one thing; they are busy working seven days out of each week, while the Sodomites were in idleness.

On Sunday, July 1st, I went to the little town of Dairyville, to speak to the people. I found people engaged in business the same as any other day. I learned later that the store closed at twelve. I wonder if these merchants think that they can compound things with the Almighty. They will find after awhile that a Sabbath day is the same length as any other. And it is all the Lord's. Of course there are honorable exceptions to the rule of Sabbath breaking.

At ten o'clock, a few of the young people (God bless them) met at the church to hold Sunday-school. I think I never saw a school conducted with less requisites, and yet I have seen many schools with much less interest. The young men and women were very genteel and civil. The young brother (Wm. A. Cox) who is the superintendent deserves great credit for his perseverance under such circumstances. I addressed the school for twenty minutes and tried to encourage them all I could.

At eleven o'clock I opened on the congregation with the lodge question. For about ten minutes all went well, but presently I saw one man begin to "rustle." I thought, "There's a bird about to fly." Sure enough, out he went, as if "the king's business requireth haste." Those remaining gave the very best attention. I was pleased to learn that among the large number of young men there were no lodgemen. One young man signed for the Cynosure

While waiting for the evening appointment I "locked horns" with the young school teacher on the saloon question. I took the position that it is as bad (if not worse) to murder a man by the slow process of rum, as to stab or shoot him. By the latter process a man often dies with good clothes on, and his family may have someting left them for support, but by the former process he dies in rags, his family is pushed out into the street or highway worse than widows and orphans—worse than beggars. Nor does it change the nature of the case, if my neigher pays me money to kill him. It is murder still. The young man accused me of being radical. I answered: "That's what I am, and I would to God there were more such."

In the evening I spoke again to a large congregation on the evils of intemperance and for prohibition. This audience gave most earnest attention to the words spoken, and I am persuaded that good impressions were made on many minds. To-night I speak at Denmark, then on down the coast. P. B. WILLIAMS.

THE SCANDINAVIANS OF SIOUX FALLS.

A SOMETIME JUDGE PROVES HIMSELF GOOD LODGE MATERIAL.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., July 13, 1894

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—During the session of Augustana Synod of last month an agreement was made with Mr. John Olson, of the mercantile firm of John Olson & Son, of Sioux Falls, S. Dakota, to expose secret societies in that city. He therefore secured the Presbyterian church for last Tuesday evening and the Swedish Lutheran church for Wednesday evening for that purpose.

Upon my arrival at Sioux Falls Mr. Olson kindly met me at the depot and took me to the home of the son of our well known friend of the truth of God's Word as it stands in the Bible opposed to secret societies, Rev. L. H. Norem, where I was most kindly entertained during my sojourn in that city. The intense heat and high winds prevented what might have otherwise have been accomplished during my visit, but Bro. Norem resides in Sioux Falls, and he allows no cessation of hostilities towards secretism.

I met a man who was at one time a student at Wheaton college for three years. He says that many years ago he had read all the books written against secret societies that he could get; that he and other students petitioned President Jonathan Blanchard to desist from bringing the subject of secret societies before the classes at college; and that because the President refused to grant the request of the petitioners he left the college. Was not that student's act a clear case of parallelism with that of the devils tormented by the presence of Jesus Christ before their time? Now he claims that neither President Jonathan Blanchard nor any other man could or can know what Masonry is without becoming a Mason. He will not accept the testimony of any seceding Mason, not even the affidavits of Jacob O. Doesburg, nor the testimony of the Freemasons themselves in their own "Ecce Orienti;" and yet he says that he has been a judge, and that he has given decisions in regard to the sanity of persons that has consigned them to insane asylums! Can a man with such an abnormal brain as his be considered as a responsible being? Does not every Freemason know that he is a fool and a liar? And is he not good material for the lodge? I think he could swear to a lie and stick to it without a blush! If nothing that loveth or maketh a lie can enter heaven where does this man belong?

I am to speak in the Augustana Swedish Lutheran church of this city on Thursday evening next; and to preach in the United Norwegian Lutheran church at Canton, S. Dakota, on Sabbath evening, July 22, on the Relation of the Bible to Ancient and Modern Freemasonry. I have just arranged to speak in St. Johns Lutheran church of this city on Monday evening next.

At Sioux Falls the crops are failing for want of rain. As we proceed southward from that city there seems to have been more rain and the crops look much better. The wheat is fast ripening for the sickle and the corn looks well. W. FENTON.

[We question whether such a request was ever made of Pres. J. Blanchard, although of his reply had it been made there can be no doubt. The name of this sometime judge might be of interest to some of our readers.—ED]

The world, the flesh and the devil may make a mighty trinity, but let us not forget that there is an Almighty Trinity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE A. P. A. KNOW-NOTHING OATH.

MORE FACTS FOR LODGE EDITORS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Some months since I sent you a communication giving a few facts concerning secret societies, making special mention of the Odd-fellows and Red Men, which you generously inserted in your valuable paper.

The Odd fellows' Companion and the Knights seemed to be severely wounded thereby, and after some time vigorously replied, denouncing both the article and its author in language not most gentle or sweet, even charging falsehood and evil motives, and asserting that "the practical benevolence and fraternal principles of the lodge are more sincere and earnest than those of the churches, and therefore lodges are more fully patronized and do more good than the churches do.

All of which, and more of the same kind, is simple assertion and savors much of a spirit of presumption and boasting, which are so characteristic of lodges, or their members in general. They are prone to set themselves above the body of Christ, to claim priority, greater worth, and not infrequently that they could well be substituted for it, and that if one of the two must go, by all means let it be the church.

These editorial criticisms presume to treat contemptuously the letter as a whole, but they do not attempt to deny the charge of dissipation and revelry by the lodges named, nor can they, as made concerning that kind of practice by many others. Probably such facts are so apparent and well-known by them, that any attempt of the kind would be considered as too hazardous an undertaking.

The Knight claims to have proof that the statements made in the letter were not true regarding any lodge in Dorchester, Mass., which may be correct; but I do not suppose that Dorchester lodges are wonderful specimens of sobriety, decorum, and morality, greatly in excess of those in other places. I am not acquainted with, nor do I know the reputation or standing of any lodge in that place; and I did not write a word in said letter respecting any one of them personally, though I am acquainted with several persons who are lodge members, and wrote my letter at that place. But I declare that what I wrote in the letter, which seems to have contained lances for sore spots, and effectually probed some ripe ones, was true, every sentence and word from beginning to end. Therefore there is nothing for me to retract, nor have I a confession to make concerning it. I wrote in the interests of morality and Christianity, "with love to all, and enmity toward none."

The results of the faithful delineation of facts have still more convinced me of the confederate nature, the evil workings and pernicious tendencies of secrecy in the lodges; yes, and I further say, the abominations which are practiced by this anti-Christ of these last days. The strictures and flings which I care not further to notice, have only made it more apparent that they are wholly unscriptural and un-Christian; an unsightly institution, needing the hidings of secrecy and the cover of darkness, lest their deeds being seen should be reproved.

It has long been a mystery to me how Christians could connect themselves with such orders, take the fearful oaths that they do; then after they come to know what they are sworn to, and the workings of the corrupt things, can still adhere to and defend them. It was a still greater mystery how they could use deception, if not positively declare untruths; denying what was actual fact, and declaring that to be true which was really false. But I have recently received some light upon the subject.

Meeting an acquaintance not long ago, he informed me that an effort was being made to organize a lodge of the A. P. A. and that I was needed to start and help it on. My delay to reply led him to argue and urge the matter somewhat fully. When I informed him that I belonged to no secret societies, and did not believe in them, he answered that I need not let any one know that I was a member; I could say that I was not.

Of course I replied that so to say would be an untruth and I could not do it.

"Why," said he, "that would not be a lie."

I inquired how could it be otherwise.

To my amazement he said: "Why, your oath covers that. You are sworn to keep it all secret, and so it is not a falsehood to say that you do not belong to it or know any of its secrets."

I told him plainly that I did not see it thus, and if I was a member, should count it to be a lie all the same.

"You do not see it," said he, "because you are not in it; but you join the lodge and you will then understand it."

It led me to ask if he was a Mason, and he said he was.

Religious Masonic teaching! Is that the moral code inculcated in all secret orders? In how many and which, if not in all of them? It was to me a new phase of lodgeism, and revealed a state of things most deplorable. What treachery and deceit! Can Christians so deceive themselves, stifle their own consciences, and thus dishonor their Lord, who bought them with his own precious blood?

D. B. GUNN.

JUDGE LONGENECKER ON STRIKES AND ORDERS.

EAST LYNN, Ill., July 9, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Judge Longenecker, of Chicago, late prosecuting attorney in that great city, spoke at Hoopston, July 4th, to an immense crowd on the fair grounds. His speech was a masterpiece of eloquence and logic. He brought the people right along with himself by his frankness and directness of speech and was immensely cheered.

He referred in a masterly way to the great strike and its causes. He very aptly and properly hunted up and traced the causes of these strikes right to the door of these numerous "orders."

He said, whenever anything was attempted by the laboring men the first thing was to get up a special "order" just suited, as they imagined, to the special ill complained of. The A. R. U. is the one principally called out to fight the Pullman company. The object may be all right enough, but it makes the men at the heads of these "orders" practically dictators, responsible to no one, and often compelling the members—some of them, many of them often—to go into a strike when they would far rather keep out. Sin of every kind, from the simplest to the greatest, has in itself the germ or element of anarchy. And anarchy encouraged and not stamped out may finally and utterly destroy our free institutions and noble Republic. All of these strikes have more or less anarchy in them.

Every one should be the friend of the laboring man. There is no country on earth where the laborer is so free and well paid as in the United States. In too many cases the workingman "blows his money in" on lodge dues, whisky, tobacco and lager. Let these alone and in most cases he and his family would be well fed, clothed, sheltered and educated. But too many are drilled in the so-called work of the lodge and drilled in the "sacredness" (as they call it) of lodge obligations that many of them imagine it would be a sin to violate them. But a bad oath is better broken than kept.

The real fomenters in this entire lodge business are with the Masons and Odd-fellows and like institutions, as they are patterns after which the lodges are all modeled; and until we all learn that these orders are fraudulent we are likely to have repetitions of these strikes.

No one questions the right of any man or set of men to quit work when they so desire; but they have no right to dictate or compel others when to labor or not to labor. My rights stop exactly at the point where my fellows or my neighbors commence.

Besides all the above reasons these "orders" in many cases have Christless altars which makes them idolaters. We earnestly hope our ministers and Christian people everywhere, and the people generally as well, may all learn the many great truths referred to, and that the American people may yet wipe off from our statute books all lodge charters.

J. S. HICKMAN.

I am in a place where I am demanded of conscience to speak the truth; and therefore the truth I speak, impugn it whoso list.—John Knox.

PITH AND POINT.

MASONIC CHICKENS COME HOME TO ROOST.

I think it would be timely to prepare an article for the Cynosure setting forth that secret orders (as in rebellion) are the cause of the strikes and its results; and insert in it that the Masonic beast hatches out and owns and runs all the other orders. Many of the railway officials are Masons, and from their order the other orders draw scoundrelism, life and nourishment, and learn from it the secret boycotting and combines for evil and self installed governing of the nations. Masonry in principle is the embodiment, and home of treason and murder; and their chickens have come home to roost. —ANTI-MASON, Chicago.

THE LODGE LAMP!

FRIENDS OF REFORM:—If we really are what we claim to be we will gladly place at least 10,000 of these "Lamps" in as many homes in the next thirty days, which need light on the great question which is now not only stirring every part of this great nation, but is felt more or less around the globe. Now is the time to strike while hearts, heads and hands are hot.—RUFUS SMITH, Wheaton, Ill.

BRO. PORTER STORING HEALTH AND VIGOR FOR A FALL CAMPAIGN.

I was much interested in the recommendation of the annual meeting that I should labor in Kentucky and Tennessee next winter. I would like to have my program very thoroughly made out before I start. The climate and air here I find very healthful, so that I am enabled to perform a man's labor without overwork. I preached twice yesterday, and shall probably be called on to preach three times next Sabbath. This region needs the Gospel, and may Jesus abide in us and save many of these lost souls.—REV. S. F. PORTER, Dexter, N. Dak.

Thanks to Bro. Porter that he remembers to pray for the editor. If the Cynosure is to be more and more a blessing to men the power must come from above.

OUT OF THE LODGE AND READY FOR DUTY.

I have been lecturing near two years; have one appointment announced for the 1st of July, and other calls. The Lord is blessing my labors. Many have been kept out of the lodge; some have quit; others are halting between two opinions. The member who witnessed against me in my trial when I was expelled from the order told me the other day that he was asking the Lord to show him if it was wrong, waiting for a sign from heaven. "There shall no sign be given," etc.—S. F. PROCTOR, Ellsworth, Kan.

The cause needs a thousand such independent workers who are ready to enter every door God opens.

STRIKE NOTES.

We were not far from the mob at which the troops fired last Saturday afternoon, and we talked with scores of disaffected people within an hour of the volleys in which eight lost life and more than a dozen were wounded. We aver that at least a score were angered because they supposed the shooting had been done by regular troops, and their very words of condemnation were based upon the Altgeld criticism of the President printed that day in the papers. We believe that the Governor's rabid snarls at the President are among the elements that account for the necessary firing of the soldiers at Hammond, Ind., and at the corner of Loomis and Forty-seventh streets last week.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

"I am waiting my opportunity to strike," said a benevolent woman to-day, "and that will be next winter when these folks come around begging for bread and clothing. Last winter I actually went without much that I needed to give to the destitute. I really required a reefer to save my best cloak, but I said to myself, no one has the right to own a garment that hangs a part of the time unused in the closet during such times as these. So I went without that I might aid the poor. This coming winter they may starve and go naked for all of me." This was said by a very charitable and lovely woman, who has the best interests of God's needy ones at heart, but, as with many others, the distractions of the time have had their effect upon the poise of their temper.—"Notes by a Woman" in Chicago Herald.

"It is time that we should reverse, I think, the general policy grown up in the United States of conferring corporate existence upon any lawful project. The license thus extended has done more than anything else to obliterate the individual from our industrial system. It is especially time that in the management of business the old privileges of enterprise competion should be re-established and the heavy hand of impersonal combination removed. The exercise of a power that prevents any man from the pursuit of such a calling as his means permit, without subjection to the obstacles of unequal conditions, ought to be as lawless as the imposition of restraint upon the right to work."—Judge Grosscup, in an address at Galesburg, July 4th.

The boycott is the device of Irish Romanism, and is an adaptation of papal excommunication to business transactions. It is decidedly un-American and despotic to the last degree. The present strike will obtain sympathy from no right-minded citizen, will be condemned by everybody outside of the labor unions, and deserves a signal defeat. Everybody engaged in trade is suffering from the dullness of the times, and workingmen will have to consent to a reduction of income in common with all other persons. Additional legislation in regard to labor is very much needed. The center of this nefarious proceeding is located in Chicago, the Governor of Illinois being in sympathy with anarchists and therefore with socialism and communism. There is no religion in this strike. It is pure brutal tyranny, and would be a disgrace to paganism.—Christian Intelligencer.

Not long ago some Chinese artisans at work on one of the imperial buildings at Pekin went on a strike. When the young Emperor of China heard of this, he was very wroth, as young emperors are apt to be under like circumstances, and he straightway issued a decree, directing that the agitators of the strike be strangled and the others sent to the mosquito country. It is hardly necessary to add, and we add it to complete the narrative, that the strike came abruptly to an end.

Chief P. M. Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has sent out a general order in which he cautions the engineers not to let the prevalent strike "fever" overcome their better judgment, and reminds them that they are, as a rule, working under an agreement with the various railways for a stated period. He says the engineers have no grievances and should not be influenced by strikers to take part in a contest with which they are not concerned. He, however, will uphold engineers who refuse to go out with green crews where they believe their lives will be placed in jeopardy by so doing, and advises the engineers in such cases not to strike, but to notify the company that they cannot run under such conditions and to furnish their reasons for such refusal.

While we say all this, we maintain that those laws which are for the protection of society itself must be put in force whenever occasion arises, and that with simple fidelity to the law as such. For when disturbances, riots, conflagrations and loss of life occur, whether growing out of labor troubles, or as the effect of any other cause, it is not the laborer alone who becomes involved. That is always the opportunity for the forces of universal destruction to come to the front. Such exigencies must be met, and in the one only effective way. But meantime let it be remembered that back of all this may be serious wrongs to which a Christian nation ought not to shut its eyes, and which any nation can ignore only at its peril.—The Standard (Chicago).

It is truly surprising how public sentiment has changed during the last two weeks concerning strikes. This country has had two very unnecessary strikes, and when the last great tie up came it so completely disgusted everybody that you can scarcely find a sympathizer with the strike. This is true of the influential daily and weekly papers. Possibly it is one way of getting rid of this way of settling disputes and fixing wages. This country cannot stand such a state of unrest, and there should be something done to regulate the causes of these strikes. The anarchistic spirit behind the main factors should be looked upon with disfavor and the leaders in these uncalled-for strikes should by all means be called to time. This government cannot allow this condition of things to exist because it is gradually undermining the principles upon which this Republic rests. At present this nation is in the hands of its enemies.—The Christian World.

Feeble and Peevish.

My little girl Prudence was feeble and peevish, but since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she has improved very much, is fleshing up and acts like a different child. MRS. ANNIE MAUGHT, Croton Ohio.

Premature baldness may be prevented and the hair made to grow on heads already bald, by the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

WOMEN WHO SUFFER

pain each month, can find relief and cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It regulates and restores the monthly function, braces up the exhausted, run-down, overworked and delicate; allays and banishes all Nervous Weakness, Spasms, Hysteria, Fits, Chorea, or St. Vitus's Dance; cures Weaknesses, Bearing Down Sensations, Backache, Catarrhal Inflammation, Ulceration and kindred maladies.

For those about to become mothers, it is a priceless boon, for it lessens the pain and perils of childbirth, shortens "labor" and the period of confinement, and promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

THOMAS THIRLWELL, of Robertsdale, Pa., says: "I cannot sufficiently express to you my gratitude for the benefit your 'Favorite Prescription' has conferred upon my daughter.

Of late she has suffered no pain whatever. It is simply marvelous."

$5 TO $20 per day at home. The work is easy, pleasant and adapted to both young and old of either sex. Any one can do the work. GEO. STINSON & CO., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD. Pres.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Saves CHILDREN'S LIVES, and prevents sickness, mothers' loss of night's rest, doctors' bills, trouble and anxiety. Prevents coughs, colds and diphtheria. Inexpensive, ornamental, and easily adjusted. A boon to mothers. Indispensable in every house. THE EUREKA BEDCLOTHES FASTENER, price, 50 cents. For sale at all department stores, or sent to any address, postpaid, by J. C. Dewey, Box 2816, New York City. Please mention the Cynosure when writing.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

PROPHECY:

A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1893.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for refence.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres.; Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1894.

WOMAN'S PART IN OUR REFORM.—The saloon curse more manifestly than the lodge, but not more really, assails and destroys the home—the kingdom of woman. Our sisters of the W. C. T. U. have a glorious part in the reform they represent. Our sisters of the N. C. A. have not yet made a record (if we except Miss Flagg, Mrs. V. A. Stone, Mrs. M. E. R. Jones and a few others) which does either themselves or the reform justice. There are but fifteen names of women on the present list of members of our Association. We would there were ten times the number, for this is a gauge, an index of our zeal. The Cynosure invites suggestions, and a frank discussion of the work our wives, mothers, sisters and daughters can do, in any way whatever, to stop the rush of men into the lodge. Mrs. Hildreth, Mrs. Stoddard, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Fischer, Mrs. Capwell, Mrs. Gleason, and a score of others we might name, are wise women and successful in their own affairs. What can they say for the work of the N. C. A. The Cynosure gives them the floor.

PAGE 10.—Our "Home Department" will always be an entertaining and instructing part of the Cynosure. The history of Dr. Hamlin's struggle for an American college in Constantinople and signal success at last is a curious chapter in the history of education. So with the marvelous account of the achievements of the blind Dr. Campbell in London. Frances E Willard in a late letter to the Union Signal refers to this gifted man and his work: "Another visit was to the Royal Normal College for the blind, in the suburbs of London, founded through the efforts of Dr. F. J. Campbell, a blind man of Tennessee, who has made a remarkable record, having invested every day of his life for the good of those about him. In 1856 he taught my sister Mary and me to play the piano, being then at the head of the musical department in the Institution for the Blind, near Janesville, Wis. Many years ago he came to England to study the condition of the blind, and found it far behind that which he had attained in America. Mrs. Dinah Mulock Craik has written a most interesting life of the doctor (although he says she praised him too much and made a few minor errors), and I feel sure that any one who reads the record will be inspired to battle against 'the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune' as this brave man has done. He is devoted to the temperance movement, and is an earnest, broad-minded Christian brother, whose hypothesis of life is embodied in the Golden Rule."

THE ENDEAVOR MOVEMENT AS AN ANTIDOTE.

Two years ago Chauncey Depew, addressing the great Christian Endeavor meeting in New York, said he was thankful for the young people's movement. "It is an antidote to Tammany!" Few probably of the thousands who heard the remark grasped its full meaning. Mr. Depew may have added a political wink, as he remembered how much his party needed recruits. But it was at least a half truth in which was no lie. Tammany is the great secret political society of America. The Christian Endeavor societies are an antidote for all secret lodges; for by their pledge and constitution they bind to Christ and the service of his church. Engrossed in this work young Americans have no use for the lodge. Their eyes once on the crown, their hands will drop the muck-rake.

The enthusiastic and inspiring Endeavor convention at Cleveland, which closed Sabbath evening, took another step against the lodge. It was a mammoth rally of 40,000 zealous young hearts, 18,700 of whom were from outside the city, and the movement which will make it memorable was the determination to begin a work in earnest against foreign paganism. A Chicago business man, Stephen L. Mershon, was the mover of this enterprise. Five thousand societies gave last year $135,000 for denominational missions. It is proposed to make this gift a round million. This will be a flood. It will surely overflow sectarian banks into the Students' Volunteer, and other independent mission agencies.

But most of all, it will mean a grand enthusiasm to gain the world to Christ, to destroy the false worship which makes four-fifths of our globe practically heathen. Though directed abroad it will surely re-act upon paganism at home. And that means the LODGE.

Thanks, Mr. Depew, for the word. Let the organized young Christianity of America be an antidote to Tammany. It will also be, God willing, to the whole Tammany-Masonic system of secretism.

PULLMAN, DEBS, ET AL.

Rev. W. M. Howie, pastor of the South Side United Presbyterian church of this city, whose interest in Christian reform yields to none, sends the following letter, which will serve excellently as text for further remarks on the late strike:

CHICAGO, Ill., July 11, 1894.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR FRIEND:—It seems to me that you are a little premature in gathering up your conclusions in reference to the strike, and give encouragement to a cause very hurtful to our government and people.

Our zeal against secret societies should not lead us to countenance the wrongs which have had to do with the bringing into existence some of these organizations which we condemn. I do not take issue with your condemnation of strikes, or of organizations governing them; but there are other wrongs which are practically upheld.

You say of Pullman: "He is rich and lives in luxury." This fact raises the question, would he be such if he had done justly by his employes? Especially may this question be asked when the condition of his laborers are contrasted with his own. There is surely something wrong with our moneyed men, or moneyed system, when we have abundance within our land, and so much of poverty and suffering, and we had this last winter before there were strikes.

I ask is it right to make this wholesale and sweeping denunciation of Debs, and of men driven to desperation through long grievances, and struggles with poverty, without a word of condemnation of the evils and oppression which has led up to this strike?

We applaud our forefathers for striking against the oppression of George III.; and why make a wholesale condemnation of those who feel that they are being reduced, by capitalists, to the point of slavery and destitution?

While we condemn strikes and their revolutionary methods, shall we not, in the same article, condemn the oppression? The laboring men have claimed, and are claiming, that the church of Christ is against them, and if they read the religious press, have they not good reason for making this statement? It seems to me that your article is one more to give the idea that the church is against the poor and in favor of the rich.

In my opinion there are rights and evils on both sides, and there is a happy medium which is to be sought between capital and labor. I would like to see the Cynosure discuss the foundation principles of these difficulties, and point out the true solution of a more equal distribution of wealth.

Johnston's Cyclopedia says: "Sound political economy favors the making of every laborer to some extent a capitalist, and every capitalist in some way a laborer." "Government but fulfills its function when it secures the utmost freedom to both parties and guards most faithfully the rights of each," Let us seek these ends. Yours truly,

W. M. HOWIE.

We must, first of all, commend Bro. Howie for promptly sending in his criticism and comment on the business that is just now forcing the American people to weigh the work of secret orders. Let the good example be followed, especially by members of the National Christian Association and its Board of Directors. Next, on reviewing the last paper, we would not, all things considered, care to change its statements; not that they might not have been more forcibly and fairly written, or that they tell the whole story of the strike. That of course would be presumption. And, third, Bro. Howie's letter turns on a discussion somewhat aside from the main issue, as we view it,—the limitation of wealth and the socialistic condition of our cities. The request that the Cynosure "point out the true solution of a more equal distribution of wealth" is a large one. Men have tried to answer it ever since Job's day. We conceive the study of the Mosaic law is helping us to a better practical solution of it than Malthus, Owen, Mill, Fourier, George or any and all the writers on social economy. It is fair that the Cynosure should consider it, and we promise to do so, so far as it touches the discussion of secret societies.

1. As for Mr. Pullman and the Pullman Company, we believe it a great mistake that the management refused last Friday the overture for a committee of inquiry as to the causes of the trouble, whether arbitration was necessory or no. The matters that for a time concerned the Company and its men only, now belong to the nation. Let the commission to be appointed by the President learn if possible why all this outrage and disturbance has taken place. Let them find its secret springs; and show neither fear or favor in the investigation. If the Company believes itself to be in the right, doing justice and loving mercy, it should welcome honorable inquiry. Therein is its vindication or its fall in public esteem.

It should be said that the Pullman Company is composed of several thousand shareholders,—Marshal Field, J. W. Doane and other well-known business men and 250 women. They have rights to be considered. It should also be said that the town of Pullman and the car works which are its center and life, are distinct from the sleeping coach business. Neither are a monopoly. There are many other car shops, and several other sleeping car lines, and many roads have their own coaches, which charge a special rate. The sleeping car business is objectionable in so far as it fosters caste. Its profits are not from the poor but the well-to-do.

The town of Pullman was founded in 1880. In 1887 a commission with Carroll D. Wright (then a labor union leader in Massachusetts, but now head of the Government Bureau of Labor) at its head and several foreign gentlemen among its number, made a careful examination of this experimental city. The report is found in all our large public libraries. Over 1,000 persons of all classes were examined. The commission found that while the women rejoiced in the comfort, security and general management, some of the men longed for opportunities to jump rent bills and squander their money to suit themselves. Probably the saloons and lodges of Kensington and Roseland adjoining could explain why.

The private testimony of an excellent lady, for years a teacher in Pullman and well acquainted in its homes, given to the Cynosure last week, might be published if there were room. She and other ladies familiar with the home life of that city who could be named, have no sympathy with the strike, but regard it as a reckless and foolish attempt of men who have been over-persuaded by the leaders of labor unions.

These facts have a bearing on one side of the case only. It was reported, but anonymously, last week that the cut in wages was Mr. Pullman's revenge for the vote of his men for Cleveland in 1892. Mr. Cawardine, the M. E. minister of the place, has been making frequent speeches, severely condemning the Company. But it should be said that the clergyman has a grievance, because the only church building in Pullman is undenominational. Both Mr. Pullman and the strikers have published statements which can be taken for what they are worth.

Mr. Debs, though a prime factor in the strike so far as the Company and its men were concerned, is but an accident in the great question of the labor unions and their war on society. But for his urgent efforts, and promise of a general boycott, Pullman might to-day be a peaceful instead of a starving city. We use the word "war" because the lodges have adopted it; and as this discussion may be prolonged, we prefer to postpone to another number some thoughts we have gathered respecting it.

UTAH A STATE.

The smoke and smudge of the tariff battle has almost concealed from public view questions of gravest importance which Congress is meanwhile settling. Both houses voted to receive Utah into the Union last week, and the President's signature will not be withheld.

This act, as every one knows, has been long delayed because the good sense of the American people objected. Politicians, urged on by a strong Mormon lobby, well stocked with funds from the tithing house of the Church of Latter-day Saints, would long since have given statehood to Utah. But patriotic men could not endure that a State, managed by a religious body which was in turn controlled by fanaticism, should ever take its place in the American sisterhood. It is yet an open question whether the Gentile element in Utah may not be driven out under the license of State sovereignty.

We have seen great changes in twenty years in Utah, and the progress of that people toward true civil liberty may continue unchecked. The act of Congress the other day, adopting the land-grant forfeiture bill, returned to the public domain, it is said, some 54,000,000 acres; and 3,000,000 of them are in Utah. But there will be no rush to the valleys of the Wasatch as there was to Oklahoma and the Cherokee strip. Farming in Utah means irrigation, and Brigham Young took care years ago that all the water supply should be in control of "the church."

That the leaders of Mormonism are not changed in their conviction respecting their mission, there is proof enough. The Deseret News of the other day published a sermon from Elder B. H. Roberts in the Tabernacle on the "Relation of Mormonism to Christianity." The speaker, describing the apostacy of the middle ages, claimed in his ignorance that Christianity was then utterly obliterated, and Mormonism was given a few decades ago to the conjurer Jo. Smith as the new revelation of God to men. These are his words:

"The beautiful religion founded by Jesus Christ was replaced by the splendid forms of worship that were inaugurated to meet the demands of a pagan multitude of converts, until you could no longer recognize the simple Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. The darkness which brooded over the world, the ignorance and superstition that abounded in the "Dark Ages," proclaim beyond all successful contradiction that the light of the Gospel had been withdrawn from the earth because of the corruptions of the people. That is the message which Mormonism bears to the world. It proclaims a universal apostacy from the true Christian religion. And to the various divisions of Protestant Christendom, Mormonism has this to say: that divine authority and the Gospel of Christ once having been taken from the earth, there is but one way by which that divine authority and the Gospel of Christ can be restored, viz: by re-opening the heavens, and committing a new dispensation of the Gospel and the priesthood to men. That is what Mormonism claims to be, a new dispensation of the Gospel of Christ."

It is manifest that a political system managed by a sect holding to such doctrine might not long be safe to unbelievers, when a new revelation respecting their disposition might be forth coming at the first convenient season.

Joseph Cook, in his latest published Monday lecture, urges that Utah should not be admitted for five years or more, until Mormon authority should be under positive control, until there be stronger guarantees against polygamy, and until the schools and colleges already successfully planted by Protestant sects shall have more positively affected the mind and heart of Mormon youth.

In any event it is unlikely that we have yet dismissed the Mormon question to the grave of settled and forgotten problems.

—The Gospel Messenger has a correspondent who uses tracts successfully against the lodge. He gives an interesting bit of his experience with Odd-fellowship in the last number of the paper.

—"The Sent of God" is the title of a little paper coming from the good town of Tabor, Iowa. It is an earnestly evangelical sheet and one of its principles is, "We are opposed to secret orders, and oath bound obligations."

—It is understood that Mrs. Caroline E. Haskell, widow of Frederick Haskell, who was for many years a prominent citizen of Chicago, has given $20,000 for a lectureship endowment in Comparative Religions for the University of Chicago. We respectfully suggest to President Harper that when he comes around to the religion of the lodge—and that should be quite soon—he send for President C. A. Blanchard or Rev. M. A. Gault, or both, and thus secure a fair presentation of the topic.

—Rev. O. M. Owen, of Utica, N. Y., district chairman, writes a very entertaining letter to the Free Methodist of a visit to the Green Mountains and the precious meetings with God's people of various names there enjoyed. It is of special interest that he mentions a "grand sermon" by Rev. M. D. Collins in which the evil of Freemasonry was faithfully rebuked. We rejoice that Bro. Owen was there to hear and report. Bro. Stoddard must make the acquaintance of these Vermont friends.

—"For these stirring times of rapidly fulfilling prophecy," says the Times of Restitution, "a careful and intelligent perusal of certain two little volumes would prove a startling eye-opener to all clear-headed students of present conditions and occurrences from the Scriptural side." "The Essential Oneness of All Secret Orders," by John Levington, and "The Image of the Beast a Secret Empire," by Richard Horton, published at the Wesleyan office, Syracuse, N. Y. The editor of the Times frankly says he is fully prepared to defend the positions taken by these authors against all conflicting claims and theories.

—The June number of the Columbus Theological Magazine contains the exhaustive and able argument of Rev. D. Simon, editor of the Lutheran Standard, answering the question: "On what specific grounds must secretists be excluded from church fellowship?" This paper is published in compliance with a resolution of the Columbus conference, and in the historical introduction reviews the action of the Evangelical Lutheran Joint Synod of Ohio for forty years on the question of secretism. We shall give the Cynosure readers some portions of this document.

—Out in the Black Hills they have explored a cavern through all the aisles and intricacies and pitfalls of ninety-one miles. In one of these rooms, unblest with a single ray of God's sunlight through all the centuries, a lodge of South Dakota Masons proposes to hold a meeting and initiate a candidate. Fit cave of gloom for such a deed.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Wm. Fenton was at Sioux Falls, S. Dakota, last week.

—Rev. M. A. Gault has a two months' vacation given him by his congregation, the Reformed Presbyterian of Bloomington, Ind.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman writes from his home in Oberlin of feeble health, but hopes for improvement. His only daughter and eldest child starts for China, Aug. 14th, to engage in mission work.

—The Cleveland U. P. Presbytery adopted memorial resolutions on the recent death of Rev. Dr. J. L. Logue, so long a prominent pastor among the United Presbyterians, and a warm supporter of our reform.

—Rev. Dr. Metheny, missionary of the Covenanter church in Syria, sailed from New York on his return on the 7th inst. He was one of the speakers in the congress of 1890 held in this city by the National Christian Association.

—Rev. N. R. Johnston, late editor of Our Banner, is visiting his daughters at Utica, Ohio, and Ray, Indiana, on his return to Oakland, Cal. The strike has interfered with his transit materially. The Cynosure hopes its pages may profit by his pen when he is settled on his romantic "Warriston Crag" above San Francisco bay and neighbor of Joaquin Miller.

—The removal of the Midland from Omaha to Chicago is foreshadowed by an incident in the First United Presbyterian church of that city, who tendered Rev. E. Graham, editor of the Midland and former pastor, a kind reception. A pair of silver shears was among the tokens of remembrance. This is a reflection on Bro. Graham. Who forgot the gold pen?

—Rev. Joel Swartz, D. D., a well-known writer for religious periodicals and worker in the prohibitory reform, is now living in Steubenville, O., whither he has removed from Gettysburg, Pa. Dr. Swartz is a renouncing Mason, and loves the members of the order according to Scripture rule and impulse as he warns them of the evil associations that entrap them.

—Rev. P. B. Williams, agent for the western branch of the National Christian Association, spoke twenty different times during the month of June and gave twenty-five addresses, twelve anti-secrecy and thirteen sermons and addresses on prohibition and other reforms. He spoke in ten different towns, namely: Evergreen, Philomath, Salem, Cloverdale, Woodburn, Oregon City, Canby, Turner, Roseburg and Myrtle; and attended two conferences.

—Rev. John Jasper of Richmond, Va., is one of the most noted of all slave preachers. He is over eighty years old, and believes as firmly as he did in 1878, when his famous sermon was preached, "that the sun do move." He recently gave an outline of that celebrated discourse, which he says was composed in order to set at rest some doubts which had arisen in the mind of a young member of his flock. Our old colored brother may be erratic on the movement of the heavenly bodies, but he is sound in his judgment that the secret lodges are a great evil.

—The Prohibitionists of California have nominated Gen. John Bidwell for Senator. His position on the secret methods of the lodge were frankly given two years ago when candidate for President. The California ticket has two other names, T. D. Kanouse for lieutenant governor and Robert F. Burns for superintendent of public instruction, who are identified with the secret orders. Mr. Kanouse has held high place among the Good Templars. Mr. Burns is a popular young man of Placer county, who ought not to be in lodge ranks. If some Priscilla would take the pains to instruct him, the world might be the better for it. Mr. Gould of Los Angeles, candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court, is an excellent Christian man. He led the southern California secession from Good Templarism eight years ago. That order under Katzenstein was ruining the temperance work at that time.

—It is related of Joseph Mackey, years ago publisher of the Commercial Gazette of New York, and founder of the Free Methodist, that, having a very large number of workmen in his employ, he had them print for his own individual use a complete copy of the Bible, differing from the ordinary one only in this, that wherever there was a general promise he made it particular by inserting his own name before it. "Joseph Mackey, ask and receive, that your joy may be full;" "Joseph Mackey, my grace is sufficient for thee;" "Joseph Mackey, greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."

—Prof. Phillip Phelps, D.D, was a significant figure in our Boston convention of 18—, the time of the great Music Hall mob. He is still, as then, connected with Hope College, Holland, Mich., and preached the baccalaureate sermon at the late commencement. The Intelligencer tells this interesting incident during the ceremonies of commencement day: "When the time came for the delivery of the college keys by the President of the Council, Dr. Phelps stepped forward with a silken robe hanging over his arm and an Oxford hat of purple velvet in his hand. He briefly told the story how the ladies of Holland had presented him with these insignia of office, and had secured their manufacture in imitation of those then worn by Chancellor Ferris of the University of the City of New York. By committee of General Synod he had been robed at his inauguration, and he now presented the historic relics that they might be held in perpetuo, and used on the occasion of presidential inaugurations. As previously instructed by the Council, the President of Council received the gift, and then proceeded to invest the President-elect of Hope College in his official robes."

LODGE LAMP.

There have been received up to date, 16th inst., 1,001 subscriptions to Lodge Lamp from forty different persons. The average per day has been a few over 100. This is encouraging, but can not this be quadrupled for the week to come? What we do for this must be done quickly. If you have not secured a copy send a postal card stating that you wish one and it will be sent you free.

The following telegram from representatives of national societies of the Congregational churches was sent to Washington: "CHICAGO, July 10, 1894 —To His Excellency, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States. Honored Sir:—We, the undersigned, Chicago representatives of national societies of the Congregational churches, desire hereby to express to you our approval, our admiration, our gratitude in consideration of the position you have taken and are holding with such wisdom and patriotic tenacity in the matter of maintaining the sovereignty of our nation in this time of disloyal uprising. We beg, also, to say that the law and order people are univesally upholding you in this fidelity to your sacred trust. Respectfully yours," signed by Joseph E. Roy, District Secretary of American Missionary Association, and six other district secretaries.

Until the right of the American people to use the highways of the nation is settled all other questions should stand to one side. Tariff, income tax, silver question, woman suffrage are insignificant compared with the question: Are we a free people? The railway corporations will have the sympathy and support of substantially the entire nation in this issue until it is settled and settled aright. It would be better to ride in common cars, freight-cars, cattle-cars, platform-cars, or not ride at all than to live under a social system which leaves the question whether we may ride and when and how we may ride to be determined by an irresponsible organization, formulating its decrees by secret committees and enforcing them by mob violence. We can live without railroads, as our fathers did before us, but we will not live without liberty.—The Outlook.

President Debs is evidently the right man in the right place, and is ably supported by his lieutenant, Vice-president Howard. The organization of the A. R. U. appears as near perfection as possible, and it is to the interest of all labor unions to co-operate with President Debs, who exhibits all the coolness, skill and ability of a successful general. There can be no doubt that if he is sustained he will gain a grand victory for the oppressed wage-workers of the United States, and a peaceful solution and permanent settlement of the vexed question.—Western Catholic News.

THE HOME.

A SONG OF TRUST.

We know not, but thou knowest
All things, Most Good and Wise!
The light is all about thee,
The mists are in our eyes.
Thy children love this solace
In hours of pain and strife.
What we know not thou knowest,
O God, of all our life!

Why sicknesses and sorrows
Should dare to touch thine own;
Why loving hearts are breaking,
And weak ones sad and lone;
Why those who cry for morning
Are lost amid the night,
We know not, but thou knowest;
And all thy ways are right.

Why from the world that needs them
Thou callest thy best away?
Though hosts besiege thee for them,
And they are fain to stay,
We ask, but find no answer,
We cannot understand;
But thine is perfect knowledge,
And our times are in thy hand.

From beat of stormy waters,
From waves of restless care,
From tumult of great trouble
And waste of wild despair,
Our souls find ample refuge
In faith as in an ark
We know not, but thou knowest,
And light shines through the dark.

—Marianne Farningham.

HOW AN AMERICAN COLLEGE WAS BUILT ON THE BOSPHORUS.

"Father, won't you take me down to see our great admiral?" asked Alfred Hamlin of his father, president of Robert College, Constantinople. Admiral Farragut had reached that city on his tour around the world.

"No, my son; we spent a whole day in trying to see the crown prince of Prussia, and did not see him after all. We should probably have the same luck. I should like to see him very much, but I can't spend a whole day to not see a man."

As the boy turned to go out the look of disappointment upon his face reminded his father how he would have felt when a boy at such a rebuff under such circumstances. So he said to him: "Look here, Alfred, I will go down with you early to-morrow morning, and if we see the old hero, well and good. If not, we shall come right home."

They found the admiral alone in his room. He asked Dr. Hamlin if he were a resident in Turkey, and what was his occupation. This afforded Dr. Hamlin the opportunity to tell the admiral the story of Robert College and its difficulties, which is related in his interesting autobiography recently published by the Congregational Publishing society, Boston. The college was projected in 1859. C. R. Robert, an American merchant, proposed to head the subscription list with $10,000, the amount desired being $100,000, and he afterward placed $30,000 at Mr. Hamlin's disposal and told him to go ahead with the buildings.

Some months before, while walking around the city, Mr. Hamlin had noticed what he thought an ideal site for a college. He had learned that the owner was Ahmed Vefyk Pasha, then Ottoman ambassador at Paris. Through Mr. Brown, American secretary of legation, Mr. Hamlin offered $15,000 for the tract of ground. Ahmed Vefyk replied: "Tell Mr. Hamlin if he has land to sell I will listen to him; if he is only a purchaser, I have nothing to say and no terms to offer." Supposing this to be final Mr. Hamlin purchased an undesirable lot in another part of the city. When he began to make preparations to build upon it he was forbidden to do so.

To his surprise soon after he received this prohibition Ahmed Vefyk offered to sell him the lot he most desired at the price he had offered. The change in the government resulting from the death of Sultan Abdul Medjid had seriously embarrassed Ahmed Vefyk financially, and he found himself in debt about $30,000 for the elegant dinners he had given in Paris, for which the new government refused to pay. Dr. Hamlin paid the $15,000 and secured the ground.

When he went to the site and was beginning preparations for building, an officer from the Sublime Porte presented himself and said: "Some formalities are still not completed, and you must wait until they are." In answer to the question, "How long?" he said: "Perhaps a couple of weeks." This action Dr. Hamlin afterward learned was due to Jesuitical influence.

It was seven years before these formalities were completed. In the meantime Dr. Hamlin endeavored to enlist the interest of American and English diplomatists, and besieged the government so often that the grand vizier once said, in vexation: "Will this Mr. Hamlin never die, and let me alone on this college question?" Once he thought he was about to succeed, Sir Henry Bulwer, the ambassador, having taken up the matter and promised to secure the desired permission to build. A few days later, however, he was informed that the English embassy could do nothing for him. He found the explanation soon after, when Sir Henry was convicted of having accepted through his mistress a bribe of $50,000 from the Khedive of Egypt to settle a quarrel he had with the Sultan. The grand vizier agreed to settle the quarrel if Sir Henry would abandon three questions—the Bulgarian, the Servian and the American College. To this Sir Henry agreed, but it cost him his place. Dr. Hamlin wrote many letters, as well as talked with many men concerning the college, and in one of these letters, which was private, though addressed to an official, he declared that political complications would finally compel the pasha to grant a great deal more than he now asked. This letter was shown the pasha, as Dr. Hamlin hoped it would be, and subsequently had much influence.

When Dr. Hamlin finished his story Farragut appeared to be annoyed, and said: "I am sorry the Turks should treat you so unjustly. But I am not here on any diplomatic mission. I can do nothing to help you."

Turning to Dr. Hamlin's little boy, Farragut put his hand on the boy's shoulder and said: "What are you going to be in this world, my son? What are you going to be?"

"I don't know," replied the child, with boyish simplicity, "I wouldn't mind being admiral of the American fleet."

This appeared to touch the admiral in a tender place. Patting the boy on the head, he said: "Ah! my son—my son! If you are going to be admiral of the American fleet—"

Before he finished the sentence, a mutual friend, Dr. Seropian, entered the room and exclaimed: "Good morning, Admiral Farragut, I am glad to see you here with Dr. Hamlin." He then explained about the college, and ended by saying: "You have come here just in the nick of time to help Dr. Hamlin out of this difficulty."

"Why, doctor, I can do nothing at all in this case. I have no diplomatic mission here," said Farragut.

"Just for that reason you can do everything," replied the doctor. "You have only to ask the great pashas, when you dine with them, why this American college can't be built—that is all."

"I will readily do that," said the admiral. "A beggar may ask a question of a king."

Dr. Hamlin then suggested to the admiral that if he asked the question he make no reply, but receive the responses to his question as if they were entirely satisfactory, or at least decisive.

"I'll do it! I'll do it," he replied.

About ten days after Farragut left Constantinople an officer of the Sublime Porte sat down by Mr. Hamlin, on a steamer on the Bosphorus, and said:

"I want to ask you a question, Mr. Hamlin."

"Very well," said Mr. Hamlin.

Putting his face very near to Mr. Hamlin's, as though he were about to reveal a very important secret, the official said: "I want to ask you if your great admiral was sent here by your government to settle that college question?"

Mr. Hamlin gave an evasive answer, to the effect that he supposed any government would take up such a matter if it meant to defend the rights of its citizens. Nothing further appeared to come of the Farragut episode. Indeed, Mr. Hamlin was informed by a prominent Englishman that he knew from the highest authority that it had been decided that the American college should never be built upon that spot.

Some time afterward a messenger entered Mr. Hamlin's office with a note from Mr. Morris, the American minister. It read:

I congratulate you, Mr. Hamlin, on the termination of your long contest with the Turkish government. I have just received a note from his highness, the grand vizier, saying: "Tell Mr. Hamlin he may begin the building of the college when he pleases. No one will interfere with him. And in a few days an imperial irade will be given him."

This was more than Dr. Hamlin had asked, much less hoped for. An imperial irade is the most sacred title to real estate ever given in Turkey, and emanates personally from the Sultan himself in his character of infallibility. For this Dr. Hamlin would gladly have paid $10,000 if money could have bought it, and now he receives it for nothing. In the irade the college was placed under the protection of the United States, and, consequently, has the right to carry, and does carry, the American flag. To attack it is to attack the American flag. It is the only foreign institution permitted upon any prominent point along the Bosphorus.

A few weeks after the opening of the college a prominent Turkish gentleman called to see it. While observing the grand scenery from the college tower he became eloquent in descanting upon it, and declared that no university in Europe could match the scenery of the Bosphorus and its historic shores. Finally, he said: "Ah, sir, we would never have given you leave to build your college here had it not been for that bloody insurrection in Crete!"

"That bloody insurrection in Crete!" exclaimed Dr. Hamlin in surprise. "What could that have to do with building this college here?"

Then the Turkish gentleman explained the whole matter, saying:

"Why, when your great Admiral Farragut was here that insurrection was our greatest embarrassment, taxing all our skill and power. We would have gladly seen Crete swallowed up in the sea; but to grant her freedom would have involved the loss of all our islands, and would have brought on the disintegration of the empire. Greek delegations surrounded the admiral and reported that he had promised to pass along the shores of Crete and take off the refugees of Greece; and, moreover, that he had assured them that his government would sell them one of its monitors. This gave us just cause of alarm, which was increased not a little when the admiral came to dine with the Sultan's high officers of state. He asked the grand vizier, point blank, why that American college could not be built. The grand vizier replied in friendly terms, and the great admiral said not a word. But he continued to ask the same question right and left, to the minister of foreign affairs, to the minister of war, and of the navy: "I would like to ask your excellency a question. I would like to know why that American college can't be built?" To all he held the same absolute silence, and said not a word. We saw clearly that the United States government was holding that college question over against us, and the admiral was assured that all difficulties were removed and the college would soon be built. But when he rather suddenly left and went straight out by Gibraltar we breathed easily, and had no intention of granting you leave to build. A few months after letters from New York papers were sent, translated and in the original. They were very severe and unjust on the Cretan case, but they were written with ability and exact knowledge. We said, there is the finger of the great admiral in this. His government is preparing the American people for intervention. If only an American monitor should come into the Mediterranean it would be followed by war with Greece; and war begun with Greece, Allah himself only knows where it would end! And we had been warned that this college question would become a thorny one, and that political complications would finally compel us to grant even more than was asked. We now felt the thorns, and we said: Better build a hundred colleges for the Americans with our own money than have one of Farragut's monitors come into the Mediterreneanl So we gave you the imperial irade—which we never give—and we placed this college under the protection of the United States as the greatest compliment to your government; and so (spreading his hands with a smile of satisfaction) we smoothed it all off."

This college is one of the most influential institutions of learning in all Europe. Within its walls a number of the leading statesmen of the Balkan states have been educated, and to it more than anything else is due the independent spirit of the Bulgarian leaders. It is hated and dreaded by both Turkey and Russia, but it is now in a position where neither dare disturb it.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

TEMPERANCE.

THE REFORM IN THE UNITED STATES.

WAYMARKS OF ITS PROGRESS.

(W. P. Smith in the Union Signal.)

What has been our experience in this country? A few years prior to Father Matthew's work in Ireland, a similar reform had been originated in the United States by Dr. Jonathan Edwards and others. It was also on the line of moral suasion. Dr. Dorchester, in his "Liquor Problem in all Ages," speaking of the results of this reform, says: "In the year 1835 more than 8,000 temperance societies had been formed with more than 1,500,000 members, every State except one being organized. More than 4,000 distilleries had been stopped and 8,000 merchants had ceased to sell ardent spirits. More than 1,200 vessels, in which it is not used, sail from our ports." Dr. Edwards, at the beginning of this total abstinence reform, had said: "Our main object is not to reform inebriates but to induce all temperance people to continue temperate by practicing total abstinence; the drunkards, if not reformed, will die, and the land be free."

Great good was accomplished, even by this one-sided work. In their report to the American Temperance Union, the executive committee in 1839 says: "Continual progress has been made in almost every section of the country in the work of purification. Few families of character and respectability now offer to their guests the more virulent intoxicating drinks, and, to a very wide extent, the use of the milder and comparatively harmless is now, at the dinner table or in the social circle, unknown, where but a short time ago they were viewed as indispensable to health or reputable standing. But a few churches of an evangelical character have, for a considerable period, admitted those to their communion who manufacture, vend or habitually use spirituous liquors. On farms, in manufactories, in work-shops, in our merchant vessels, fishing crafts, whalers, in the army and in the churches of Christ, the demon has scarcely a place to nestle."

Notwithstanding much was accomplished, there were many who realized that, like former efforts along the line of temperance work, which only had for its object to do away with the abuse, and not the moderate use, of strong drink, the total abstinence plan alone was not enough. But immediately following this was that great wave known as the Washingtonian movement. It was especially for the reformation of drunkards. It is said in Ohio alone, in a few months, in 1842, 60,000 took the pledge, many of them being hopeless drunkards. Rev. Dr. Parker, before the New York Presbytery, said: "The great change that has been produced within the last few months in the reforming of poor, lost inebriates is a wonderful phenomenon. The church had passed them by as hopeless. God raised up reformers from among themselves, and now the multiplied and moving tales of woes and sins and recoveries of poor, lost drunkards are telling with amazing power upon hearts that were accounted to be beyond the reach of the Gospel." "It has been estimated," says Dr. Dorchester, "that there were reformed by the Washingtonian movement six hundred thousand drunkards in the United States, and that four hundred and fifty thousand of them fell back into their former drinking customs. Others estimate only three per cent were permanent."

While the necessity of all this work along the line of moral suasion was conceded, there were many who had become convinced that to permanently succeed the dramshops must be outlawed, that "the convictions and enthusiasm of a people must be crystalized into statutory and constitutional law to perpetuate them." The question had been agitated throughout the country of the suppression of the liquor traffic. A bill passed the legislature of New York in 1845, submitting the question of "license or no-license" to a vote of the people, exempting New York city. The result was that more than five-sixths of the towns and cities gave majorities against license. Maine passed its first prohibitory law in 1846, but it was almost a dead letter on account of the lack of penalties. In 1851 Neal Dow obtained what is now known as the "Maine Law." Similar laws were passed in Minnesota, Rhode Island, Vermont, Michigan, Connecticut, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, New Hampshire and Wisconsin. Pennsylvania lost it by a majority of only three thousand votes. New York also adopted the Maine law in 1855.

Why has law not proved a success in all these States? "Oh," we are told, "you can't enforce a law unless public sentiment supports it." But here was public sentiment strongly in its favor, and yet it was not enforced to any great extent except in Maine, and soon was in disrepute, and was repealed in most of the States. The cause is plain.

Those in authority did not want to enforce it. They were unfaithful of their trust. Prohibition sentiment was strong; public opinion as expressed at the ballot box was in favor of the law, and all that was needed were officials who were firm and true to their oaths. If that is not true, then popular government is a failure and the quicker we abandon it the better.

Why are there even two States to-day that have constitutional prohibition? Because when the law was enacted there were men in authority in high places who enforced it. Rev. John Marks says in his "Temperance Recollections": "All eyes were at once turned upon Maine to see if she would execute her law (in 1851). Will the mayor of Portland stand firm at his post and do his duty, or will he shrink in fear of mobs and riots?" Almost at once he issued his proclamation declaring that he should promptly enforce the law, giving venders sixty days to ship their liquor out of the State. Two thousand dollars' worth was seized and openly destroyed, but no resistance was made. The people stood quietly by and witnessed the whole, in respectful silence. Smaller cities followed, and throughout Maine, with some exceptions, prohibition was established." What was the secret of it? Neal Dow was mayor of Portland.

How was it in that other State that has prohibition in its organic law—"Bleeding Kansas"? Rev. A. H. Richardson, of Lawrence, one year after the law went into effect says: "In two-thirds if not three-fourths of the counties, there is no open violation of the law." St. John was governor and says: "It is safe to say that in sixty-five out of eighty-one organized counties, the law, as a rule, is as honestly obeyed and enforced as any other law prohibiting crime." Now if a few large cities in Kansas had only put men in for their mayors made of the same stuff as the mayor of Portland, could the law not have been enforced as well as other criminal laws in the whole State?

What does our past experience teach us? We are now in the seventh and last period of temperance work. 1. Agitation against the abuse only of strong drink. 2. Total abstinence from distilled liquors. 3. Total abstinence from all that can intoxicate and the reformation of the drunkard. 4. Organization of societies for preserving, strengthening and educating. 5. Local option. 6. Prohibition by States and moral suasion for the saloon-keeper. 7. Prohibition by politics, including all the other steps.

Those in authority must believe in prohibition and have the moral courage to enforce the law. Prohibitory law in many States has proved almost a failure because executive officers were elected on other issues who were hostile to enforcement. The liquor broblem is of greater magnitude and more importance to the American people than any other question; and while we must circulate pledges, educate the people, reform the drunkard, and enact prohibitory laws, we must also elect only those to occupy official positions who believe in and are committed to the enforcement of the laws prohibiting the saloon.

The movement inaugurated by the Methodists in the southern part of California of pledging to vote for no political party which is not committed to the abolition of the the liquor traffic, is arousing the old party politicians. They profess to be grieved over the possibility of the church losing a part of its membership by their not favoring the movement, when the true state of the case is that if the church members voted with the party that favored the abolition of the liquor traffic, both the Republican and Democratic parties would be the losers.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON V.—Third Quarter, 1894, July 29.

SUBJECT.—The Youth of Jesus.—Luke 2: 40-52.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.—Luke 2: 52.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 2: 40-52. T.—Deut. 16: 1-8. W.—Matt. 13: 53-58. Th.—Col. 3: 12-20. F.—Prov. 4: 1-9. S.—Prov. 2: 1-9. Su.—Prov. 3: 1-6.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The divine childhood. V. 40. We have seen Jesus as an infant. We now see him as the child, developing like other children yet without sin. There were no seeds of evil in his heart to spring up and choke out with their rank, unwholesome growth the seeds of good. There seems to have been a steady, natural, healthy development of all his faculties, physical, mental and spiritual. "He waxed strong in spirit." He had a precocious resolution and clearness of judgment. His actions and speech were entirely under the control of the Holy Spirit. Hence this extraordinary wisdom beyond his years. Christian parents who desire that their children should be Christlike even from their earliest years may here find several important suggestions: 1. Homes of humble piety are the ones in which God generally chooses to bring up his children, and he made no exception to this rule when he sent his only and well-beloved Son into the world. 2. Christ showed even in his childhood strength of character. From its cradle a child should be so trained that in this Christlike sense it may grow "strong in spirit," strong to resist temptation, strong to stand by its own convictions of what is right, strong to think and say and do the right if the heavens fall. 3. "And the grace of God was upon him." It did not matter that Herod sought his life, or that the great potentates of the world knew nothing about him. So the one thing Christian parents need to seek for their children, is not the favor of the rich and great, but the grace of God which will ensure them unfading honor and imperishable riches.

2. The child Jesus at the feast. Vs. 41–45. Mary and Joseph were strict observers of the Jewish ordinances, and above all other of the great feasts that of the Passover was the one most devoutly kept. It was a season of rejoicing and reunion of scattered friends. The journey to Jerusalem, longer or shorter, was a pleasant break in the daily routine. Jesus was still a child and doubtless looked forward to it with happy anticipations. But he was not as other children. Even so early the burden of his divine mission had begun to press upon him. Being 12 years of age he was already, according to the Jewish expression, "a son of the Law." He was eager for more knowledge regarding that law which it was his "Father's business" that he should "fulfill." He must have been a trusted child, one who had developed even at that early age a capacity to care for himself, or his mother at least would not have so easily dismissed all anxiety on the supposition that he was somewhere in the caravan "among their kinsfolks and acquaintances." But when it became evident that he was nowhere to be found they turned back to Jerusalem with heavy hearts. They could not forget that once royal jealousy had sought his young life. Though Herod was dead, one of the same name and family sat on the throne. There was reason they should "seek him sorrowing," and with fearful apprehensions for his safety.

3. Jesus in the temple. Vs. 46–52. We can only imagine the feelings of Mary during that three days' search. It ought to have occurred to her, if not to Joseph, that the temple was the natural place in which to find him, as Jesus himself gently intimated in answer to her rebuke. Here in this school of the Rabbis he found what he could not in Nazareth; and so eager was he for instruction in religious mysteries that in his absorbed interest he forgot everything else. "Both hearing them and asking them questions." There is not, as some have imagined, any unchildlike forwardness or unbecoming desire to teach his elders in the scene presented. The Rabbis held schools in the temple courts. "These schools," says Geikie, "were free, and anyone entering might answer or propose a question. The Rabbi sat on a high seat; his scholars on the ground at his feet in a half circle; their one study the Law with its Rabbinical comments." Jesus had doubtless been taught the Old Testament Scriptures from his boyhood, but he panted to learn their hidden meaning as it stood connected with his own future life and mission. "Both hearing." Without the hearing ear there can be no understanding heart. The divine command is to be "swift to hear, slow to sweak." He had the humility of a little child coupled with the understanding of maturer years. "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Did they not know that it was time for One especially sent of God to be inquiring about the work on which he was sent, and to begin even now to employ himself in matters related to his divine mission? "But they understood not." All his life Jesus had to bear misunderstanding. His own mother failed to comprehend these words that with other sayings of his she still "kept in her heart," but which we have no reason to suppose she fully understood until after his resurrection. And he went down to Nazareth—hard as it must have been to leave Jerusalem with its schools of learning for an out-of-the-way provincial town—and for eighteen years lived the simple, narrow life of a Galilean peasant. Yet he increased continually in wisdom. He did not repine, but was subject unto his parents. So let us be content with our sphere. The privileges we lack will be made up to us through the teachings of the Holy Spirit. Like him let us grow in wisdom so that no day that passes over our heads will leave us just where it found us.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The first deaconess home in the Canadian Methodist church has just been established in Toronto, and two ladies sent from the Chicago training-school to take charge.

—Miss Fannie Meyer expects to sail for China this fall. She is the first self-supporting missionary sent out under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missonary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

—The Bereilly Methodist Theological Seminary is one of the most noble missionary institutions in India. In the last twenty years it has sent out 499 Hindoo Gospel workers, more than half of whom were missionaries.

—Rev. W. E. Coquillette, who lately withdrew his resignation from the pastorate of the Congregational church, was one of the speakers in the important convention held by the Illinois auxiliary of the N. C. A. in the First M. E. church in Chicago, some twenty years ago.

—It is said that the Margaret Williamson Hospital of Shanghai, China, is one of the greatest evangelistic agencies in that city. Twenty-two thousand patients passed through the dispensary in 1893, and every one of them was spoken to on the subject of Christianity. The hospital was built by a lady in Brooklyn.

—Rev. William Moerdyk, formerly pastor of Holland churches in this city and Pella, Iowa, will be remembered by many for his earnest labors against secretism in the Wisconsin Classis. He is now preaching in Kalamazoo, Mich., and has just refused a call to Milwaukee, Wis. His brother, Rev. Peter Moerdyk, is a Chicago pastor.

—Rev. John L. Scudder, of Jersey City, is another example of the minister who, like Parkhurst, thinks it his duty to become a force in social affairs. He has been stirring up the officers of the law to prosecute gambling and disorderly houses, and seems to have scored some successes, and to be subject to scandalous assaults in consequence thereof.

—The first English Baptist church in the Orange Free State, Africa, has been opened; it seats 250 persons. The constitution of the church is framed on the basis of union. "The membership of the church has, from its establishment, been open to believers who have not been baptized according to the usages of the Baptists, and it will remain open to them.

—Since the death of Henry Ward Beecher, the clergyman who preaches to the largest congregation in this country is Rev. Russell H. Conwell, a Baptist of Philadelphia. He addresses 8,000 people every Sunday, and he has established a college where 120 students are taking a regular course, and 3,500 others are attending classes in various subjects.

—Rev. D. W. Wise resigned the pastorate of the College church, Wheaton, some time since and closed his labors in June. The church has asked Rev. W. M. Chandler, one of its members and well known as an evangelist for the Illinois Home Missionary Society, to act as pastor for the present. Bro. Chandler was one of the early presidents of the State Anti-secrecy Association.

—At the annual meeting of the Moravian Missionary society in London, it was reported that at present 400 missionaries occupy 140 missionary centers. More than thirty went out last year. The parent church at home, with a membership of barely 30,000, and with limited resources, nevertheless has one in every city of its members in the foreign mission field, and its converts number more than three times its own membership.

To New Subscribers!

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

—)FOR(—

FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

111 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D, Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. Paper cover. 25cts each

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials" 328 pages, cloth, $1 00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1 00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW TO FIGHT HOT WEATHER.

To women of delicate physique the heated season of summer is often more difficult to endure than the cold of winter. The chief reason why people suffer from the summer heat is the lack of proper provision for it. At the risk of being generally disputed, the necessity for light wool-flannels in summer must be insisted upon. People who lead an inactive life may possibly afford to leave them off and substitute a cotton-gauze, but all those persons who are engaged in active work, and especially those who perspire freely, should wear flannels next to their skin. Little children and delicate persons should always wear some undergarment of this kind to protect them from changes of the weather as well as from the chilling effects of a profuse perspiration. It has long ago been demonstrated by men who work in blast furnaces and other places where they are subject to intense heat that wool is a better prevention against heat than any other substance.

It is far better that such undergarments be of pure wool, but for ordinary wear in housework they may be light in texture. Other clothing should be simply made and light in texture. Nothing is more burdensome than heavy clothing when the thermometer is at the nineties. The most comfortable foot-wear for a kitchen-worker is a low shoe, which allows the foot to move easily and be thoroughly ventilated. The reason for the many afflictions of the feet from which people suffer is largely due to the artificial ways of covering them and the lack of free ventilation and action. The hand, which is naturally left uncovered, suffers in no such way.

If the clothing is light and suitable for the weather and the house is shut up and ventilated at the proper times no one need suffer any great discomfort, even in the most sultry weather. The care of the house is an important matter. Most families have a summer kitchen, so that the heat of the cook stove does not reach in to the body of the house. Where no arrangement exists, some kind of summer stove, run by kerosene or gasoline, ought to be used. There are many kinds of oil stoves, all of which are open to objection on account of their tendency to smoke and to give an unpleasant odor to the food cooked over them. Gasoline stoves are not so objectionable for these two reasons, but they are more dangerous in the hands of a careless person.

There are also stoves run by patented fuel, some of them by charcoal, from which the injurious principle has been removed. Like an oil stove, they may be easily lighted and easily put out, so that they do not heat up the house. The most serious objection to these is that the work of removing the poisonous fumes of charcoal may not have always been performed successfully, and dangerous accidents have resulted from this cause. All things considered, the safest of these summer stoves seems to be the oil stove. Until that ideal time when we can have summer stoves in our houses run by electricity, we must put up with some of the disadvantages of the oil stove or use summer kitchens to obtain freedom from heat.

Wire fly-screens at the windows of the kitchens and wire screen-doors at the outer doors of the kitchen are well-nigh indespensable. They are not ornamental, however, and in other parts of the house many people prefer to substitute the pretty Japanese hangings of bamboo and beads, which make fully as successful screens from flies. One of the best methods of fighting flies is to keep all the premises in the immediate vicinity of the house scrupulously clean, and leave this excellent household scavenger no work to do. Let the garbage pail be an affair of galvanized iron with tight cover, and see that it is emptied every twenty-four hours and rinsed out and kept clean outside and in. Once a week it ought to be thoroughly scrubbed with boiling hot suds. Let there be nothing that will draw flies within or outside the house, and a great deal of this discomfort of hot weather will be done away with.

It is not wise to advocate the use of cold meats in summer, because they are more difficult to digest. The system is somewhat enervated and requires light food that is easily digested. Heavy meats, like roast beef, though cut in the most tempting slices, are much more difficult to digest when cold than when served hot in a rechauffe. Cold custards, ice creams and other iced puddings, on the contrary, are so light and delicate in nature that they ere easily digested; at the same time they are cooling and refreshing and far more wholesome than the national desert of pie.—New York Tribune.

The Magic Touch

OF

Hood's Sarsaparilla

You smile at the idea. But if you are a sufferer from

Dyspepsia

And Indigestion, try a bottle, and before you have taken half a dozen doses, you will involuntarily think, and no doubt exclaim,

"That Just Hits It!"

"That soothing effect is a magic touch!" Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates a natural, healthy desire for food, gives refreshing sleep, and in short, raises the health tone of the entire system. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S AND AGENT'S PROFITS.

$12 buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc., free. OXFORD MFG. CO.
338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST
A Secret Empire;
Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.
By Rev. Richard Horton.
Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.
Price, 60 cents.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,
AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

THE GUIDING HAND;

—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

-——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARROIN.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Love, the Supreme Gift:

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

The Perfected Life;

THE GREATEST NEED IN THE WORLD.

Both by Prof. Henry Drummond. Bound in chaste white vellum paper, each 20 cts.

These are not to be judged by the size, unless rubies are counted for the weight thereof. The first has been very largely circulated, the second is now only just published and deserves the same wide reading—both are gems such as are only found at rare intervals. If you have not read them, do so at once, you will be a better man or woman for the reading.

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back..... .50c.
Paper cover..... .30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

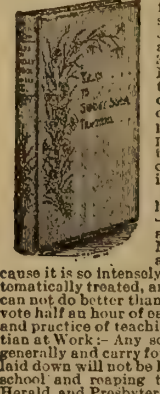
Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.
By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth..... .75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3 c.
The Lily "	" 3 "	Pure Words "	3 "
Light & L Scholar's	Qrly. 3 "	Light & L Inf Cl. wk.	4 "
" " Teacher's	" 5 "	" " Lesson Leaf	" 1½ "
Golden Treasures	1 "	L. & L. Primary Qly	4 "

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, & Sunshine, each	Pr. Yr. 25c	Teacher's Quarterly	Pr. Yr. 20c
The four to one address	" 75c	L. & L. Infant Class, weekly,	25c

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set..... 9.00

An Eden in England.	Life in Eagle's Nest.
Ned Franks.	White Bear's Den.
Sheer Off.	Fairy Spider's Web.
Braid of Chords.	Lake in the Woods.
Silver Keys.	Seven Perils Passed.
Grace Vernon.	Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set..... 2.10

Jessica's First Prayer.	Friends till Death.
No Place Like Home.	A Miserable Christmas
Under the Old Roof.	A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set..... 4 20

Claremont Tales.	A Wreath of Smoke.
Christian Conquests.	Pomegranates from
Tales Illustrative of Parables.	Punjab.
The Battle of Life.	Little Bullets from Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set..... 4.80

Cassy.	King's Servant.
Lost Gip.	Alone in London.
Max Kromer.	Little Meg's Children
Storm of Life	Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

BRAN AS FEED.

A writer in Hoard's Dairyman says: "My thirty-five cows have done very well this year, and are gradually crawling up towards the mark that distinguishes a good from a scrub dairyman. Five years ago the herd averaged about $28 worth of butter a year. Three years ago I added a milk route to butter-making; and in 1892 sold about $40 worth of milk, cream and butter from each cow and heifer, and in 1893 sold $50 worth from each animal. Five years ago I estimated it took one-fourth of our butter money to purchase bran. I find now that when I receive about $200 per month for milk and butter, I spend about $50 a month for bran. It used to be bran, $7; butter, $28; total, thirty cows, bran, $210; butter, $840 yearly. Now it is bran, $12.50; butter and milk per cow, $50; total for thirty cows, bran, $375; butter, etc., $1,500. Can it be that $5 or $6 more bran per cow has made a difference of $15 in each cow as a producer of butter alone? . . . . I intend culling out all cows that will not give me $60 in butter and milk yearly. I fed $100 worth of bran the past summer, and find at the end of 1893 that the cows gave me $332 more profit than in 1892, some of which I attribute to summer feeding of grain."

NOTES.

The cabbage worm will be with us as soon as the plants are large enough to furnish it with a good meal. We have used Persian insect powder for several years on these pests with perfect success.

Don't let the tent caterpillars get a hold in your orchard or along your hedges. They also infest wild cherry trees to a great extent. As soon as their web is noticed destroy it at once, for each one becomes a center from which thousands more are distributed.

King William, the largest horse in the world, being twenty-seven and one-half hands high and weighing 3,027 pounds, died lately at Cheston, Ind. He was owned by Mr. Westlake, who exhibited him during the World's Fair at Chicago. The big animal was insured for $1,000, but Mr. Westlake refused $10,000 for him in Chicago.

If you would make good butter to sell this hot weather, the cream must be cooled down to as near 50 deg. as possible as soon as separated, and kept there till churned. It will not do to let it get up to 70 deg. in the heat of the day and cool it down with icewater at night. Once it gets above 65 deg. its fine flavor is gone, not to return, no matter what care it has afterward.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Ayer's PILLS
Received
Highest Awards
AYER'S PRIZE MEDAL AT WORLD'S FAIR PILLS
AT THE
World's Fair
AS
AYER'S PRIZE MEDAL AT WORLD'S FAIR PILLS
THE BEST Family PHYSIC

AMERICAN HANDBOOK AND CITIZEN MANUAL.
BY
MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Ch

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT of the Holy Ghost,
BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

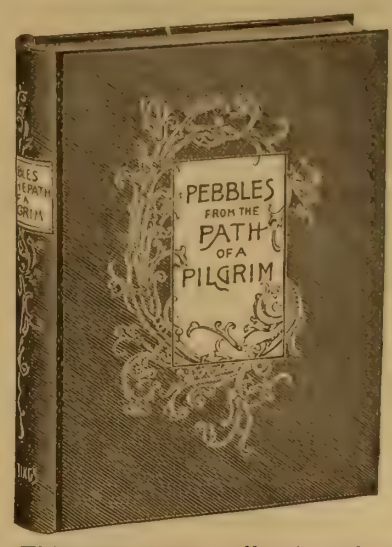
Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by perusing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polemical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.
—BY—
MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. KIMBALL,
Box 277. Newmarket. N. H.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S
—]-oo-[—
SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.
Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS
OF
FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trust worthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem"—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

From every section of the country come letters, resolutions and voluminous telegrams indorsing the attitude of the Administration on the strike, praising the President individually and assuring him of the hearty support of constituencies of all shades of politics and creeds. These expressions are not local, it is said, but extend to all parts of the country.

The House has concurred in the Senate amendments to the House bill for the admission of Utah on Thursday. This passes the bill and sends it to the President for his approval.

A resolution to investigate the strike was sent by the House by the Committee on Commerce.

The cost to the United States of putting down the railway strike in the West is estimated by government officials at fully $1,000,000. It may foot up more.

CHICAGO.

Just before noon Thursday P. J. Prendergast was hung in the county jail, Chicago, for the murder of Carter H. Harrison. The plea of insanity having broken down, and all efforts to stay sentence being unavailable, the sentence was executed promptly.

Two remarkable suicides occurred last week. P. C- Hanford, a prominent business man and brother of the teacher Hanford who was murdered by Alexander Sullivan some years ago, took his life without any sufficient reason being reported. Mr. Bischoff, formerly a celebrated singer and editor of the Black Diamond, suicided in a despondent fit.

THE STRIKE.

MONDAY.—President Cleveland's proclamation warning all good citizens to avoid crowds and scenes of trouble was issued.

Mob rule at Hammond, Ind., was broken only by U. S. troops firing on the mob. One was killed and many wounded. Much property had been destroyed.

Representatives of the labor unions of Chicago determined to strike on Tuesday.

A mob of foreign miners from Spring Valley, Ill., threw the whole country about into trepidation by marching to Ladd, looting stores and private residences and threatening an attack on Princeton and adjoining towns. Beer was free to the mob and drunken brawls were frequent.

TUESDAY:—Judge Grosscup charged the U. S. grand jury.

The attorney and vice-president of the Pullman company rejected the overture of a committee of aldermen and representives of the labor unions for a committee of inquiry into the causes of the strike.

Militia fired on a mob of miners at Westville, Ill., killing three, two of whom were spectators merely. Many others were injured. The mob fired first.

Mayor Pingree of Detroit wrote to mayors of fifty cities of the country. With few exceptions all were for arbitration, but the general voice was for the enforcement of law also.

E. V. Debs and three other general officers of the American Railway Union were arrested on a charge of conspiracy against the United States in interfering with interstate commerce, with the passage of the mails and with government officials.

Mails were moved without interruption in any direction for the first time since the beginning of the strike.

United States regulars, sent from Chicago to guard a mail train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, fired a volley upon the anarchist foreign mob which had been terrorizing the coal region about Spring Valley, Ill, for three days. Two were killed.

WEDNESDAY:—In an official statement the General Managers' Association of Chicago says the railways are handling the usual number of trains and that the strike is practically ended.

Three hundred and fifty regulars, with Gatling guns from San Francisco for Sacramento by boat, raised the blockade on the Southern Pacific.

Emissaries of the American Railway Union are at work in Indiana endeavoring to bring about a general strike of trades unionists,

An official bulletin was placarded notifying all Chicago Knights of Labor that the great strike is now on throughout this jurisdiction, the bulletin being put forth by District Master Workman Lindholm.

From every quarter reports come in that traffic is generally resumed, and the orders of Grand Master Sovereign of the K. L. are openly disobeyed.

THURSDAY:—Only 20,000 men are reported to have quit work under the order for a general strike in Chicago.

A train started from Sacramento for San Francisco with a guard, was derailed a few miles from Sacramento in consequence of the removal of fishplates and spikes by strikers which caused a spreading of the rails. Two soldiers and the engineer of the train were killed and three soldiers were wounded. Several strikers were arrested.

FRIDAY:—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, president, after a two days' session in Chicago, decided against the strike while expressing sympathy with the strikers, and voting Debs $1,000 to assist in his defense before the courts.

The Big Four fast express No. 7, west bound, was ditched at Fontenet, Ind. Both the firemen and engineer were instantly killed, and two baggagemen and and two mail clerks badly injured The accident was caused by riotous strikers.

A collision took place this morning between the regular troops and a crowd of strikers at Sacramento, Cal. This was the signal for a volley from the army guns and when the shooting had ended, two strikers were dead and six were badly hurt.

SATURDAY.—Several railroads have given notice that they will not employ A. R. U. men.

Judge Grosscup gave new instructions to the U. S. grand jury which will allow them to investigate the railway managers.

FOREIGN.

The passenger steamer Vladimir, bound from Sebastapool for Odessa, came into collision with an Italian steamer, Sunday night, on the western coast of the Crimea. The Vladimir was so badly injured that she sank. Some of the passengers were saved, but it is believed that nearly 100 were drowned.

Four hundred houses were destroyed by fire at Lovete, Hungary, Monday, Six persons perished, and a large number of families have been rendered destitute.

The Japanese government has chartered sixteen steamers belonging to the Yusen-Kaisha company, with the intention of landing 10,000 troops in Corea. Strong reinforcements will also be held in readiness in Japan. Japan has refused to withdraw her troops. War is regarded inevitable, and the Japanese government has forbidden the native press to make mention of events happening in Corea.

If you would have an abundance of dark, glossy hair, if you would have a clean scalp, free from dandruff and irritating humors, or if your hair is faded and gray, and you would have its natural color restored, use Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is unquestionably the best dressing.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	56 @	58¼
Winter No. 2	55⅛ @	56
Corn—No. 2	41⅝ @	42⅞
Oats—No. 2	38½ @	42
Rye—No. 2	45 @	47
Bran per ton	13 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@10	75
Butter, medium to best	11 @	17
Cheese	06 @	08¾
Beans	1 25 @	1	90
Eggs, fresh	09 @	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 25 @	5	00
Flax	1 30
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 00 @	9	25
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00 @	70	00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	55 @	65
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼ @	06⅛
Lumber—Common	15	50
Wool (unwashed)	7 @	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 10 @	4	85
Common to good	2 10 @	4	00
Hogs	3 09 @	5	05
Sheep	1 00 @	4	00

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	58⅜ @	69⅞
Corn No 2	47½ @	48
Oats	50 @	57½
Rye	52 @	55
Eggs	11 @	13
Butter	09½ @	17
Wool	19 @	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 40 @	4 75
Hogs	4 50	4 80

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
·DR·
PRICE'S
CREAM
BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf 1⅞c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅞c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.
LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

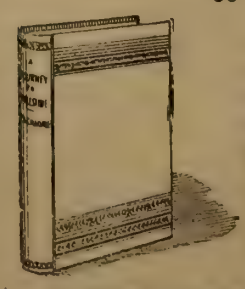
BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING
Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.
T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Songs for the Times.
FOURTH AND IMPROVED EDITION.
BY GEO. W. CLARK.
Author of the "Temperance Songster," "The Liberty Minstrel," "Free Soil Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," Harp of Freedom," etc.

This work comprises some 235 Elemental, Reformatory and Progressive Songs, Odes, Psalms, Hymns, etc., words and music, old and new, on a great variety of subjects, including Truth, Freedom, Temperance, Prohibition.
Likewise National, Loyal and Patriotic Songs. Also Miscellaneous, Social, Domestic and Hygienic; Songs adapted to the home circle, to private devotion and public worship, to national gatherings, mass meetings, and all humane movements for the good of mankind. It is printed on new electrotype plates, made from new type; the impressions are on nice white paper, and its pages are clear, bright and cheery, and the price very low for so costly a work.
Single copy, 30 cts; by mail, 35 cts; by the dozen, $3; by the hundred, $20.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

MY EXPERIENCES
WITH
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY A TRAVELER.
With a Key to Masonry Illustrated
—o-o—
A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is
Fifteen Cents,
but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A BOOKLET.
107 pages, 5x7 inches.
Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents
—o:o—
The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:
THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.
CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.
THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.
This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A Journey to Palestine
BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.
—oo—


Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI, No. 46 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,265.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure ist always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
This Week..... 8
Death of Mrs Hugunin. 8
The Sunset Club Discussion..... 8
Free Speech on Public Gronnds..... 8
The Latest from Rome on Freemasonry..... 8
Preaching by Suggestion..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Lodge against Lodge.... 1
The Strike as a Retribution..... 2
War and Prayer..... 2
In War Time (Poetry).. 2
SELECTED:
Social Regeneration..... 2
Secret Labor Unions.... 3
A Badge for Christians.. 3
Press Comment 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Address of Pres. C. A Blanchard..... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Law and Liberty; Not Down in the College Catalogue; Lodges Destroy Charity; Pith and Point... 5,6
LITERATURE..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
N C. A 7
REFORM NEWS:
Independence Day in Southwestern Oregon. 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS. 12
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16
MARKETS 16

Miss Ida Platt, a young colored woman of this city, had the honor of graduating from the Chicago College of Law this year with high rank in study. She is the first colored woman admitted to the bar in Illinois. The incident is significant and honorable, and suggests a better solution of the question that still agitates some good people than the wholesale transportation of the colored race to Liberia.

Does the Romanism of Syria differ from that in the United States? The Romish bishop of that country, it is reported, has pronounced a great curse on all who read or receive the sermons of Charles Spurgeon. So hated are they that priests have publicly burned all copies of the book they can find. It makes no difference that the fire was but a little one, and the material for rekindling it scarce; the proclamation reveals to us the temper of the unrestrained spirit of Rome.

The craze for badges, buttons, pins, set by the lodge, is becoming universal. The Christian Conservator replies to the proposal, that we have a badge for Christians, with a keen sarcasm. The suggestion deserves it, for it would be soon only a cover for hypocrisy. The Lord will send his messengers to attend to that matter in time; see Rev. 7: 7. The badge is one of the frailties of the Christian Endeavor movement, the real sign of a child of God our Saviour gives us: "Let your LIGHT SO SHINE before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

The Northwestern Christian Advocate comments on a report that sixty stand of arms were lately found in the basement of a Roman Catholic church at Kensington, adjoining Pullman. The advice of the Advocate is good; for the editor regrets that firearms should be found in a church of any kind, and hopes that some other place may always be had for an armory. But suppose the advice of the Saviour be followed, "My kingdom is not of this world, else would my servants fight;" or that of Paul, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal." Then there would be no armory needed, for there would be no arms, or brigades, or zouaves, or any other military organization with its titles and paraphernalia of demoniac war.

The regents of the State University of South Dakota have begun what we hope will be a popular feature in all similar institutions. They unanimously voted to begin a course in Bible literature. If such a course does not run off among the stumps and pitfalls of vain-glorious criticism it will lead to the greatest truths of time and eternity. Our State institutions are too largely mere secular schools run by politics rather than religion.

The case of private Cedarquist, of the 2d U. S. infantry, who was the other day found guilty of disobedience of orders and sentenced to two months' hard labor, will work a double good. Cedarquist was ordered out with his company for rifle practice on the Sabbath. He refused to obey on the ground of religious conviction. All honor to the young man for standing by the true colors; but he and all other young men who regard the Sabbath and its Lord ought to keep out of the army. That warning is one good; another is, that the discussion will help secure some better regulation in the army about the day of rest.

President Cleveland finds it difficult to select the commission of inquiry into the causes of the strike. Carroll D Wright, Commissioner of Labor, is chairman ex officio, and an eastern gentleman is already selected, but to find a third member in Illinois, who is unbiased, intelligent, and sufficiently well known to be acceptable to all parties, the President finds as great a task as Diogenes did when on the lookout for honesty. Mr. Wright believes the commission will have a difficult task to perform, but he does not look for a long drawn-out investigation. He thinks that the facts sought for could be obtained from few men and few documents.

It was a bold challenge made a few years since by the "Nun of Kenmare" in Our Day. She claimed that so great a proportion of the drinking population of America were members of the Romanist church, and so many of that faith were liquor-sellers that it was easily in the power of its hierarchy to forbid the whole business and close it up generally if they pleased. God seems to be moving to this end. Bishop Watterson of Columbus, Ohio, lately issued the order: "I hereby withdraw my approbation from any and every society in this diocese that has a liquor-dealer or saloon-keeper at its head or anywhere among its officers, and I suspend every such society itself from the rank and privileges as a Catholic society until it ceases to be so officered." An appeal was taken to the legate Satolli, who sustains the Columbus bishop. This makes law for one diocese. If the example is followed in others, the edict is one of the most important ever issued to the Roman Catholics of this country.

At the very first convention of the Debs Railway Union in this city, it was voted to refuse membership to any colored man!—this order which is so valiant in the war for "freedom and equal rights." But as it is a secret society it must follow the lodge fashion and draw the line of membership upon a dark skin. The colored men of Chicago have struck back and organized an anti-strike society. They claim that there are thousands of colored men who are capable, intelligent and willing. They will put employers in communication with these workmen, and if the door of labor unions is to be shut in their faces, it must not be thought ill of them if they enter an open one to work close by. The Northwestern Christian Advocate pays the Negro this encomium:

"The Negro has noble traits of character. He is not naturally a hoodlum, or villian, or cutthroat, or disturber. When awakened he is a human cyclone, as San Domingo proves. He can become a scholar, a millionaire, a lawmaker, a hero, and a leader among men. He is the mechanic of the South, and he certainly knows his value to his employers. He is a true native-born American, and is among the very best representatives of that aristocracy. He believes in law, and he prefers good order In fact, he has specifically and with much dignity refused to revolt with the army of white men whose cessation from work has recently paralyzed the wheels of American commerce.

The strike has generally subsided. Even at Pullman the men began to come back to work last Wednesday, led by a large body of industrious Hollanders, who have no use for the secret unions anyhow. Thursday the U. S. troops were all removed to Fort Sheridan, twenty miles north of the city. Debs and his lieutenants from the county jail still make their declarations, with the confidence of men who have lost their wits. They say the strikers will soon be victorious, that railways can move no frieght, etc. Their trial is set for this week, beginning Monday. At its end all good citizens hope they will have no farther use for boasting. Their wild and reckless effort has cost the country terribly. General Miles reported some days ago that from July 7 to 12, thirty-three persons were killed or injured, 784 cars and locomotives were burned or wrecked, and 122 cars were pushed over and destroyed. On July 7 twenty-six men were killed or injured, and 690 cars or locomotives were turned, destroyed, or rendered useless. On that day only nine roads ran mail and passenger trains. The great financial loss cannot well be estimated; but it will soon be distributed through the country to add no inconsiderable sum to the gift of "hard times."

LODGE AGAINST LODGE.

A LESSON FROM THE STRIKE.

BY REV. M A. GAULT.

What Henry Waterson says in a recent issue of his paper, the Louisville Courier Journal, in reference to the strike, is of importance. He says:

"The issue which this day is offered the country is so simple that a child may understand it. It is this: Shall law and order prevail, or shall both be surrendered to the mob? Shall it be a government of the United States, or a government of the secret societies?"

These words, coming from the leading authority in the Democratic party, and a prominent politician, are deeply significant. During the exciting days of the strike, we heard more than one thinking man express similar sentiments. Men see that without secret organizations strikes would be impossible; that the government, in allowing and chartering a network of secret organizations, whose secrets defy inspection, has evoked a spirit and power which already defy control and threaten the overthrow of the government. The indications are that secret labor organizations on one hand, and secret capital organizations on the other, will, like potsherds, come in collision, and dash each other to pieces.

The fact is that capital is secretly organized as well as labor. Chauncey M. Depew once said: "Fifty men in these United States have it in their power, by reason of the wealth they control, to come together within twenty-four hours and arrive at an understanding by which every wheel of trade can be blocked and every electric key struck dumb. Those fifty men can control the circulation of the currency and create a panic whenever they will."

An experience of years in railroad travel impressed me that there were few conductors who were not high up in Masonry. And the more you find this the case with railroad officials the nearer you get to their headquarters. Freemasonry is the main capitalistic secret organization, and there is every indication that it will soon be shivered by the secret labor organizations.

As a rule we find no class of men so bitter in denouncing the labor organizations as Freemasons and Odd-fellows. There is a strong antagonism arising between them. One class of secret orders are standing for capital and the other for labor. The conflict is growing more intense, and as once in France, it is likely to lead to a bloody revolution. The more I read the history of the French Revolution, the more I see it as an uprising of the masses against an oppressive moneyed aristocracy. And we have ample proof that the leaders of those revolutionists were Freemasons. Mirabeau, Condorcet, Rouchefoucald and others were leading officers of the Masonic lodges of that day.

Bloomington, Ind.

THE STRIKE AS A RETRIBUTION.

BY MRS. A. E. KELLOGG.

"Vengeance is mine. I will repay, saith the Lord." Therefore we are forbidden to avenge ourselves.

How and when does God avenge? The answer to this question he reserves, except as the reply comes to us in his Word and by his providence. Human organizations, whether of governments or churches (denominational), corporations, associations, lodges or unions, by whatever bond they may be held together, are temporal in their benefits and injuries, in their gains and their losses. Therefore as no immortality inheres in any of these their rewards and punishments must be temporal.

Success in the line in which any or all of these have been organized is their reward for honestly conducting their affairs in the relation which they sustain to God and man. And as God is supreme, and no power in heaven, earth or hell has the right to set aside his law, their retribution for transgression must come in this world; and the fact that corporations have no souls to save does not justify any evasion of the law of God; for he is God over all and blessed forever.

He has commanded: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." Why? Because the Lord has hallowed that day and set it apart for himself. Therefore every transgression or disobedience of this law will receive a just recompense of reward in this world or in the world to come, whether it be by an organization or an individual. And where no future life is possible, retribution must be expected here.

What has God taught us by his providence? An awful lesson in the history of his ancient covenant people. He said unto them: My Sabbaths ye shall keep. One day in seven; one year in seven; and one year in seven sevens, which was to be a jubilee. The first, that man and beast might rest and be refreshed, and that man might worship; the second, that the land might rest and be renewed; and the third, that the laws of inheritance and the rights of property should be adjusted that every one might be secure in his possessions. As long as the people were true, they prospered and grew strong and rich and great: but when they became covetous, and grudged the land its Sabbath, and went into idolatry and disobedience, after long patience the Lord said: It is enough! Then he gave them up. They were broken up as a nation. Their glorious temple was destroyed, and those that survived the war and the seige of their holy city were taken captive to Babylon.

Did God give a reason? Yes! that the land might enjoy its Sabbaths! Seventy years was given as the limit, seventy years of Sabbaths. Did their covetousness pay? "Vengeance is mine. I will repay, saith the Lord."

Has God forgotten his law as binding now as when it was first instituted? Has he forgotten the world? No! but the world has forgotten him, and lives and plans as if there were no God; and men have gone on inventing and contriving means by which to amass wealth regardless of him who alone can give the power and skill to get wealth. They have built railroads, and organized companies to carry out their grand inventions, until their wealth and their influence has grown to enormous proportions. And to accomplish this they have set at naught God's law of the Sabbath day, thus teaching to their employes, by their disregard to the divine law, to set at defiance human laws; and God, by allowing these to work out their own blind will, has taken from the railroads the unlawful Sabbath gains. Palestine rested seventy years for her stolen Sabbaths. How long will it take to exact from the railroads their stolen Sabbaths?

But while human organizations must meet their rewards and punishments in this world, those who own and direct them must each answer for themselves before the judgment seat of Christ. Some men's sins go beforehand to judgment, and some they follow after.

Then let men beware; let corporations beware; and let nations beware: for the Lord our God is a jealous God, and all power in heaven and on earth are his!

Does capital remember this? and has labor forgotten it? Does it forget when it chooses the Lord's day for its meetings; when its assemblies plan how they can best thwart and injure capital, —though it be the means by which they live; and although each workingman would doubtless be a money king if he could! And when God exacts his stolen Sabbaths from labor, what can labor do? What but sit still and be hungry.

"God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." If he sows the wind he will surely reap the whirlwind; and the harvest comes by and by.

Denver, Colo., July 12, 1894.

WAR AND PRAYER.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The Ram's Horn is usually soundly evangelical and full of pithy and pungent paragraphs, very stimulating and healthful to spiritual life and growth. But in a recent article on whether "prayer pays," it quite overshoots the mark.

It tells a story of two ships, American and British, that were approaching each other for deadly conflict. Each was fully prepared for action. Even the decks were strewn with sawdust to take up the blood that was soon to flow. The captain of the American vessel, the weaker of the two, called all hands to unite in prayer. He continued praying,—no one daring to move without orders, until a broadside from the other ship had crashed through the rigging, and they were about to receive a second fire, when he said "Amen," and ordered to fire. The result, we are told, was a victory to the American ship.

It is a rather pretty story, and possibly it is true. If such an event took place it was in the war of 1812–14, a war in which no principle was involved on either side, and which was substantially a duel between two nations, in which both were about equally injured. There is no reason to doubt that in this particular fight the men on either side were equally honest and fair-minded. There is no reason to think that they had any enmity towards each other, and that if they had not been "set on," were any more disposed to kill each other than two honest curs that boys set on to fight for their amusement The wrong-doing that led to the war was not to be charged on those who did the fighting, but rather on those who were sure to escape all of its horrors.

Now, that a just and holy God could be a partisan in such a conflict, is a self-contradiction. That the blessed Saviour could be invoked, and aid asked in his name, to help kill their antagonists, is to imagine a very different Saviour from the one described in the New Testament.

It is probable that religious enthusiasm often nerves the arm and heart in the day of battle. This was probably the secret of the success of Cromwell's Ironsides; but it by no means follows that God approved of the slaughtering their fellowmen, though they might think he did. Doubtless David wrote with great sincerity, "Blessed be the Lord my strength, that teacheth my hands to war and my fingers to fight" (Psalms 144: 1),—but since then there has been an immense progress and development in the revelation of God's will to men.

Christ gave the law of love to be of perpetual obligation both to men and to nations; and while the law of love requires the suppression and punishment of crime, it forbids international war. We are nowhere admonished in the New Testament to pray for help to kill our enemies, much less those who are as well intentioned as ourselves, but we are told "to do good unto them that hate us and pray for those that despitefully use us." There is nowhere, either in the teachings or the example of Christ and his apostles, nor in the history of the church for three hundred years, any warrant for international war or for resistance to constituted authorities, except by purely moral influence. "The God of battles" is purely a heathen conception. Let not the Ram's Horn teach that such is our Lord.

Oberlin, O.

IN WAR TIME.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

Red were the eyes with weeping
That sad and dreary day,
When through the mist and driving rain
The armies marched away.
Red was the eye of the engine
That tore through the darkening night;
And red were the eyes of the window-panes
Where gleamed the beckoning light.
Red was the sun as it shone that morn
Where the shadows swiftly pass,
And red was the blood of the soldier-boy
As it crimsoned the springing grass.

White was the snow on the mountains
Where it gleamed in its stillness afar;
And white were the faces that vainly watched
For news from the seat of war.
White as snow were the shelter-tents
In the camps of the soldier-men
And white was the missive the maiden read
From her soldier-lover's pen.
White faces of boys in blue and gray
Lay silent upon the sod;
While the souls that were white and the souls that were stained Went up to the soldier's God.

Blue were the eyes that slept in death
When the guns were hushed that day;
And blue were the lips that breathed a prayer
By the river far away.
Hands blue with cold clutched the banner
That waved on the tented field;
And blue was the garb that the soldier wore
As he fell 'neath his warrior-shield
The cold blue skies looked darkly down
On the dead, once brave and true,
While along the line men cheered and cried
"Hurrah! for the Red, White and Blue."

Steamburgh, N. Y.

SOCIAL REGENERATION.

(Rev. Joel Swartz, D.D., in the Lutheran Evangelist.)

We have long and much emphasized the need of individual regeneration, but we need now also to call attention to the importance of social regeneration. By the latter we mean such an infusion of the Spirit of Christ into social organization as will make it conform to the principles of Christianity. In no age of the world have there been such compact and extended combinations of men in societies of various kinds as to-day. Orders, brotherhoods, leagues, unions, almost endless in number and variety, meet us everywhere. They exist in the trades, in the professions, in politics, in the church, everywhere where there is a similarity of pursuit or a community of interest. Is it a fad, a craze of organizations? Doubtless there is much of fancy and of folly in many of the leagues and societies now set afloat to whirl their fantastic course for awhile and then disappear and give way to something else. But many of the powerful and widespread organizations of men are called forth and maintained by the modern modes of life and are indeed made necessary by the conditions created through the introduction of revolutionary inventions and discoveries.

The inventive brain has relieved the tired hand of much of its craft and made iron and steel and steam and light and electricity do its former work. Nerves that never tire or tremble do with infinite precision and patience the work laid upon the hand. Consequently the hands that once wrought and were filled with the rewards of individual skill are now idle and empty.

The tailor's needle is rusty from inaction, for the sewing-machine has superceded its use. The painter has laid aside his brush, for photography has taught the sun to paint "the human face divine." The blacksmith's anvil, the carpenter's bench, the shoemaker's last are becoming reminiscences and will ere long be only themes of poetry, recalling the quiet simplicity of a ruder age.

What is the result of all this? The machine has become a magnet and men are arranging themselves around it into leagues and unions to utilize its wonderful creations and protect themselves from competition. In these organizations the individual is minimized and almost lost sight of, and the mass, the aggregate, has taken his place and become a giant, a Briareus with a hundred hands, an Argus with a hundred eyes. These monster giants court or fight each other—more often the latter—as dictated by greed or guile. So we have in history the fancies of mythology realized—"the war of the giants." It is now the war of capital with labor, the gigantic pool killing off the individual competitor, the trust monopolizing all the trade and leaving no standing room for private enterprise. That we are fast coming to this, if we are not already there, is made patent by daily observation and experience. The last thing has been a strike of the miners, which extended all over and beyond our Union and in its effects partially paralyzed every industry and wrought for all the people a widespread distress. The individual miner was nothing. He had to stop or work as ordered by the giant union. The like is true of other pursuits.

Another result arises out of this which seems its opposite, but which, in fact, is a part of it. It is the individualizing of industry. The great combinations divide labors into many minute parts and each combination largely monopolizes that part and so destroys competition. Formerly, one hand made the whole of any artificial product. Now the product is divided and its parts distributed among many. I have just visited in this city the largest lamp chimney manufactory in the world. The company does not make lamps, only the glass tops; somebody else must make the globe, burners, wicks, etc. These chimneys are shipped around the world and skillful and brave must be the competitor who would enter the lists for a race with this trade and its profits. The same is true of other great industries. The result is gigantic firms and the absorption and destruction of individual competition. The beneficent possibilities of these great modern giants for good are quite manifest. For perfection and cheapness of product, and consequently universal diffusion of comfort and happiness, their power is as great as their combinations are strong. The world owes much to the organization of labor and capital and skill. But guided by greed and selfishness, these giant combinations are capable of a tyranny which no despotism can rival or resist. Hence the need of regeneration. They wield a power which, if not permeated and directed by Christian principle, makes their contemplation formidable and veils the future with gloom and dire forebodings. Nothing can save the individual from being crushed, and indeed annihilated in the grasp of the modern combine, unless it be pervaded and tempered by the "meekness and gentleness of Christ."

THE SECRET LABOR UNIONS.

THEIR EFFECT ON WORKINGMEN IN GENERAL.

(H. F. Henry, Jr., in the Social Economist.)

Let us leave out of the question for the present the rights of the employer, and look at the working of the system of organization among the laborers themselves. We are told that there are one million of men in the United States belonging to some labor organization and that there are seven millions who do not. It will well repay the unprejudiced investigator to examine into the relations existing between these two classes. What is the course pursued by the union man toward his non-union brother? It is sufficient to say that the military and other armed force employed at the scene of strikes is as much needed to protect the lives of the non-union men as it is to prevent the destruction of property. Will it be asserted that the seven millions of non-union laborers have no rights which the one million union men are bound to recognize? Again, it is a fact well known to those who have paid attention to the subject, that many of the members of labor unions have been forced into joining them, because a refusal to do so would result in ceaseless annoyances and acts of petty spite on the part of their companions that would make life intolerable, to say nothing of the social ostracism to which they would be subjected.

The reader may here exclaim: After all you have said, you have not shown that the laborer has not the right to organize. It is true that acts of violence and lawlessness have been committed on almost every occasion where there was a strike of sufficient proportions—deeds done by men heated with passion, but when the workingman becomes better acquainted with his duties to the community at large and with his own true interests these objectionable features will disappear. When they do become acquainted with such duties and observe them, the solution of the question will have been reached. Let me say that it is my belief, based upon considerable observation, that the employer does not care a picayune about the abstract right of the laborer to organize; what he cares for are the results which almost inevitably arise therefrom. Whatever the cause may be, the results are there, and those results he is obliged to meet with the best remedies he has at command. If the laborer could organize for his own intellectual and material advancement, there is no one who would be more willing to encourage such unions than the average American employer. This has been shown by his attitude toward the movement when it was first started, when in many cases it received his cordial support.

It is safe to say that there is not a single member of a labor union possessing ordinary intelligence who would consider it of any use whatever in gaining a point with his employer to leave his service quietly, individually or in company with others, and seek work somewhere else. It is his belief in his ability, in conjunction with his companions, to prevent other men taking his place that impels him to leave; and this he knows cannot be done without violence; therefore, the very existence of the institution of strikes is founded upon lawlessness.

A BADGE FOR CHRISTIANS.

In these days of cliques and clans and organizations, wearing badges by which they may be recognized of the world, it is not strange that one of our exchanges should suggest the propriety of Christians everywhere adopting a badge by which they might be distinguished from the world. Indeed, something of the kind has become almost, if not quite, a necessity in our day. Otherwise how are Christians to be known? Of course, they could lay off their badge when they went into the lodge or other place, or company, or meeting, where Christ is excluded, but it would be a good thing to wear on Sunday at church, or at Sunday-school, Y. M. C. A., Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and other conventions, held in the name of Christianity, and even, sometime at the prayer and class-meeting, that they might, in some way, bear testimony for Christ, and be recognized as Christians, for it is all important, sometimes, to be recognized; and how shall they be recognized unless they wear a badge? And then, of course, it would facilitate the work of getting people into the church. The only condition necessary then would be for a person to agree to wear the badge, and the preacher could be provided with them and go to a person anywhere in the congregation, or at his home, or his place of business, or on the streets and pin one on; whereas, now, they must come forward before the whole congregation to the anxious seat, or rather to the applicant's seat, or rise in the congregation, or, at least, hold up the hand to become a Christian, and thus expose themselves to all present. We are of the opinion that many more persons would join the church and, of course, become Christians thereby, if the badge plan should be adopted. And then, it would, in all probability, by and by, do away with testimony meetings entirely, which of course you know are behind the time and no longer necessary "in a day of advanced ideas and expanding measures;" for why continue them when we could testify just as well by a badge? and you know it is much easier to act a lie than to tell it in words. By all means let us have the badge that the world may know how many Christians there are in our day. We could give many more reasons why we should have it, but we deem the above sufficient to convince even the old fogies that it is just what ought to be done.—Christian Conservator.

PRESS COMMENT.

In December, 1861, Abraham Lincoln sent to Congress a message in which he says: "There is one point, with its connections, to which I ask brief attention. It is the effort to place capital on an equal footing with, if not above, labor in the structure of our government. Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the higher consideration. In my present position I could hardly be justified were I to omit raising a warning voice against this approach of returning despotism. Monarchism itself is sometimes hinted at as possible refuge from the power of the people."

Organized tramps are a more expensive luxury than even the unorganized class. The Attorney-General has asked Congress to add $75,000 to a deficiency appropriation for the Department of Justice, this sum being estimated as necessary to pay the expenses of marshals and other officers in arresting and punishing the commonweal thieves who stole the trains of roads under government jurisdiction. And what a miserable farce this whole Coxey tramping business is and has been! It was all supremely silly, and much of it entirely lawless.—Evangelical Messenger.

When circumstances are duly weighed the strength and soundness of business in this country during the last two weeks are amazing. With the second city in the country reported in the hands of a lawless and murderous mob; with railway traffic almost entirely stopped over the vast area between Toledo and the Pacific; with presidential proclamations declaring the existence of an insurrection, and the passionate answer ordering half a million men to drop work, with a prolonged strike of coal miners not fully ended in many States, and with differences between the House and Senate on the tariff question so wide that duties affecting mining and manufactures cannot be anticipated, industries and trade have nevertheless gone on with sublime confidence that the people and their government would soon restore order.

The great miners' strike is ended, and better times are expected among all the classes affected by it. The folly of this method of solving difficulties between employers and employes is clearly illustrated by this strike. The loss to the strikers is put down at $12,500,000. The loss to the mine owners, consumers, and transportation companies is $7,500,000. A recent miners' strike in England cost all parties $175,000,000. In both these cases the difficulties were finally settled by arbitration. In our judgment there should be no such strife between labor and capital. If our industries were properly organized and operated these difficulties would not arise. Labor and capital are two partners in the world's business operations. It is destructive of the interests of both for such strife to exist. But when differences do arise, arbitration is the proper method of settlement.—Christian Reformer.

Judge Colt of the United States Court has just rendered a decision that a Japanese cannot constitutionally be naturalized as a citizen of the United States. His decision is certainly correct in law. But what a shame to our professions of freedom and doctrine of equal rights that a cultivated Japanese or Chinaman, who has lived in this country fifteen years and is in every way capable of exercising intelligently the rights of a citizen, should be debarred of the privilege simply because he is not "white" or "black!" In 1869 Charles Sumner tried to have this feature of our naturalization laws changed, and we wish he were alive and in the Senate to-day that we might have a few more blows of his "gigantic morality.—Advocate of Peace.

We must perpetuate the Wesleyan Methodist church to give to the world the holiness which our Lord taught, which is grandly promoted by all reasonable and honorable attacks upon sin wherever found. We cannot fellowship as a Christian any man who bows down to Baal's altars in a Masonic lodge. No man can be a true follower of Jesus Christ who rests under the yoke of oaths binding him to submit to murder or to commit murder. Yet we are not infrequently asked to bid God-speed to so-called holiness work carried on by affiliating Freemasons. Do we do it? Never.—Wesleyan Methodist.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

THE SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

ADDRESS OF PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

[In introducing the first speaker, the chairman, Mr. W. W. Catlin, remarked:]

This topic that you are to have the pleasure of discussing, and that I am to be privileged to hear you discuss, ought arouse a great deal of interest. It seems to me it is one of those topics that might fit the illustration of the Irish orator who said, "There is not a man, woman or child in this vast audience, who has reached the age of fifty years, that has not felt the force of this great question thundering through his mind for centuries."

It is something that we have to deal with every day. Every daily paper tells us something about it. I was reminded of the boy whose father asked him what the triple alliance was. "Well," he said, "it depends on what school you go to. In the public school they say it is Germany, Italy and Austria, but in the Sunday-school they say it is the world, the flesh and the devil." It struck me to-night that the triple alliance, with the accent on the lie, here is Masonry, the A. P. A. and politics.

I am going to try to be fair in this matter. I want you to admit that. I don't want you to think I am stealing your time. I will try to be perfectly just. I am like the man who was found by a policeman one evening investigating a building somewhat closely. "What are you doing?" asked the policeman. "Nothing," replied the man. "I am thinking of opening a jewelry store here, and I thought I would look it over," and so he was allowed to remain. The next morning when it was reported that the jewelry store had been robbed, the policeman scratched his head, and finally said, "Well, that man may be a thafe, but he's no liar."

Now, give me credit for not stealing your time. I have a watch that may not agree with yours. It is somewhat peculiar. It is a little like the farmer's old clock that struck two when the hands pointed twenty minutes past four. A friend asked the owner why he kept such an old thing as that. He replied, "I wouldn't sell that for anything, for I am the only man in the world that understands that clock. When it points twenty minutes past four and strikes two, I know it is half-past eleven."

I have the watch, and when the gavel falls you will know that time is up, and you will understand if there is any mistake it is in your watch.

Now, gentleman, I have the pleasure of introducing, as the first speaker of the eveniug, President Charles A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT C. A. BLANCHARD.

I like the Sunset Club, gentlemen, because it is a free parliament where every man may say what he pleases, and listen to all the rest when they say what they please; and with the fear of this watch before my eyes I have written the few words I shall say in opening this discussion, and with your permission will read rather than speak.

This is the land of secret societies. In pagan countries the abject poverty of the people, if nothing else, would prevent anything like our lodge system. In Europe the same consideration acts as a limiting force on fraternities. Lodges cannot flourish among men who earn from fifty to one hundred dollars per year. Make the wage fifty to one hundred and fifty per month and they start into life. Aristocratic institutions also tend to repress the secret society instinct in men. Where political position is determined largely by birth and property one strong impulse toward organization is absent. Lodges are diminished as other combinations are by this fact. Men love power, and secret agreements help them to secure and retain it. Of course, power frequently carries with it the opportunity to obtain wealth at the expense of taxpayers, and this also is a stimulus to the lodge movement. The fact that our judiciary are elective and that men who vote are to come before courts as suitors or criminals tends to the same end. The wages of the employed, the democratic character of our government, the immense sums raised by taxation, the fact that those who handle these taxes can secure large properties without the risks or labors of business enterprises, and the fact that a grip or sign may be more helpful in a civil or criminal case than the argument of an attorney, these are some of the reasons why our country is overrun with lodges as is no other in the world.

THREE LEADING LODGES,

the Masons, Odd-fellows and Knights of Pythias, claim at this time about two millions of members in the United States. There are scores of other secret societies enrolling hundreds of thousands of members, and the latest born of these orders, the American Protective Association, has already, if newspaper report may be trusted, as many adherents as the three older organizations put together. The ostensible purposes for which they exist vary as do their names and regalias. Some are said to exist for social ends, some for insurance, some for relief, some to extend the power of the Romish religion, some to repress it, some to promote temperance, and others to inculcate patriotism.

Now, what is our question?

It is not respecting the character of the individuals making up these orders. All reasonably well-informed persons know that there are good men and bad in varying proportions in each of them. Nor is our inquiry whether some incidental good results from these lodges. Good, in some measure, to some one, results from all things, even fires, famines, and pestilences. Gamblers are good to themselves, saloon-keepers set out free lunches, and boys feed fat worms to hungry fish. Nor do we this evening inquire as to the religious character of the altars, chaplains, prayers and lectures of these orders; whether they be pagan or Christian we do not now ask. Our sole desire is to learn, if we can, how secret societies affect the political life of our nation, of the world.

In answer, I remark first, that secret societies are in politics. Whether their influence be good or evil they certainly have an effect on the political life of our nation. This is admitted by some orders like the American Protective Association and the Sons of America; it is denied by others like the Jesuits and the Freemasons; but it is true of all. We have all seen in the public press the statement that Mayor Hopkins was waging in the City Hall. The list of the decapitated officials, with the number of degrees each had taken, was repeatedly published. How did it happen that high Masons filled all those offices? And how does it occur that Freemasonry, having only about one voter in twenty throughout the country, has from one-half to nine-tenths the salaried offices in city, county, state and nation? It is because the lodge is in politics, and because it has its candidates in both parties, so that whichever wins, the order, is in a position of power. Years ago a Masonic orator, speaking in eulogy of his order, exclaimed:

WAR ON THE MASONS

"What is Masonry now? It is powerful. It comprises men of all ranks, wealth, office, talent, in power and out of power, and in almost every place where power is of importance. They are distributed, too, with means of knowing each other, and means of keeping secret, and the means of co-operating, in the desk, in the legislative hall, on the bench, in every gathering of business, in every party of pleasure, in every enterprise of government, in every domestic circle, in peace and in war, among enemies and friends, in one place as well as in another. So powerful indeed is it at this time that it fears nothing from violence, either public or private, for it has every means to learn it in season to counteract, defeat and punish."

Of course, this is partially bombast, but there is an element of truth in it. Acting in secret, its very members largely unknown, an order like the Jesuits or the Masons can accomplish purposes which would be entirely beyond its power if it was an open organization. Disraeli, speaking on this same subject, said in one of his addresses:

"In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination and, if necesseary, can produce a massacre."

In addition to these orders, which, while denying political ends, have been for years securing political positions for their members, and the use of public funds for themselves and their friends, we have now large secret associations which profess and practice what the others practice and deny. Men are uniting in lodges for the avowed purpose of carrying elections. They say that the Romish church has secretly monopolized official stations, and that now they will endeavor to reverse all this and obtain the offices for those who are not under the dominion of the Pope. The contests of these two sets of secret orders, the Romish and Protestant, have already disturbed the peace of communities, produced bloodshed and threatened widespread hostilities. It is evident that secret societies are in politics, and have been, but should they be?

SECRET SOCIETIES SHOULD NOT BE IN POLITICS

because they will inevitably deteriorate the civil service. Men should be selected to administer public affairs because of their integrity and competence. The direction given to Moses three thousand years ago should still be the rule: "Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness." This can never be the rule where secret lodges are influential in determining the course of political events. "Able men" do not naturally tend to lodges. The strong merchants, railway men, statesmen and students do not have taste or time for the rigmarole of initiations. They do not enjoy the feather and sword business of lodges. If such men get into secret societies because they approve of their professed ends they are not often found in their meetings, or in the processions which plod along the streets on St. Patrick's day, or in the Knight Templar crowd that goes to church—once a year. On the other hand, weak men who feel the need of secret assistance in order to secure positions to which their abilities would not entitle them naturally gravitate to such organizations. Of course, covetous men, who like office for its pecuniary rewards and who have no thought of their obligations to society, would also hail with delight an association which would help them to a place at the trough.

Men of this stamp have leisure to commit to memory the rituals of lodges; they are greatly pleased to be called Worshipful, Noble, Grand, Puissant, Sir Knight, Eminent Commander, etc.; they enjoy the hats, and feathers, and sashes, and aprons, and swords, and to see the candidates scared when required to jump on the India rubber spikes, to play Hiram Abiff, or face the skeleton. Men of this latter sort also are more likely to be popular in a secret order than self-reliant men who have convictions and live up to them.

THE DR CRONIN END

of a secret society is never so strong as the triangle end. If Dr. Cronin has not sense enough to wink at stealing he will be murdered, slandered, and then somebody will swear that he undressed and put his clothes in a catch basin, went to another catch basin, fell in head first, pulled the cover on with his toes, and died of kidney trouble as he lay head down in the basin. The men at the other end will hold the offices, draw the salaries, and be unable to find their brethren who take such singular ways to get out of the world.

(Continued next week)

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Our great error.—The Sunday law in Cambridge.—Home missionary work.—Egyptian cotton.—The A. P. A.—Some of Boston's old buildings.

"Our great error as a people is that we put an idolatrous trust in our free institutions." This is what Dr. Channing said fifty years ago, and today could he see how our whole political and social fabric is threatened, he would rewrite this sentence, except to make it more emphatic. We may put the legend, "In God we trust," upon our coin, but the stamp of the mint is not always the stamp of truth. As a nation our trust is in gods of our own making, and woefully have they betrayed us. "What shall be gained by national peace?" asks this seer in words that are like a prophecy of the troubled era now upon us, "if men, instead of meeting on the field of battle, wage with one another the more inglorious strife of dishonest and rapacious traffic?" What indeed!

There is plenty of patriotism among our foreign-born population. It only needs to be wisely directed and intelligently applied. Here is an extract from the composition of a Russian Jewish boy written just after a visit to Lexington:—"I shall always regret that I was not born in America, where they have liberty, but if ever my new country needs my services in the field I shall be ready to show them my gun as the patriots did at Lexington." It is to be hoped that the teachers of this sturdy little "adopted citizen" will be wise enough to instill into his mind the true principles for which they fought, and teach him that what his country now needs is not bullets but ballots,—righteous votes and intelligent voters.

A result of the recent labor troubles has been an increased demand for recruits for the army, but strange to say, no increase of applicants; and out of those who apply few are received, in proportion to the number rejected, for falling short of the physical standard required. At the army recruiting office during the month of June only seven out of 113 were accepted, and during May only two out of 121. This may be accounted for partly by the fact that the applicants come mainly from a class whose environments and general mode of life are unfavorable to the highest physical development. That the strikes and the general business depression has not increased the number of applicants show that a thirst for military glory is not one of our national weaknesses.

The Sunday law is being enforced in Cambridge, and the druggists in revenge have closed their stores entirely on that day, not opening even for the sale of medicine. But if it would really be "better for men and worse for the fishes" if all our drugs were thrown into the sea, as Dr. Holmes once asserted, the citizens of Cambridge are no losers by this action.

The Ruggles St. church with its pastor, Rev. E. D. Burr, is doing a great deal of individual volunteer work to ameliorate the condition of the poorer classes during the hot months. Ladies of the congregation offer to give a few hours of their time on some particular day. If some poor mother with her children needs an outing one of these volunteer workers is deputed to the house, which she tidies up, even preparing the supper for the men who are out working that there may be no drawback to her pleasure. Loaves of bread may not turn to roses in the aprons of these modern St. Elizabeths but the results of such practical ministry are as beautiful and blessed as any miracle wrought by medieval saints. The Home for invalid children on an island in Salem Harbor is another blessed charity. It would be strange if the children favored with sound limbs and healthy bodies did not sometimes envy their less fortunate companions whose physical infirmities give them admittance to these gates of Paradise. One poor little fellow applied at the city office, but as he showed no marks of disease or general debility there was some hesitancy in admitting him as a proper applicant. "What is the trouble?" he was asked. For a moment he was somewhat nonplussed to think of the name of some disease to which he might lay claim. Then as a sudden inspiration came to him he brightened up and answered triumphantly: "I am sun-burned."

The factories of New England are consuming many bales of Egyptian cotton, approximately valued at nearly $300,000 000. Its use by the spindles of Lowell, Lawrence and Manchester was unknown ten years ago, and in ante-bellum times the very idea would have been scouted as wildly chimerical, but to this cotton grown in the valley of the Nile we owe our smooth finished sewing threads, and the ever popular sateen that at 12 cents a yard almost rivals silk in its lustrous softness. It is finer and with a longer staple than the kind grown in the United States. King Cotton is a poor dethroned sovereign to-day with a very divided principality.

Do two wrong things make one right one? This is the way many A. P. A. lecturers talk, like Dr. Dixon, for instance. They "do not believe in the secrecy part, but the Jesuits are a secret society," say they; "and isn't Rome full of secret organizations in spite of the fact that she theoretically condemns them?" Then surely this is a good reason for keeping out of them. There is a true saying that "imitiation is the highest flattery." I do not suppose the A. P. A. in imitating the secret policy of Rome means to flatter the Vatican, but it is not strange that Rome looks upon it in that light and smiles to herself at the compliment.

Eight women in all have been ordained to the ministry in the Baptist denomination. So says the Congregationalist, which, in commenting on the fact, states that it does not favor ordaining women, but recognizes the inconsistency of excluding her from the ministry and at the same time allowing her to teach in the Sunday-school, wherein it is in advance of some religious journals that might be named which have not yet discovered the inconsistency.

There has been vast improvement, however, since the days of Anne Hutchinson, whose husband, by the way, owned the estate on which now stand the famous Old Corner Bookstore, a place haunted by Longfellow, Holmes, Whittier, Emerson, and other leading literati, a generation ago, and which would have been dear to the hearts of Dickens and Thackeray if they had only been Americans. The oldest house in Boston is the old Hancock Tavern, which a hundred years ago was a place of entertainment for all the foreign elite, including Talleyrand and Louis Phillippe. But one of the most interesting of Boston's old houses is the Mather house, where lived Cotton Mather, and the Eliots, father and son, who occupied the pulpit of the New North Church from 1742 to 1813. Now it is a cheap boarding-house for foreigners. To be pulled down is by no means the worst fate that can befall our historic buildings. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Christian Endeavor enthusiasm.—Utah and Congress.—A bit of a sermon in the House.—Universities for everybody in Washington.—Bro. E. D. Bailey on the piety of railroad men.

WASHINGTON, July 18, 1894.

In the annals of the Christian Endeavorers of the District of Columbia yesterday will be a red-letter day. In the morning the main body of the delegation which went to the Cleveland convention returned home, bringing as a trophy the decision to hold the convention of 1896 in Washington. They were received by a large and enthusiastic crowd. In the evening a largely-attended public reception and meeting was held jointly in honor of the District of Columbia delegates to the Cleveland convention and of the several hundred New York delegates who stopped on their way home to see the sights of Washington. Among the prominent speakers at the meeting was Rev. A. W. H. Hodder, president of the New York City Union, who presented a handsome national flag to the Washington Union. The local Epworth Leaguers helped to make the reception and meeting an enjoyable success.

President Cleveland this week signed the bill authorizing the Territory of Utah to take the proper steps to become a State; the House of Representatives adopted a resolution, similar to that adopted by the Senate last week, endorsing the policy of the administration in dealing with law-breakers during the strikes, and passed the Bailey voluntary bankruptcy bill. The tariff conference committee has failed to reach an agreement and will have to be prolonged.

Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, in a eulogy on the late Representative Houk, of Ohio, stated his belief in the immortality of the soul in a few words that have seldom been excelled in beauty of language or diction, although some of the world's greatest thinkers and grandest orators have written and spoken on the subject. He said:

"If the Father deigns to touch with divine power the cold and pulseless heart of the buried acorn, and make it to burst forth from its prison walls, will he leave neglected in the earth the soul of man who was made in the image of his Creator? If he stoops to give to the rose-bush, whose withered blossoms float upon the autumn breeze, the sweet assurance of another springtime, will he withhold the words of hope from the sons of men when the frosts of winter come? If matter, mute and inanimate, though changed by the forces of nature into a multitude of forms, can never die, will the spirit of man suffer annihilation after it has paid a brief visit, like a royal guest, to this tenement of clay?"

"Influences that will not make a scratch on the granite character of manhood will plow deep furrows through the tender heart of a child." This mighty truth is a quotation from a sermon on the religious training of children at home, delivered in this city last Sabbath by Rev. Dr. Luccock. Would that it could be indelably impressed upon the hearts of all parents; its effect upon the next generation of men and women would be incalculable, and all for good.

The greatest interest is felt in church and educational circles in the negotiations now in progress between officials of that great Baptist educational institution, the Chicago University, and those of the Columbian University of this city, looking towards a co-operation that would, while leaving each institution separate from the other, practically combine the strength of both in each. The Baptists hope that these negotiations will result in making the Columbian University to that denomination what the American University is to be to Methodism and the Catholic University to Catholicism. The Columbian University, while nominally non-sectarian, has always been practically controlled by Baptists, so that it will be a comparatively easy matter to make its course of studies conform to those of the Chicago University, which is strictly a Baptist institution. The people of Washington generally heartily wish that the negotiations may be successful, because they regard them as leading to a wider acknowledgment of the peculiar merits of Washington as a great educational center and their success as a long step towards what they hope to see accomplished—the establishment of a great university at the national capital by each of the great religious denominations.

Rev. E. D. Bailey, of the Central Union Mission, in a sermon preached last Sabbath on how to give the Gospel to the laboring classes, made the astounding assertion that of the 400,000 railroad men of the United States not 1,000 are regular attendants of church. I don't know where Mr. Bailey got his information, but it is difficult to believe that he has been correctly informed. The subject should be looked into. Those figures, if true, are disgraceful alike to the railroad men and to the churches.

Were men made one whit better or more reliable and law-abiding citizens by reason of their connection with these oath bound secret organizations or others organized for merely social purposes; if they were made better workers in the vineyard of the Lord because of these binding oaths; were they really made more charitable, more ready to aid the deserving poor without regard to their connection with any organization, secret or otherwise, then might we well give them all a place side by side with the church which Christ established on earth. If the condition of the laboring classes showed any improvement by reason of the formation of these secret labor organizations and the strikes ordered by their leaders, then might they be looked upon as blessings. Some of the secret orders do not have any Christ in them and barely assent to the idea of the existence of a "Supreme Ruler of the universe."—A. F. Grow, in the Vanguard.

CORRESPONDENCE

LAW AND LIBERTY.

AN OBERLIN DISCUSSION.

OBERLIN, O., July 16, 1894.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Mr. Z S. Holbrook, the Chicago capitalist, has all along been interested in Oberlin, but lately has purchased the Bibliothica Sacra, published here, and will be one of its editors. Last night, July 16th, he preached in the first church. It was a union service, and, for vacation times, the congregation was large. His text was: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." John 8: 32. The theme was the relation of liberty to law.

After stating the various conceptions which men form of liberty, he declared that true freedom comes only from obedience to truth, or in other words, in subjection to laws. The more absolute this subjection to divine law, the more perfect is the state of freedom. The highest type of liberty is that in which we can say with the Psalmist: "Oh, how love I thy laws, it is my meditation all the day."

Self-restraint is the first condition of fellowship with Christ. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Every human soul was meant to be a kingdom in which God reigns. Each kingdom can be free only as it recognizes and respects the equal freedom of all others. No valuable thing was ever attained without cost, and the price of individual and national freedom is the respect for, and the maintenance of, law.

He applied these principles to the conflict that has been going on between laborers and capitalists, and said that while we should listen kindly to all the complaints of laborers and do all that we wisely can for relief, we must sternly repress all lawlessness and teach the people that come to our land that freedom is not the privilege of doing as they please, except as they are pleased to do right. Our laws, he believed, to be wholesome and good, and we must see that they are obeyed. Whatever changes are desired, are to be sought for, not through revolution, but by evolution, in which there shall be in ideas a survival of the fittest.

He said that the elements of financial success were industry, integrity and economy, and these were open to all. Most of the rich men of Chicago had been poor boys. He referred to the time when he worked for two dollars a week, and could not afford to ride on a street car.

So far the sympathies of the congregation were with him; but when he represented the capitalists as having used none but legitimate means in their great accumulations, and that in this conflict they should have our sympathy, as the "under-dog in the fight," there were some who dissented. When he applauded our Revolutionary fathers for their resistance to tyrannical authority, and commended the bravery of the men who threw the tea into Boston harbor, I could but think there was an inconsistency with the leading thought in his discourse, and that if political changes were only to be sought "by evolution and not by revolution," then our fathers ought to have patiently waited, and fought their battle only with their tongue and the pen. I really could see no difference in principle between throwing other people's tea into the water, and burning other men's cars in Chicago. Each was an act of lawlessness inconsistent with true freedom.

When Mr. Holbrook told us that he would accord every right to a railroad employe, "but if he burned a Pullman car he would hang him to the nearest lamp post," I thought it was a practical approval of that terrible system of mob-violence that has been so destructive of property and life, and has brought world-wide reproach upon us as a people. Perhaps the language of the speech was not duly considered, and would not be maintained. I hope so.

It is perhaps unfair to criticise the discourse for what it did not contain; but it seems to me that one speaking in the name of Him "who, though he were rich, yet for our sake became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich," should have more sympathy with those who are in distress because they cannot earn their bread, and that some plan such as profit-sharing, whereby "we that are strong should bear the infirmities of the weak, and not please ourselves" (Rom. 15: 1), should have been indicated. Heartily as I agree with the idea that liberty must respect law, I still think that to many of the rich men the words of the apostle are applicable: "Go to, now, ye rich men; weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as if it were fire. Ye have heaped up your treasure together for the last day. Behold the hire of your laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them that have reaped have entered in to the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth." Jas. 5: 1–4.

H. H. HINMAN.

NOT DOWN IN THE COLLEGE CATALOGUE.

BOSTON, July 11, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A friend has just related an incident to me of which she was a witness.

Not very long ago the dwellers at North End in this city were not a little agitated over a mysterious night scene at "The Old Cops burying ground." The gates had been securely closed and nothing unusual was anticipated. Attention was attracted by the appearance of a carriage, and when the occupants alighted with picks and shovels in hand, and proceeded to invade the sacred precinct of the dead as best they could; and when the first was followed by a second and then a third carriage, the hundreds of curious lookers-on dispatched a messenger to notify the authorities of the situation.

The police promptly responded, and as the young men failed satisfactorily to explain their visit and proceedings, they were taken to the station. Here they solved the mystery by explaining that they were preparing to initiate a new member into their fraternity. The matter was treated as a joke. No further explanation was required, and the boys were sent away.

Perhaps the discovery by the citizens and the prompt action of the police prevented a tragedy like that of the murder of Leggett at Cornell, or Rustin at Yale, but why should such barbarism be allowed by college authorities? Or why when detected should such night marauders and disturbers of the public peace be allowed to go unpunished? J. P. STODDARD.

LODGES DESTROY CHARITY.

FROM A FAITHFUL BAPTIST PASTOR.

SELMA, Ala., July 8, 1894.

Sometime last year I wrote asking for tracts. You sent some, which I distributed, I hope, judiciously. I have been at work against these anti-Christian institutions mostly in a quiet way. God has blessed me to help save one worthy and learned minister of the Gospel from the lodge clutches. Many I have kept out who would have joined them. They have a fearful hold among our colored people, even the children having orders. And they have so much the stronger hold because our people are poor and these orders serve as a sort of a sick-benefit association. Those who can make money out of it work on this string and delude the others into it.

I have seen the evil they are doing. They are disrupting Christian fellowship. They are teaching a false charity; for they call that benevolence which is only a business obligation. They are destroying that most beautiful grace of Christianity—Christian charity; for when the poor suffer, whether they be Christians or not, the lodge people at once say, "He ought to have been a member of some society." The society people seem no longer to wish to do anything to the glory of Jesus Christ; they do their alms now in the name of the lodge, you can frequently hear them berating the church and praising the lodge; and some of them are members of the church; some even ministers. They teach the people to trust in the arm of the flesh and ascribe glory to man.

It is also destroying individual self-reliance and moral liberty—that liberty which Christ gives all his freeborn. I have seen this, and last Sunday I let it out in public as never before. The sermon made something of a stir, but thank God I had some noble-hearted ones to stand by me. And some of my brethren who are in the lodges who cannot see as I do, still stand by me as pastor, having confidence in my sincerity.

I have refused to preach any secret lodge sermons. I tell them I will preach Christ to them, but not their lodge to the people. They usually prefer to go to some preacher who is willing to praise anything for the money. C. P. JONES.

PITH AND POINT.

A HAND-SHAKE FROM BOSTON.

Returning this 7 P. M, July 12, from a day of pastoral visitation I have read your issue of to-day. Persons and events mentioned in your editorial were familiar to me and have in no small degree shaped the whole course of my life. Your reference to my conception of the importance of the Cynosure as a means of reaching, informing and educating the people regarding the evils and dangers of secret societies, gives me occasion to reaffirm all that I have written or said of its value; and while extending to you a hearty God-speed, I can confidently assure you of the hearty support of the New England Christian Association and of its Secretary.—JAMES P. STODDARD, Boston, Mass.

THE LODGE LAMP.

In reference to the monthly publication of a Lodge Lamp at the low price of twenty for $2 a year, I am much pleased with the idea. I hope the friends all along the line will fall in with it. It will enable us at the lowest price to put the best anti-secret reading in the hands of our neighbors who say they have not time to read the Cynosure. Brief, pointed publications are now the order of the day on reforms. One excellent advantage I see in such a paper as the Lodge Lamp is that single issues of it can be employed in turning the light on some one of the dark orders, or on some one phase of the reform, and these issues can be distributed in large numbers where they will do the most good. For example, about the time our colleges open next fall an issue of the Lodge Lamp can be devoted to college secret societies, and these can be procured in large numbers and distributed by the friends of the cause in college towns.—M. A. GAULT, Bloomington, Ind.

THE SANDWICH ISLAND IMBROGLIO.

Bishop Wright calls attention to an omitted item of information respecting party manipulation in Congress.

I have failed to notice if the paper has informed its readers that the Senate investigating committee (majority Democrats) reported that Minister Stevens was not to blame in anything in the affairs of Hawaii except that which Pres. Harrison disavowed and corrected. How slandered!—M. WRIGHT, Dayton, Ohio.

HE SEES SECTARIANISM IN THE CYNOSURE.

I am an old subscriber and reader of your paper. I see a great deal of effort made in showing the evil of secret orders, and I have been admonished by your zealous labors to keep clear of those snares; and now in return I warn you not to get caught in a snare less covered up. We are taught to shun the appearance of evil and we hear men professing godliness say that they cannot quit sin. To prove the sects are not in the possession of the spirit of love, just denounce them as false, when suddenly there is manifest in those members, and preachers as well, a spirit of hatred and venom. This is contrary to true Christianity. If they were right they would pray for those who found them out. But they prove the falsity of their own position by the spirit of anger. When I see how you can discern the evil in the lodge so readily and so easily and yet cannot discern the signs of the times as regards sectarianism, I feel like sounding the alarm so you may be on the alert. God is raising up a people who are going to denounce the devil and his works, let it come under cover of church or any other name. God help you, my friend, to get the scales of reputation and fame off your eyes so you may see clearly to avoid being entrapped in one of Satan's devices while you are trying to pull down the other.—PAUL DUNKER, Freeman, Mo.

LITERATURE.

"Vivisection in Theology," a pamphlet by the hearty supporter of all Christian reform, Dr. James Kerr of Glasgow, is particularly a reply to the leader of "higher criticism" in Scotland, Prof. Dods. It is, moreover, an able refutation of the careless and conceited arguments which are often put forward by the disciples of this school of religious philosophy in its present-day development. Dr. Kerr likens their work in mangling and eviscerating the living Word of God to the cruel practice of dissecting living animals. "It is, perhaps, difficult," he writes, "to determine which is the greater foe to the church of Christ—ritualism or rationalism, superstition or infidelity. The distinguishing character of the former is that it adds to the truth, of the latter that it takes away. The former destroys by its additions, the latter by its subtractions. The former smothers the truth, the latter bleeds it to death." We take pleasure in commending this argument of Dr. Kerr to American readers and students. He is the author of a number of works, among them one entitled, "The Principles and Practices of Secret Societies Opposed to Scripture and Reason." D. Boyce & Son, Glasgow; and John Kensit, Paternoster Row, London, are the publishers.

A NEW LEAF and other stories for children is a prettily illustrated book for children in large type with good paper, and teaching good morals. It is partly devoted to Bible stories. Price 15 c.; Scriptural Tract Depository, Boston.

Gen. O. O. Howard may yet prove to us as Lew Wallace did that "the pen is mightier than the sword." He is the author of a historical book, "Isabella of Castile," lately issued by the Funk & Wagnalls Company. Speaking of Columbus, Gen. Howard says: "While we are wreathing the brow of the great Genoese with those unfading laurels that peoples of the twelfth generation are bringing to him and those connected with him, let not his patroness be kept in the background." The life of Isabella is full of thrilling interest, and though we frown on her for her relation to the Inquisition and her consent to the expulsion of the Jews, we cannot but pay high tribute to her many noble qualities.

It is almost 500 years since Thomas a' Kempis wrote that immortal book, the "Imitation of Christ." Lately a new edition of the work was published in England, and a review of it published in one of the journals of that country, whereupon an industrious press-clipping bureau sent the review to "Mr. Thomas A. Kempis," in care of the publishers of the book, and proposed to send him promptly all references to his book for a guinea.—Advocate.

The Primitive Catholic, published by Rev. E. H. Walsh, a reformed Romish priest of the Trappist order, has suspended for the time being, as the editor and proprietor is suffering from nervous prostration as a result of over-work.

President C. A. Blanchard has in press a volume on "Higher Criticism" and kindred themes, which are discussed with that clearness, force and fairness for which he has become well known on the platform.

The Social Economist for July has an unusual fund of bristling and aggressive articles, all bearing on live questions of great import. It shows how the government is being cornered by the gold demand for export in a manner which suggests the necessity for an early repeal of the legal tender act and a reconstruction and consolidation of our banking system so that the banks can be obliged to pay coin. Gen. Wm. F. Draper explains that in manufacturing industries of Boston and Fall River $7.04 are paid in wages where $1 is paid in dividends. It is not far to estimate how much of an abatement profits can stand before wages will stop.

There will be a controversy in the August number of the Century on a question that is just now attracting a large share of public attention. Senator George F. Hoar writes of "The Right and Expediency of Woman Suffrage," and Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley on "The Wrongs and Perils of Woman Suffrage." According to the terms of the discussion, each was shown the other's article, and then prepared a postscript in answer to the arguments advanced by his opponent. The two writers discuss all phases of the question, from the moral as well as from the economic standpoint.

The Sanitary Era in its current number is very sarcastic about Chicago and its sister cities, whose health officers have figured out a marvelous decrease in death rate this year. If mathematics are wrong let us hope the doctors are not. Articles on the Sanitation of Water and Skin-propagation are of marked interest.

The Converted Catholic for July is crowded with argument, incident and illustration against the Romish church and its teachings and management. The Pope's latest encyclical receives some attention and we regret to say the editor seems to appeal to Freemasons against Rome.

OBITUARY.

DARWIN BROOKS was born in Stoddard; New Hampshire, January 25, 1810, and died in Shrewsbury, Mass, April 2, 1894.

Of his ancestry or early life I know very little. Since my connection with the work in New England I have occasionally met him and his devoted wife and shared the hospitality of their quiet home. He was unobtrusive in his manner, but absolutely uncompromising in his convictions. For twenty years he was in feeble health, and during the last four years suffered greatly. He endured with patience and without complaint until it was said, "It is enough," and then "fell asleep."

His bereaved companion writes of his interest in the anti-secrecy cause: "He read the Cynosure; it was his favorite paper." He said not many days before his death: "I have labored for the cause seventeen years and now my work is done." So it seemed to him, but not to us. The good that men do lives after them; and while he rests the reapers will garner the sheaves from the fields he has sown in tears, and both shall rejoice together in the great "Harvest Home."

A little poem, "Just over the Mountain," by Rev. Dwight Williams, was one in which he took great delight. By his request it was read at his funeral services. It is an index to his inner life.

J. P. STODDARD.

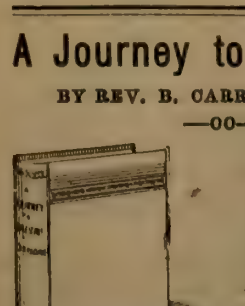
July 11, 1894.

The blood is the source of health. To keep it pure, take Hood's Sarsaparilla—and only Hood's.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—



Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THROW IT AWAY.

There's no longer any need of wearing clumsy, chafing Trusses, which give only partial relief at best, never cure, but often inflict great injury, inducing inflammation, strangulation and death.

HERNIA (Breach), or Rupture, no matter of how long standing, or of what size, is promptly and permanently cured without the knife and without pain. Another

Triumph in Conservative Surgery

is the cure of

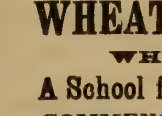
TUMORS, Ovarian, Fibroid and other varieties, without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula, and other diseases of the lower bowel, promptly cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, and washed out, thus avoiding cutting.

STRICTURE of urinary passage is also removed without cutting. Abundant References, and Pamphlets, on above diseases, sent sealed, in plain envelope, 10 cts. (stamps). WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

$5 TO $20 per day at home. The work is easy, pleasant and adapted to both young and old of either sex. Any one can do the work. GEO. STINSON & CO., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.



Agents wanted

BICYCLES ON EASY PAYMENTS

New or 2nd hand; lowest prices, largest stock; makers & oldest dealers in U.S. We sell everywhere. Catalog free ROUSE HAZARD & CO. 4 G St. Peoria, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

MY EXPERIENCES

WITH

SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY A TRAVELER.

With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

—o-o—

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is

Fifteen Cents,

but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft. Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING

(The gift of Philo Carpenter)

—AND OFFICE OF—

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1894.

THIS WEEK OUR CONTRIBUTIONS to the discussion of important events are of first importance. Rev. M. A. Gault shows how the potsherds of the earth are striving. Our God is well able to set Midianites against Amelekites again. Let not Gideon's men forget the lamps, the pitchers and the trumpets. Another view of our situation as a people is excellently given by that noble woman of Denver whose testimony has been given so many years for God. Let us have more light on all these questions relating to secretism until all may know surely how God looks upon them. From other sources we have gathered argument and opinion which will be helpful.

DEATH OF MRS. HUGUNIN.—The wife of Henry M. Hugunin, late editor of the Cynosure, died at Elgin, Ill., on Thursday of last week, after a lingering illness, and was buried at Racine, Wis., on Friday. She was aged sixty-four years and had long been an affectionate wife and mother. Her loss is severely felt in her little household. The readers of the Cynosure, and many other friends of the reform, will wish with us to extend a heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and his son in this trying hour. He believes in the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, who will graciously manifest to him the love of God and out of present darkness bring peace and light and life.

THE SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION —The debate on "Secret Societies in Politics," held in the Grand Pacific Hotel, this city, April 12 last, was an event in our reform, instructive, helpful, unique. The Cynosure published an excellent report of the meeting; but the arguments, the speeches themselves are of permanent value. The Executive Committee of the Club has itself been at the expense of publishing a full and accurate stenographic report. It can be of no less value to the readers of the Cynosure than to the business men of Chicago who heard it. Therefore, during the summer months, while our lecturers are unable to push their work with their usual energy, and so allow space in the paper, it seems wise to print these speeches and several others which were unspoken on the occasion for want of time. We promise they will deserve reading. In reply to questions about the Sunset Club it may be said that it is a kind of after-dinner debating society for business and professional men of all classes. Any one approved by the Executive Committee may participate in its benefits. There is no fee in the usual sense, no club-house, no constitution, by-laws, president, parliamentary rules, personalities, dues, fines, long speeches or late hours; "simply tolerant discussion and rational recreation." The address of Pres. C A. Blanchard began the debate; we have the pleasure of giving it to our readers this week and next.

FREE SPEECH ON PUBLIC GROUNDS —Our brother and co-worker, Rev. William F. Davis of Boston, is again arrested for preaching on public grounds. After his release from a year's imprisonment some time since he has continued to stand for his right, as a citizen and minister of the Gospel, to speak to men of salvation on Boston Common. He was not molested till four or five Sabbaths ago, and was to have his trial on the 27th ult. Drs. Plumb, A. J. Gordon and J. M. Gray, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore and others have issued a statement regarding the whole case, reminding us that Boston has a bad eminence for forbidding street preaching without a permit; that protests and hearings before aldermen have accomplished nothing, and the obnoxious ordinance still stands. It is believed that the Supreme Court of the United States would decide such an ordinance unconstitutional, and it is desired to test the matter in that high tribunal. The Supreme Court of Michigan has decided that a law is unconstitutional which forbids preaching as a nuisance. As the appeal to the courts and especially to the Supreme Court involves the rights of all people, it is desired that all will contribute to carry the case through. Funds may be sent to A. N Cook, 337 Washington St, Boston, who has consented to act as treasurer.

THE LATEST FROM ROME ON FREEMASONRY.

The last encyclical letter of Pope Leo. XIII was received by Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore on the 7th inst., and fragmentary and inconclusive extracts of the Latin original were hastily translated and sent to the press of the country. With these, is the incorrect statement that the letter is especially addressed to the American people. We have preferred to wait until an official translation of the whole document should appear, before publishing the portion relating to the lodge. Such a translation appears in the Catholic Review of last week. It fills nine columns of that paper, which says editorially that it is probably the last communication of the kind, a sort of testament to the adherents of the pope. In previous encyclicals the pope has dwelt upon various themes: marriage, political institutions, capital and labor, secret societies, etc. The letter on Freemasonry was taken up by Albert Pike who replied at length. Puck, the comic paper, celebrated the event with a famous cartoon, representing Pope Leo and Pike in deadly strife with ink-stand and pen, and the sum of their long letters being in brief, "You're another".

The present encyclical is addressed "to the rulers and peoples of the world," and especially appeals for a reunion of all who bear the Christian name. As one of the obstacles to such union the pope warns against Freemasonry in these words:

"Another grave peril to unity is the Masonic sect, a formidable power which has long oppressed nations, and particularly Catholic nations. Insolently proud of its power, its resources, and its successes, it sets every agency at work to everywhere strengthen and extend its dominions, favored by the troubled state of the times. From dark retreats, in which it lays its plots and snares, it comes out into the broad light of our cities, and, as if to hurl defiance at God, it is in this very city, the capital of the Catholic world, it has established its headquarters.

"What is most deplorable is that wherever it sets foot it makes its way into all classes and all institutions of the state, to become, if possible, sovereign arbiter of everything. This is the most deplorable, we say, for both the perversity of its opinions and the iniquity of its designs are flagrant. Under color of vindicating the rights of man and reforming society it demolishes Christian institutions, repudiates every revealed doctrine, stigmatizes as superstitious religious duties, sacraments, and everything sacred, strives to deprive of their Christian character, marriage, the family, the education of youth, and everything relating to public and private life, as well as to abolish all respect for human and divine power in the minds of the people. The worship it prescribes is the worship of nature; and it is the principles of nature it proposes as the sole means and standard of truth, honesty, and justice. Thus obviously man is urged to the adoption of the manners and habits of an almost pagan life, if the increasing and subtle seductions should not cause him to descend lower.

"Although on this point we have already elsewhere given the gravest warnings, our apostolic vigilance imposes upon us the duty of insisting thereon and repeating again and again that one can never be too strongly fortified against such a pressing danger. May the divine clemency bring to naught these wicked designs! But let the Christian people understand that they must put an end to this sect and once for all throw off its dishonoring yoke; let those who suffer most from it, Italians and French, be the more earnest. We, ourselves, have already said what weapons they use and what tactics they should pursue in this struggle; the victory with a chief like Him who said, 'I have overcome the world' (John 16: 33), is not doubtful."

The Cynosure need not remark at length on these charges. They are probably true from the standpoint of the papacy. The word "oppressed" in the first sentence misleads. The lodge does not oppress nations, but dis resses them. It oppresses individuals; and its individual members more than any one else. But that Freemasonry is insolent, proud, Jesuitical, nobody who has studied its literature and marked its course in this county can successfully deny. It does not openly "demolish Christian institutions," but under pretence of sustaining them, it really most cruelly and surely undermines them. The sophistries periodically put forth by orators and editors of the lodge would persuade all men that Christianity has a most assiduous "hand maid" in their order; but no discerning and candid person can fail to see on examination that Masonry, like popery, while pretending to promote the worship of the only true and living God, is giving men instead the calves of Bethel and of Dan. One puts priests and saints and penance between the soul and its God; the other its nature worship, its Hiram Abiff, and its mock solemn rites, invented by jugglers in religion like Albert Pike and Cagliostro and the Jesuits of Paris.

But while both systems turn the soul away from Christ by human inventions, we may not say that God does not find some people in both systems who are saved by faith. The priests of the lodge and the cloister may deceive, and too often do deceive the soul to its eternal undoing; but we trust the day hastens when millions "oppressed" by these systems shall know that they can be free only in Jesus Christ.

TEACHING BY SUGGESTION—A JESUITICAL METHOD.

A recent number of the Golden Rule gives a pictorial illustration of the Sabbath-school lesson on the early life of Christ, in which it introduces a number of Masonic symbols such as are found in lodge books, and are never regarded in any other light than as emblems of the mystic craft. The square and compass in Masonic form, the pillars, the arch, and the keystone in its unfinished state, surmounted by a mallet and chisel—these are associated with the cross, as symbols of Christianity. The person who drew the design was evidently familiar with Masonic symbolism and seems to have considered the opportunity too good to be lost, to insinuate his lodge symbolism into the teachings of God's Holy Word.

For the same reason that we object to the "boys' brigades" as incongruous with the lessons taught in Sabbath-school and as teaching militarism by suggestion, we also most seriously object to this mingling of Masonic and Christian teaching. At best it is far-fetched and inappropriate. There is no reason to think that the youthful Jesus laid up stone walls or chiseled keystones for arches; and it is gross blasphemy to teach that he was a member of the Masonic order. Whatever may have been the object of introducing such symbolism, and of teaching how to delineate it on the blackboard, there are these serious objections: It familiarizes the youthful mind with Freemasonry; it associates it with Christ and Christianity; it teaches, by suggestion, that the lodge and the church are equally to be the objects of desire and aspiration. Whatever men may personally think of the Masonic system they have no more right to introduce its known symbolism into our Sabbath-school literature than those who attend the theater, the dance, or the card party have to use the pictorial representations of their amusements to attract and beguile those who are uninitiated.

Another serious consideration is the fact that the Golden Rule is the organ of the Christian Endeavor societies. The effect of these "chalk-talk hints" is, therefore, not only to pervert the Sabbath-school instruction, but to vitiate the solemn pledge of the Endeavor movement which binds to Christ and his church. The managers of the Golden Rule should see to it whether the N S. Greet who provides these hints is not playing the "Jesuit in disguise" for Freemasonry.

—Pastors and other Christian workers who read the Cynosure are desired to send the editor brief notes respecting the work of God's Spirit among the people. Bro. Hyatt, of Poland, N. Y., gives a good example in the religious notes.

—The order of Catholic Knights, meeting last week in Oshkosh, Wis., voted against receiving members of secret societies. This injunction hardly applies to the Jesuits, Molly Maguires, Hibernians, Foresters, etc, which are peculiarly Romanist.

—The proceedings of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Iowa have been sent us by Secretary Parvin, for which we extend thanks. We notice in a hasty glance that among the expulsions was one of J. O Jacobs of Lake lodge, for renouncing his oaths of secrecy. Several were expelled for using or selling keys or expositions containing the secret ceremonies, but these cases were all restored to their lodge privileges. A motion was made to declare the use of expositions and cyphers a Masonic offence, but it was voted down!

—The annual convention of the American Peace Society opened at Asbury Park, New Jersey, last Saturday with an address by the secretary, Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston. Bishop Vincent and others took part in the opening exercises. The convention continued several days. God bless its work.

—The Royal Templar order in Canada is said by its organ to be opposed to communism, anarchism, but in favor of true socialism. Without explaining in what "true socialism" consists, the paper makes a yet higher claim that the mission of this secret society is "to establish the kingdom of Christ among men." Let the churches take notice and begin their vacation.

—The Switchmen's Aid Association of North America is one of the insurance enterprises with a great name, a grand master, and other attachments of secretism. The grand treasurer ran off after stealing $32,000 and the society is bankrupt. It had 178 lodges and 8,000 members a few months ago. Their dues, grand lodge fees, etc., cost some $24 yearly, beside special assessments, and $1,000 was the amount of insurance any one man could draw. It is hard for men to live and learn that lodge insurance is unprofitable in the long run.

—The Christian Worker, which began publication yeafs ago in this city by the Publishing Association of Friends, we shall see no more. It has joined with the Friends' Review of Philadelphia and a new paper is the result, to be named the American Friend and published simultaneously in both cities. Rufus M. Jones, of New York, is the editor. The Worker was for years under the editorial care of Rev. C. W. Pritchard, now pastor at Kokomo, Ind. The first number of the new paper has a fine appearance. It promises to be an improvement on its predecessors. It begins with a strong edition of 7,000.

—A Sabbath or two ago President George Q. Cannon was moved to warn his Mormon adherents against the strike, in the Tabernacle. His remarks were significant when we remember how many Mormons, President Woodruff among them, testified before the U. S. court that they were Masons. Pres. Cannon said:

"The whole land is now covered with strikes. Combinations are formed, some of which are secret. We have for very many years been urging upon the Latter-day Saints not to connect themselves with secret combinations; not to partake of the sins of Babylon, but to be a stable people; to be a people who will keep aloof from those things that are bound to bring destruction upon the land. There never was a time when wisdom was more needed among us than at the present time."

—The editor of the Chicago Legal News, who is an enthusiastic Freemason, reprints in his paper a photo-copy of an old document yet in existence in York, England, and dating back two or three decades before the origin of speculative Masonry in London. The photographic copy represents two or three lines in the center of the page of distinctly different penmanship, and the subject matter of altogether different character. These lines speak of "he or she that is to be made a Mason," and their significance is explained by the fact that among the old workmen societies of England a widow might carry on the work of her dead husband. This is all reasonable. We see every day in American society widows managing a business thus left to them, and often with signal success. If Freemasonry has anything to boast of in this old York record why are not women initiated to-day? Let Mr. Bradwell confess why in shame.

—Our Washington correspondent's reference to the union of Chicago University with an institution in that city is probably made from incorrect information. Dr. Goodspeed, financial agent for the Chicago University, says that no such arrangement is contemplated. The remarks upon Bro. E. D. Bailey's estimate of church-going railroad men are in point. Bro. Bailey will doubtless himself rejoice to find his estimate incorrect, if the proof is produced. But when we remember the demands of the government that the mails must be carried seven days in the week; when we remember that the railways that keep the Sabbath can be counted on the fingers of one hand; and especially when we see the Sunday paper and the Sunday train and the Sunday postoffice patronized so largely by professed Christian people, we fear the estimate is too nearly correct. To expect of railroad men any better observance of the Sabbath than they see in community at large is folly. We may just as surely look for strikes, riots and bloodshed so long as this neglect of God's law continues, as we may look for the sun to rise, or any other effect to follow its known cause.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. R. N. Countee was present at the late Baptist convention meeting in Memphis, Tenn., and took an active part.

—Rev. Geo. M. Robb, pastor of the Covenanter church, New Alexandria, Pa., one of the largest in Pittsburgh Presbytery, favored the Cynosure with a call last week.

—Rev. A. W. Parry, pastor of the Free Methodist church, Evanston, Ill., is now editing the Life and Light S. S. lesson series, published by Rev. T. B. Arnold, of this city.

—A private letter from Hon. Frederick Douglass, received the other day from Washington, closes with an expression of sympathy for the principles maintained in the Cynosure.

—Rev. T. B. Arnold, of the N. C. A. Board, was caught by the strike while on his way to dedications at Westfield, Ill., and Bethel, Iowa. He succeeded in reaching his destination each time and in returning, but believes he has an additional argument for the righteous rule of the Free Methodist church demanding separation from all secret lodges.

—Among the deaths noted in the Congregational Year-book for 1894, are those of Rev. Geo. Thompson, of Oberlin, and Dr. E. P. Thwing. Both these brethren were valued contributors to the Cynosure in past years. Bro. Thompson was one of the three Abolitionists who were imprisoned in a Missouri jail for months, for helping the slave on to freedom. Another of the three, James Burr, was buried in a corner of Wheaton College campus.

—Rev. J. K Wheeler, who lately came from Hartford, Conn., to be pastor of the Fourth Baptist church, Ashland Ave., in this city, graduated at Wheaton in 1873 in the same class with brethren Phillips, the N. C. A. secretary, and A. D. Zaraphonithes, the missionary in Greece. His father was a radical reformer, and a younger brother is an active worker in the Prohibition ranks. Bro. Wheeler is receiving many encomiums for his work here, and his sermons have been several times published in the daily press.

—Rev. Wm. Schmidt writes in the Lutheran Standard of a giant Norwegian pastor who attended the late United Synod at St. Paul. His name is Dahl. Thirty years ago this man of Herculean strength went to Pastor Harms' school at Hermannsburg, Germany, and was educated for a missionary. He was sent to India and was very successful, but disagreeing with the management on the caste question he left the mission work and came to America. This northern giant was celebrated for his feats of strength. He would stand on one leg, or fold his arms and defy any two Germans to throw him. He would also take a string as thick as a man's little finger, wrap it around his thumbs and break it like a tailor's thread. He has been stationed for twenty-one years at Ratna, Minn., and has organized many congregations among his countrymen, all opposing the Satanic device of the lodge.

—The papers announce that Rev. O. P. Gifford, pastor of Immanuel Baptist church, Michigan Ave., this city, has accepted a call to the Delaware Ave. Baptist church, Buffalo. For Chicago's sake we regret this change. As in Boston, so here Dr. Gifford is a tireless worker for the moral improvement of the city. He has been continually before the public and prominent in every reform movement. He has not made public addresses here as in Boston on the lodge issue, but has always shown a warm sympathy for our work, aiding in the appointment of delegates by the Baptist ministers to the N. C. A. conference last year, and freely granting leave that his portrait and testimony should be seen by all at the World's Fair. He is chairman of the committee on morals of the Civic Federation of Chicago, and a director of the Society for the Prevention of Crime. He is a scholarly man, and members of his congregation consider every sermon heard from him a gem of clear thought beautifully expressed. Dr. Gifford is at present passing a month's vacation in the east, chiefly at his old home in Boston. He is expected back in Chicago about Aug. 1, and his resignation will take effect Nov. 1.

THE NEW PAPER, THE "LODGE LAMP."

The past week has shown the same proportionate response of daily subscriptions to the monthly paper that marked the first ten days of effort. The average has been a few over one hundred per day. The list is now over seventeen hundred. There have been words of encouragement from quite a number of the "bone and sinew" of this reform. Do not fail to read those from Rev. M. A. Gault on another page.

As long as the subscriptions continue to be received daily in encouraging numbers the books will be kept open; but it is to be hoped that the responses may be such as to warrant the issue promptly of the August number. Have you sent in a club? Will you do so the coming week?

REFORM NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE DAY IN SOUTHWESTERN OREGON.

THE N. C. A. AGENT IN CURRY COUNTY.

PORT ORFORD, Oregon.

On the 2nd of July I spoke at Denmark in the evening to a small audience. The lodgemen generally boycotted the meeting, but I held to the principle, "Despise not the day of small things." The few present seemed to approve of the work, and I secured three subscribers for the paper. Rev. J. J. Black, pastor of the Coast Mission of the U. B. church, met me here.

On the morning of the 3rd I bade farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Farrier, who as hosts have treated me so very kindly, and went on to the next appointment. The journey of seven miles had to be made on foot. At Denmark I unloaded my grips and shipped them via stage to Port Orford. About noon I came to the mining camp of Bro. Madden, one of the very cleverest men I have met on the coast. He was years ago teacher in a college. While Bro. M. was preparing dinner, I went out and "panned out" a shovel of black sand, and wrapped what they call the "pay dirt" in a Cynosure tract and will take it out as a momento of my first mining experiment.

Here Rev. Black left me and I went alone to Sixes River, where I spoke at night to another small crowd. They were very attentive and appreciative. Mr. Wm. Cox and family cared for me here and I carry away the kindliest remembrance of my visit to them. May the Lord greatly bless them.

On the morning of the "Glorious Fourth," I came on foot to Port Orford. When they learned that I had arrived, a committee visited me and requested me to deliver the oration at their celebration. After music, the Declaration was read, and I spoke till dinner time. My remarks must have pleased them, for they immediately requested me to speak in the afternoon, which I did, making many friends to the cause of moral reform. A vote of thanks was extended me; and the officers of the Episcopalian church came forward and tendered me their house to speak in at night on the subject of secret societies.

The congregation was good in the evening, mostly men. A large party who had come in to have a ball, attended the lecture first. I think a lasting impression was made on many minds. The editor of the Port Orford Tribune was present at all three addresses, and gave me the best of attention. I wish I could stay and preach Christ to this people for a month. I think many would be saved.

Oh, the majesty of the Pacific Ocean! While I sit writing it roars and foams, constantly troubled. As I passed down the beach this evening for a little walk, it reminded me of the expression: "The wicked are like the troubled sea, casting up mire and dirt."

This has been as busy a 4th of July as I ever put over. I commenced it with a nine miles' walk, lectured three times, wrote eleven letters, and so on. I start to morrow at 7 A. M. for my next appointment. P. B. WILLIAMS.

THE HOME.

THE CONVERSION.

In my neighbor's garden in early Spring,
A rampant thistle I chanced to see;
"'Tis a pest," I cried, "'tis a spreading thing!
Each tiny seed has an active wing;
You must root it out or 'twill trouble bring!"
"But the flower is soft and pink," quoth he.

So he let it grow all Summer through.
"It is only one, let it live," said he.
"If the thistle did but to rare plants belong
We should prize it much, it could do no wrong,
We should even give it a place in song;
Now this is true," said my friend to me.

In the Spring through many a garden bed
The baby thistles were plain to see.
And out on the common their deep roots fed,
And new seeds fast on their light wings sped,
And tender fingers from sharp spines bled,
And my neighbor came calling on me.

"What can we do with this noxious weed?
The thistle is seeding the town," said he.
"Out in the pastures 'tis spoiling the feed;
And my wife lost her tulips because of its greed;
My lawn grass is ruined and full of its seed;
'Tis a pest!" said my friend to me.

But I knew my neighbor and answered him back;
"My dear sir, we can't hope to agree.
You should license the thistle and still let it grow:
'Prohibition can never prohibit,' you know,
And if seeds keep on flying, why just let 'em go."
"I've done wrong," said my friend to me.

—E. H. Chase.

THE MISSIONARY WELL AS AN IMAGE BREAKER.

One of the most interesting stories in all Mr. Paton's life in the South Seas is that which I am about to tell you. If you have studied physical geography you will remember that the islands of the Southern Pacific are coral islands, built up out of the water by the tiny coral insect. After a while these little islands become covered with soil and plants and trees. But the soil is light and the coral rock porous; so when the rain falls the water is soon drained off into the sea. Therefore, on Aniwa there are no springs nor fountains, nor running streams. Of course, the people cannot drink sea-water, which is salty. What, then, do they drink? Why, chiefly the milk of the cocoanut; or they will chew the sugar cane, and its juice satisfies their thirst. When a mother dies, leaving her little babe, it is fed on the milk of the cocoanut, because they have no cows there to give them milk. When Mr. Paton built his home on Aniwa, one of his worst trials was the lack of good water; so he determined to dig a well and see if he could not find fresh water. When he told the old chief, Namakei, who governed that part of the island, what he was going to do, Nemakei cried:

"O Missi" (native name for the missionary), "your head is going wrong, or you would not talk so wildly as that!"

Mr. Paton told him that his God could bring water from below just as easily as he could bring the rain from above. But the old chief only cried:

"Poor Missi, that is the way with all who go mad! We must watch him now."

So, when Mr. Paton began to dig, the chief gathered his men about him to watch and see what would become of the missionary; for they thought he had lost his mind. Mr. Paton dug away for a while very vigorously; but his strength began to give out as the hole grew deeper. He then offered presents of fish-hooks to the men if they would come and draw up the bucketfuls of earth as he should fill them, and emptying them, let the buckets down to him again. The young men were glad to get the fish-hooks, and helped him very nicely for awhile. But one morning Mr. Paton came back to the well, when it was about twelve feet deep, to find that one side had caved in! Then all his work was to be done over. Moreover, the old chief could no longer get his men, even if paid, to help draw out the earth; for they feared they would fall in and be buried. The old chief himself came near and almost with tears begged the missionary not to dig any more. Put Mr. Paton went on. At last a bright idea flashed into his mind. He planted two forked posts on either side of the well, and then laid a beam of wood across, with its ends in the forks. Then he fastened a rude block and pulley to the beam, and passed a rope through the wheel, and tying one end of the rope to the bucket in the well, he managed, by many gifts of axes and knives, to persuade the natives to pull the upper end of the rope and thus draw up the bucketfuls of earth. Still the old chief thought this very foolish.

"No, Missi, you will never see rain coming up from the earth on these islands. We expect daily, if you reach water, to see you drop through into the sea, and the sharks will eat you!"

But Mr. Paton kept on, and at last one morning when the well was about thirty feet deep, he "struck water," as the miners say. He was trembling with exhaustion and excitement, for he feared that after all his toil the water might be salt. But to his delight it was sweet and fresh. He filled a vessel with some of it, and climbing the ladder he called old Namakei to come and taste the water that Jehovah had sent him from below. The old chief cautiously touched it to see if it felt like water; then he cautiously tasted it and shouted out:

"Rain! rain! yes, it is rain!"

Mr. Paton then told the chiefs to come and look down into the well and see for themselves. But they were dreadfully afraid. It was all so strange and marvelous to them, and not one of them was willing to approach the edge of the well. At last they fell upon a plan: they took each other firmly by the hand and placed themselves in a long line. The foremost one would then lean over and look tremblingly into the well, the others holding him meanwhile. When he had finished looking, another came forward and looked over in the same manner, and thus all viewed the "Jehovah's rain" far below. When all had seen the well, and were weak with wonder, the old chief exclaimed:

"Missi! wonderful, wonderful is the work of your Jehovah God! No God of Aniwa ever helped us in this way! The world is turned upside down since Jehovah came to Aniwa! But, Missi, will it always rain up through the earth? or will it come and go like the rain from the clouds?"

Mr. Paton assured him that he thought it would always rain up from the earth.

The next thing to be done was to "wall up the well," and the natives were all glad to help. Mr. Paton sent them down to the shore to bring blocks of the white coral rock, and they let these down to him in the bottom of the well by ropes. He carefully built them into a circular wall about three feet thick; and thus the well was walled all the way to the top. It was six feet across at the bottom and eight feet at the top. Then he made a rude windlass, and all, with joy, drew up bucketfuls of the sweet, cool water, and drank it with delight. This was the first well ever seen on those islands, and, as Mr. Paton says: "It broke the backbone of heathenism on Aniwa. It was as wonderful to the natives as a miracle."

When all was finished, the old chief came to Mr. Paton, and said:

"Missi, I think I could help you next Sabbath. Will you let me preach."

A SERMON ON THE WELL.

Mr. Paton promised that he would, and the news spread like wild fire all over the island that Namakei would be the missionary next Sabbath and preach to the people. A great crowd was present, and poor old Namakei was all trembling with excitement as he rose before the congregation and said:

"Friends of Namakei, men, women and children of Aniwa! Listen to my words. My people! the people of Aniwa! the world is turned upside down since the word of Jehovah came into this land! Whoever expected to see rain come up from the earth? It has always come from the clouds. Wonderful is the work of this Jehovah God. No God of Aniwa has answered prayers as the Missi's God has done. Friends of Namakei! all the powers of the world could not have forced us to believe that rain could be gotten from the depths of the earth if we had not seen it with our eyes and tasted it as we here do. Now, by the help of Jehovah God, the Missi brought that invisible rain to view. Something here in my heart" (beating his hand on his breast) "tells me that the Jehovah God does exist, whom we never heard of until Missi brought him to our knowledge. The coral has been removed, the land has been cleared away, and, lo! the water rises. Invisible until this day, yet all the same it was there, though our eyes were too weak to see it. So I, your chief, do now firmly believe that when I die, when the coral and heaps of dust are removed from my blind old eyes, I shall see the invisible Jehovah with my soul, as Missi tells me, not less surely than I have seen the rain from the earth below. From this day I must worship the God who has opened the well for us, and who fills it with rain from below. The gods of Aniwa cannot hear, cannot help us like the God of Missi. Henceforth I am a follower of Jehovah. Let every man that thinks with me go now and fetch the idols of Aniwa, the gods which our fathers feared, and cast them down at Missi's feet. Let us burn and bury and destroy these things of wood and stone, and let us be taught by Missi how to serve the God who can hear—the Jehovah who gave us the well, and who will give us every other blessing: for he sent his Son Jesus to die for us and bring us to heaven. Jehovah has sent us rain from the earth. Why should he not also send us his Son from heaven? Namakei stands up for Jehovah."

I am sure you will think that's a good sermon to be preached by an old heathen chief. Yes, it was, indeed, a good sermon, and God used it for the conversion of all the island. No such sermon was ever preached in the South Sea Islands.

That very afternoon the old chief and some of his people brought their idols and cast them down at the door of Mr. Paton's house. Intense excitement followed for weeks. Almost every day people came burdened with loads of their gods of wood and stone. They burned many of them in great bonfires. Some of them were buried in pits ten or fifteen feet deep, and some of the worst of their idols were carried out some distance into the sea, and there was sunk, to be seen no more. All over the island the people began to worship the true God. In almost every family the blessing began to be asked at every meal, and morning and evening prayer were held in almost every home. Indeed, it was the sign of still being a heathen if they did not have the blessings or the daily prayers. Judged by these tests, how many heathen there are in our own land!—The Children's Friend.

HOW TO HAVE GOD'S HELP.

"And when Elisha was come....he went in therefore and shut the door....and prayed unto the Lord." 2 Kings 4: 32, 33. All life-giving power comes from God, and the prophet knew this. All of his dependence just then was in the Lord God Omnipotent. Centuries later Jesus taught his disciples to always shut the door the first thing when they would talk with God; and he also taught them by precept and example that the next thing to do after they had prayed was to do all they could to help answer the prayer they had made, and this was the very thing the prophet did. One reason why some of us do not have more prayers answered is because we stop praying as soon as we come out of our closets. The right kind of a prayer never stops. We forget that sometimes the most effective praying is done with hands and feet and brain and pocketbook. We say amen and quit just when we ought to press on with more earnestness, or we stay on our knees asking for bread when we ought to be out in the field doing something with a hoe. God help us to pray in a way that angels can understand, no matter whether they hear our words or not. "If I had as much wheat in the barn as you've got, papa, I'd answer that prayer myself," said a little boy to the stingy father who had prayed at the family altar for a man who needed bread. That boy had a true idea of prayer that some old men never get.—The Ram's Horn.

The reason why we have no use for cranks is because they make the most noise when we are trying to take a nap.

If God answers our prayers a little different from what we expect, it is because his goodness is better than our expectations.

The hypocrite in the church is not half so bad as the hypocrite out of the church, who pretends to be better than church members.

I never object to a peacock showing off; it is about all he can do, and besides he never struts in borrowed feathers.

There are people who still believe that calling the kettle black is the best way to improve the pot's complexion.

TEMPERANCE.

ALCOHOL ON THE CONTINENT.

In the Zurich Lunatic Asylum one-fourth of the cases were ascribed to drink.

Dr. Speyer says that one-eighth of the insane in public asylums were sent there from alcoholism.

Mr. Otto Lang found that eighty-eight per cent of the crimes committed in Zurich were due to drink.

Dr. Bær, a well-known writer in German prisons, alleges that forty-four per cent of the prisoners were intemperate.

In 1893 one in seventeen deaths which occurred in Switzerland were ascribed to drinking habits (including women and children).

The noted professors of physiology, Gaule in Berne, Hertzen in Lausanna, Bunge in Basle, and Schiff in Geneva, are total abstainers from alcohol.

Professor Strumpell, of Erlangen, says that alcohol has an evil influence in the causation of most diseases, and is the ruling cause of dyspepsia in adults.

Mr. Brassy found that barrow men who avoided alcohol could do as much work in eight and a half hours as non-abstainers could do in ten hours. Swiss contractors find the same true among Italian workmen.

According to an article by Dr. C. R. Drysdale, in the Echo (London), there is arising on the continent a wave of medical opinion in favor of total abstinence of healthy persons from alcoholic drinks. He quotes from an article by Dr. E. Jordy, of Berne, the following items from which show the current of medical opinion.

WORSE THAN WASTED.

Altogether, not taking stock of the money we expend for champagne whose sparkling bubbles burst about the brimming goblet, and the other imported and native wines which drive away carking care, the people of the United States spend annually for drink and tobacco the almost incomprehensible sum of $1,641,903,460.

The mind is incapable of grasping the largeness of the total, but when it is remembered that this is more than the circulating medium of the United States; that is, $27 per head more than the per capita circulation; that it proves that the head of every family, supposing he handles the purse string, pays out $195 annually for drink and tobacco, and that every dollar in the United States goes each year over the bar or the counter of some tobacconist, some idea of its magnitude can be obtained.—Atlanti Constitution.

Ninety-two per cent of our crime is the result of intoxicating liquors.—Carroll D. Wright.

For fifty years no smoker has graduated from Harvard College with the honors of his class.

Fifteen brewers and wine merchants in Great Britain alone died last year leaving between them $30,833,500.

The last census shows that the only States where crime is not increasing faster in proportion than the population are prohibition States.

The average character of boys and young men in Kansas is said to be much higher since prohibition of the liquor traffic than before.

Sir Andrew Clark, the general physician in the largest hospital in London, says that seven out of every ten persons treated there owe their ill-health to drink.

The drinking habit is disappearing in Iceland and with it, crime. In 1890 only eight persons were imprisoned on the whole island, the population of which is a little over 40,000.

The Grand Jury of Cometa county, Georgia, sometime since made the following report: "We note with sorrow the marked increase of crime in this county, and that the same is traceable almost invariably to the influence of whisky."

A prominent physician of San Francisco says: "No cigarette that I ever heard of is free from opium. Beyond question the boy who smokes cigarettes stunts his growth, wrecks his nerves and weakens his heart and kidneys long before he reaches manhood."

New York State has three thousand six hundred and seventy-five inmates of its juvenile reformatories, Kansas only two hundred and eight; New York has eight thousand one hundred and ninety convicts in its penitentiaries, Kansas only nine hundred and eighteen.

Through fear of offending two liquor dealers who were patrons of the school, a member of the graduating class of the Pawtucket (R. I.) High School was not allowed to deliver his graduating oration because of the strong prohibition sentiments it contained.

Word and Work says: "There is one small village in the south of Ireland, with 1,200 inhabitants, in which there are actually fifty-two licensed public houses for the sale of strong drink. It requires thirty-two police to keep the inhabitants of that village in order."

The Methodist Times states that "In one of his recent speeches at Birmingham, Lord Rosebury made the following solemn and memorable statement: 'I go so far as to say this, that if the State does not soon control the liquor traffic the liquor traffic will soon control the State.'"

The following amendment to the Constitution has been introduced into the New York Constitutional Convention, viz: "There shall be added to Article 3 of the Constitution: Section —. No license to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this State; but the Legislature may by law tax and restrict such traffic, with purpose to prevent or diminish the evils thereof."

Colonel Fukushima, the noted Japanese horseback traveler, spent one year and five months, preceding June, 1893, in a solitary horseback exploration of the continent, during which he traveled 8,719 miles, and passed through all kinds of climates and hardships in perfect health. He attributes the success of his undertaking, the greatest of the kind ever known, to his temperance living and his abstinence from all alcoholic drinks.

Looking the Republic over, we find that, following on the glitter and music of our Columbian year, came soon the cry for work or bread, and the growl of discontent, which bodes no good, while the shambling regiments of the Coxey army will not be sneered down, but stand at our gates of power like a judgment. Why all this in a country like ours? Because we have counted the gold of our revenues above broken hearthstones and ruined souls, and God awakes to take account of the values that bear his image.—Mary T. Lathrop.

Chief of Police Lindsey, of Topeka, recently attended the National Convention of chiefs of police at St. Louis. In a newspaper interview after his return he said that the greatest sight he saw was the Anheuser Brewing Company's establishment, the second largest in the world, covering five blocks. Among other things he said: "The stables at the brewery are the finest I ever saw. The halls between the stalls where the horses are kept are covered with fine Brussels carpet and everything else corresponds. The office and parlors where the employes stay, when off duty, are furnished finer than any rooms in Topeka." Whose money furnished these elegant stables?

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON VI.—Third Quarter, 1894, Aug. 5.

SUBJECT.—The Baptism of Jesus.—Mark 1: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased—Mark 1: 11.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Mark 1: 1-11. T.—Matt. 3: 7-17. W.—John 1: 15-28. Th.—John 1: 29-34. F.—Acts 2: 36-41. S.—Rom. 6: 1-11. Su.—2 Pet. 1: 16-21.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The forerunner.—vs. 1–4. Mark passes over in silence the birth, childhood and youth of Jesus, and dates his Gospel from the preaching of John the Baptist. This was in the strict sense "the beginning." To the wise men and the shepherds, to the aged Simeon and Anna, Christ was indeed revealed as a Saviour, but the Gospel, glad tidings of great joy, was not published to the people at large until John appeared on the banks of the Jordan, and said, "Behold the Lamb of God." The hearts of the people had to be prepared for its reception. The plowshare of conviction needed to be driven through the stubborn soil. God follows the same method to-day. Misfortune, sickness, trial are his John Baptists, preaching to the unconverted soul in thunder tones, "Repent," and by showing the need of a Saviour leading it to Christ.

2. The preaching of John.—vs. 5–8. We should naturally expect such a preacher to appear in the crowded streets of Jerusalem instead of the wilderness. But when God gives his servants a message to say they need not be anxious about an audience. If their only anxiety is to speak just the word he gives them they may always be sure of some one to hear it. There is no magnet on earth that equals the drawing power of the simple Gospel, and John's preaching was the first faint dawn of the full day. It was new, and strange, and startling. Nothing like it had ever been heard before. It said to the Pharisee and the harlot alike, "Repent!" It called the bigoted formalists of that day who thought themselves so much purer than other men "a generation of vipers." It preached a remission of sins through the waters of baptism, and not through the bloody offerings of the temple. It pointed to the coming of One who should baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire, and whose very shoe latchet he was not worthy to unloose. The cities and towns of Judea were emptied of their inhabitants as they flocked to the wilderness to hear this greatest of revival preachers that the world ever saw. Curiosity possessed some minds, awe and wonder others, while not a few were evidently longing for something purer and higher than the traditions and formal observances prescribed by the elders for those who wished to live a religious life. Neither the idea of baptism or repentance should have been new to the Jewish mind, and yet the effect seems to have been one of complete novelty. The spiritual life and meaning of Judaism had been smothered under the rubbish of Rabbinical interpretations. But still more startling to their ears must have been his prophecy of the Coming One. Doubtless it wakened diverse feelings just as the thought of his second coming does now. The formal hypocritical Pharisee could not have enjoyed the thought of that purging time when the chaff should be burned with fire unquenchable, but to the true penitent longing for a deeper work of grace it must have been like a sunburst of hope—that the Desire of Israel was indeed coming, had already come. It is the false professor, not the true Christian, however weak and faulty, who shrinks from the fires of purification.

3. The baptism of Jesus.—vs. 9–11. Jesus meanwhile had grown to manhood in his Galilean home, and heard with others of the fame of the great preacher. Impelled by a divine impulse he joins the crowd waiting on the banks of the Jordan to receive the rite of baptism. "But John forbade him." Jesus was a stranger to him but the first glance showed him that he was his superior. Whether he recognized at this time the Messiah cannot be certainly told, but it is probable that he did and was not surprised when he saw the descending Dove, the sign that was to give him positive assurance. "But Jesus said, "Suffer it now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." He who came to fulfill the law must be obedient to the law in its every requirement. There are some who speak slightingly of ordinances, and who seem to think that it is a mark of high spiritual attainment to be able to live independently of them. To all such our Saviour's example should be a rebuke. None of us are so pure and holy that it does not become us to fulfill all righteousness; to make ourselves an example in all good works. We may feel that we get as much or more spiritual benefit by staying at home and reading our Bible as by going to church. The preacher may be greatly our inferior in learning or spiritual attainment; the service may not be to our taste, and yet it becomes us not to neglect "the assembling of ourselves together" lest others should do the same, and decline in their religious life. "And he saw the heavens opened and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him." This was the sign seen only by John the Baptist by which he was to know the Messiah, but the voice which said, "Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," was heard by those who stood by, although the words were unintelligible. As children of God we shall know that he is well pleased with us if like his divine Son we "do always those things that please him." It will be like an inward voice speaking to us his approval though unheard by the world.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The chief of the court of Japan is a Christian, and president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Tokio.

—There are eleven Congregational churches in the country with above 1,000 members each. Three are in Chicago.

—Rev. Dr. Campbell, pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church of Monmouth, Ill., has been asked by the authorities of Monmouth College to become its representative among the churches.

—Rev. A. Reinke, of the large German Lutheran church near Leavitt street and North avenue in this city, has just started a Lutheran mission among the deaf and dumb. Pastor Reinke is an enthusiast in the instruction of mutes.

—The mission committee of the Wisconsin Lutheran Synod have resolved to expend $1,600 in the erection of school and dwelling houses for the use of their missionaries among the Indians in Arizona. The goverement has given a grant of ten acres of land.

—The Conservator announces that a dispatch to Bishop M. Wright gives the welcome information that the Supreme Court of Michigan has decided that the United Brethren church property in that State belongs of right to the radical wing, which stood by the principles of the church.

—The Rock River (Ill.) Assembly of General Council Lutherans begins July 31st and closes August 10. Among the teachers and lecturers are: President J. M. Ruthrauff, Dr. H. C. Haithcox, and President H. Dysinger, D.D., of Carthage College, Rev. M. F. Troxell, Dr. Rhodes, and President Ort of Wittenberg College.

—The Congregational denomination have 5,236 churches. Of these all but 947, or over three-fourths, are supplied with preaching. There are 5,138 ministers. Of these, 1,779 are not in the pastorate. The condition of the ministry is very different from what it was in 1857. Then there were 1,731 ministers, and of these only 529, or less than one third, were not in the pastorate.

—At the Association for the Advancement of Science, recently held in Minneapolis, among the announcements made was that a prayer-meeting would be held on Sabbath afternoon. At the appointed time the prayer-meeting service was conducted by the newly-elected president of the association. In the meeting it is stated that the most eminent astronomer in the State led in prayer. Among the most eminent geologists, botanists, and biologists in America are to found some of the most devout and God-fearing men and women.

—Westminster Chapel in London, the largest Congregational church in the world, has been without a pastor for seven years. It has recently called to its pastorate the Rev. W. Evans Hurndall, M. A., who is a graduate of St. John's College, Cambridge. He is about 50 years of age and has had phenomenal success in the east of London. The congregations had diminished sadly because there had been no pastor, but now the chapel is thronged and there is every reason to believe that the prosperity of the days of Samuel Martin will return —Ram's Horn.

—An instance of unusual religious intolerance for Switzerland has recently occurred. The Protestant minister of Biasca, in the Tessin Canton, rented a hall in a neighboring place, where there were about fifty members of his congregation. When about to commence his service the Mayor and his secretary handed him a decree of the municipality forbidding the celebration of the divine service under penalty of imprisonment. The case has been referred on complaint to the Federal Council, which has promised to examine into it. Although this is the most intensely Roman Catholic of the different cantons, such a manifestation of intolerance is very exceptional.

—Rev. Isaac Hyatt, pastor of the Free Baptist church at Poland, N. Y, baptized fourteen June 17. It was estimated five hundred people assembled on the beautiful shore of the Kuyahoova to witness the service. It was evident to the spiritualiy minded that the Holy Spirit was in the midst of the people moving them to fear God and obey his commandments. On the following Sabbath Bro. Hyatt gave the right hand of fellowship to 17; making 24 who have been received into the church the last year, 18 by profession of faith and 6 by letter. "Let the glory be given to God," writes Bro. Hyatt, "and prayer continue to be offered that the Holy Spirit abide with the church and people at Poland."

—Inquiries are frequently made as to the destination of the students who graduate from Mr. Moody's Bible Institute at Chicago, and it is interesting to trace the homes of some of them. Forty-one are evangelists, 22 city missionaries, 21 pastors of Congregational churches, 18 pastors of Presbyterian churches, 13 pastors of Baptist churches, 11 Sunday-school missionaries, 9 pastors of Methodist Episcopal churches, 9 pastors' assistants, 8 Y. M. C. A. secretaries, 8 evangelistic singers, 7 are among the Indians; and of those who have gone as missionaries to foreign countries, 16 are in India, 12 in China, 9 in Africa, 2 in Japan, 5 in Turkey, 5 among the Freedmen, 2 in Persia, in Siam, in South America, in Burmah and in Corea, and 1 in the West Indies and in Mexico, Syria, Micronesia and Ceylon.—American Messenger.

To New Subscribers!
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
—)FOR(—
FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00 Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, pass words, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 328 pages, cloth, $1.00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

COLUMBIAN BREAD.

Did any of you, sister housekeepers, attend Mrs. Ewing's lectures on bread-making during the housekeepers' congress of the Columbian Exposition. We thought we had good bread at our home before, but upon hearing her lecture and seeing her exhibition we determined to follow her method. The result is the best bread I ever ate, not occasionally, but always, when her rule is followed. Quick raising and a large quantity of yeast insure the preservation of the gluten in the flour. She clearly demonstrated that if a small quantity of yeast is used, the flour sacrifices its nutritive particles to make more yeast in order to bring the dough to the desired lightness. One cake of compressed yeast is the proportion to every pint of "wetting." Dissolve the yeast in a tablespoonful of cold water, take half milk and half water for the "wetting" and add one teaspoonful of salt. Use a dairy thermometer to test the temperature of your "wetting" and your flour. Both must be at 75°. Then stir in as much flour as will free the sides of the pan from sticky dough. Do not use too much flour. Then turn out on your board and knead it five minutes, more if you wish, but that will do for that amount of dough. Put it in your bread bowl and butter the top of the dough. Cover it and keep it at 75° for three hours. Then make it up in small loaves—two inches wide, two inches deep, is the best size for pans. Let it rise one hour, butter the top and bake in quick oven half an hour. If your husband and sons are like mine, they will want no other bread. The small size of the loaves insures its thorough baking. The crust is crisp and tender. Eating fresh bread no longer insures dyspepsia. If you keep a girl she will say it is the easiest way to make bread.—Field, Farm and Fireside.

USING FRUITS.

At this season farmers' wives and many other wives are hurrying up their housework to get time to go out in the hot sun perhaps a mile or more from home to pick berries to put up for winter use. This ambition to provide some delicacy for the family is praiseworthy, and the women deserve sympathy and more aid than they usually get from the menfolks. But there is such a thing as going too far with this business. Hot weather, when the berries are in season, is when they are relished and needed most, and daily wants should be supplied first. Some women will be careful when planning a house to have windows to let sunlight into the living rooms, and when they move in will fill every window with house plants so no light can get in or sight get out. Others will pinch and contrive to get berries enough to fill a certain number of jars to show their neighbors, and use dried apples in the family all summer in order to do it. These are some of the results of trying to do as much or a little more than some other woman has done in the same direction. But it would be better to keep some of the plants in the yard and use the dried apples in the winter.—Mirror and Farmer.

To prevent fly specks, boil three or four onions in a pint of water, and with a brush go over the picture frames. Flies will not light on articles washed in this solution.

A simple plan of disinfecting rooms consists in putting a saucerful of salt in the middle of the room, and pouring on it a dram or two of sulphuric acid. The fumes that arise do the work of disinfection.

Whatever may be the cause of blanching, the hair may be restored to its original color by the use of that potent remedy Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Excelled by None

Mr. C. F. King

"For some years I have been a severe sufferer from Rheumatism. So much so that I could not attend to my business and was confined to the house for weeks at a time. I was advised to try Hood's Sarsaparilla and have constantly improved since I commenced to take the medicine. I am now well and strong again. Hood's Sarsaparilla is truly 'excelled by none.'" C. F. KING, Verona, N. J.

Remember,

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Be sure to get HOOD'S Cures

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills. 25c.

Songs for the Times.

FOURTH AND IMPROVED EDITION.

BY GEO. W. CLARK.

Author of the "Temperance Songster," "The Liberty Minstrel," "Free Soil Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," Harp of Freedom," etc.

This work comprises some 235 Elemental, Reformatory and Progressive Songs, Odes, Psalms, Hymns, etc., words and music, old and new, on a great variety of subjects, including Truth, Freedom, Temperance, Prohibition.

Likewise National, Loyal and Patriotic Songs. Also Miscellaneous, Social, Domestic and Hygienic; Songs adapted to the home circle, to private devotion and public worship, to national gatherings, mass meetings, and all humane movements for the good of mankind. It is printed on new electrotype plates, made from new type; the impressions are on nice white paper, and its pages are clear, bright and cheery, and the price very low for so costly a work.

Single copy, 30 cts; by mail, 35 cts; by the dozen, $3; by the hundred, $20.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS

AND

REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

THE

Folly, Expense & Danger

OF

SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

THE GUIDING HAND;

—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

-——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARROIN.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS

OF

FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

OUR SMALLEST SERVANTS.

[Eduard Strassburger, in Deuische Ruudschau, Berlin.]

We are so much accustomed to regard bacteria as the most dangerous foes of humanity that the attempt to demonstrate their utility and essential importance may seem almost paradoxical. Nevertheless, it would be as unjust to condemn the whole class for the diseases engendered by a few as to condemn humanity for the offences of its criminals.

As a matter of fact, the services of bacteria in the natural economy of the earth are so important that disease germs may fairly be regarded as isolated, scattered bands. The elimination of the bacteria from the earth would be immediately followed by our downfall. Refuse would accumulate in piles mountains high, while the plants which depend upon it for the greater portion of their sustenance would perish in sight of plenty, from the want of microbes to convert it into assimilable food. Every trace of organic matter is greedily seized on by microbes, which convert it into plant food or decompose it into its original elements, and thus render the earth continuously habitable for man and beast. These bacteria are so small that a million of them may constitute a mass hardly visible to the naked eye, nevertheless, such is their capacity for increase, under favorable conditions, that the progeny of a single bacterium, if it could multiply unchecked for fifteen days, would constitute a mass exceeding the cubic contents of the ocean. Their increase is arrested only by failure of food supply; they are consequently always in sufficient numbers for the conversion of all the dead organic matter of the earth into food substance for living plants. The manure which the farmer spreads on his fields contains billions of these industrious laborers, all actively engaged in converting the organic elements into plant food, and even in rendering the inorganic substances (lime, potash, phosphates, etc.) assimilable. The most important soil constituents for the farmers are the nitrogenous compounds, the presence of which in manure constitutes its prime value as a fertilizer. Plants cannot take nitrogen from the air—they must take it up by their roots from the soil. But nitrogen is not a proper constituent of soils. In a state of nature the soil gets a supply from the substance of the plants and animals that die on its surface, but grain crops soon exhaust this natural supply, and the fertility of the soil can only be maintained by the addition of nitrogenous substance, which the bacteria, in pursuit of their own well-being, convert into assimilable plant food.

But experience has taught the farmer that while grain and root crops exhaust the soil of its nitrogen, beans, peas, and other leguminous plants, so far from exhausting, add to its supply, thus rendering possible a high cultivation by rotation of crops, with considerable economy of manure. But these leguminous plants are more capable than others of drawing their nitrogenous supply from the atmosphere; modern investigation has demonstrated that it is the work of bacteria which find sustenance and habitation in the roots of the leguminous plants, where they multiply from generation to generation, repaying the service by dying there and sacrificing to the plant all the nitrogen they have taken from the atmosphere, in assimilable form. The little swellings on the roots which constitute at once their dwelling-place, laboratory, and tomb, may be readily recognized on removing an acacia, or mimosa, or other leguminous plant from the pot in which it is grown.

Not less beneficial are the bacteria as purifiers of water. If a vessel of water containing animal or vegetable refuse is allowed to stand in the open air, the fluid gradually clears until every particle of dead organic matter is consumed, when the bacteria cease their activity and sink to the bottom. The same thing occurs on the great scale in nature; the Seine, which at Paris receives an enormous amount of refuse, is clear and pure at seventy kilometres down stream. The bacteria have consumed the refuse. The Elbe, the receptacle of the refuse from so many cities, is drinkable at Hamburg from the same cause.

World's Fair
MEDAL
And Diploma
Awarded

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL
FOR THROAT
and
LUNG COMPLAINTS

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar-room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

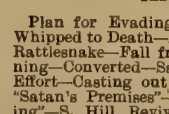
Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

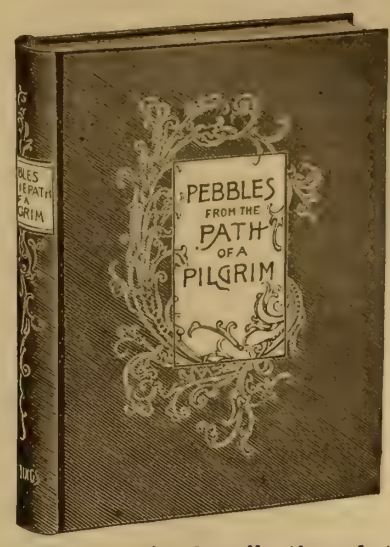


THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S
]-oo-[
SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. KIMBALL,
Box 277. Newmarket, N. H.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT
of the Holy Ghost,
BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

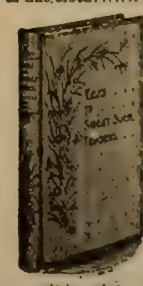
Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by persuing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.

By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth.....75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr. 3	"	"
The Lily	" " 2	Pure Words	" 3	"	"
Light & L	Scholar's Qrly. 3	Light & L	Inf Cl. wk. 4	"	"
	Teacher's " 6	" "	Lesson Leaf " 1½	"	"
Golden Treasures	1	L. & L. Primary	Qly 4	"	"

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr. 25c
& Sunshine, each Pr. Yr. 25c Scholar's " " 20c
The four to one address " 75c L. & L. Infant Class, weekly, 25c

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

In the House Saturday the resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by direct vote of the people was passed, 137 to 49—13 votes to spare over the necessary two-thirds. The announcement of the result was received with Democratic applause.

The Secretary of the Treasury has ordered all mints to work on the coinage of silver dollars during the remaining days of July. Three million will be turned out by Aug. 1.

CHICAGO.

The federal grand jury returned twenty-three indictments in Judge Seaman's court Thursday afternoon and was discharged from further service. In the indictments were included the names of about seventy-five individuals, who are charged with violating the federal statutes during the railroad troubles of the last three weeks.

During a parade march of U. S. troops Monday, July 16, three men were killed outright and many were wounded, some of them fatally, by the explosion of an ammunition box. The ammunition box was attached to a Kotchkiss gun belonging to Battery F, Second Artillery, U. S. A. Seven artillery horses also were killed, and residences were damaged each side of the street. The cause of the accident is unknown.

The work of building the Crerar library, for which the late John Crerar left a fund of $2,000,000, will soon be begun. Articles of incorporation have been drawn and executed, which will shortly be forwarded to the Secretary of State.

By a unanimous vote the trustees of the sanitary district of Chicago decided to revoke the licenses of saloons along the line of the new drainage canal, and to issue no more saloon licenses. This action was taken on the showing of many contractors that since the establishment of these resorts drunkenness and disorder had increased to an alarming extent, so that the police force had to be enlarged.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

The Pullman Palace Car company Friday issued a notice to its stockholders that on Aug. 15 it would pay a quarterly dividend of $2 on each share of stock. The dividend is declared from the "net earnings" of the company, the circular says.

Strikers made an attack on people returning to work at Pullman. Especial rage was shown toward twenty girls who began work in the laundry on Friday. Police and militia had to fight with mobs much of the day.

President Lyman J. Gage of the Civic Federation has appointed the committee which will make arrangements for the labor conference. The purpose of the conference is to devise a means to prevent strikes, and to settle by conciliation and arbitration all differences between capital and labor.

Saturday morning Deputy Marshals arrested several additional members of the Board of Directors of the American Railway Union.

COUNTRY.

Judge Ross, of Los Angeles, Cal., found John Howarth and Engineer Martin Kelley, railway strikers, guilty of contempt of court for violating his injunction at Barstow, and sentenced each to eight months in jail.

A conductor and a Negro non-union brakeman were shot and probably fatally wounded by strikers as their train, a local freight, was pulling into Newton, Miss. The sheriff telegraphed to Meridian for bloodhounds to put on the trail of the strikers.

A bad wreck on the Chicago & Grand Trunk at Battle Creek, Mich. It was the work of men who had a grudge against the road and who wanted to get even with the company. One man was killed and several were wounded.

The Pullman shops at Ludlow, Ky., re-opened with eighty-five men, the employes who refused to go out when the strike was inaugurated, but who afterward quit work. The shops usually employ about 140 men.

A dispatch from Toledo says that influences are at work to break up the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. A large number of engineers have been discharged and blame their chief, P. A. Arthur. They may leave the Brotherhood and join the American Railway Union under Debs.

Last Friday was remarkable for extreme heat in New York and New England. The thermometer ranged from 95 to 114 in the shade. There were many cases of sunstroke.

The Kansas Pacific Bondholders' Committee has entered suit in the United States Circuit Court for New York in the name of John Quincy Adams against Russell Sage and the estate of Jay Gould to recover $11,000,000, being the proceeds of securities said to have been taken from the company.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad has a bad showing for the month of May. A decrease in returns of 73 per cent. is an evidence how stagnant business is in the great territory tributary to this system.

Customs officials at Fall River, Mass., have found whisky and other contraband spirits concealed in baled hay imported from Canada.

Authorities at Webster City, Iowa, have prohibited the sale of "lemon extract," which, on analysis, has been found to contain 93 per cent of pure alcohol.

Fossilized remains of an ancient pig, larger than the rhinoceros of the present day, have been found in the South Dakota Bad Lands by a party of prospecting Princeton students.

Garfield Wilkinson of Wichita, Kan., was shot dead by his younger brother yesterday while testing the merits of a "bullet proof" shield he had manufactured.

FOREIGN.

China continues to make preparations to assert her alleged rights in Korea, and from the present indications it is judged that war is inevitable unless Japan recedes from the position she has hitherto maintained. Orders were recently issued for 12,000 Chinese troops to prepare for departure to Korea.

The Constantinople correspondent of the London Standard telegraphs that notwithstanding the attempts at concealment, it is clearly established that over a thousand persons lost their lives during the recent earthquakes in the Turkish capital.

The Provisional Government at the Sandwich Islands declared the government a republic July 4. The proclamation was quietly received and the action has been recognized by most of the foreign powers.

A plague epidemic broke out in Canton and other parts of southeastern China and has spread until the mortality has reached 100 daily. The greatest hold of the disease is at Hong Kong, where most of the foreign commerce touches.

EFFECTUAL.—Charles J. Booth, Olivewood, Cal., says: "I have used Ayer's Pills in my family for several years, and have always found them most effectual in the relief of ailments arising from a disordered stomach, torpid liver, and constipated bowels.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	52⅛	@	53
Winter No. 2	52⅞	@	54
Corn—No. 2	42¼	@	44
Oats—No. 2	31	@	39¼
Rye—No. 2	40	@	43
Bran per ton	13 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@11	50
Butter, medium to best	10	@	17
Cheese	06½	@	09
Beans	1 25	@ 1	90
Eggs, fresh	09	@	10
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 50	@ 5	10
Flax	1 21	@ 1	28
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50	@ 9	40
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@70	00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	55	@	65
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼	@	06½
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	7	@	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 00	@ 4	75
Common to good	2 00	@ 3	90
Hogs	3 20	@ 5	15
Sheep	1 00	@ 3	80

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	56	@	57⅛
Corn No 2	47½	@	47¾
Oats	42	@	55
Rye	52	@	55
Eggs	12	@	14
Butter	10	@	18
Wool	19	@	28

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 40	@ 4	75
Hogs	4 50	4	80

LODGE LAMP

a monthly of choice articles on the SECRET : SOCIETY : SYSTEM, which the National Christian Association proposes to publish if the demand for such a paper is such as to warrant its issue.

Annual subscription 20 cents.

Clubs of 20 for only $2.00.

Send in your pledge to take 20.

☞Money to be sent when you are notified that the plan is successful.☜

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S AND AGENT'S PROFITS.
$12 buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc. free. OXFORD MFG. CO.
338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

A BOOKLET.
107 pages, 5x7 inches.
Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents
—o:o—
The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf.....1⅞c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅞c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.
LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING
Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.
T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

AMERICAN HANDBOOK
AND
CITIZEN MANUAL.
BY
MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Ch

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.
BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST
A Secret Empire;
Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.
By Rev. Richard Horton.
Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.
Price, 60 cents.
NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

The Nonesuch Professor,
In his Meridian Splendor. By William Secker (Puritan). With an introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. 16 mo, $1.00.

"It is a mine of sparkling gems."—Presbyterian Observer.

"A sheaf of golden grain, ripened by grace, and sweet with the flavor of rare simplicity and holy wisdom."—N. Y. Observer.

"It is a searching book."—Christian Intelligencer.

"This is a wonderful book. At whatever page you open it, your eye lights upon pithy aphorisms that combine the sententiousness of Benjamin Franklin with the sweet, holy savor of Samuel Rutherford. It contains hundreds of bright seed thoughts."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI., No. 47. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,266.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
The Sunset Club..... 8
The Bible in Schools.... 8
The New England Letter 8
An Oregon Convention.. 8
The Boston Common Arrest 8
Who can tell About Pullman? 7
A Midnight of Knights.. 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Ear-marks on the A. P. A. 1
Overcoming Evil..... 2
The Bible in Schools.... 2
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Address of Pres. C. A. Blanchard..... 3
LABOR UNIONS:
Trade Unions and Liberty; Social Conditions; Government by Labor Unions 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
LITERATURE 6
SELECTED:
How we are Fulfilling Prophecy..... 4
Christian Communism 9
REFORM NEWS:
Southern Outrages; From South Dakota Points; Coasting on the Pacific; Southwestern Tennessee 5,6
CORRESPONDENCE:
Poisoning the Wells of Society; From one of the first Lecturers; Pith and Point. 6
Strike and Union..... 7
N. C. A..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16
MARKETS 16

The New York Observer is an ancient paper of three thousand seven hundred and sixteen issues. It may, therefore, be excused for beginning an editorial letter with the words: "The Chicago Exhibition, which was the great event . . . . a year ago, is almost forgotten." Old age is always forgetful.

Hon. Frederick Douglass suggests that a monument be erected to the memory of John Brown at Harper's Ferry. But who shall design a memorial for such a man. The great rock by his grave at North Elba, or the arsenal he used as a fort are the best mementoes of the kind. His monument is our national history since 1860.

The Moslem branch of Freemasonry met last week in Denver. So large a number of "imperial" officers were elected that there is a decided flavor of Chinese Confucianism about it all. One religious system is as good as another for men who worship the gods of the Mystic Shrine. Mr. Luce of this city was chosen "Imperial Potentate," and A. B. McGuffey of Denver "Imperial High Priest and Prophet. Let such prophets be warned by the fate of Baalam and of Zedekiah, the son of Chenaanah.

Debs is beseeching the press of the country to help him make war on society. A large number of the members of the British House of Commons (105) have sent out a circular to the editors of prominent daily papers asking them to cease their war on society; that is, to cease demoralizing the people by reporting sensational stories of crime and brutality, and in other ways inflaming the sensual nature of men. Such an appeal needs to be made in this country with a ten-fold alarm. The Sunday papers are sowing seeds of anarchy broadcast, and the utmost recklessness prevails in some quarters respecting the influence of the press on public morals; if only the income be secure, there is no further question.

The full report of the decision of the papal delegate Satolli confirms our first estimate, that it affected only the diocese wherein Bishop Watterson had declared against permitting any saloon-keeper among church officers. The bishop ordered also that if saloon-keepers came for absolution they should be refused unless they cease to offend against the civil law "and conduct their business blamelessly if they can, or get out of it, and keep out of it altogether." The Columbus bishop is evidently in earnest and his example may be followed by others. The principle at least is established that the great mass of liquor-sellers (as statistics in our Temperance department show) may be checked in their villainous business by the Romish priests.

"The Discipline of Drought" is a suggestive title in the last Gospel Messenger. Dwellers in the towns have many griefs through fires that despoil, through temptations that wreck the home; social pitfalls and social quarrels; the failures and disappointments and thefts of business. But these do not always come so closely to the heart by way of discipline as does the withholding of the rain. It is too familiar a remark that the farmer is a croaker. The weather seldom pleases him,—too wet for this, too dry for that. Having few other reasons for complaint, he gives double attention to the weather. Now if this anxiety and glancing at the clouds be mixed with gracious thoughts of God, we may reap most precious experience of our Father's love and providing care. If he is a partner on the farm, come rain come shine, there will always be the right sort of weather in the heart.

By request of the government attorneys the trial of Debs and his comrades has been postponed till September 5th. The strike leaders gave bail, therefore, and withdrew from the martyr-cell in the county jail. Their last proclamation was written on the Sabbath previous, calling upon the public to boycott Pullman cars. They assume that everybody believes the Pullman company has grievously wronged its employes, and ask the whole nation to take hold and bring the wrong-doers to justice. The self-conceit and rant of these leaders seems to have no limit. The public is willing to wait for President Cleveland's committee to report, and is meanwhile learning that the workmen at Pullman have not so much anxiety about themselves as the leaders of these labor lodges. Debs is a curiosity of brazen assurance. He wants the American press to publish his fulmination and keep it standing in type. Such prints as the corrupt Times are welcome to do the bidding of Debs and his company. His proclamation does not ask the poor workingmen of Pullman to cease paying dues that he may draw his $3,000 salary.

Dispatches of Friday leave no doubt that an Oriental war has begun. The formality of an official declaration may not be thought necessary by either China or Japan, but the fighting has begun; and it must not be taken for granted that it will be brief or bloodless because between nations long lethargic and indifferent to modern progress. The clumsy junk and the stink-pot of the Chinese have given way to steam war-ships and rifled guns, and years ago Japan adopted the code of Napoleon. The cruelty of semi-barbarism may use the inventions of civilization to produce new horrors in war. At least it is not possible that the missions of China, Corea and Japan shall not be seriously affected. They may personally suffer great trials and be compelled to flee homeward; but out of all the tokens of distress and loss let us cry to Him who makes our wrath praise Him and then restrains it. Let us keep eye upon the Orient. War is a great iconoclast. Customs, creeds, hoary superstitions often go down before it. Shall not the Christian church be ready to go up over Chinese walls as soon as they crumble? and may we not appeal for peace in the name of religion with success, although our Secretary Gresham fails with the magic name of America.

EAR-MARKS ON THE A. P. A.

BY REV. A. W. PARRY.

Some anti-Protestant and anti-Christian, as well as anti-Catholic, features in the American Protective Association demand attention. The objects of the order, as stated in its published declaration of principles, seem to be right: "To preserve our civil and religious liberty, to conserve unsectarian public schools, to restrict immigration, and to require every office-holder in the country to be a true American." These are all necessary to carry out the preamble of our Constitution; and they demand our hearty co-operation.

But aggressive Americanism is not aggressive Christianity. The former protests against Romanism, as a political factor in the government of the nation, while the latter is the persistent foe of all evil, Romanism included. Nominal Protestantism even does not do this. An individual, or an institution made up wholly of Protestants, may be lawfully zealous for their inalienable rights as guaranteed to them by the Constitution of the United States, and yet may possess a spirit and use a method in asserting and securing these rights which are not in harmony with that constitution of Christianity, the Sermon on the Mount.

The more I study into the objects and methods of this popular and remarkable movement, the more fully I am convinced that there is need of a word of warning, lest the unseen snare which the fowler has spread for unwary feet entangle even those who love and watch for Christ's appearing. "Therefore I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say."—Prov. 14:16; 22:3; 12:15.

My objections to this order are formulated out of what is hidden in the following statement of their principles: "We are in favor of putting into office honest and true patriots, who are best qualified to fill the position, regardless of political parties." Nothing wrong in that, you say. There is. The words 'putting into office,' and 'best qualified,' are the pivots on which swing the objections. "Putting into office" refers to methods, and "best qualified" refers to their requirements.

Briefly stated, my objections are:

1. They are put into office by the aid of an organized secret conspiracy. An agreement by a body of men, good or bad, under the veil of organized secrecy, to do good or evil against their fellow-men, is a conspiracy.

Hon. Wm. H. Seward, one of the greatest men ever sent to the United States Senate, said in a speech in the Senate chamber, in 1855:

"I belong to one voluntary association of men, which has to do with spiritual affairs, and that is the Christian church. I belong to one temporal society of men and that is my political party.....These two associations, the one spiritual and the other temporal, are the only voluntary associations to which I now belong, or ever have belonged since I became a man; and unless I am bereft of reason, they are the only associations of men to which I shall ever suffer myself to belong. Secret societies, sir? Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow men."

Such words as these certainly are fitly spoken, and hence are like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." They show clearly that secret organizations, formed even for good political ends are a conspiracy, and in the very nature of things bring the individual conscience into bondage to the dictation of an organization of men who do their work in secret.

2. One of the practical results, growing out of the proscriptive measures against Romanists holding office, is the boycotting that exists in some localities. While every legitimate means should be used to prevent men from holding office who are not in full allegiance to our government, yet it is wrong to in any way interfere with a man's inalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. A Roman Catholic, Jew or Chinaman is our brother man. He is entitled to com pete in the labor and commercial mart for the purpose of earning a livelihood. To say we will not trade with him, we will not allow him the same chance as ourselves in the trades or industrial market, is contrary to the broad principles of universal brotherhood, and the teachings of Christ in the Golden Rule and the parable of the Good Samaritan.

3. It encourages worldly methods in raising finances and carrying on its work. The following item is clipped from a recent issue of the Chicago American, a leading A. P. A. paper in the West, and substantiates the above objection:

"A ball was given by Council No. 74, A. P. A., of Kansas City, and proved a success. The council had dodgers printed with red and blue ink on white paper and headed 'A. P. A. Ball.' These were hung in some of the street cars and distributed throughout the city, resulting in a large attendance."

4. Like all secret societies, it appears to be interested in honoring the initiated and strengthening the clan. Hence it is selfish in its purposes.

The following is reported to be a fact: A certain individual who was a candidate for re-election as a member of the school-board in his city, was a true Protestant, and an efficient, honorable member of the board. He was, however, not a member of the A. P. A. They put up for his place an untried man who had their brand on him. The former was defeated, though a Protestant, because he did not have the A. P. A. mark in his forehead and in his hand. This shows that in some localities there is a lack of sincerity. It is not only to prevent Romanists from getting into office that they work, but in order to secure the much-coveted prize the office-seeker must have the A. P. A. brand on him. "We favor putting into office those who are best qualified." Masons think that members of their ancient fraternities are "best qualified." Is this not true of all secret orders?

5. It breeds a spirit of hatred. Some good men, after they join feel angry towards the papists. A certain brother who had joined the order remarked, "The priests and the Catholics ought to be knifed." This may be good A. P. A.-ism but certainly it is not Christianity. It is in direct conflict to the sentiments, "Love your enemies," "Resist not evil," "When reviled revile not again," and "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." The Bible calls it murder.

6. It is one of the brood of Freemasonry, and is a stepping-stone to the higher orders. Secretism is a banyan tree dropping its branches into every available spot.

W. J. H. Traynor, the Supreme President of the A. P. A., has taken, according to their own statements, every degree of the Orange Knights, Royal Black Knights of the Camp of Israel, and the Knights of Malta. He is also a member of Detroit Lodge No. 2, Free and Accepted Masons, having taken the degrees in the York rite. (See Mackey's Lexicon for full statement of these orders.)

Their recognized organs advertise the Knights of Malta, and recommend their members to join this military, oath-bound appendant Masonic society, stating, "The degree work is beautiful, sublime and instructive, and is so arranged that when a candidate has successfully attained it, he will have gained a thorough knowledge of the fundamental principles of all life." Here is the croaking of the Masonic frog!

7. It has a tendency to interfere with church work. I know some who are regular in attendance at the lodge meeting, but are very seldom found at the prayer-meeting. Some openly declare they would sooner leave the church than this order.

In this criticism of the order I have had no spirit of hatred but of candid inquiry. I have given the facts and drawn the inferences from the papers printed in the interests of, and favorable to, this association. I regret that so good an organization has on its way fallen into the hands of secret society leaders and propagandists. The devil as an angel of light seeks by this very means to deceive the very elect. I can say without fear of contradiction that I am an avowed enemy to any foreign interference with our American principles, and by tongue and pen am endeavoring to keep the purposes of Rome to make us her vassals before men.

The main feature of Jesuitism is that the end justifies the means—it is right to do evil that good may come. In this fight with Romanism the end does not justify the means. The interests of God's cause are at stake. Christ Jesus was an ideal reformer, and he declared in regard to his whole life work: "In secret have I said nothing."

Free Methodist parsonage, Evanston, Ill.

OVERCOMING EVIL.

BY REV. ISAAC HYATT.

Many are the voices calling us from error to truth, from sin to holiness, from earth to heaven. They unite in saying:

"There is a battle to be fought,
A victory to be won."

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." In this Scripture we are taught the fort of our strength and the weapons to use to fight the battles of life, so as to win the victory. Naturally, in an unregenerate state, our way and the Lord's way of doing things are very different. Uninfluenced by the grace of God, it is our way to overcome evil with evil; the Lord's, with good. It is our way if smitten on one cheek to strike back; the Lord's, to turn the other. If spoken unkindly to it is our way to retort back with bitter and stinging words; the Lord's, to utter the kind answer that turneth away wrath. It is our way to be over-exacting with our fellow men; the Lord's, to deal gently with the erring one. We are inclined to cover up iniquity; the Lord exposes and withstands it, not in the spirit of malice, but in righteousness and love.

Therefore, to win the victory in the conflicts of life, let us step out of our way into the Lord's, and meet error with truth, wrong with right, unkindness with kindness, hatred with love, trickery and deception with openness and fidelity. Thus throwing off our ways and putting on the ways of the Lord we shall soar above the world into the atmosphere of heaven, to enjoy the bliss of thinking and doing as the Lord thinks and does. So doing we shall rise higher in our wisdom, become purer in our aspirations, and go about as Jesus did doing good.

"Overcome evil with good." What a noble sentiment! No teaching like this is found in the heathen classics; nothing like it ever existed among pagan nations. Christianity alone breathes forth this lovely and mighty principle. And the reason why we are so powerless to ameliorate the condition of our fellow-men is because this principle has so small a place in our hearts. If we would rise to the dignity of our mission we must be imitators of Christ in this respect in a much larger degree. It is on this principle Jesus came to seek and save the lost; on this principle he bled for us on the cross; on this principle he died for us to make a full atonement for our sins, and on this principle he now intercedes for us in heaven. And unless this principle permeates our being, we are but sounding brass and tinkling cymbal.

In our ignorance we often think the shortest and quickest way to overcome evil is to strike it down without mercy; but whoever perceives the hand of God in the history of this world sees the utter failure of such a course. We have tried long enough to conquer the world with the sword, with angry debate, and theological contention to see it never can be done in any such way. But whenever the sword is tempered with love as well as steel, and arguments are seasoned with good will as well as logic, and theological discussion has an eye to the glory of God more than to self-vindication, then the fallow ground of our human nature is broken up and the seeds of righteousness are sown in the furrows thereof to spring up and bear fruit to the glory of God. Whenever we expose iniquity or rebuke wrong-doing every word should be steeped in love. "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." 1 John 4: 11.

This spirit of brotherly love is beautifully illustrated in the action of a delegate of the Christian Commission towards a colonel in the rebel army at the battle of Gettysburg. As this delegate was passing among the wounded during that terrible battle he saw a Confederate officer who was suffering sorely with a severe wound. He said to him, "Colonel, can I do anything for you?"

"No," was his defiant reply.

After a time the offer was repeated with like result. Soon the air became almost unendurable from the offensive odor of the wounded. The delegate offered to put cologne on his handkerchief. The officer bursting into tears said, "I have no handkerchief." "You shall have one," said the delegate, wetting his own and giving it to him. The subdued rebel said, "I can't understand you Yankees: you fight us like devils and treat us like angels. I am sorry that I entered this war."

Oh, if we had more of this spirit we would be happier and accomplish much more good!

Poland, N. Y.

THE BIBLE IN SCHOOLS.

BY MRS. M. E. COOK, PRESIDENT CHICAGO WOMAN'S EDUCATIONAL UNION.

Building is no less important than tearing down. Put love into the hearts of the people, as taught in God's Word, and you have the rock foundation upon which all that is great and good may be built.

Give the Bible a fair opportunity to influence the hearts of the children in our public schools. Its use will not be in vain. In prayer and by intelligent judicious efforts let Christians promote undenominational, Christian religion in those young hearts which are wax in receiving impressions and iron in retaining them.

At the suggestion of the editor of the Cynosure, Mr. Kellogg, the way was opened for the Chicago Woman's Educational Union to do a good and great work for the Bible in schools at the World's Fair. The petition of 59,183 names secured there is now awaiting an appropriate time for presentation to the Board of Education.

At the suggestion of Dr. John H. Barrows, Hon. C. C. Bonney prepared the following epitome of our position, which you will notice is ably endorsed:

PLATFORM OF THE MOVEMENT.

To the Educational Authorities in Charge of the Public School:—The undersigned believe they express a general conviction of the intelligent and patriotic public when they say that there is an urgent need of better and more earnest instruction of the rising generation in the fundamental principles of morals and religion, which are indispensable to the well-being of society. We also believe that all thoughtful and candid persons must admit that there is a very great number of children in our country who, if not instructed in those principles in the public schools, will not, as a matter of fact, be instructed in them at all. We must, therefore, choose between such instruction in those schools or its absence during the formative period of the character and conduct of the child.

It also appears that the experience of the last twenty-five years, and the present state of the country, render the present a very auspicious time for an endeavor to carry into effect, more fully than has been done heretofore, the crowning provision of the great ordinance of 1787,—"that religion, morality, and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

There has been no failure to teach knowledge merely. What we need is more efficient instruction in the fundamental principles of character and conduct, which are embraced in the general terms of religion and morality. Religion, in the sense of doctrines and creeds, belongs to the churches; but religion, in the sense of high character and good citizenship, also belongs to a proper system of education.

We therefore propose that the question of proper instruction in such fundamentals of religion and morality be entirely separated from all other questions relating to the system of public schools; and that Catholics and Protestants, Jews and Gentiles,—in a word, all good citizens, unite in recommending that the reading book, consisting of selections from the sacred Scriptures in the use of the schools of Toronto, Canada, with the approval of both the Catholic and Protestant churches, or similar selections, be put in use in the public schools of this country without delay.

As the whole religious world united, without objection, in the universal prayer to "Our Father which art in Heaven," during the World's Religious Congresses of 1893, we believe that all right-minded classes of the American people would now agree on the daily reading in the public schools of suitable selections from the Sa-ored Scriptures, and the recitation of that prayer, and the two great commandments on which hang all the law and the prophets, thereby fixing in the minds of the children the vital spiritual principles on which good citizenship and the future welfare of our country so largely depend.

Signed:

Hon. C. C. Bonney, president World's Congress Auxiliary of Columbian Exposition.

Dr. John Henry Barrows, author Parliament of Religions

Wm. J. Onahan, late City Comptroller.

Wm. R. Harper, president Chicago University.

Henry S. Harrison, proprietor of the Advance.

Gen. Geo W. Smith, ex-president Union League Club.

Dr. Simeon Gilbert, editor of the Advance.

Dr. Edward P. Goodwin, pastor First Congregational church.

Prof. Graham Taylor, Chicago Theological seminary.

Prof. Samuel I. Curtis, Chicago Theological Seminary.

Henry Wade Rogers, president Northwestern University.

John P. Strasburger, late Superintendent of Schools, South Chicago, Attorney at Law.

Wm. Carey, late U. S. Attorney for Utah.

Frances Healy, for ten years a teacher in the Chicago public schools.

Wm. A. Amberg, president of the Columbus Club.

Miss Eliza Allen Starr.

Mrs. Susan Gale Cooke, Sec'y Woman's Branch World's Columbian Exposition.

Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House.

Theodore N. Morrison, pastor Epiphany Episcopal church.

Z S. Holbrook, proprietor Bibliotheca Sacra.

Prof. David Swing and still others have written commending this work.

COMMENT.

(The Inter-Ocean.)

There is nothing in that prayer [the Lord's Prayer] that cannot be made the aspiration of every soul that believes in God—and all children believe in God; they cannot but believe in him. Atheism is a warping of the soul that is not a disease of childhood. And there is no aspiration of that prayer that does not tend to the betterment of mind and body.

The daily repetition of this noble prayer, the recitation of the ten great commandments, of love to God and love to man, and the reading of a few passages of Scripture, such as Catholics and Protestants elsewhere have approved for use in the public schools, are the limits of the proposition of the memorialists.

(The Record.)

The petition declares, what few will now deny, that "religion in the sense of doctrines and creeds belongs to the church; but religion in the sense of high character and good citizenship also belongs to a proper system of education." The position is so well taken that it disarms all except the most captious criticism.

That our schools are divested of all direct moral influence on the pupils is due to the position of persons who are themselves moral and teach their children morality at home, and not to the depraved or vicious. Since this is the case, there seems to be no good or valid reason why the schools may not teach morals and religion without trenching upon the domain of the churches or of sectarianism.

(The Tribune.)

Such a memorial should carry great weight with it when presented to the Board of Education for adoption, as it will be. Unquestionably in pursuance of the laudable purpose to free the schools from dogma and to avoid trenching upon creeds and offending religious denominations the school authorities have swung clear to the other extreme and have stripped the process of education of everything that tends to inculcate honesty, honor, morality, and the qualities of good citizenship, which certainly are essentials of the highest purposes of education. The Board of Education should give this memorial immediate and favorable consideration when it is presented, "thereby fixing in the minds of the children the vital spiritual principles on which good citizen ship and the future welfare of our country so largely depend." There is no higher responsibility resting upon Boards of Education and teachers than that of making good citizens out of the rising generation. So far as lies in their power, a praiseworthy work is being done in the schools looking to a higher standard of patriotic citizenship. Now let us have something done for morality and high personal character. This once accomplished patriotism will follow of necessity.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

THE SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

ADDRESS OF PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

(Concluded.)

This suggests another objection to secret societies in politics, viz: that they are certain, if they become powerful, to interfere with the administration of justice. Of course, there are many members of such orders who are good citizens and who desire the supremacy of law. There are also others who do not, and the secret organization is particularly adapted to the needs of this latter class. Allan Pinkerton told my father that the first man whom he arrested, after a long chase, appealed to him as a Mason to let him go. I was, not long since, talking with a gentleman in the Treasury building, who was at the time at the head of the secret service of the United States. He told me that he was was a Mason. I said: "Why do you say was? why not am? He replied: "Because I became tired of having men and demand release from arrest in the name of Masonry, and I told my lodge that so long as I was in this office they would have to excuse me from my oath. The former sheriff of my own county told me within a year or two that he had been cursed in open court by a Masonic criminal because he had refused to recognize his appeals for help.

SHAKE MASONIC JEWELS IN MY FACE

This shows what every intelligent man would know beforehand, that a secret society, when it becomes widely extended, will inevitably be used in cases where only the law of the land should decide.

THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE IN LODGES

about this. If the American Protective Association proves permanent, and secures a fair share of the offices, its members will appeal to it for aid in civil and criminal cases, as naturally as those connected with the Masonic order or the Clan-na-Gael do to their fraternities now. As now there are some who put their political privilege and civil duty above their secret society obligation, so it will be then. And as there are others who put their lodge relation above their duty as citizens, so it will be then; and these latter cases will be neither advertised nor acknowledged. The trouble with secret societies in politics is that you can never tell when the lodge is to work you harm. If you could, you could guard yourself against it. As Wendell Phillips once said to me: "A secret society is needless for any good purpose and may be used for any bad one." The good member will not use it for any lawless purpose; the bad member will use it for every lawless one. The weapon is adapted to ill uses and should be taken away. "Give the baby a hammer and a looking-glass" is not a good rule; "Give the madman a razor and turn him loose in the streets" is a worse one.

We shall probably be told that secrecy is essential and that the good accomplished by lodges could not be attained without their obligations and penalties. I deny this. Who would interfere with the insurance lodges if they were open? Who would hinder the relief work of beneficial societies? Who would object to any legitimate political action which the orders professing political character might take? If this were a country governed by a despot, there would be excuse for secret combinations among citizens. Or if this was a time of war it would not be common sense to publish plans of campaign in the newspapers. But in time of peace, in a representative democracy, and in a day when all legitimate movements are certain of a sympathetic hearing, a secret society, no matter what be its professed purpose, is out of place; it should by abandoned by all good citizens and

THEN SUPPRESSED BY LAW.

Centralization and governmental oppression are the dangers of monarchical countries; faction and lawlessness are the historic foes of freedom. England could have maintained the commonwealth but for the distrust and hostility of partisans. France could have gone on in the pathway of liberty but for the jealousy of sections. The United States have already experienced one war of interests, and that bloody experience should warn us against repeating the conditions which produced it. A wise writer has said: "From the lakes to the gulf and from ocean to ocean there is only air enough to float one flag." It is as true that to that one flag all citizens should bear equal and unquestioning allegiance. If we are to retain the proud position to which we have been advanced by the providence of God we must avoid the disintegrating power of secret societies. Washington warned us against it; Rome, slain not by barbarian foes, but by luxury, vice and faction, utters in solemn tones her testimony. Justice fallen in the streets and equity unable to enter, thieves bartering away the taxes of cities, and murderers walking the streets with bloody, unwashed hands, all these are voices bidding us pause in the steep and slippery path down which already we are rushing.

I well understand how naturally the thought that change is impossible will arise in all our hearts. It is our custom to imagine that what is must continue and that there is no use in uttering a

PROTEST AGAINST THE INEVITABLE.

When millions of human beings were bought and sold; when they were whipped and branded, and torn with dogs, and burned to death; when slave ships sailed the sea and slave coffles covered the land, and slave pens reared their devilish fronts by the Capitol of the United States, those who cried out against the iniquity were told that it always had been and always would be. Now, while wives are murdered every day by drunken husbands; while children are beaten and starved every day by drunken fathers; while will-broken men every day are finding it easier to blow out their brains than pass the open door of the legalized grog shop, we hear the same lazy, cowardly cry. When men who toil long hours seven days a week for small pay ask for Sabbath rest; when they request the privilege of spending one day of the week with wife and children, greed and pleasure-seeking join hands to hold them to their task.

I do not believe that these or any other iniquities are here to stay. My God opened the Red Sea for Israel. He has lifted woman from the position of slave to that of helpmate for man. He has supplanted the rule of the monarch by the rule of the people. He has driven slavery from three-fourths of the earth. He has given to millions of little children the light and love and warmth of Christian homes. He has driven whisky out of the church and made it disreputable. He is showing this nation to-day that an adulterer and liar,

EVEN IF HE IS A KNIGHT TEMPLAR

and goes to church, is no better than a harlot. In due time He will establish His kingdom on earth, a kingdom which is light and in which there is no darkness at all.

I do not believe that a majority of my fellow citizens who belong to lodges, Romish or Protestant, know the real character and tendency of these orders. I believe that hundreds of thousands of men who now wear the collars and aprons of secret societies will soon throw them off forever. I believe that in their heart of hearts most men love fair play and do not believe in taking secret and underhand advantage of their fellows. I believe that we are to see a day when patriotism shall be the death of partisanship, when Christianity shall destroy sectarianism, when political campaigns shall be comparisons of views and expressions of political judgment rather than battles of secret hordes for the spoils of office, when the taxes of the people shall be expended in promoting their interests rather than in feathering the nests of political conspirators. When that good day comes, as come it will, unless we are cowardly and unbelieving, Bryant's song will be realized, peace and plenty will prevail, and each grateful American will say of his native or adopted land:

"There's freedom at thy gates, and rest
For earth's downtrodden and opprest,
A shelter for the hunted head,
For the starved laborer toil and bread.
Power, at thy bounds,
Stops and calls back his baffled hounds.

"O, fair young mother! on thy brow
Shall sit a nobler grace than now;
Deep in the brightness of thy skies,
The thronging years in glory rise,
And, as they fleet,
Drop strength and riches at thy feet."

THE LABOR UNIONS.

THEIR MERITS AND DEMERITS DISCUSSED.

TRADES UNIONS AND LIBERTY.

(From a speech by Hon. Abram S. Hewitt.)

Liberty is the right of every human being to do what he chooses under the law. Liberty has, in a measure, been taken away from this country by foreign rule. The evils of foreign rule mean the rule of people who wish to enjoy what they call liberty unfettered by the obligation of law. Liberty is not the attribute of government or of society. It is the attribute of the individual. It is the right to acquire property. No free government attacks the right of property or the right of the individual. Throughout this land we see organizations trying to destroy the rights of the people. They try to take away the rights of individuals secured to them by law. You have a great work before you in training your children in institutions where they teach that liberty and property are sacred. Trades unions are, no doubt, in a measure, honestly endeavoring to secure better awards for their labors, but they are perverted by refusing to allow men to work for a livelihood. They use violence when a man refuses to strike. It is an infringement on the liberty of the individual to prevent a man from gaining a livelihood, as is the practice of trades unions. When that principle becomes a part of our Constitution then farewell to liberty, farewell to freedom, farewell to thought of country and of home.

SOCIAL CONDITIONS.

(From an address by Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs.)

No restless ferment in society, like that now appearing in this land and in others, is prophetic of good, save as the power of wise and righteous love is in it. A man or a community is not changed or elevated by artificial adjustments of outward relations, any more than a man is made a master of music and art, or is made humane, gentle, and heroic in spirit, by being set upon stilts. Especially, no form of violent assault on society as it is, among a free people, can ever finally be effective.

Criticism is often in order, and it has for its errand to point out abuses whose removal must be taught, to indicate defects that need to be supplied. But criticism of itself never creates. Condemning others helps no man upward.

Those who see our society's evils, as all of us may, and are most alert in denouncing them, can effect it for good only by bringing into it from themselves a sweeter and noble power; by propagating the temper to which, at last, all abuses are amenable, and by which whatever is noble and worthy shall get itself assured. It may be no doubt a slow process, and often disappointing in immediate effect, but it is the process which the Master contemplated, and out of which has come whatever is most to be honored and valued in the life of communities, in the life of the world. To lift society forward and upward, from each attainment to a nobler, this is the power, and there is no other.

Evil influences, if not expelled, are encountered, limited, effectually restrained. They become more furtive, silent, less aggressive, as if conscious of unseen barriers and blights, perhaps not to be analyzed, but not to be escaped. An artificial improvement planned by theorists, commanded by rulers, apparently made permanent by legislation and diplomacy, or sharply sustained by military force, is yet always uncertain in its continuance. The wrecks of brilliant and chivalrous schemes, unsupported by a paramount moral assent, are abundant in history.

GOVERNMENT BY LABOR UNIONS.

(Editorial in the Economist, Chicago.)

There is no disguising the fact that the most thoughtful men are becoming more and more apprehensive as to the future of the political and social system of the United States, in view of the may disorganizing influences now at work. And there is abundant reason for their fears. The influences which formerly held evil tendencies in check have largely lost their potency, and the leadership of the masses has passed out of the hands of the men with whom it has heretofore been considered safest. The church is losing its hold on the masses. The newspaper, which at times has been regarded as the successor of the pulpit in the creation of popular opinion and sentiment, has to a great extent forfeited its place and does not command the same confidence as formerly. Newspaper readers now look for news mainly, not for opinion. Compare the tremendous power of Horace Greeley's paper with that of any dozen of the present day, and this point will be readily appreciated. Corporations and other business organizations have in recent years occupied a very wide field not merely as handlers of material things, but in the way of social and political conditions.

But we have reached a turning point beyond all these things. Not the church, the newspaper, the corporation nor the political organization leads the masses now, but the labor union, the club, or the clique of men, by whatever name called, having a common interest, meeting in saloon or hall devoted to such purpose. They do their own thinking, they have their own leaders, they care nothing for the established order which an old Christian civilization has set up. They stand in the relation of outsiders to the institutions that have grown up with the government and the society founded by the fathers of the Republic. But they are much better organized than the conservative elements of the country and every move they make is dictated by what they consider their most vital interests. Hence they wield a tremendous power. What combination of capitalists is there that can make such a demonstration of influence as the labor unions have in the soft coal districts of this country? What employer is there that can hold others of his branch of business to such strict rules as are enforced among the labor unions, where working a little over time, or performing more than a prescribed amount of labor is punished with a heavy fine? Railroad companies make agreements as to rates and immediately break them; manufacturers of a certain article form combinations to restrict production, which fall to pieces before they are fairly in working order; but the labor union rules its members with a rod of iron, holds them to a strict account for every act and takes control of the employers' own affairs out of his hands.

These are plain facts, patent to every observing man, and here is the most important subject that the sociologist can study at the present time. It is not probable that this state of things can last long. The hostile attitude of labor and capital toward each other bodes ill to the country. Nor is it well that the employing class and the employed class shall be so separated in their habits of life, in their social relations and the sources of their inspiration. The exclusive organizations on both sides tend to defeat one of the most important aims of our form of government, which is the establishment of a homogeneous society and a union of interests among all classes of people and all portions of the country.

Each of the two classes has its vices. The capitalist uses his money to influence legislators and others in power; the laborer resorts to violence and intimidation. The laborers have decidedly had the advantage for some years past, and they have been pushing that advantage to the utmost—so far, indeed, that they are now seemingly near the breaking strain. It may be set down as a certainty that they will not acknowledge defeat till the issue has been tested by a severe struggle. They have numbers on their side, and when the question comes to the ballot-box it is number that tells. And in their ranks are myriads of men born under governments which they consider oppressive and bringing with them to this country a certain rebellious feeling against all government; others are ignorant and the tools of designing persons; others are simply greedy and want measures of polity adopted that will benefit them; while others still will always vote and act as becomes good citizens. We have seen from time to time that the bad elements have obtained the control, a conspicuous instance being found in the City Council of Chicago.

Every believer in a republican form of government bases his belief on the virtue and intelligence of the great mass of the people. Can we have confidence in the stability of our system if ignorant and violent men gain the supremacy and the control of the legislative bodies and official positions is in the hands of those who will cater to the ignorant classes? The country has prospered under the old forms of leadership. The leadership of labor unions is a comparatively new thing and is hazardous. It is not inspired by the best intelligence of the country or the best understanding of the theory of our government and society. So persistently have the dangers of capitalistic combinations been held up to the public gaze that little thought has been given to the mighty power of the labor unions, but this new government of the United States is the great fact of the times and must be recognized.

HOW WE ARE FULFILLING PROPHECY.

The Two-Horned Beast is itself the False Prophet—the Roman Church—that wrought miracle in the sight of the Ten-Horned Beast—the Roman State—which had the wound by a sword and did live.

The Image of the Beast is an artificial, secret and imperial system, formed in imitation of the civil Roman Empire—the ten-horned beast, by "them that dwell on the earth," and at the command of the ecclesiastical Roman Empire—the two-horned beast. The Image is a system of organizations, after the manner of the nominal Christian church, and is as universal as civil government. Comprising within itself all the essential features of both state and church, and permeating every grade of society more thoroughly than nihilism and spy surveillance of Russia combined, it dominates in politics, religion and commerce. By its insidious methods and deleterious influence the voice of Truth is silenced, the arm of Justice paralyzed; the social, religious and business relations are restricted, perverted and corrupted, while vanity, folly, selfishness, greed, hatred, murder and anarchy are fostered and encouraged. It is a vast Secret Empire, ramifying through the whole earth, whose power is feared, whose insignia of despotism are eagerly sought and highly prized, and whose "mark" is borne in the right hand and in the forehead of high and low, rich and poor, free and bond. Without a mark, number or name indicating fealty to some branch of this Plutonian idolatry, it is difficult for any one to buy or sell, to labor or live. The law of this mystic government is, "Whosoever will not worship the image of the beast must be killed." Rome, pagan and papal, through her duplicate and representative—the IMAGE— is still Mistress of the World.—E. D. Adams, in Times of Restitution.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Republic of Hawaii.—Peace making fails.—Tariff and personalities in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 25, 1894.

The Cabinet has decided to endorse the action of Minister Willis in promptly recognizing the Hawaiian republic, although it would have been more pleasing to the administration had he waited for instructions before doing so. A formal protest has been received from the ex-queen, but it is not probable that any official notice will be taken of it.

The latest news indicates that Secretary Gresham's commendable efforts to prevent war between Japan and Korea and China have been unavailing, although the hope is still held out at the legations of the countries involved that the trouble is exaggerated in the meagre cablegrams that have been received.

It has been a very exciting week in the Senate. The tone of the speeches made plainly indicated that the even-tempered calmness that should accompany legislation on matters of great public importance was sadly lacking. The only encouraging feature about the situation is that individually the Senators and Representatives all appear to recognize that the country wants the tariff uncertainty settled much worse than it wants any particular tariff bill to become a law. The business of the country can and will accommodate itself to any tariff law, but it must re-man in a state of semi-stagnation so long as there is a doubt as to what the tariff law is to be.

Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, used some very plain language in an address at one of the weekly religious meetings, on the words: "The common people heard him gladly." He said that he thought the church often fell short in its duty, and that instead of concentrating in its corporate capacity the high ideals of its Divine Founder it catered to cliques and classes, which ofttimes robbed it of the opportunity of doing lasting good. "In fact, Christ's love for the common people," he said, "leads me to believe that it is one proof of his divine nature." He also aptly quoted the well-known words of President Lincoln: "The Lord must have loved the common people, because he made so many of them."

He advised young men to adopt three rules for their guidance. (1.) Be careful as individuals not to allow money to dwarf your better nature. (2.) The church is no respecter of persons. (3.) Truths and duties never conflict. Of the first he said: "Jesus did not say how much money we ought to have. When a man's pile is so high he cannot look over it to see his fellow-man, he has too much; when a man's money becomes so heavy that it squeezes out of him his sympathy for his fellow-man, he has too much. A very little money may do that if we have a very little sympathy, but if we have a very large amount of sympathy it will take a great deal of money. If our sympathy is strong enough money may be only the means of showing that sympathy."

As an antidote for the well-known and wicked affinity of the lodges and saloons, the Anti-saloon League has made arrangements for a plentiful supply of icewater for the Knights of Pythias who will take part in the street parade which is to be a feature of the encampment to be held in Washington next month. In making the offer to the citizens' committee having charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors and their friends, the communication from the Anti-saloon League stated that it was done to prevent their patronizing saloons. When the G. A. R. had their immense street parade here it was charged, and was probably true, that the saloon-keepers on portions of the route took extra precautions to prevent cool water being supplied to the marchers in the neighborhood of their saloons, because they wanted their thirst to drive them into the purchase of intoxicating drinks. The efforts of the League may render a temporary relief. It does not pretend to reach the root of the evil complained of, which seems to be fundamental. *

REFORM NEWS.

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES.

BULL-DOZING AND LYNCHING OF NEGROES HINDERS OUR WORKER IN NEW ORLEANS.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—There is much to be done in this city for the anti-secrecy reform in the way of from house to house canvassing, holding cottage meetings whenever possible, distributing tracts, and preaching wherever the door is open.

I preached at New-light Baptist church, Rev. Wm. Patterson, pastor, to a large and appreciative audience. Much interest was manifested in what I said. Elder P. has been a secretist, but like many others he has found the lodge unprofitable.

I was to have left for Biloxi, Scranton, Ocean Springs and Mobile July 18, but the Gulf Coast is in such an uproar just now that I have found it necessary to postpone. The following from a private letter to me explains why:

Biloxi, Miss., July 15.—....Only a few weeks ago two colored men were shot down and murdered like dogs in broad day-light, and nothing has been done about it, and now here comes a more dastardly and cowardly crime. Yesterday morning I was eye-witness to the lynching of a small twelve-year-old boy. Dear cousin, the newspapers have lied,—yes, unreasonably lied about that poor child. The little thing was just twelve years old, and you know a twelve-year-old child could not outrage a full-grown woman. A crowd of white men banded themselves together and went to the jail and took the poor little child out and lynched him. His poor mother, when she saw her child, fainted.

I am so worried I don't know what to do. An appointment has been made for you to preach here Wednesday night, but, dear cousin, take my advice. Don't come. The country is too much upset, and you know there are some who don't like you; and I fear these bulldozing brutes might lynch you, for I know how plain you speak. For God's sake, don't come over here yet.

The above shows the necessity of postponing my coast tour at present.

The Louisiana State Legislature has adjourned after passing several of the most barbaric and inhuman bills known to a civilized Christian nation. The Negro, without doubt, is an object of most cruel and barbaric persecution. It is an unmistakable fact that the Negro is charged with seven-tenths of the crimes committed by whites. Many of these charges are trumped up and without foundation.

I will relate one incident. During last year I had occasion to be summoned before the committee on public health to testify against a German who was conducting a nuisance in the neighborhood. Myself and one other colored man were the only Negroes who would testify truthfully against the nuisance. As a matter of course my action was sufficient cause for the whites to take offense and swear vengeance. About four or five weeks thereafter I was passing within a square of this good German's house. Two white girls, seemingly 12 or 13 years of age, were walking along the street, and one of them with a child in her arms ran against me and screamed and pretended that I had assaulted her and the child, but fortunately enough eye-witnesses saw the whole transaction to put to silence the girl's lies.

Now suppose I had been out in the country. Nothing would have saved me from being lynched, and the press dispatches would have hurled my name all over the country as a rapist and desperate Negro brute. Is not God a God of justice? Will he not hear the cries and sighs of the oppressed and needy ones? Is it any wonder our country is in an uproar? The whole land is filled with violence. Oath-bound, blood-curdling secret lodges are infesting our country worse than grasshoppers in Kansas! "Oh, for a closer walk with God!" Pray for deliverance from the snares of the Southern fowler. Yours in the work,

Francis J. Davidson.

FROM SOUTH DAKOTA POINTS.

FROM WHENCE COMES SALVATION FROM SECRETISM TO OUR LAND?

St. Paul, Minn., July 26, 1894.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—There are absolute certainties,—things as certain to be as man's continuous existence. If a man continues to believe a lie forever, it appears that he is given over to believe that lie. The Bible says he is given over to believe the lie that he may be damned for having pleasure in unrighteousness. Righteousness demands his damnation. No right-thinking man can be satisfied without the execution of the sentence that forever damns the perpetual liar.

Freemasonry itself is a lie, the blackest and most malignant conceivable. It turns the truth of God into a lie and bases the salvation of the soul of a man upon his personification of that lie. All over this country I find church members, deacons, elders, pastors, presiding elders and bishops, "irrevocably," they say, sworn to keep the Masonic secret, under an obligation with death penalties, forever, "never," they say, "to be repudiated or laid aside." They have pleasure in that lie. Therefore, if they carry out their sworn obligations and forever keep that lie, it is absolutely certain that they are forever damned in hell by the righteous act of God Almighty.

Having just returned from S. Dakota you will expect me to write something about the journey.

Rev. L. Harrisville and his people, of Sioux City, Iowa, bade me welcome to speak in their church, St. John's Norwegian Lutheran, on Monday evening, July 16. Rev. R. Munn, a Baptist minister, attended the meeting. At the time Captain William Morgan was murdered he and his wife lived in western New York, and both well remember the facts connected with that awful tragedy, They were sixteen years of age at that time; now they are 84. They are members of the First Baptist church of Sioux City, Iowa. It is, of course, a great grief to them that their pastor, Dr. Strickland, is a notorious Freemason, Mystic Shriner, etc. But they are not deceived by him, neither is God Almighty, whom the pastor professes to serve in the pulpit. After conversing with him a year ago I regarded his conversion from the Masonic lie to the truth as utterly hopeless.

Rev. E A. Zetterstrand, pastor of the Augustana Swedish Lutheran church, opened his church for the Bible truth about secretism on Thursday evening, July 19 The pastor of the German Lutheran church, Missouri Synod, gave notice of this lecture from his pulpit on the previous Sabbath, which the pastor of the First Baptist, Presbyterian, and First Methodist churches refused to do.

After much individual conversation with the people of Sioux City on secretism some friends of the truth there were found; and, although they have a few saloons which are outlawed by the State prohibitory law, I did not see one drunken man during the whole week.

The next place I visited was Canton, S. Dakota, and found a few warm friends of truth, as Rev. Mr. Soule, pastor of the 'Church of God," Brethren Skartreed and Stubberud of the Lutheran denomination. The latter two brethren procured the Lutheran church in which our meeting was held on Sabbath evening, July 22. The meeting was well attended. The ladies filled one side of the church and the men the other. Some prominent statesmen reside here, but they are Freemasons. Secret lodges are exceedingly popular with both state and church in this interesting city. The United Norwegian Lutheran Academy is located here. Much need of the Gospel is felt in the town. Spirituality is, as witnessed by the lodges, of a very low type. One thing in their favor is that they hold the saloon traffic in abeyance.

I was informed that the president and professors of the Lutheran academy were in the audience on Sabbath evening, but my stay was so short that I did not visit them.

At Sioux City Bro. J. T. Gilbert, a member of the First Baptist church, rendered much assistance in advertising the meeting and has become much interested in this work. Yours truly,

W. Fenton.

COASTING ON THE PACIFIC.

A FRIENDLY NEIGHBORHOOD RECEIVES THE TRUTH GLADLY.

From Port Orford I went to Euchre Creek (Ophir P. O.), where I spoke two evenings and twice on the Sabbath. The congregations were very good, considering the scattered condition of the community; and the best of attention was paid.

The leading lodgemen were present and some confessed that I understood the subject. One Mason said, "He went so far as to give the signs right along; and while many present could not recognize them, we Masons did." He further said, "Mr. Williams has been a Mason, or else he has studied book-masonry more than I ever have. I should like to have him thoroughly tried; but there's no use for me to tackle him, for he knows more about it than I do." This is quite a concession, I am sure.

I find a number of real good people here. Among them is a large family named Miller, all of whom are true-blue anti-secretists so far as I could learn. Among the persons showing me special kindnesses at this point I mention the following families: Mr. Burrows, Stevens, Woodruff, Donaca, Geo. B. Miller, Reid Miller, Elvin Miller, J. C. Miller, J. H. Coy, and Mrs. Ann Miller.

On Sabbath I spoke at 11 A M.; then took dinner in the hall, where at 2:30 I spoke again. At this service a deep conviction settled upon the congregation, and could I have staid there could have been many saved. I appointed a camp-meeting committee to co-operate with the pastor in arranging for a camp-meeting to be held here some time in August. It is to be conducted by Bishop Dillon of Salem. I predict a good meeting. It is a fine place, on the coast, where there are plenty of clams, mussels, oysters, fish, and game of all kinds. The scenery is fine. Any person desiring an "outing" at the coast this summer could "kill two birds with one stone" by attending this meeting.

I do not know the precise arrangements of the committee, but I do know that Mr. Woodruff has made a very liberal offer to those coming from a distance, to throw open his pastures to the people, and furnish many more conveniences for campers. May the Lord bless him and save him during the meeting.

I secured eight subscribers for the Cynosure at this point, and received the best collection given at any point since I left home.

The first night I spoke here, the lodge men asked me to announce that there would be a reply to me the next night, but when they were given the opportunity to speak they were all like the man when the mule kicked him—had nothing to say. I think the seed sown at this point will bring forth fruit for many days. I leave this place with very kindly recollections of my stay with them and pray that it may be blest to the good of all. P. B. Williams.

AN EARNEST WORKER IN SOUTHWESTERN TENNESSEE.

McNAIRY, Tenn., July 20, 1894.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I am devoting myself more and more to lecturing on Masonry and Prohibition. For many years I have applied the Gospel against secret lodge systems, and occasionally have given special lectures on the subject. More recently have given several with good effect, as I believe. I held one discussion with a Disciple preacher on Masonry, for two nights in succession, each of us having a half hour at a time and two rounds apiece each night. At the close of the second evening he declined to go farther. But I had not said all I wanted to, and so occupied the next night without an opponent.

At a Masonic picnic where a Baptist elder was lauding Solomon, and his master workman and work, in the course of his remarks he claimed that Masonry was favorable to the Christian religion. I was constrained to ask, Why then is the name of Jesus Christ purposely ignored in the lodge religious ceremonies?

He answered me in a kindly manner, saying, "Bro. Powers, we will tell you about that when you join us."

I replied, "I don't like to go it blind. I want to know about it beforehand."

At the close of the meeting I distributed to the large audience about two hundred Anti-masonic tracts. So that the devil did not get all the work done on his side. If I was not too poor to spend the time, I would be "up and at it" more than I am.

I have long desired to do more in showing up the anti-Christian character of the lodge system. Sometimes my soul gets on fire with desire for the fray, so palpable is the deceivable and anti-Christian character of Masonry, and so morally desolating its influence! Would to God it might be held up to view before the people everywhere! How often do the abettors of secretism "put darkness for light and light for darkness;" call that good which is evil, and "call evil good," using such a great variety of sophistries that it takes wisdom and tact to withstand them. But ours is the cause of God, and the Holy Spirit is our helper; thank God. I am resolved to trust him more, and do more in this much needed reform. C. POWERS.

CORRESPONDENCE.

POISONING THE WELLS OF SOCIETY.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., July 24, '94.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Last autumn the pastor of the Christian church here did not have smooth sailing after he preached his sermon on secret societies. As I wrote you at the time, he was surrounded by an excited coterie of his congregation when he came down from his pulpit, anxious to vindicate the lodge. Afterward the subject came up in the prayer-meeting, some of the members claiming that if they were needy they would rather depend on help dispensed through the lodge than through the church. Some of the members took the side of the church. But a leading member and prominent politician advised ministers to let the lodge question alone, because it was a one they knew nothing about, and it would give them trouble. He said a pastor in Bloomington had once taken up the fight against the lodge, and the result was, that pastor had to leave. He said other pastors would have to leave unless they let the lodge question alone. It was understood that the pastor to whom he referred was the Rev. W. P. McNary, the former pastor of the U. P. church, who brought Edmond Ronayne here and took an active part in agitating the secret society question.

Some time after the discussion in the prayer-meeting above alluded to, we were surprised to read in the daily Telephone of the resignation of the pastor of the Christian church, Rev. J. W. Van Cleave. We were sorry, for he was an able preacher, a radical Prohibitionist, and preferred the church to the lodge. He declined to say that the lodge question had anything to do with his resignation, but some of his members who oppose the lodge say it did.

Bloomington is a lodge-ridden city. It has about twenty-five lodges. The Knights of Pythias held their anniversary exercises in the Christian church on Sabbath, and paraded the streets with a band of music. The Odd-fellows' anniversary was held on Sabbath in the M. E. church, the pastor, Dr. J. E. Steele, who is an Odd-fellow, preaching the sermon and glorifying the order. The members in regalia attended in a body, forming a double file procession reaching almost two squares.

The most alarming feature of the evil is that among the students of the State University there are some thirteen secret college fraternities. These have largely taken the place of the once flourishing literary societies. They have their finely furnished halls in the upper stories of business houses, and these amount to little more than dance-halls, where male and female students spend most of the night in dancing and revelry. They have become such a notorious evil that even Freemasons join in condemning them.

It is in such fraternities that young men are trained to be partisan in politics, sectarian in religion, and secret order men in society. There is no more serious phase of this evil than the way it is poisoning our fountains of learning and corrupting the young men and women who are so soon to be leaders of the people.

M. A. GAULT.

FROM ONE OF THE FIRST LECTURERS AND SECEDERS.

INDIANA, Pa., July 19, 1894.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—It was a very pleasing surprise to me when I last week received your kind and very welcome letter, and I often thought of you; but being out of connection with the Cynosure, and seldom seeing a copy of the paper, I often wish to see what is going on in the reform field, but I am not able to subscribe for the paper. I have just been transferred to the retired list since our last meeting of Synod [Reformed Presbyterian] along with other aged ministers. I can recollect when there were a good many of us seceded Masons met in convention every year; but almost if not all that I used to know are now gone, and I am still left. I have great reason to bless God for his sparing goodness and mercy toward me through all these years of secret persecution. The Lord has been my support and comfort.

I am so glad, my dear brother, to hear from you again, and I will send an article now and then to the Cynosure in the way of keeping the inside workings of the system before the public; and if you please I wish you would send me a paper now and then, that I may see and know how matters are moving. As long as I live I stand by the cause, and encourage its support, you may rest assured of that. It ought to receive much more hearty support from its professed friends, but there are so many who want to be counted on the right side who are afraid to open either their mouth or their purse! But I will not live under the fear of man in that way. I will let them know; while I live I will bear testimony against them, that shall speak after I am dead.

J. R. BAIRD.

PITH AND POINT.

KNOWS MORE ABOUT MASONRY THAN HE HAS A RIGHT TO.

I have not had an invitation to lecture on secret societies for a long time. But I am ready at any and all times to speak and do all I can to bring men away from being bound to any other power than that of Christ. I have kept a good many young men from the lodge, and trust I may keep many more. I have often wished I was rich. I would then travel and lecture at my own charges; but as it is I am not able to do it. I do not know of anything being done here against the lodge. The Masons say to me: "You know more than you have a right to know." Well, I do bother them some, I think. I wish I might have the call to lecture six nights in the week from September to the first of April. Our country is in danger of being destroyed by the secret society system, which is spreading all over the land.—J. S. PERRY, Wilsonville, Conn.

Connecticut friends, is there not work for Bro. Perry as well as for Bro. Stoddard? Pray for the enthusiasm of the Holy Spirit and you will get doors open and find a blessing in the work and above all in the sacrifice.

CONTRIBUTION IN MEMORY OF A DEPARTED WIFE.

I am aware that this reform work, so important in its character, needs the aid of all its friends to an unlimited extent. My heart and hands are involved in this cause. May God prosper it and its earnest and self-sacrificing laborers. I would be glad to do more, but if circumstances prove propitious I desire to do my part in the future as the Lord directs. My wife's death occurred ten years ago this 18th day of July, and as she was heart and hand with me in this work, I wish that in memory to my dear companion, part of the amount contributed shall be as though she was present in the body to voice her wishes. May God bless the National Christian Association is the prayer of myself and every Christian worker.—STEPHEN GROVER, East Boston, Mass.

LITERATURE.

The Missionary Conference of the English State Church, held during May and June last, was a noble gathering. The Official Report, edited by G. A. Spottiswoode is published by Spottiswoode & Co., and the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, London. This conference was the first meeting of the kind and was therefore a memorable occasion as well as notable. Missionary meetings have been often held, but never before a general meeting of Anglican missionaries from all parts of the mission field. The topics discussed were the missionary's call and training; the religions to be dealt with; the presentation of Christianity; the problems to be solved; the dangers to be avoided; the methods to be employed; how the church should be built up and interested at the same time in missions. A woman's section of the conference also discussed the features of mission work peculiar to the sex. A ponderous list of officers and committees is given, but the papers and addresses themselves, making up a thick volume of over 700 pages, are a most valuable contribution to the literature of missions.

The American Bible Society has placed on exhibition in the Bible House the collection of old and rare copies of the Scriptures which attracted so much attention at the World's Fair. The collection is a curious one, and shows the different translations of the Bible from the earliest times. Among the volumes is a copy of the first edition of the King James version of the Bible, printed in 1611. There is also a copy of the "Vinegar Bible." The volume is considered the finest Bible ever printed. Another work of interest is a fac-simile of the "Poor Man's Bible," or Biblia Pauperum, printed in Basle in 1491; and there is one of the first Bibles printed from movable type about 1450 or 1455. The first English Bible printed in the United States also has a place in this collection, and is especially noteworthy because it has the approval of Congress. It is well worth a visit to the rooms of the American Bible Society to see this curious collection.

The Keeley Cure is making a literature of its own. A number of pamphlets are issued from the institute at Dwight, Ill., on the "Double Chloride of Gold" as the cure for drunkenness and the opium and tobacco habit. But it is not the only cure nor the best. Divine grace has saved more drinking men than all "cures" ever can or will. Indeed if there be no moral purpose to resist temptation given of God all human cures will alike fail. We are thankful that remedies are revealed for the diseased system, cursed by rum, as we are thankful for the discoveries of Jenner. These documents may be had of Dr. Keeley, at Dwight, and are interesting beside being a part of the literature of the temperance reform which no thorough student can ignore.

The current Scribner's Magazine is a fiction number, but aside from this portion Octave Thanet writes in a gossippy and entertaining way of "People that we Serve." Her description of types met here and there is happily illustrated. "The End of Books" is a unique prophecy of the day when electric phones and graphs of one sort and another shall supplant the press and cold type which now labors to flood the earth with millions of unread volumes—not to say unreadable. The paper on Newport may interest the habitues of watering places, but has no charm for those who deal with strikes. A dreamy foreign face with a cigaratte in its mouth disfigures the frontispiece.

The Preacher's Magazine for August is abundant in strong and taking sermonic and homiletic literature. The leading sermon, by Rev. Stopford A. Brooke, LL. D., entitled "Modern Pharoahs," deserves universal attention; so does Rev. G. P. Newton's upon "The Well is Deep." "Moses: His Life and Lessons," by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, presents with unabated charm this series of articles. One of the best articles, and one that reads like a romance, is by that strong writer, Rev. W. J. Dawson, entitled "The Minister's Study." Every minister in the country ought to read it.

The young American students who made a bicycle tour around the world tell, in the August number of The Century, of their journey from Samarkand to Kuldja, and of their winter spent at Tashkend, the capital of Turkestan. They say that American influences are felt on the Russian steppes. Portraits of Edison adorn many of the post-stations, and his phonograph has already made its appearance in Pishpek. The natives are not particularly impressed by it, but declare that they have "often heard better music."

STRIKE AND UNION.

It is estimated, says the American Friend, that the railroad strike has already cost the country fully $1,000,000, while it will entail a loss of no less than $4,000,000 to the railroad companies. The personal loss to the strikers themselves can hardly be estimated. Many of them will find their chances in life forever wrecked.

A great deal of attention was directed to the yards yesterday morning, reads the last Wednesday's Inter Ocean, for it was known that the Knights of Labor would test its strength on the packers. The strike promised by Grand Master Sovereign on Sunday was ordered Monday, and representatives from all the local assemblies of the order were said to have visited the houses that day and notified the men that the strike would go on yesterday morning. There was a larger crowd than had been seen for a week gathered about Forty-Second street and that vicinity to see the effect of the order. If the order was obeyed by any of the men it was not apparent in any of the packing-houses.

A special telgram from Galesburg, Ill., July 24th, says: At the meeting this evening of the local branch of the American Railway Union it was unanimously voted to retrurn to Mr. Debs the charter under which the union has been working for the last month. The reason for this move was that the members here say that matters had been misrepresented to them when the union here was organized and that they want nothing more to do with the American Railway Union. The men also say that their jobs are too valuable at present for them to act at the dictation of Mr. Debs.

General Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, was asked, at Omaha, Tuesday, regarding his intention in the matter of military companies. He thus explained his scheme of capturing State militia by his K. of L. and ended with an outright declaration of rebellion:

"Heretofore the advice to workmen has been to keep out of militia. It should be changed. Every workingman should join the militia, thus getting the arms and discipline necessary to defend the country and the people from the anarchists, railroad managers, their trusts, attorneys, and the murderous deputies and Pinkertons whom they employ. I have been a member of the State militia for three years myself, and know that the Knights of Labor are the best militia men in the country. I am also in favor of capturing the whole system of government and operating the same in the interests of the people.

(From a letter to the Inter Ocean)

One case will serve as a sample of hundreds like it.

In the suburb of Oak Park lives a carpenter, his wife and eight children. The man was out of work last winter, and his family was cared for by charity. This spring the man got work at thirty cents an hour. The wife was thrifty and the husband industrious and sober. and as a result, on these wages the family has lived comfortably.

But a few weeks ago the delegate of his union ordered him not to work for less than thirty-five cents an hour, and the man fearing violence would be used against him, has not dared to work since. His family are again dependent upon charity.

The laments of the poor wife over the situation are pitiful.

"They could all be so comfortable," she says, "if her husband was allowed by the union to work."

Now have we not a government strong enough to protect a man from such outrageous tyranny as this?

Detroit Free Press: The following communication was sent yesterday to General Manager Spicer, of the Detroit, Grand Haven and Michigan Railway:

THE AMERICAN RAILWAY UNION, UNION No. 402, July 19, 1894.—Mr. Spicer, Esq.—Dear Sir: Inclosed find list of men belonging to the American Railway Union. They are in good standing on our books and are working under false pretenses. They tell your officials they don't belong, but this is a correct list, and we don't see why you should favor one more than another. We hold the men now out have acted honorably by your company and we hold that no man who is not true to himself and his family can be true to his employers. Investigation will prove that these men now in your employ are largely responsible for the condition of affairs existing on the Detroit. Grand Haven and Michigan Railway. Very respectfully,

"BY ORDER COMMITTEE, Lodge 402."

Following the communication is a list of eighteen names of men employed by the railway, accompanied by a designation of the special employment in which each is engaged.

Such a communication carries its own comment. The men named in the list have been faithful to their employers. They have lived up to their contracts and have refused—presumably—to break them upon the order of the A. R. U. And because they have done this—because they have been loyal and faithful—their employers are asked to discharge them on the plea that they have not been loyal to somebody else. It scarcely seems as if arrogance could go further.

IT GIVES WARNING that there's trouble ahead—if you're getting thin. It shows that your blood is impoverished, and your organs deranged, so that whatever you eat fails to properly nourish you. And just as long as you remain in this condition, Consumption, Pneumonia, and other Scrofulous and dangerous diseases are likely to fasten upon you.

You should build yourself up with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Purify and enrich the blood, rouse every organ into natural action, and build up healthy, wholesome, necessary flesh.

Ocean Port, N. J.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—We have used your "G.M.D." in our family and find nothing else to equal it. One of our children had the pneumonia, and one lung become consolidated, but by the use of the "Discovery" she has entirely recovered, and is now in good health.

Ruth A. Sickles

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28TH, 1894.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.

OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Illustrated.

THE FULL

ILLUSTRATED RITUAL

OF THE

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine

PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W Madison St. Chicago.

The Doctors Said "Try Hood's," and Hood's Cured.

For several years I have suffered with catarrh, and though I tried all kinds of medicines, I failed to find lasting relief. The doctors told me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did, and now I am cured.

JOSEPH A. WALTERS,
Co. A., 15th Ill. Infantry, Fort Sheridan, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ransom, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Cheanut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——, ——, Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1894.

The Sunset Club discussion closes the address of Pres. Blanchard which was received with frequent applause. Next week we give Gen. Hawley's vindication of the American Protective Association and will in connection give some attention to that society. Rev. A. W. Parry's paper in this number is an excellent introduction to the discussion of that popular but dangerous organization. The idea is well put that there are other features of the A. P. A. than anti-Romanism that demand attention.

The Bible in Schools.—In answer to a special request, the president of the Woman's Educational Union has provided a copy of the memorial setting forth the objects of this society with a partial list of those who endorse it. The city papers have, as the extracts show, given the cause a cordial endorsement, and nearly 60,000 names gathered at the World's Fair push it on with a grand impetus. One of the most deservedly popular of our Chicago pastors, Dr. Hillis, eulogizes the principles of this movement in our Home department. Let no reader fail to get within the sweep of his eloquence. It is as refreshing as a cool draught one of these blazing summer days.

The New England Letters, which have so excellently sketched important events in that important part of the world for the readers of the Cynosure, will be discontinued for a few weeks. Miss Flagg is human like the rest of us, and an August vacation is justly her due. Whether these letters will be resumed in September is yet, we are sorry to say, an open question. Financial arrangements may hinder, or altogether prevent. If a hundred or two of the good friends who read this note will resolve to make some personal sacrifice to get one or more subscribers, it will help materially to settle the question. Miss Flagg will in any event continue to write for our columns. God will reward her devotion to a needy cause, but let us endeavor to provide a partial reward also.

A later word from Miss Flagg proposes to resume her regular contribution before September 1st. For this word we speak the gratitude of the Cynosure readers. Only, dear friends, let us have no jug-handle arrangement about this. The reform is more indebted to Miss Flagg than she will ever be paid by men. We would not rob her of the better blessing of giving, but let all remember that every new subscriber helps to reward her more justly.

An Oregon Convention.—Rev. M. B. Nichols, for a time engaged in N. C. A. lecture work on the Pacific coast, writes an enthusiastic letter to Bro. Williams urging that, during the Inter-State Exposition which is to open in Tacoma about the first of September, there be held a general rally of the friends of our reform in the far Northwest. He suggests also that an anti-secrecy department be secured in the exposition, to do a work similar to that of the N. C. A. exhibit in the World's Fair. Bro. Nichols has tested the temper of the Tacoma people in the Free Methodist camp meeting which opened on the 13th of June. At the close of the second week of the meeting Bro. Nichols spoke on Ezekiel's vision and expressly condemned the lodges and their agents in the pulpit as the cause of the deadness in the churches. He says he never spoke to a more interested and respectful audience, made up as it was from the various churches of Tacoma. The truth was heard and evidently accepted. From this fact there is hope that such a convention might be grandly effective against the kingdom of darkness. Let friends in Oregon correspond with Bro Williams immediately at Philomath about this business.

The Boston Common Arrest.—A kind note from Bro. William F. Davis, whose second arrest for preaching on Boston Common on the Lord's day we noted last week, comes to correct. The address of A. N. Cook is 377 Washington St., Boston, instead of 337, as published. Mr. Cook has consented to act as treasurer of the fund to which Dr. A. J. Gordon and others invite contributions in order to get a decision from the highest court on this most important question of the liberty of preaching the Gospel in public places. Bro. Davis writes that No. 337 "is the store of J. M. Fitzgerald, liquors and cigars. The keeper is presumably an Irish Roman Catholic, and doubtless gets much money now that belongs to women and children, without sending him that which God's people wish to have used in the legal defense of our immemorial right and duty to freely preach the Gospel of Christ in public. Precious lives and treasure were poured out to win our heritage of freedom, and to hold it when won. We too must 'endure to the end' and resist, using spiritual weapons unto blood striving against sin. God keep us firm and true."

WHO CAN TELL ABOUT PULLMAN?

The Christian Statesman asks that somebody give a full and fair account of the condition at Pullman when the strike began.

If Dr. McCrory will step into any well-equipped public library he will find Carroll D. Wright's report, made a few years ago. This was a thorough and non-partisan investigation. The Inter Ocean published a few days since a four-column report from a lady connected with that paper, and evidently a fair statement of present facts. Mrs. Rapp, one of the most active of the Christian women of Pullman in all kinds of neighborhood relief work, can tell a story whose truthfulness none could doubt. Miss Muletts, for years a teacher in Pullman public and night schools, and an intimate friend and acquaintance in many households of that city, can also tell much that the public might care to know of Pullman home and factory life. Her testimony is undoubted. The Cynosure has gained some facts from these ladies. They both have not the least sympathy with the strike, and can give their reasons clearly and forcibly. We will gladly introduce Dr. McCrory to these ladies; but since President Cleveland has ordered an investigation the Cynosure prefers to wait on this inquiry.

It is true there may be reasons for the strike which the workingmen have not made clear. Their case as presented by Debs and others is by no means made out. Even Rev. Mr. Cawardine, the M. E preacher who has espoused their cause with such enthusiasm as to go about speaking at labor meetings in this city, even on the Sabbath, even he speaks like a prejudiced witness. The N. W. Christian Advocate shows that he has a grievance against the company because it does not patronize sectarianism; and we have word that Bro. C. has a private grudge also, and has not paid rent for six months,—but we hope that our informant is mistaken about this.

There are other reasons to be considered. Mr. Pullman, in founding the city and in its management, seems to have had an eye to an earthly paradise instead of an heavenly. We do not learn that he is beloved as a Christian and a friend by his men. He may therefore have become discouraged by continued complaints. Mr. Frank A. Flower, who assisted Mr. Wright in the inquiry above noticed, says in the Superior, Wis., Leader, which he edits:

"While the Pullman sleeper has given George M. Pullman as much a place in history as Morse or Stevenson or Edison, the effort to give a body of 5,000 workmen the comforts and luxuries of the rich brought no honor, no thanks, no consideration, except among a few thoughtful philanthropists."

What Mr. Pullman might have done to provoke his men is not yet clearly shown; but still such provocation is entirely possible, especially if he is disappointed and his pride humbled respecting the famed city which bears his name.

That the leaders of the strike in Pullman are actuated by a Christian spirit must be seriously questioned also. On Sabbath, the 22d, Rev. H. O. Lindeblad, the esteemed pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, spoke frankly and fearlessly, advising that his hearers return to work. He believed fair wages would be paid them; he knew that they would need the money for winter supplies; and he knew it was the duty of all to work who were able, whether they were rich enough to live without or no.

Pastor Lindeblad's advice was sound. The presumption is that he understands the situation as fully as Mr. Cawardine. The ladies above mentioned certainly do, for they have been acquainted with the situation much longer. But because this advice was unimpeachable and its effect therefore to be dreaded by the leaders of the strike, they determined to counteract it. Heathcote, the local strike leader, sent a committee soon after the close of service, demanding that the pastor retract the words of the morning. This Pastor Lindeblad absolutely refused to do, as as he spoke his convictions in the fear of God. The committee called again after evening service and asked for the use of the church for a strikers' meeting in charge of Heathcote. This also was refused, as the strikers had their own place of meeting, and a house of God was for other purposes. This enraged Heathcote and his oath-bound company. At an open air meeting next night Pastor Lindeblad and his church were roundly abused. "Threats of hanging and lynching were made," says the Inter Ocean, "and the assertion was made that after the victorious close of the present strike the church would be boycotted. It was proclaimed that a place where Mr. Heathcote could not speak should be leveled to the ground."

Pastor Lindeblad, says the report, is not alarmed at these threats. He has been for twenty-five years a Lutheran pastor and is much esteemed in the Augustana Synod.

The testimony of this incident is conclusive. It proves that the managers of the strike have appealed to passion and avarice and not to sober sense, and maintain their control by the same unworthy means. The mass of the workmen at Pullman would probably be in the shops were it not for these threats of boycotts and personal injury. The hostility of the labor unions to the Christian church is rather the natural hatred of the human heart for the holy law of a holy God than for the indifference of the church for the suffering of the poor. At the same time God's law of love to neighbor is as binding on the Pullman managers as the law forbidding theft or murder is on the men. A perfect obedience on their part would have prevented the strike.

A MIDNIGHT OF KNIGHTS.

Sovereign, the head of the Knights of Labor, has a new scheme. He directs the members of the order to join the militia companies, in the various States, and so control them. No more firing on mobs. Let them burn, loot, wreck, pillage, dynamite. The business of the militia, according to this Jesuit of anarchy, is to look on and applaud.

There are several questions for the Sovereignites to consider:

Can any one join the State militia who wants to?

Can an ordinary member of the Sovereign secret society stand the expense?

Is there any law which would punish treachery in the ranks?

Might not other military companies, made up of Knight Templars and Knights of Pythias, fire on the Knights of Labor to their discomfort?

Is this "sovereign" of labor sure that all other secret societies will be pleased with his plan, otherwise they may secretly dispatch it by well-known lodge methods?

Years ago the Knight Templars of this city secured the incorporation of one of their lodges as a military company. We never learned that they charged on anything but wine suppers, but the fact revealed what the police force of a great State might become.

The Knights of Pythias are to be in Washington in a few days. Our Washington letters suggests one danger arising from their visit. But there are greater.

The organs of this lodge claim that it has been incorporated by the Congress of the United States lately; and is the only secret society ever so honored. Bro. W. B. Stoddard, the Washington agent, has been laid aside by his injury at Cedarville, Ohio, or we should have heard something of this lodge assault upon Congress. It should have been resisted boldly in the name of everything that is holy in our Republic. This incorporation seems to have had for its prime object the suppression of colored K. of P. lodges,—that is, to help one class of citizens beat another at the lodge business!

Then the "generals" and "brigadiers" and "colonels" of these fustian Knights have cajoled the War Department into a special recognition of their military prowess. One "general" writes that the Secretary of War has promised to do everything possible to make the meeting a success. The Adjutant General is ordered to "honor any requisition" for officers for judges, inspection, etc. The use of the Government Parade and Drill grounds at Fort Myers has been given; all the U. S. troops at Washington will be ordered out as escort for these "knights;" Gen. Miles and staff will be brought from Chicago to assist Gen. Schofield in the review; and, in general, this body of secretists are complacently making the Government of the United States—in their estimate—a very fancy tail to their kite.

If this were really to be the case; if our nation is to be humiliated by the spectacle of Cabinet ministers dancing attendance on a secret lodge; and if the people are to pay for this beggarly show of political flattery, then Mr. Sovereign has no need to play the Jesuit. Let him walk up like a man and demand of President Cleveland that his Knights of Labor be accepted as an auxiliary division to the army of the United States. If we are to have a choice of evils, we vote for the workingman. Better a Knight of Labor with his pipe, than a Knight of Pythias with his beer, or a Knight Templar with his wine in a human skull.

But we are never shut up to a choice of evils. We shall not be to a choice of lodges. It is a very easy thing for our God to make these potsherds of the earth contend with each other. The lodge business is so overdone that they will begin soon to fight each other for very existence. "The worse it gets the better it gets," as Charles Sumner used to say of the demands of slavery. Evil digs its own grave.

—Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes, the Greek missionary so long known to our readers, writes to the Independent Christian that in the latter part of May a suit was begun against him by the authorities of the Greek church. The charge is for preaching doctrines contrary to the Greek church, teaching temperance and against the use of tobacco. This is regarded by Bro. Zaraphonithes' enemies as a damage to the government which licenses the sale of these poisons and subsists on the tax. His preaching has been attended by crowds who seem to hear attentively. May the Lord sustain Bro. Zaraphonithes and his family, and grant him deliverance from these troubles, according to the promise.

—Later word from Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes of Andros, Greece, is more cheering. His little daughter, writing June 21 to the Independent Christian, says they had just received a visit from the American Consul and his wife, who came over from Athens quite unexpectedly. After a pleasant visit they proposed to come and spend the heated weeks of summer with the missionary family in their mountain retreat. So God orders all for the best. Bro. Zaraphonithes' testimony for Christ against formalism and unrighteousness has aroused opposition from the supporters of a dead religion. Crowds attend his preaching. But when the cloud of persecution seems about to break God sends a friend in the American representative, whose simple presence and endorsement will restrain the rage of opposition.

—Ohio Wesleyan University, which has just conferred the degree of LL D. upon Frances E. Willard, has a stringent rule prohibiting card-playing, dancing and theater-going which is rigidly enforced. Among its 1,200 students there are nine secret societies, which are kept under control because the strong religious character of the institution overawes them. At one time the leaders of a fraternity, getting somehow outside the influence of this religious restraint, set themselves against the good order and discipline and even the morality of the institution. They were promptly given the choice of leaving the college or abandoning the society, and the society was abolished. If Dr. Bashford, the president, and his associates could realize that the real nature of the college secret society is such as Bro. Gault describes in his letter on another page, they would put these lodge pests along with dancing and the theater.

—The railway men are putting the Debs rebellion down with a firm hand. The organizations (we do not like to misuse the good word brotherhood by giving it to an oath-bound secret society) of engineers, firemen, switchmen and conductors are giving their members who struck with Debs a reminder of discipline. This is the announcement from Indianapolis said to be official. The Order of Railway Conductors will take the first step in the movement. The members of the local division who joined the strike have been summoned to appear. By the instructions of the Grand Chief, E. E. Clark, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, members are to be considered in three classes—those who remained faithful to their order, those who quit work because they feared bodily harm from the strikers, and members who went on strike in obedience to the order of Debs. The first class will be praised, the second censured and the last expelled from the order.

—The fearful condition of the colored people in some portions of the South is told with graphic touches in Bro. Davidson's letter, on another page. God grant we may not have to report again such trials as Bro. Gunner experienced in New Iberia, or Bro. Countee in Memphis. Ida B. Wells, the young colored woman whose addresses in England have aroused philanthropists, patriots and Christians, has just returned to New York. She addressed over 100 meetings during her stay of about four months in England. Frequently, she says, "Some member of the audience, invariably an American, would come forward and endeavor to refute my assertions. My reply would be a simple recital of facts, with the production of press reports. In this way I was able to get in a very decided argument upon the attitude of the the great Protestant denominations in the South on the separation question. It was difficult to make them understand that a black Christian was regarded in the South as a different sort of a Christian from a white Christian." Miss Wells urges an organized effort on the part of colored people which shall defend the rights of individuals and protect them from sudden outbursts of passion and from outrage in the courts.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. N. R. Johnston, editor of "Our Banner," passed through Chicago Monday evening last, on his way to Oakland, Cal.

—Rev. D. W. Wise, late of the College church, Wheaton, has accepted a call to Pullman, Washington, and starts with his family this week for the new field, where many pray he may be blessed and a blessing.

—Rev. Dr. W. W. Barr, one of the editors of the Christian Instructor and pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, has resigned the pastorate to accept the appointment by the General Assembly of Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions.

—Miss Willard has resumed her place as editor-in-chief of the Union Signal of this city, her office being her home in Evanston. A reception and welcome was given her last week Tuesday. Rev. Mr. Delano, the Baptist pastor, and "Father" Smyth, a Romish priest, were the only representatives of the clergy present.

—Elder I. Bancroft, a few years ago one of our active lecturers in Wisconsin, has just left Garvin, Iowa, and will spend some time in Springfield, Ill. He tarried a few days in this city and Wheaton with Secretary Phillips. Although now eighty years of age, he has been preaching regularly until leaving Iowa.

—Bishop Breyfogel is the junior bishop of the Evangelical Association, and a scholorly, devoted man. He is now traveling in Europe, and writing to the Evangelical Messenger from Switzerland, says: "The trip has been a revelation to me. European life, its present interesting phases, its marvelous past, its future fatal destiny, have all become invested with a new meaning. In fact, I can understand America all the better, and in some respects love and appreciate her more truly, for having seen Europe."

—The Free Methodist contains an obituary notice and biography of Rev. Clarence V. Hughs, late pastor of the Free Methodist church, Oshkosh, Wis. He died on the 6th of June last of heart failure, earnest and active to the last. The last Wisconsin State Convention was held in his church, which was cheerfully opened for the meeting and the proclamation of God's truth against the crying but popular evil of the lodge. Mrs. Hughs called at the Cynosure office for a few minutes last week. Her loss is a heavy one, but the peace of those whom the Lord comforts is with her.

ONE HUNDRED MINISTERS.

This month ends the subscription of one hundred colored ministers of the South. On account of their meager salary, most of these ministers are unable to take the Cynosure though highly prizing it. Can you do better than to send the Cynosure to these men, who often take its articles on reform, home and religion, and give them to their people as the most helpful thing that they can do for them? Here is a recent extract from one of these pastors:

England, Ark., July 14th, 1894.

I am not able to renew my subscription at this time, but I will renew it as soon as possible, for I don't see how I can get along with my work without the help of the paper, for I have taken it and fixed my discourse from it. I was able to deliver three members of my church that were walking hand in hand with the works of darkness, so that they are now perfectly clear of them. (Rev.) C. C. Irvearl.

The August number of the Lodge Lamp will be devoted to the secret labor unions. The general drift will be on the question: Can Christians, with a good conscience, belong to the Knights of Labor or other secret labor unions of to-day? Facts and principles are to be stated as clearly as we are able to state them, and all are to be judged by the Word of God. This will be the endeavor.

CHRISTIAN COMMUNISM.

Rev. M. A. Gault preached on this theme last Sabbath from Acts 4: 32, "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own, but they had all things common." This was the effect produced by a revival of true religion. The same effect was produced by a similar revival as recorded in Acts 2: 44, 45, "And all that believed were together and had all things common: and sold their possessions and goods and parted them to all as every man had need." Mr. Gault claimed that a similar revival of true religion in our day would produce similar results. He drew a picture of what Bloomington might be if all of its six or seven thousand residents were actuated by the same spirit which characterized these early Christians: when we had such Christian sentiment, that there would be a universal paying of debts: and each would try to do a little more than his share, and give his neighbor a little the best end of every bargain. Our city could then be organized as one great industrial college. All could reside in one large palatial home, with steam heat in winter, and illuminated with electric light, and provided with every convenience which modern civilization can devise. All could eat in one large dining hall, and enjoy one magnificent reading room and library, and meet in one large chapel for religious and literary exercises. Then instead of the expense of keeping up nine churches and Sabbath-schools, one would answer every purpose. Instead of keeping up four bakeries and six meat shops and as many more groceries and dry goods stores, one person in each of these departments of industry could more than attend to the distribution. Then one large newspaper could supply the need instead of the six we now have. Think of the immense saving of labor in having one do all the heating and one all the lighting, and less than half a dozen do all the cooking. More than nine-tenths of the labor now required could then be saved and the hours of labor would be reduced to six, if not five. Life, instead of being a constant struggle for existence with many, would then be like that of an industrial school, with more than half the day devoted to literary, moral, social and religious exercises. The productive power of the community would be multiplied, for each individual talent could be employed where it was best fitted, and the whole under the direction of the best skill. Every child could then be trained under the highest discipline, and have the privilege of a university education, while there would be no interference with the divinely-ordained family relations.

Mr. Gault reminded his hearers that this was not a dream, but what he believed would be the condition of society in the good time coming. But it could only be possible when human hearts were moulded and transformed by the Holy Spirit of God.—Bloomington, Ind., Champion.

The Home.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

There is many a rest in the road of life
If we would only stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land
If the querulous heart would make it.
To the soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the winter's storm prevaileth.

Better hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown
Or the miser's hoarded treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayer to heaven;
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And do God's will with a cheerful heart,
And hands that are ready and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, minute thread
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

—Charles Mackey.

THE MORAL TRAINING OF YOUTH.

(Rev. N. D. Hillis, D. D., pastor Presbyterian church, Evanston, Ill., in the N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The instruments for the moral training of youth are two-fold. First, are the common schools—jackscrews under the sills of the nation, by which all the people are slowly being lifted. Our fathers founded these schools not alone in the interest of wisdom and learning, but of ethics and morality. Their schools exercised a triple function—to-wit: trained the child's reason to perceive the truth, his taste to admire the beautiful, his moral sense to judge between acts right and acts wrong. Casting out theology they enthroned ethics. They taught the youth how to read and write, and also how to carry himself in the home, the market-place, the forum and the polls. Daniel Webster believed with them when he said, "The right of the state to punish crime involves the state's duty to teach morals." Ethics concern man as man. Moral principles are not denominational. They are no more ecclesiastical than the principles of breathing, or walking, or eating, or sound thinking. To render the youth's mind keen as a Damascus blade without teaching him how to carry his instrument through the crowded street, is to work injury toward the child and disaster toward his fellows. The three R's are not so vital to the child's welfare as the moral principles that teach the art of right living. Disobedience to law is always slavery. Obedience is liberty. Disobedience to the law of fire, water, acid is death. Obedience to the law of color gives the artist's skill; to the law of eloquence the orator's power; to the law of iron the inventor's engine. Disobedience to moral laws means waste, wretchedness, want; turns cities into heaps, and renders society a herd. Thus the common schools become the real promoters of civilization—the bulwarks thereof. They teach patriotism. They destroy clannishness. They unify the races. "The state rests upon a tripod—a free school, a free church, a free state. When one leg falls the whole structure will come crashing down."

But since Webster's day our public schools have suffered a great revolution, of which many citizens seem ignorant. In many of the schools the laws of Moses and Christ may no longer be read. The name of God has been carefully expurgated from text books. One of our Western courts has decided that it is unconstitutional for teachers to repeat the Lord's Prayer in the school-room. A leading educator has said that the common schools should teach secular truths, ignoring all reference to God and ethics. Recently the senior class of a Chicago high school voted to invite a clergyman to offer prayer at their graduation, but the school authorities forbade. That body of ecclesiastics which has labored successfully to cast the Bible and ethics out of our common schools has begun an attack from the other side. They now charge our common schools with being atheistic. Therefore, their children are placed in parochial schools. During the past twenty years an organized warfare has been carried on against our schools that has wrought their constant deterioration. Consider what was involved in the statement of one who spoke from this platform: "Our church is lowest in the scale of refinement, having produced no statesmen, reformers, poets, orators, educators, or inventors." It was also claimed that this same church, charged by its delegate with being lowest in the scale of culture, included seventy-five per cent of the teachers in the common schools of Chicago. This explains why so many of our citizens are withdrawing their children from the graded and high schools, and placing them in private schools and academies. Henry Ward Beecher once said: "It should be the aim of the city to make its common schools so rich, so large, so ample, so refined and refining through its teachers, and therefore so fruitful in results, that the private schools will not be able to live under the drip of it."

The other agency for the moral instruction of youth is the church and Sunday-school, having an added function in that it teaches religion as well as ethics. Now the changed attitude of the common school has thrown the whole burden of moral instruction upon this instrumentality. Of the heroic exertion of the churches on behalf of the nation's youth, no one can worthily speak. The forcible ideas and the imperial truths they have taught have entered into our institutions, as iron and fiber into the rich blood of the physical system. But the churches have struggled in vain to keep pace with the constantly growing needs of the great West. Steadily the population has outmarched the advance of Sunday-schools and churches. To-day there are in our villages and country districts and cities 10,000,000 children and youth who are without instruction as to the moral truths of life and duty. Now ignorance always breeds misery, vice, and crime. Mephistopheles was indeed a cultured devil. But he is the exception. There has never been an illiterate seer, sage, or saint. History tells us of no Dante or Shakespeare, no Cromwell or Lincoln, who had to make "his X mark." Every force-bearing and force-producing man has been a trained man. Moreover these 12,000,000 of ignorant youth are mostly the children of foreign parentage. They are chiefly found in the interior of the great West, the region that will shortly, as Mr. Gladstone prophesies, be the dominant section of our land. Now, when we remember that these youth are without the ethical training of church or Sunday-school, and that the other agency of moral instruction, the public school, has been secularized, we may well believe with one of our great reviews, "there lurks here the most tremendous and imminent danger to which the interests of our people have ever been exposed, in comparison with which the issues of slavery and intemperance sink into utter insignificance."

THE WORST OF THE STRIKE.

The worst of the strike is not in interrupted means of communication, in mails delayed, in fruit and meat ruined because of insufficient transportation, in an embargo laid on trade, and in the inconvenience of travelers and pleasure-seekers. Nor yet is the very worst effect to be found in the suffering through poverty and loss of wages, brought upon the families of working men. If the wives and children could speak, they would testify that nothing is to be so dreaded as loss of work to the father, let it come from what cause it may. I have seen a sensitive child of 6 burst into tears when told that the shop where his father worked was to close. "Where will our dinner come from!" cried the child, thoughtful before his time, taught in the school of penury.

The worst immediate effect of such a condition of things as has obtained during the last few days is in the temper of antagonism aroused between classes, the forgetfulness on the part of Christian men of their reciprocal obligations, the bitterness and hatred stirred up between brothers of one nation. One longs for the pacific yet masterful spirit which is born of an acknowledgment of Christ's right to us all. In the rapidly growing wealth of our country, and in the rapid increase of our population with crude ideas of political economy sown in unprepared and undisciplined minds, we are in great danger.

It would seem that a criticism, lately applied to the Texan public schools, might have force as regards those of other States. Should not the public schools teach good citizenship, show boys what will be their duties to the state, inculcate morals?

In other words, should there not cease to be in these schools a practical elimination of the Bible?—Aunt Marjorie, in Christian Intelligencer.

MAKE A BUSINESS OF IT.

"What church do you attend?" was asked of a bright, attractive young fellow, doing business in one of our large cities.

"Oh, I just run around," he answered, gaily. "I don't understand the difference between the churches; in fact, there is a great deal in the Bible itself that I don't understand, and, until I do, of course I can't join any church."

How many hours a day do you spend studying this matter?" asked his questioner.

"Hours?" he repeated in surprise.

"Well, then, minutes?"

The young man was dumb.

"Ah," said his companion, with patient sadness, "not one! If you thought a knowledge of geology necessary to your success in life—or astronomy, or shorthand, you would not think of spending less than one hour a day in its study, perhaps two, perhaps three; and you would not expect to know or understand it without that exertion. But the knowledge of God, of Jesus Christ, of salvation—the highest and deepest of all knowledge—you sit around and wait for, as if it would come like a flash of lightning!"—Ram's Horn."

HONORING PARENTS.

The words "Honor thy father and thy mother" mean four things—always do what they bid you, always tell them the truth, always treat them lovingly, and take care of them when they are sick or grown old. I never yet knew a boy who trampled on the wish of his parents who turned out well. God never blesses a willfully disobedient son.

When Washington was sixteen years old, he determined to leave home and be a midshipman in the colonial navy. After he had sent off his trunk, he went to bid his mother good-bye. She wept so bitterly because he was going away that he said to his Negro servant, "Bring back my trunk, I am not going to make my mother suffer so by my leaving her."

He remained at home to please his mother. This decision led to his becoming a surveyor, and afterwards a soldier. His whole glorious career in life turned on this one simple act of trying to make his mother happy. And happy, too, is the child who never has occasion to shed bitter tears for any act of unkindness to his parents. Let us not forget that God has said, "Honor thy father and thy mother."—Exchange.

HE IS LOOKING FOR YOU.

"Hello, little stranger! What is the matter?"

The rough looking wagoner softened his voice in speaking, for the child in the road was crying.

"I am lost! I can't find my father," sobbed the child.

"Is he a big man with a long white beard?"

"Yes, that's my father."

"It's all right, then, because he is looking for you. Keep right along, and if you don't find him, he'll find you."

And the child dried his tears and sprang into the road, for, if his father was looking for him, of course he could not fail to be in his arms again after a while.

Dear boy, dear girl, if you are trying to come to Christ, and the way seems dark and the path steep and difficult, take courage; he is looking for you, too, and if you only persevere you are sure to meet him in the way, and to hear his gracious voice saying, "Come unto me."

He who lives only for himself does not fulfill the purpose of his creation.

TEMPERANCE.

STRIKE! FELLOW-WORKMEN, STRIKE!!

Among the incidents of the strike, it has been reported that certain cigar-makers' and brewery workmen's unions had struck. Good! Not that we have aught against the men engaged in either line of business, but it would be a blessed thing for thousands of the workingmen and their wives and children if every worker, rich or poor, in the tobacco, beer, and alcoholic interests would strike, and strike forever. It would pay the workingmen of this country to pension them all liberally, on the condition that not another leaf of tobacco should be grown, nor another gallon of beer brewed, nor another quart of intoxicating drinks distilled or manufactured. Of course this will not be as long as men have appetites uncontrolled by reason or grace, but it is a thing devoutly to be wished. Many of the rumsellers who "sympathized" with the strikers, whose saloons became the gathering place of the disaffected, have well filled their tills from hard earnings, or will absorb the greater part of the first month's wages after the strike is over, while in many instances the grocer, butcher, and baker will go unpaid.

The worst foe which the workmen of this country have, the one which robs them of manhood, honor, and comparative plenty, the one which dulls the brain, brutalizes the mind, and enslaves the whole being of thousands, is King Alcohol, together with his myrmidons, beer and tobacco. These stimulants and narcotics are not needed. We know they are not. The writer has worked on the farm from 4 A. M. till 10 P. M., in the iron mines for twelve hours a day, at the printer's case, in building, in the lumber woods, in sawmills, for the same length of time, at hard brain labor for from fourteen to sixteen hours a day, year in and out, in Europe and America, indoors and out-of-doors, when the thermometer stood at 110 Fahrenheit in the shade, and 10 to 20 below zero in the sun, and in all the various places, times, conditions, and environments, he has never needed either alcohol, beer, or tobacco; and he has fared as well, and been happier, he believes, than those who used these poisons. There are hundreds of others who can testify to similar experiences. Fellow-workmen, strike on these things, connect with God in this strike, and blessing and victory shall be yours.—Signs of the Times.

CATHOLICS AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

The president of the Pittsburgh Catholic Total Abstinence Union has given a paper to the press regarding Catholics and the liquor traffic, based on most careful investigation and reliable statistics. It says in part:

"In one county of Pennsylvania, where Catholics are less than 21 per cent of the population, more than 44 per cent of the applicants for license were Catholics. In another, 40 per cent of the population are Catholics, and more than 57 per cent are saloon-keepers. In a third, more than 25 per cent of the applicants for license, and less than 16 per cent of the population, were Catholics. Still another had about 13 per cent of the population Catholics, and more than 40 per cent of the applicants for license. This last is now notorious the world over for rioting and bloodshed.

"The cities and towns made no better showing. One city had less than 30 per cent of its population Catholic, and more than 52 per cent of its applicants for license. Another has more than 56 per cent of its saloon-keepers Catholics, and less than 30 per cent of its population. One town had about 20 per cent of its population Catholic, and more than 42 per cent of its applicants for license. Another had more than 55 per cent of its applicants for license, and about 25 per cent of its population Catholics.

"Within the limits of a single square on a street in one of the cities there were 18 applicants for license, 15 of whom were Catholics. This may help strangers to understand how it should have been necessary to establish free soup houses and expend some $200,000 in charity last winter in the city of Pittsburgh, that center of highly protected industries and good wages.

"More than one-half of the inmates in the workhouse in one of the counties claimed to be Catholics, and less than six per cent of them were total abstainers. The warden of the same county's jail was reported in the newspapers as saying that 90 per cent of his prisoners owed their imprisonment, at least indirectly, to drink. The plea made for an appropriation for a Catholic chaplain in the County Home was that 70 per cent of the inmates were Catholics."

HOW IT IS DONE.

The following dispatch from San Francisco tells us how the Stanford University is run:

"In order to keep the Stanford University out of debt, the brandy which is produced on the ranches which come under the university endowment is being marketed here and in the East. Over 25,000 gallons are produced yearly, and it has accumulated so that the older wines now bring good prices. Almost 1,000,000 gallons remain to be disposed of."

And that is the kind of an education our boys are to receive at the great university! Others are to be debauched that they may be educated! We hope that every father who has a son to educate will hesitate before sending him to an institution that is kept in running order by the sale of intoxicating liquors. No thoughtful, self-respecting parent can consent that his boy shall be educated at the price of blood, the souls of men, and the sighs and tears of widows and orphans, made such by Stanford University wine and brandy. Better, far better that the university did not exist than that it should be supported at such a sacrifice of moral principle, and that such violation should be inculcated in the minds of our youth. California is not wanting in good colleges and universities that do not resort to blood money for their support.—California Voice.

"Father" Matthew, the Irish apostle of temperance, was persuaded by an earnest Quaker, Wm. Martin, to sign the pledge and become president of a temperance society. He quickly influenced hundreds of thousands to be total abstainers, administering the pledge to 150,000 persons in the city of Cork, and to 100,000 in another city in two days—and it is said in total to 3,000,000 persons—reforming thousands of drunkards, lessening the consumption of spirits in three years more than one-half, and almost depopulating the jails of Ireland.

We write our honest convictions, says the Wesleyan Methodist, when we say we cannot see how any follower of Christ can use tobacco and not go under condemnation. Please read the following from a German newspaper: "The French government, recognizing the deteriorating influence of tobacco upon the young, has prohibited its use by students in the public schools. The Swiss government will not tolerate that tobacco be sold to juniors. Boys found smoking in the streets are now promptly arrested and punished. Punishment is also meted out to those who sell them tobacco. Dr. Bremer, of St. Vincent's Institution for the Insane, at St. Louis, has called attention to the fact that tobacco-smoking by the young produces mental and moral deterioration, while in older persons it produces brain disease and insanity. He cites Kant's obscure style and Carlyle's irrascibility as effects produced by tobacco. In view of the many facts which lately have been brought up against tobacco, it is strange that the medical profession is not unanimous in its opposition to the weed."

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON VII.—Third Quarter, 1894, Aug. 12.

SUBJECT.—Temptation of Jesus.—Matt. 4: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—In all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Heb. 4: 15.

| Open the Bible and read the lesson. |

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Matt. 4: 1-11. T.—Deut. 8: 1-6. W.—Psa. 91: 9-16. Th.—Deut. 6: 12-19. F.—James 1: 12-21. S.—Heb. 2: 9-18. Su.—Heb. 4: 11-16.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The manner of Christ's temptation. Vs. 1, 2. Christ had just been baptized of John in Jordan, and received at the same time a peculiar baptism of the Holy Spirit. It is interesting to note where he was led: not into the temple, or the crowded streets of the city, or even among the less populous country towns, but "into the wilderness," where he had no companionship save that of the wild beasts; and then why he was led,—"to be tempted of the devil." The gift of the Holy Spirit may not prepare us for immediate work. Before the great Teacher himself could be sent on his mission as the Redeemer of men he must learn to sympathize with the tempted by experiencing himself the full power of the strongest temptations by which Satan can assail our weak human nature. We learn here several important lessons: 1. That the devil works in the country as well as in the city. No place, not even the wildest solitudes, is exempt from his presence. 2. That a baptism of the Spirit may mean greater trials and fiercer temptations than we ever encountered before. 3. That a period of unusual religious exaltation is no proof of immunity from Satan's attacks. So completely was Christ absorbed during these forty days of fasting and prayer that he was raised above even the ordinary bodily sensations of hunger and thirst. 4. The devil generally attacks us first from the lowest plane as he did Christ. He is careful not to waste his ammunition. If he can tempt us from the lower plane of appetite he will not appeal to higher passions and motives. He always proceeds on the assumption that men care more for comfort and ease than they do for principle. "In all points Christ was tempted like as we are."

2. The first temptation. Vs. 3, 4. "If thou be the Son of God." In that subtle "if" was the gist of this temptation, as of the two others. The devil's plan was to make him lose faith in himself and his Messiahship. Christ never wrought a miracle to satisfy his own bodily needs. He multiplied the fishes and loaves in the wilderness to feed the fainting multitudes, and thus through all his earthly life it was true of him, he saved others; himself he would not save. "Man shall not live by bread alone." Jesus was a man. He must as a human being, where his physical needs were concerned, trust himself in the hands of his heavenly Father, and walk the same lowly path of faith and trust that the weakest Christian is required to walk. Of one thing he must have been sure. God would not suffer him to perish with hunger in the wilderness before his work was done or even commenced. In some way—it is not likely that he knew just how any more than we—the Lord would provide. Thus he has "left us an example to follow in his steps." However hard pressed, there is one divine promise on which the Christian can always fall back, "Thy bread and thy water shall be sure." And bread and water from our Father's hand is more to be desired than all the dainties the devil can offer us.

3. The second temptation. Vs. 8–10. The order given by Luke is generally considered the right one. The devil, finding that Christ could not be tempted on the plane of bodily appetite, tries a higher one. He appeals to his ambition; to the Jewish idea, which the teaching of the Rabbis and the synagogue services must have kept continually before him, of the Messiah as a world monarch with universal dominion; and tells him that if he will pay him homage all the kingdoms of the world should be his. We are not to suppose that Satan appeared in visible form and demanded visible worship. Simply to have accepted the Satanic proposal; to have turned from the divine ideal set before him, to the earthly and sensual one of a kingdom set up and dominated by brute force, would have been worship enough. We worship the devil when we serve him, as Christ's answer implies. God alone had a right to his supreme allegiance. The divine plan has always been, victory through the cross. Satan's plan is to eliminate the cross altogether.

4. The third temptation. Vs. 5–7, 11. The first temptation and the third are identically the same, except as the one appeals to the lowest plane, the other to the highest. In both cases Christ was tempted to dishonor his heavenly Father by a lack of faith. He was first tempted to distrust the divine Providence; then to go to the other extreme and presume upon it. To rashly take his life in his own hands and expect God to protect him would have been just as much a lack of faith as to try to preserve his life by improper means. But in the last temptation the devil appeals to him from the highest possible plane—that of the spiritual nature. Many a man has resisted appetite and worldly ambition, yet fallen a prey to spiritual pride. "Then the devil leaveth him:" repulsed at all points by the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God.

Religious News.

—The Wesleyan Methodist connection are arranging a fund for sustaining aged ministers of the denomination. The dollar plan has been adopted, and success is hoped for.

—At Ravenwood in the northern part of Chicago a United Presbyterian Sabbath-school, begun some time since by an enthusiastic worker, has grown to a membership of 244.

—The Chinese school of Pittsburgh Covenanter congregation, Dr. D. McAllister, pastor, under the efficient management of Mr. D. Chestnut has increased to one hundred and twenty-five.

—A Slavonian Evangelical Lutheran Synod was organized at Mahanoy City, Pa., June 6th. In it are represented the Slavonic pastors and congregations in the United States. It adopts the teachings of the Lutheran church as confessed in the Book of Concord of 1580.

—No fewer than twenty-three new churches have been erected in Berlin within the last half dozen years, owing chiefly to the zeal of the Empress, ably seconded by the Emperor. Yet still more are needed, as some congregations still have a membership of 20,000 to 30,000.

—The Young Men's Christian Association of Trenton, N. J., holds every year a series of special services. Among the speakers this year are the names of Rev. Geo. H. Filian, the Armenian pastor banished by the Turkish authorities, and John W. Pritchard, the editor of the Christian Nation.

—At the opening of the century there were only forty-seven translations of the entire Bible in existence; to-day there are ninety entire translations and 230 partial ones —320 in all. Five hundred millions of the human race now have the opportunity of studying the Bible in regions which knew almost nothing of it before the present century began.

—Dr. C. L. Ford, Professor of Anatomy, who died at Ann Arbor recently, bequeathed $20,000 to the general library of the University of Michigan, the income to be used to purchase books, and $3,000 to go to the Student's Christian Association. In addition to this, he left $100,000 to various religious and benevolent Congregational associations.

—The seating capacity of the churches of the United States is sufficient, an exchange extravagantly estimates, for 43,000,000 people. Corresponding to this, there are 111,036 ministers. Upon this showing the Occident remarks: "Everybody in this country could go to church morning or evening, and one-third of the population could go both times, without a single person being forced to stand."

—According to data gathered in 1892 the number of Esquimos in Greenland was then 10,566. Of these 9,766 were Christians and are nearly all under the spiritual direction of Danish pastors. The United Fratrum in 1892 had six stations in Greenland at which eight missionaries and two native helpers were at work. Their membership is 1,329 in Labrador, of whom 1,071 were Esquimos, at four stations.

—The English Theological Seminary in Lake View, Chicago, was organized by Dr. Passavant, and continued by Prof. Weidner, of Augustana College, and Dr. Roth. Two more instructors have lately been added, namely, Revs. Theo. Schmauk, of Lebanon, Pa., and Geo. Gerberding, of Fargo, N. D. Prof. Weidner has received, besides the title of D. D. from Allentown, Pa., also that of LL. D. from Augustana College.

—The United Norwegian church, which recently held its annual meeting at St. Paul, numbers 727 congregations, with a membership of 97,602, and 300 pastors. The receipts for Home Missions were $7,000, for Foreign Missions $9,000, for all missions and benevolent purposes, $20,927. The institutions at Wittenberg, Paulsbo, etc., were supported separately. For synodical purposes, $43,000 was collected; for St. Olaf's College, $9,000; for Mt. Horeb, $9,000; for the Scandinavian Academy, $10,000; for Grand Forks College, $4,000; for Concordia College, Moorhead, $4,000.

—Reliable reports go to show that in France Protestantism is steadily on the increase. In the beginning of the present century these entire French Protestant clergy numbered only one hundred and twenty-one, and there were no Protestant orphan institutions or higher schools. Now there are more than a thousand Evangelical pastors in France, and a membership of more than one hundred thousand, and thirty-five homes for orphan children, and forty-two hospitals under Protestant control. The Protestant religious press is represented by sixty-three journals and fully two thousand primary schools are under control of the church. The membership is liberal, the contributions being fully two million francs per year for church purposes. Of this sum last year 478,000 francs were devoted to foreign missions and 227,000 francs for church schools. In proportion to their numbers French Protestants take a very prominent position in the life and thought of the nation and in culture stand above the average of citizens. They are aggressive and active in defense of their own positions against Roman Catholic attack.

To New Subscribers!
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
—)FOR(—
FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

Style 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25 00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover. 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and Its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and coucil. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual. By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 328 pages, cloth, $1 00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Dr. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1 00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

FLIES.

The plague of flies during hot summer weather in many country homes may in a degree be obviated with little care.

Throwing out on the ground slops, dish-water and the water in which milk pans, pails, etc., are washed add greatly to the fly pest.

Strict cleanliness around the premises and throughout the house is necessary. In the kitchen nothing that will draw flies should be left uncovered. Window screens made of small mesh wire may now be had so cheap at the stores that the real comfort they will add to homes will make the investment necessary to screen some of the windows a very profitable one. Where wire window screens may be considered too expensive mosquito netting may be bought and tacked around the window frames.

THICKENING FOR SOUP.

Bring a piece of butter to a boiling point in a stewpan and sprinkle flour in until quite thick, beating well with an egg whisk until the flour is well-cooked, then drop in a little hot soup from kettle to thin it sufficiently to add to the soup; this makes the soup much better than adding the flour un-cooked.—Housekeeper.

TO CLEAN WALL PAPER.

There is only one right way to clean wall paper, and that is with a week-old loaf of bread cut in halves. Begin at the top of the wall and wipe downward, with the crumb side of the loaf, making the stroke a half yard or so in length. Never rub crosswise or upward, but always downward. Generally after this operation the paper will look as good as new.

Insurance Agent.—"Have your house insured against fire?"

Mrs. Holmes.—"No, sir."

I. A.—"Are you not afraid of fire?"

Mrs. H.—"I am not, but my husband is very much in awe of them."

I. A.—"That so?"

Mrs. H.—"Yes; during the ten years of our married life he has never once kindled a fire."—All from truth.

To destroy mosquitoes take of gum camphor a piece about one-third the size of a hen's egg and evaporate it by placing it in a tin vessel and holding it over a lamp, taking care that it does not ignite. The smoke will soon fill the room and expel the mosquitoes, and not one will be found in the room next morning, even though the windows should be left open all night.

FARM FOR SALE.

A quarter section in Kearney county, Nebraska,

WILL BE SOLD AT A BARGAIN.

Description: Southwest quarter of Section 31, Township 8, North, Range 13, west of the sixth principal meridian.

ONLY $500 CASH FOR 160 ACRES.

Large bodies of cattle have ranged over and been herded on this and adjacent land. It is pretty well covered with grass. The soil as a whole is quite sandy, especially on the hills; the little valleys have the best soil.

It is near two railroad towns. Lowell is within two miles, and Hartwell is about five miles distant. All taxes are paid to date. Must be sold soon if possible. Address, W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Whole Family Helped

"My husband was troubled with Rheumatism so that he could hardly lift his hand to his head, and also had severe pains in his stomach after eating. Four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured him. Our son was all run down and Hood's Sarsaparilla built him up, and he gained 15 lbs. Our little boy Leon has also been given appetite, weight and strength by the medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me of Erysipelas, which I have had for 15 years and which is now entirely driven out of my system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Since taking Hood's I am better in every way." MRS. H. K. JOHNSON, Lyme Centre, N. H.

Hood's Pills are a mild cathartic. 25c.

Songs for the Times.

FOURTH AND IMPROVED EDITION.

BY GEO. W. CLARK.

Author of the "Temperance Songster," "The Liberty Minstrel," "Free Soil Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," Harp of Freedom," etc.

This work comprises some 235 Elemental, Reformatory and Progressive Songs, Odes, Psalms, Hymns, etc., words and music, old and new, on a great variety of subjects, including Truth, Freedom, Temperance, Prohibition.

Likewise National, Loyal and Patriotic Songs. Also Miscellaneous, Social, Domestic and Hygienic; Songs adapted to the home circle, to private devotion and public worship, to national gatherings, mass meetings, and all humane movements for the good of mankind. It is printed on new electrotype plates, made from new type; the impressions are on nice white paper, and its pages are clear, bright and cheery, and the price very low for so costly a work.

Single copy, 30 cts; by mail, 35 cts; by the dozen, $3; by the hundred, $20.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough
Edward Payson, James Caughey,
Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther,
C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso,
S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills,
D. L. Moody, Guy Fox,
Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H Potts,
Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge,
and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Any who wish the agency or general agency for the book, should address the author, Rev. S B. Shaw,
Near Grand Rapids. DUTTON, MICH.

THE GUIDING HAND;
—OR—
PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.
-——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARRON.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS
OF
FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy,"—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

Farm Notes.

STRAWBERRIES IN 1894.

No report on strawberries for 1893 could be made of much value, but the crop for 1894 is fairly good, and our trial beds afford an excellent chance for comparison. I have growing side by side about thirty varieties. The general conclusion that I come to is that there are in some directions considerable improvement in stocks, but that for family or for market we cannot yet discard some of the older favorites. Of these I place very near the head:

Bubach. Where there is a more nearly ideal plant and fruit I do not know. The foliage is a rick bluish green, easily distinguished across half an acre of plants. The runners are abundant, but not so plentiful as to strangle each other. The fruit, except in very wet times, is solid, and the quality excellent, but not quite the best. The flower is pistillate; the ripening season early.

Sharpless does so well every way with me that I will not discard it. On lighter soils it lacks flavor, but with me is positively best. The foliage is tall, light-colored and abundant. The berries are immense, and while often carrying a green tip, they look admirably well in crates. It is later in ripening than Bubach, and ranks in general as one of the latest of the well-tested sorts.

Cumberland is another old berry of very high rank. It will do well almost everywhere, and in almost all sorts of seasons. The shape of the berry is perfect, and the foliage fine. Color is a light, bright red. I have grown Cumberland for nearly twenty years and like it as well as ever. It is not well suited to a distant market.

Of the newer berries, I am safe in recommending Barton, Beverly and Leader, while Timbrell seems to be a very ideal. But my test of the last is not sufficient to enable me more than to say the quality is very fine, growth beautiful, and the cropping large. Beverly is one of the very latest berries.

Saunders is a berry, I believe, it will do well to hold to for sometime yet. It lacks a little in foliage, but the berries are fine.

Crawford is not quite reliable, but is a splendid berry in form generally, and in color always.

Mrs. Cleveland has been a favorite berry with me for several years. It is not quite as big as some, but is large, and a bright red, and a constant bearer. I cannot find a better grower, or one that holds out better for a long season.

A berry was sent out called Williams four years ago. It is really a splendid berry in growth, in size, in color, in quantity.

I recommend to plant the following sorts as thoroughly reliable for home gardens: Sharpless Saunders, Williams, Bubach, Barton, Standard, Leader, Cumberland, Timbrell, and for very early Crystal City, and for very late Beverly. If you wish fewer sorts, select Bubach, Sharpless, Cumberland, Timbrell, Leader. These five ought to give you grand satisfaction. It adds to the pleasure of cultivation to have a trial bed in which to compare varieties.

Strawberry culture requires, first, a thoroughly clean piece of ground; second, a lay of the land if possible to the south or southeast or east, well drained; third, mellow, well-worked soil; fourth, a large amount of enrichment; fifth, irrigation in dry spells. It is not a crop that can be relied upon every year. It is liable above all to be spoiled utterly by a drought at ripening time. It will pay to have a system of irrigation. Easiest of all, probably, for most is a windmill with a tank. It is wise to grow the strawberry with other fruits, so that in case of failure other crops will preserve a balance of income. I have seen men bankrupted by three successive failures with the strawberry.—E. P. Powell, in the N. Y. Voice.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is, unquestionably, the best preservative of the hair. It is also curative of dandruff, tetter, and all scalp affections.

AYER'S Hair Vigor
Prevents BALDNESS
REMOVES DANDRUFF AND Restores Color TO Faded and Gray HAIR
THE Best Dressing

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR FOR GROWTH AND COLOR

A BOOKLET.
107 pages, 5x7 inches.
Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents
—o:o—
The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE CELEBRATED OXFORD ORGANS.—CONTAINS 122 CELEBRATED ORCHESTRAL TONED REEDS.
When you buy from us you pay the factory profit, and not agents' dealers' or middlemens' enormous profits. This beautiful Oxford Columbia Organ for $45.00.
COMPASS:—Five Octaves, 11 Necessary Stops, 2 of 3-Octave, 2 of 2-Octave Each.

11 NECESSARY STOPS— All that can be put on a 4 set reed action without attaching bogus stops, viz.: Diapason, Principal, Melodia, Dulcet, Cremona, Vox-Angelica, Echo Horn, Celeste, Treble Coupler, Bass Coupler, Grand Organ and Right Knee Swell and Left Knee Swell. The above 4 set reeds and 11 necessary stops are placed at the disposal of the performer and the action is characterized by greater power, variety and brilliancy of tone, combined with the most exquisitive purity and sweetness, in addition to the music contained in an ordinary organ.

DESCRIPTION OF CASE— Constructed of the best grade of solid black walnut, handsomely finished, hand-rubbed with oil, durable and strong, thoroughly seasoned, kiln dried, and made on scientific principles, each component part being paneled to prevent warping or splitting, with veneered panels, elegantly carved and ornamented; center panel on top fitted with a large beveled French plate glass mirror, with veneer panels on each side; exquisite fret work, brocade silk velvet trimmings back of all fret work, large music cabinet, swinging front fall board, two lamp stands, convenient handles for moving. It is entirely new in design, and is as illustrated in cut. The case stands on castors.

INTERIOR CONSTRUCTION— is simple yet scientific and durable, not liable to get out of order and easily adjusted in case of any disarrangement; working parts are free from friction and will neither break nor wear. Nothing but the best of material used, and you will never find in one of the Oxford organs blotting paper instead of felt; cloth instead of leather; oil-cloth instead of rubber; common board instead of three-ply stock.

THE TONE— which is the most important part of an instrument, is full, sweet, round, sympathetic, and harmonious, with volume, variety and brilliancy, combined with great power.

THE BELLOWS— a very important part of a good organ, are of the very best and strongest material, best quality of rubber cloth and best quality of felt, with perfect stop action. They have an immense capacity and furnished, with the automatic valve for preventing an oversupply of air, will never leak or wear out.

THE WARRANT— By our warrant we pledge ourselves in case our organ should prove defective in material or workmanship during a term of fifteen years to put the same in proper condition or refund money.

FREE—Our Wholesale Catalogue of Organs, Baby Carriages, Sewing Machines and Bicycles, quoting cash and time prices. Write for Catalogue at once and state which to send.

THE OXFORD MFG. CO. | Old Established and reliable.... | 338 TO 334 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

PATENTS
Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT
To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

The Nonesuch Professor,
In his Meridian Splendor. By William Secker (Puritan). With an introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. 16 mo, $1.00.
"It is a mine of sparkling gems."—Presbyterian Observer.
"A sheaf of golden grain, ripened by grace, and sweet with the flavor of rare simplicity and holy wisdom."—N. Y. Observer.
"It is a searching book."—Christian Intelligencer.
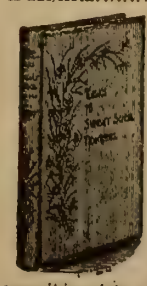
"This is a wonderful book. At whatever page you open it, your eye lights upon pithy aphorisms that combine the sententiousness of Benjamin Franklin with the sweet, holy savor of Samuel Rutherford. It contains hundreds of bright seed thoughts."—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.
By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth..... .75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.
S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:- Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	3 c.
The Lily "	"	3 "	Pure Words "	"	3 "
Light & L Scholar's	Qrly.	3 "	Light & L Inf Cl.	wk.	4 "
" Teacher's	"	5 "	" " Lesson Leaf	"	1½ "
Golden Treasures	1 "		L. & L. Primary	Qly	4 "

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, & Sunshine, each Pr. Yr. 25c
The four to one address " 75c
Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr. 25c
Scholar's " " 30c
L. & L. Infant Class, weekly, 25c

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Love, the Supreme Gift:
THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.
The Perfected Life:
THE GREATEST NEED IN THE WORLD.
Both by Prof. Henry Drummond. Bound in chaste white vellum paper, each 20 cts.
These are not to be judged by the size, unless rubies are counted for the weight thereof. The first has been very largely circulated, the second is now only just published and deserves the same wide reading—both are gems such as are only found at rare intervals. If you have not read them, do so at once, you will be a better man or woman for the reading.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT of the Holy Ghost,
BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.
240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.
The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.
TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:
1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Triunity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.
This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:
Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."
Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by perusing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. With al the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polemical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."
Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatizing on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

Struck by Lightning.
A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.
With Striking Illustrations.
Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.
TABLE OF CONTENTS.
Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.
COMMENDATIONS.
American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."
Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."
Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."
Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."
Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

"Best" Marriage Certificate. Size 14x17½. Price postpaid 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50.
This superb certificate meets a popular demand, and is rapidly becoming the favorite. Read what the people say of it: BRO. BEST: My attention having been called to your marriage certificate, I must pronounce it the neatest in design and execution of any I have seen. Rev. E. P. HART. E. C. BEST—Dear Brother: I am well pleased with the specimen copy of your marriage certificate, and shall use them hereafter. They are in good taste, well executed, on good material, and at a very reasonable price. Yours, M. V. CLUTE.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

News of the Week.

WASHINGTON.

The President to-night appointed the commissioners who are to investigate the controversies between certain railroads and their employes in connection with the recent railroad strike at Chicago and in the west. The commissioners are Carl D. Wright, John D. Kernan, of New York, and Nicholas E. Worthington, of Peoria, Ill.

In a speech which occupied three hours in delivering Senator Gorman, last Monday, charged the President with duplicity in connection with the tariff bill. Three of his associates testified to the truth of his charges. The debate continued during the week, President Cleveland being eulogized for his firm stand shown in the letter to Representative Wilson.

Coxey has deserted his army, advising the commonwealers to get themselves arrested and cared for by the authorities.

CHICAGO.

South Chicago plant of the Illinois Steam Company, which was forced to suspend during the strike, will resume work at once.

Statistics of the recent strike show that the railroads lost $355,912 in cars burned by the rioters.

The West and North Side street car companies are planning to begin 200 miles of electric railway and power houses for two immense plants will be built.

Nine houses were destroyed by a west side fire. Being told that four children were in danger, Morris Arka rushed to their rescue and lost his life. Frank Stech was pinned under a door and fatally burned. Over thirty familles were thrown out of house and home by the fire and about two hundred women and children were sheltered at night by the neighbors.

The strike promised by Grand Master Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, was ordered on the 23d and representatives from all the local assemblies of the order were known to have visited the houses and notified the men that the strike would go on. If the order was obeyed by any of the men it was not apparent in any of the packing houses.

FIRES.

The business portions of Chenoa, Ill., was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. The loss is said to be $600,000. The fire spread in a northeasterly direction, destroying the buildings on either side of the street for two blocks, burning over the district that was burned a few years ago.

Explosion of a gasoline stove set a St. Louis lodging-house on fire. Two of the inmates were burned to death and several injured.

Three firemen were killed, several persons injured and 205 horses burned to death in a fire in Washington, D. C.

Three Forks and Watson, prosperous towns in British Columbia, have been completely destroyed by forest fires.

Losses so far reported from the forest fires raging throughout the mountains of Kalso, Wash., aggregate about $125,000. The people of the Slocum district are left destitute, without shelter or food. The line of the fire is twenty-five miles long and the damage to valuable timber is enormous. Buildings at the Tam O'Shanter mine and the Blue Bell mine were burned.

Terrible fires raged near West Superior, Wis., late last week. Several towns were threatened and two or three burned. The city of Phillips was entirely destroyed by fire, leaving 3,000 people homeless, without food or shelter.

CASUALITIES.

While inspecting a mine at West Pittston, Pa., Colonel Mason, superintendent, and Foreman William Wilson fell down the shaft and were killed. Two others were seriously hurt.

By the caving in of the walls of a cistern at Young Ladies' Catholic seminary, Winona, Minn., three brick-layers and a boy nine years old were buried eighteen feet under the earth and brick. A force of men at once started to digging but all were dead when found.

Three persons were killed and fifteen injured in a collision on the Big Four at Griffiths Station, Ohio, due to an engineer's forgetfulness.

The south-bound and north-bound cannonball trains on the Texas and Pacific road had a head-end collision near Queen City, Monday of last week. Eight men were killed and several injured.

A dispatch from Mammoth Hot Springs, Yellowstone Park, says a shock resembling an earthquake was felt at Norris Geyser at three o'clock Saturday morning. The new crater geyser, which had been quiet for some time, broke out with terrific force, throwing rocks weighing 25 pounds to a height of 200 feet and steam rising 500 feet, accompanied by a roar equalling the combined exhaust of a thousand locomotives, which could be heard for ten miles. Every geyser in the Norris Basin played for hours. The new crater now surpasses any geyser in action in the park.

COUNTRY.

Judge Grosscup commenced the trial of strikers of Chillicothe, Ill., who intimidated workmen on the Santa Fe road.

Three people were instantly killed and one fatally wounded Thursday, at Los Angeles, Cal., by Craig, an ex-police officer. One of the victims was his divorced wife. Craig had been drinking heavily.

A dynamite bomb exploded under a Burlington engine as it was crossing the Pan Handle tracks in Chicago, Saturday. Pieces of the bomb struck Officer Best, cutting his leg, and Switchman Motick, cutting his thigh. The explosion threw the front wheels of the engine from the track.

Reports from various points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and northern Iowa say that Thursday was one of the hottest days ever recorded in the northwest. From 100 to 112 in the shade is reported. The long continued heat is proving disastrous to crops. Wheat in South Dakota is reported nearly all out of the way, but corn must have rain immediately to save it. The same conditions exist in northern Minnesota. Reports from northern Iowa say corn is injured beyond the power of rain to restore.

Reports from central and western Kansas are very discouraging. The corn crop will be a failure in more than half the State. In the western third of the State the crop is ruined, while in the central third a fair crop will be raised only in sections where local rains have fallen. The corn in many fields has burned up, and during last week hot winds swept over the western half of Kansas, leaving destruction in their path.

FOREIGN.

Confirmation was received at Shanghai on Saturday of the beginning of hostilities between China and Japan. In addition Steamer Kow Shung, which was sunk by a Japanese cruiser as it was being used to transport Chinese troops, all on board being drowned, the Chinese Trading Company's steamer Toonan, which was also being used as a transport, has been sunk by the fire of a Japanese warship.

The Hong Kong and Shanghai bank agency here is unable to obtain official confirmation of the report that war has been proclaimed, but the agency states that war is everywhere believed to have been inaugurated.

The Italian minister, acting in concert with the British minister, has presented to the Japanese ministry of foreign affairs the proposals made by the Chinese looking to a settlement of affairs in Corea. These proposals will be considered by the Japanese government, which has reserved its reply.

The Chinese legation at London to-day received a dispatch from Tien Tsin, saying that the king of Corea was captured by the Japanese on July 23. This is regarded as explaining the collision which took place at Seoul, the capital of Corea, between the Japanese and the palace guards.

Excessive heat is reported in European cities, and many deaths have occurred in Berlin and Vienna.

A dispatch from Vienna to the Daily News says cholera is rapidly spreading in Galicia, especially in the western district of Cracow and in the eastern districts near the Bussian frontier. Traffic across the frontier has been prohibited.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
·DR·
PRICE'S
CREAM
BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 23 to July 28:

Mrs O R Strong, H N Schneider, Rev C D Brooks, Miss L Fahs, D W Cromer, Mrs G L Paine, Rev D S Shantz, E Brace, H F Dull, Rev E C Mason, O N Carnahan, C G F Miller, D S Dunlap, D J Prince, D Koup, Mrs M Stubbs, R Ingram, S Shroyer, D F Campbell, J Hamilton, W T Peters, J H Schneider, M L Miller, J Turbit, Rev J Harper, J H Rasor, Rev I Bancroft, J Shaw, H Fry, D Riggs, G E Teel, G McCullough, Mrs C C Shaw, T Stiemke, Rev I C Weidler, D O Tussing, J A Richards, Mrs John Cox, L Taft, E Brakeman, W H Ross, Mrs W H Shepard, Mrs D R Mitchell, E D Alvord, Mrs M Blount, Wm S Byers, H Maricle, W L Bitley, J Wilkinson, Rev D Molyneux, F Van Dresar, S Jackson, Rev G M Robb, Rev R R Whittier, S Mathew, Rev H M Barwick, E Pfeiffer, Mrs H Loker, J G Laughlin, G Hossock, J. Mintier. James Ferguson, R Johnson, Mrs H W Hodgman, Dr E R Atwood, S S Grannis, C H Potter, S W Mack, D L Patterson, G Goodell, C A McMillan, W Jenks, W Vine, W Barrus, C D Trumbull, W Inglis, W Mitchell.

"Mamma, was that a sugar plum you just gave me?" asked little Mabel. "No, dear, it was one of Dr. Ayer's Pills." "Please, may I have another?" "Not now, dear; one of those nice pills is all you need at present, because every dose is effective."

WHEATON COLLEGE.

"A SCHOOL FOR MEN AND WOMEN."

Wheaton, Ill., June 26, 1894.

The undersigned who, by invitation of the President and Faculty of Wheaton College, have served as a committee of examination at the close of this current year, are glad of the opportunity to express their great gratification at the abundant evidence which they have had of the competent and faithful instruction imparted, and of the gentle but effective control of the professors over their classes; the value of direct personal contact between teacher and pupil having here especial emphasis.

The examinations of the students exhibit uniformly high scholarship as the result of conscientious application to their work. As a class they are young men and women who have come to college to study, and not to waste their time in frivolity. Many of them are in different ways working their own way through college; among other facilities for which the "Wheaton College Press," with its elegant work as seen in the "College Echoes" just issued, has large promise of increase for the future.

The pervasive Christian influence of the institution is everywhere manifest and should commend it to the confidence and support of the friends of sound learning everywhere.

S. A. Freeman,
James D. Wyckoff,
Robt. C. Bryant,
D. Wellesley Wise,
Geo. H. Smith.

LODGE LAMP

a monthly of choice articles on the SECRET : SOCIETY : SYSTEM, which the National Christian Association proposes to publish if the demand for such a paper is such as to warrant its issue.

Annual subscription 20 cents.

Clubs of 20 for only $2.00.

Send in your pledge to take 20.

☞Money to be sent when you are notified that the plan is successful.☜

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	50⅞	@	53¼
Winter No. 2	51¾	@	52
Corn—No. 2	44	@	46⅛
Oats—No. 2	29	@	33
Rye—No. 2	40	@	43
Bran per ton	11 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@11	50
Butter, medium to best	10½	@	20
Cheese	06⅝	@	09
Beans	1 25	@ 1	90
Eggs	10½	@	20
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 50	@ 5	10
Flax	1 81	@ 1	28
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50	@ 9	40
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00	@70	00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	50	@	60
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼	@	06½
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	7	@	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 45	@ 4	85
Common to good	2 00	@ 3	90
Hogs	4 80	@ 5	37½
Sheep	1 00	@ 3	50

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	54¼	@	55⅜
Corn No 2	50¼	@
Oats	39	@	52⅛
Rye	52	@	52⅝
Eggs	14	@	15⅛
Butter	12	@	19
Wool	19	@	25

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 40	@ 4	75
Hogs	4 50	4	80

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. Kimball,
Box 277. Newmarket, N. H

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NÓTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL XXVI, No. 48. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,267.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Good Reading..... 8
General Hawley and the A. P. A..... 8
The Santos of the Lodge 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The American Railroad Idea..... 1
The A. P. A. and its Penalties 2
Secret Things..... 2
SELECTED
A Landmark of Labor's Future..... 2
The A. P. A. a Dangerous Ally 3
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Gen. A. C. Hawley on the A. P. A..... 3
LITERATURE 6
IN BRIEF..... 7
N. C. A..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
LABOR UNIONS:
Work done by the A. R U..... 4
A Word to Workingmen 4
Beware of Union Leaders 4
The Choice between Lodge and Church.... 4
REFORM NEWS:
Here and There in New England: Round About the National Capital; Along the Oregon and California Border.....4,5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Out of the Lodge into Christ: Able to Save; From Another Early Lecturer; Pith and Point..... 5,6
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS. 12
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

Debs of the A. R U called a convention of the order last week, which spent two days in formulating an appeal to the labor unions to take revenge on Pullman cars and railways at the polls. They told the local branches of the order to "call off" the strike if they wanted to. Debs probably could not bear the humiliation of it. The local bodies have quickly acted on the hint, and except two, all outside of Pullman have declared the strike off. The action will make no difference, for business had been generally resumed two weeks before.

The Roman Catholic Total Abstinence society held an enthusiastic meeting last week at St. Paul. The decision of the legate Satolli gives an immense impetus to their movement. But the organs of the saloon cannot contain their wrath. The Wine and Spirit Review having challenged the opinion of Archbishop Corrigan, of New York, that gentleman answers with dignity and excellent spirit, sustaining the decision of Satolli "No Catholic," he says, "can refuse to accept the principles laid down in that decision; but," he adds, "acceptance of principles is not to be confounded with the blind application of the same on all occasions and under all circumstances."

Rev. Mr. Lindeblad, whose case was mentioned last week, together with pastor Wakeman of the Swedish Methodist and Cawardine of the M. E. church, are all interested in the Pullman strike. Their churches are made up of Pullman employes. The two Swedish pastors have advised their members to return to work. Mr. Cawardine has justified the strike in public addresses. But they are agreed in asking the Pullman Company to take back men who have behaved themselves during the trouble, and remit the back rent that has piled up to some $70,000 Since the works closed none has been collected and little is now collectable. Hundreds of new men are ready to go to work, but the pastors hope to get old and reliable men reinstated.

Months ago Andrew Carnegie, it is said, advised his friends in Congress to pass the Wilson bill, adjourn and go home. His great iron mills would suffer nothing from that measure compared with the prolonged uncertainty which stagnates business. Weeks ago a great petition of Chicago business men, ignoring party names, asked Congress that action be quickly taken or the business situation would be insupportable. Thoughtful men are learning that prosperity does not appertain to either high tariff or low, but to a fixed, steady and reliable condition of legislation which shall not be unsettling business every few years. Whether tariff is high or low, there will always be openings for profitable investments, if only there be no vexatious fluctuations.

The situation now presented by Congress is both dangerous and disgraceful. It is the result of secrecy in legislation. In 1892 the Democratic party made certain platform promises respecting tariff, and was put in power. In the lesson everybody read a rebuke of high tariff, as oppressive especially to the American farmer. Tariff revision, therefore, was expected and came up in the House. In a month of open debate the measure was ready and passed on to the Senate. That body has spent the better part of a half year on the same bill, not in open discussion but in the secrecy of committees. The effect is what might be expected. One interest after another has had an opportunity to use illicit personal influence, if not outright bribery, until the measure reported early in July was neither Democratic, Republican, or Populist, but a disjointed piece of perplexity, a hodge-podge which neither party could digest.

President Cleveland's letter, on the bill, which made a little war in the Senate, was consistent with party promises; whether it was statesmanlike or not, it was honest. It provoked a debate which is a curiosity in the history of American legislation. But the disgraceful squabble (it is not honorable debate) drags on. The last development is that the two Senators from Louisiana demand some change about sugar. Their votes are decisive. What they demand will put $13,000,000 into the pockets of Louisiana sugar planters. They are playing for heavy stakes and mean to gain it. Meantime the country languishes, business fails and men go crazy as they see their children starving.

New Mexico desires to follow Utah into the Union. The kind of citizens she will give us are very unhappily pictured in a dispatch last week. Mr. Griffith, editor of the Taos Valley Herald and Miner, reprinted from Harper's Weekly a description of the Penitentes and their cruel tortures, self-inflicted as religious rites. The article came in a ready made plate and the editor put it in as he would an advertisement. As a reward of his carelessness he was terribly beaten, his office robbed, and he was compelled to flee forty miles afoot to Tres Piedras. It is safe to say that no one of these wretched dupes of a corrupt priesthood set foot last year in the art gallery of the World's Fair. The great painting representing their frenzied rites exhibited there would have made them wilder than demons.

At the late convention to promote international peace and Christian arbitration, held at Ocean Grove, the evangelist B. Fay Mills made an eloquent appeal to the churches to co-operate with enthusiasm in promoting universal peace. Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace Society, stated that seventy-two important arbitrations had taken place between nations. Many wars were thus prevented, and the good sense of rulers and people is more and more manifestly approving this means of settling disputes between nations. George May Powell of Philadelphia, speaking on the cost of wars, said the money invested in any of several of our new war ships if wisely invested in encouraging commerce to either South America or the Pacific would annually return twenty-one times the cost of the cruise. He urged a peace court for compulsory arbitration to settle law quarrels and labor disputes. In France such a court settles a half million cases yearly.

Railroad managers and men are like other men. If they work on the Sabbath day, if they bribe legislatures, buy up courts, break the Inter-State commerce law, strike, boycott, and open war on society by their unions, the public gives them great provocation. Our government of the people makes Sunday mail contracts, multitudes take the Sunday trains and even demand them, shippers on Saturday want to reach the Monday market, and everybody wants a free pass. Vice-president Brooks of the Pennsylvania road informs the New York Constitutional convention that public officials do not now blush to "ask for annual passes for themselves, for members of their families, and for political adherents and others to remote parts of the country. I have known a member of the Supreme Court of the United States to apply for free transportation, the money value of which in a single instance was $200 and $300. Governors of States, United States Senators, members of the House of Representatives, members of every department of the State government, from the governor to the janitor, ask and expect to receive favors." The people who cry loudest against the Debs rebellion have need to remember the advice, "Physician, heal thyself!"

THE AMERICAN RAILROAD IDEA.

BY REV. T. C. MOFFATT.

Rabbi Schindler, in his work on "Messianic Expectations," points out the fact that in the past some great idea has seized upon a nation, a race, or an age, and that its life has revolved about that dominant idea in a way that previously or subsequently would appear absurd. The instance with which he deals is the Messianic idea in Israel, as he understands it. Other instances will occur to the students of history, as the militarism of Rome, sculpture in Greece, the crusades in the Middle Ages.

The great idea of ancient Egypt was prodigious religious architecture. We gaze in wonder on the pyramids, the sphinxes, the statues, the colossal temples of the day of the Pharaohs. We wonder that they ever could bring themselves to such a use of the natural resources of their land. It looks to us like stupendous folly, an indescribable waste of human energy and even life.

Our great American idea is certainly different, but that is not saying that it has not as strong a hold upon us. It is the railroad idea.

Thousands of miles of grade are thrown up at vast expense, thousands of miles of iron rails are laid, ponderous iron machines are built at great cost to draw over those rails buildings, many of them much more elegant than the dwellings of the average American—and all for what? For mere transportation. To take people and commodities and mail from one part of the country to another.

Armies of men are employed in this work; they produce nothing, but only carry around what others have produced. The American people are possessed with the idea of transportationism. Some of them actually undervalue anything that has not been "shipped in" from somewhere.

The ancient Egyptian idea of massive temples and statues and sphinxes looks abnormal and grotesque to us; but could Rameses the Great step out from his case in the museum at Boulak and look about America, do you think he would find nothing abnormal or absurd? What do you think he would say of the farmers of Kansas who ship off on the railroad their pork at $4 per hundred and then have it shipped back again and, in the shape of bacon and hams, pay $15 per hundred for it? Would he have nothing to say about waste of resources? What would he think of an army of more than a half million of men who travel about constantly on these railroads, producing nothing, but "getting off" the goods of their employers upon the various merchants? What would he think of "the drummer"? And what would he say of those lines of railroad which were pushed through because "we must have a railroad"; often heavily bonding the communities; and yet they have never paid and never in the nature of things can pay? Not long ago I rode a long distance, the only passenger in the car.

So fixed in the public mind is the railroad idea that many do not seem to reckon the amount they pay for car fare. They will economize here,—there; will "jew" down the merchant, and hunt everywhere for bargains: but if they have the slightest reason, or even sometimes with no reason at all, they will open their purses for the railroad company and take a trip.

We have been instructed recently as to the great losses incurred through the strike on the railways. I have seen no estimate of the money saved by people who didn't take the trips they expected to, but it must have been quite a sum. There are two sides to this matter. If the architectural idea of Rameses seems to us abnormal and absurd, do you not think that he would be justified in retorting that the railroad idea has driven us beyond the bounds of sound sense?

In fine, must we not ultimately admit that, amid our various industrial complications, one most serious fact is that the railroad idea has run away with us?

Clyde, Kans.

THE A. P. A. AND ITS PENALTIES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Whatever may be the objects, real or ostensible, for which men unite in any organization, wherever they make secrecy and obedience the conditions of membership, such society is almost sure to degenerate into something essentially tyrannical towards its members and hurtful to society. To say nothing of such orders as Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and Knights of Pythias, we have abundant illustration in the trades unions and their acts of violence and despotism during the last few months.

The A. P. A. in its published declaration of principles has little or nothing that will not meet the approval of the majority of American citizens. But the A. P. A. in it practical workings has been the vehicle of mendacity the most gross, and of petty malicious tyranny the most malignant.

The following resolutions adopted by a council of the A. P. A. remind one of some of the bulls of the pope during the Middle Ages, in which a several curse was pronounced on every member of the body of a heretic. It may not be quite so bad as the penalty of an Entered Apprentice Mason,—"having the throat cut from ear to ear and the tongue torn out, etc., but it is in the same line and should make all men pause and consider whether they should put their necks under a yoke from which they cannot be released without an anathema.

It seems that M. D. Van Horn, of Denver, was misled into joining this A. P. A. organization; and after he was elected mayor of that city he appointed a Roman Catholic to office, because he thought he was a competent man for the position of chief of police. The "council" of the order got together and dealt with Mr. Van Horn. They marked him "Jesuit," and passed "the traitor's resolution" and sent it to him. In the body of the resolution is a blood-red cross, and underneath is something like the shape of a grave or a coffin marked "Here lies a traitor." These resolutions, published in the Rocky Mountain News of Denver, in October last, which bespeak such abiding faith in the greatness of American citizenship, show gentlemen the tender regard they have in following a man, showing that their opposition does not end with his death, but they pursue his body after being buried.

TRAITOR—M. D. VAN HORN, JESUIT.—THE TRAITOR'S RESOLUTION.

Whereas, Marion D. Van Horn, an infamous member of this order, hath, contrary to his oath, said oath having been voluntarily, though perjuriously and traitoriously taken, opposed the tenets of this order; and

Whereas, Said Van Horn hath totally disregarded his said obligation by an overt act, to him and to us well known, and which has been in due form proven; therefore be it

Resolved, That said Van Horn be dishoncrably dismissed from the councils of this order as a traitor and a perjurer; that a likeness of said traitor, with a copy of these resolutions, duly certified, be sent to each and every supreme council, supreme lodge, supreme camp and grand commandery within the jurisdiction of the United States, as well as to each local council within the jurisdiction of this State, with a request that the same be read, and that the name "Marion D. Van Horn, traitor and perjurer," be proclaimed three times at each of four consecutive regular meetings of such councils.

Resolved further, That a photograph or likeness of said traitor be prepared, bearing across the breast of said likeness a Roman cross, painted thereon, surmounted by the word "Traitor;" said likeness to be draped in black and hung in our council chambers.

Be it resolved further, That all communications, socially or otherwise, with said traitor and perjurer, by any member of this order, do now forever cease. That in his joys or in his sorrows; in his hopes or in his disappointments; awake or asleep; in health or in sickness; at his fireside or with his fellowmen, we ask Providence to grant one faint ray of conscience to quicken his Plutonian soul, so that he may see himself as others see him.

Be it further resolved, That when his carcass reposes in the arms of mother Earth, in whatsover land, an unknown committee, duly appointed, shall perform its last rite in the name of this council, by marking the place so that all may know: "Here lies a traitor."

Resolved further, That these resolutions be adopted by a rising vote; that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to present a copy of these resolutions to said traitor in person.

The News publishes a facsimile of the notice and resolutions adopted by the A. P. A. against Mayor Van Horn.

If he was guilty of any crimes against the laws of the land he ought to be punished. If it was some violation of moral law not specified in the statute-book, the fact might be specified and the people warned; but if he simply regarded his rights and duties as an American citizen to be paramount to any covenant with a secret order, he was shamefully abused.

Oberlin, O.

SECRET THINGS.

BY ELDER J. R. BAIRD.

We are living in a wonderful age. All nations are becoming restless. Satan is using every evil influence to create war to the ends of the earth. We see it in religion and in politics, and between capital and labor. And the question arises, from whence comes all this tumult and commotion.

We answer, read the first nine verses of the first chapter of Isaiah. Then follow the subjects contained in each paragraph through the entire chapter, and you will see what the nations are to be punished for. What kind of religion, we ask, is the rage in many popular churches? It is the religion of Cain,—such as is pleasing to depraved man, and displeasing to a holy God. Such as ignores the atonement of Christ, and blasphemes his holy name. How many Grand and Great Grand Masters claim homage; and how many tens of thousands are in oath-bound obedience to all those Grand Masters, and the whole thing is a grand Satanic swindle. Yet men are as pleased with its flattering and high sounding titles.

"Woe unto you, ye blind guides." "For if the blind lead the blind both shall fall into the ditch." "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb; and the smoke of their torments ascendeth up forever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name." (Rev. 14: 9, 10, 11.)

Such is the appalling prospect of lodge worshipers as declared by the Word of God. Were not Judas and the man of sin called the sons of perdition, because their perdition and unchangeable doom was certified beforehand? Not one of those who have the mark of the beast are among the saved. Also read Rev. 15: 2 and 3; Rev. 20: 3. Also see 2 Peter 2nd chapter, in which the doom of false teachers and their deluded followers are so plainly described.

Let me say to all who may read these lines, remember the parable or the ten virgins; five were wise: they had oil in their vessels with their lamps, and when the Bridegroom came, they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut. This is the final rejection of the wicked—the good shut in; the wicked shut out.

A LANDMARK OF LABOR'S FUTURE.

(From the August Review of Reviews.)

Men are anxiously inquiring what is to be the future of labor, as they note the growing concentration of capital on the one hand, and the increased tendency to organized resistance of labor on the other hand. Doubtless great changes are to come about some day. But there remain a few old principles as rugged landmarks, to lose which would mean ruin and nothing short of it.

The first great landmark is the enduring necessity for the patient building up of individual human character. This world is not to become a worse place for men and women to live in, but rather a better place, if only it remembers that when individual character fails nothing is left. There is no such thing as social progress in general without good men in particular. For honest, clear-eyed manhood the future can but be bright. Even a regime of ultra-socialism would be endurable, provided men would but be men in the high sense of the word. But the socialistic era is not heaving in sight just yet. The age of competition is destined to linger for at least a generation or two. In the economic sphere, men must continue either to employ themselves or to sell their skill to other employers.

What practical advice then would a wise man offer to a young workingman? Would he advise that young man to give himself great and primary concern for the abstract cause of Labor? Probably not, if the young man happened to be his personal friend. He would advise him to be industrious; to take genuine interest in his trade; to endeavor by all means to grow more skillful in it; to make himself in every honorable way indispensable to his employer; to value highly his leisure, for the useful opportunities it can easily afford him; to make good friends and avoid bad ones; to acquire self-control and fixity of purpose; to learn the worth of money, and to form the habit of saving it as a means toward the acquisition of a full freedom. He would adjure his young friend to act upon the principle that every man must bear his own burdens. He would show him that the saving of an amount equal to from one to two years' earnings makes practically all the difference between a condition of independence and a condition of servitude or possible pauperism.

Nowadays one fears to preach the old-fashioned virtues of thrift, abstinence, self-help, "getting on in the world," to men in the mass; for he is quite sure to be rebuked by somebody with lofty phrases about the solidarity of labor, the paramount social question, and the great common cause. And so one prefers to give this primitive counsel more privately, to young men one at a time who may be induced to heed it. For ourselves, we all know in our hearts that we have got to work out our own individual salvation, and that nobody can do it for us. This age has not yet outgrown the need of teachers like Mr. Samuel Smiles. Mr. Pullman was himself a working mechanic. There are thousands of men in Mr. Pullman's employ to-day who have precisely as fair a field and as good a chance as ever lay before the palace-car "magnate."

Let us be merciful and tender to the aged and unfortunate; but as for those of us who are able-bodied, let us each, with due regard to the rights of our fellows, and with none but honorable means, make the best of such economic foothold as we may possess, and be thankful for that splendid fabric of American liberty that guarantees us our rights and vouchsafes us our opportunities.

SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

GEN. A. C. HAWLEY ON THE AMERICAN PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

As President Blanchard concluded, the chairman, Mr. Catlin, said: "I think if Tom Moore had heard that paper he would not have said that

"'Among the five points of the Calvinists, none of 'em
Ever yet reckoned a point of wit one of 'em.'

"Josh Billings says there are two things to be said in favor of 'going to the devil'—the road is easy, and you are sure to get there. Now, I don't know just what application, if any, that has here, but possibly the next speaker can tell us. I have the pleasure of introducing Gen. A. C. Hawley, one of the organizers of the A. P. A."

GEN. HAWLEY'S ADDRESS.

The chairman does not know what application that has, but he may know before I get through.

I am laboring under a great disadvantage; I was invited to come here this evening and represent the organization of the A. P. A. in this meeting. But I have a very severe cold, and can hardly speak, and have not prepared any written article, yet my text is so thoroughly in my mind that I think I shall have no difficulty in giving you the aims and purpose of the A. P. A. —in politics.

The A. P. A. is absolutely a political organization and I am not here to offer any apology for its principles, because, sir, I believe them to be the most honorable of principles known to Americans. They are Americanism. Perhaps I had better not say this. I was down in St. Louis a short time ago, and a man was telling something of Chicago, and of course they always tell something good. He said that a police justice, a friend of his, told him that it was a sin to be an American in Chicago. And to illustrate this, he said that one morning he went into court, and a big, burly Irish policeman brought in a fellow who had evidently seen better days, and he stood up in front of the dock. The judge says to him —by the way it was our brother Matson—he says, "What are you up for?" The prisoner says, "Your honor, I am charged with one of the most heinous crimes that a prisoner was ever charged with at your bar." "What is it?" "Why, my father was a native born American, and I was born in Cook county myself, and so I am dragged in by an Irish son of a gun to be tried by a Dutch son of a gun, and what's the odds what I am charged with."

Hence, Mr. Chairman, it is perhaps not safe for me to say that this is an American organization, but it is one conceived in a case of necessity. The chairman says I am one of the founders of the order. I am one of the oldest members of the order, and I am proud of it. I wish I had got into it six months before I did. This order is an organization of American citizens who have no fight with any man's religion—I want that borne in mind by the reporter when he makes this report, for I am always misreported. We have no fight with any man's religion so long as he uses that religion as a saving grace, but the moment he harnesses it to any political machine we are after him, and we don't care what his name is, whether it be Methodist, Presbyterian or Romanist.

We recognize no party political alliance in our order. No man can come into our order and say that he is Republican or that he is a Democrat. He comes in on the basis of his faith in a principle, and goes to the polls and votes exactly as he believes, after having taken an obligation, which I am sorry that I have not here to read to you. I had intended to bring the ritual and read it. He votes on principle and not on party lines.

Now, this order has been in politics the last few days; you have heard from them. And you will hear from them again next fall, and in 1896 you will see their brand upon the President of the United States, or you won't have any.

The gentleman says, "If they are to be a permanent organization." They are here to be a permanent organization. I don't know what party that President will belong to. I can show you a Democratic judge here that got the entire Republican vote of the order, because they put a man upon the Republican ticket who did not represent Americanism as they believe in it.

This organization has an appreciation of the liberty that we enjoy. It recognizes what that liberty cost, cradled away back there in the rocks of New England; they know and remember well the precious lives of those Puritan fathers that it cost, the sufferings of those Puritan mothers, and the sacred manner in which they guarded that liberty until they handed it down to us. Well do they remember when that old flag was attacked again in 1861, and those men who went out to defend that flag went out upon the same principle that led my colleagues and myself into this order, believing that it was our duty in the interest of our country and our institutions to join this order; and had I the time I would pick a material flaw in my friend's argument in relation to secret societies being a damage rather than a benefit, but I have not time and I want to lay the principles of our order before this body.

We saw that liberty assailed then. We went out in 1861, and I notice some of the boys who went with me—we are not boys now—we brought back the results. We brought back rebel lead in our bodies, and we did it as American citizens. We see now the very bulwarks of that liberty attacked by a foreign ecclesiastical institution that comes here from the Tiber and commences a wise, dangerous warfare upon the very foundation of our government, and we say, "Stop!" We will not submit; we protest against this.

I have been in places where an American citizen, born upon this soil, and who carried a musket for three and a half long years to defend this country, could not stand up and talk to his peers on this subject because a certain church did not like it.

Now that is not American government, it is not American liberty, and we most seriously protest against it.

We have been called down a great many times on this statement that the Roman Catholic church attacks our public schools. I say without fear of successful contradiction from any source that they do attack our schools. Their priests throughout the land, with some exceptions—some of them are too wise to do it—openly attack our public schools; and let me say this: If I make one of these speeches in public, someone will say, "He is a crank;" but, my friends, history repeats itself. Did anybody ever hear of Victor Hugo, the sage and seer of France, being called a crank? When this same institution came there, with the same object that it has here, to attack the teaching of the people, he said, "Stop. We know you. You are the same old clerical party. You apply here for the teaching of France. Produce some of your pupils and show us what you have done. Spain, magnificent Spain, with all her grandeur, has been rocked in the cradle of your schools. What have you done for her? You have reduced her to degradation and shame. What have you given her for all this glory that you have robbed her of? You have given her the Inquisition. Look at Italy, the mother of artists, the mother of science, today. Less men can read and write there than in any other country in the civilized world, and she has been your scholar all through."

Now, when I, a simple American citizen, proclaim to the people of America, the lovers of our free schools, that there is danger, they call me a crank. Well, if I am a crank, I submit that a lot of wheels are being turned.

I presume the gentleman who preceded me will admit that it is the duty of an individual to be interested in politics if he claims to be a good citizen. Then he must admit that if a man, bound with other men in an oath-bound lodge, becomes fraternally tied to every individual of that order, that is individual duty. He says then the effect of that lodge is felt. Well, now, it is only a matter of surmise, by the man who does not know the inner workings of the lodge, whether their action is for the better or for the worse of the community. It is only a supposition —the supposition that these positions are filled with Masons because of their being Masons—there is no proof of it in existence. There is proof, however, that within that organization has been more charity, more orphans fed, more tears shed with the widow, than in any known church, yea, in all the churches on God's green earth.

The objection to the A. P. A. as a factor in politics is made by those people who are affected by the results of its action. It is the politician who is interested. There is no organization, secret or otherwise, that does not have its effect on politics. Now, if the president here should make a suggestion, I fancy Wheaton college over there would vote the way he did—and why should not I protest against that college as a secret order?

Here is our friend the postmaster. He is more dangerous than a secret society. Let him start in and vote one way, and ten Republicans around him will vote the same way, because they want to be solid with Mr. Hesing. I think you will find on careful examination that within the pale of these secret societies may be found the very best men in the country, and I will give the speaker credit for saying that there were some; and I have never known a secret society, banded together for mutual protection or mutual pleasure, that did any particular harm in politics or otherwise. But this organization of the A. P. A. is expressly organized to interfere in politics. It is in politics to purify politics in this country, and we do not propose to ever allow it to fall into the hands of any political, partisan organization, while there are ten men banded together in a so-called council. Now, in your State almost every town and hamlet has one of these councils. There is nothing so secret about it, and sometimes when I get mad I read the ritual right out, and if I had it I would like to read it now.

There is a time coming, he says, when men will abandon these organizations—I may misquote him, he said that time was coming, or he hoped the time was coming—but the way it is progressing there is no danger of his seeing it disorganized while he is out there at Wheaton. In this State alone our organization numbers about 26,000 active members within the councils of the A. P. A.; about 12,000 of members of the P. O. S. O. A., a kindred organization, the only difference being that one is strictly American, for the native born, and the other does not exclude a man because he was born in any other country—if his heart is right and in the cause we receive him into the work.

My throat is troubling me so that I shall have to ask to be excused. I thank you for your attention.

THE A. P. A. A DANGEROUS ALLY.

(Chicago Times, Feb. 10, 1894.)

The president of the so-called A. P. A. is quoted as having boasted that certain recent victories of the Republican party were due to the activity of the A. P. A. The worst enemy of the Republican party could not do a worse turn to the party than to give to this boast the widest publicity possible. It may or may not be true. There have been some local elections whose results are more easily explained on this hypothesis than otherwise, but let the report once be spread abroad that the Republicans are in league with this secret and unpatriotic order and the days of the Republican party are numbered.

It is a fact which some voters are slow to recognize, but which is demonstrable beyond a doubt, that the American people will not knowingly mix their religion and their politics. They may be fooled for a time or some of them may be fooled all the time, but, as Mr. Lincoln said, you can't fool all the people all the time. Sooner or later they will detect a know-nothing secret society in any disguise and immediately thereafter they will jump upon the society with both feet. They have done so in the past, they will continue to do so, partly because it is their nature so to do and partly because, being Americans, they have a profound respect for the American Constitution, with which all manner of know-nothing is absolutely incompatible.

These facts are not set forth in the hope of converting the dyed-in-the-wool cranks who periodically come to the front wearing secret society marks and other devices for giving respectabilty to a dark-lantern campaign, but for the benefit of young and ambitious citizens who may have encountered the A. P. A. at the outset of their political career and thought to make capital by joining forces with it. It can bring them nothing but discomfiture and defeat in the end.

When our poorhouses begin to be crowded with faithful Christians, it will be time enough to become anxious for fear God has forgotten his elect. —Nashville Advocate.

THE LABOR UNIONS.

LET US HAVE SOMETHING BETTER.

WORK DONE BY THE A. R. U.

(From the Los Angeles Times.)

Now that there is talk of forming another and larger labor organization, it is pertinent to ask what the American Railway Union has accomplished for the good of its members or of the country. It has, in brief, accomplished these things: Voted the following salaries: President, $3,000; Vice-president, Secretary and editor, each $2,400; five directors, each $1,500; total $17,700 per annum, and elected them for four years; voted to join the Populist party; refused to allow colored men to become members; falsified the profession under which it was organized by appearing as the most aggressive advocate of strikes, and adopting a cloak of secrecy for its deliberations instead of the "open as day" course which its leaders promised; denounced the principle of arbitration under Congressional enactment, while demanding arbitration from the Pullman company; voted that "organized railroad employes must refuse to haul coal mined by non-union miners who refuse to recognize and obey orders for a general strike;" denounced the locomotive engineers for not sacrificing an engineer who declined to abandon his train during the Great Northern strike; opened its doors to those who have been expelled from other labor organizations; declared war upon the unoffending public and railways that never gave them any cause for grievance by ordering "a general boycott of all Pullman sleeping and dining cars" because the workmen in a single car-building shop—said to be the best-paid mechanics in America—had struck for higher pay under instructions of the President of the American Railway Union whom they had voted a four-years' term at $3,000 a year.

A WORD TO WORKINGMEN.

(Harper's Weekly.)

Let the workingmen well understand the lesson of the recent strike. They have no more dangerous enemies than such ambitious, heartless, and unscrupulous demagogues as Debs and such fantastic blatherskites as Sovereign, who seek to persuade them that they can accomplish anything if they only unite in a general organization and act together. They have now acted together as much as they ever will, and this senseless delusion has cost them millions in wages lost, more millions in opportunities destroyed, and something perhaps still more valuable in the weakened esteem and confidence of the community. Let them organize according to common interests, and under leaders who are wise enough to understand that organized labor will, under any circumstances, constitute only a comparatively small fraction of the American people; that the American people throughout instinctively sympatize with labor so long as labor is just in its demands and law-abiding in its conduct; but that Uncle Sam is an extremely uncomfortable person to trifle with when the supremacy of the laws and of the constituted authorities is to be upheld against revolutionary attempts. This is the very first advice which every true friend of the workingmen will impress upon them.

WORKINGMEN, BEWARE OF UNION LEADERS.

(From the address of ex-Gov. Boies in Iowa Democratic Convention, Aug. 1st.

I concede to no man a more earnest desire than my own for every legitimate advancement of the real interests of the manual laborers of the land. I was born and nurtured among them, and their welfare has been a constant object of the keenest of my desires during all the years of my matured life. I know, however, that of all the classes that make up the aggregate of this nation they stand in greatest need of fair and faithfully executed laws; that without these they would be the most helpless victims of a condition if it ever comes in which society learns to ignore the law and defend its rights, real or imaginary, with brute force. I know, too, that every one of these men who is an adult citizen of the United States is clothed with precisely the same power under the constitutions of the States and the nation to help mold and cause to be executed the laws of the land that is possessed by the haughtiest millionaire that ever cast a vote; and I believe as firmly as I believe in my existence that if their organizations are to be preserved and continue to be of the least practical benefit to their members, they must see that they neither violate the law themselves, nor instigate, aid, or abet others to do so.

It is hardly necessary to add, that with every loyal citizen of the land who is a loyal friend of its laborers, I have been shocked by the flagrant breaches of law that have characterized so many of the recent labor strikes of the country. I am still more amazed to know that within the circles of some of these unions are men who yet condemn the authorities, both State and national, for interposing the military arm of each to put an end to conditions that had reached a completed stage of anarchy and overthrown in some localities every semblance of law and order. If these men are not bereft of reason, if they realize that this government is worth defending, if they would not see it tumble into fragments rather than fail to correct some real or fancied wrong to a few of their number, they must by this time realize that "the strike" as conducted in many places in the recent past is revolution, is anarchy, is the incipient stage of civil war, and if left untrammeled by the military arm of the government, it will pull down the very pillars of the temple of our liberties and bury all in a common ruin.

It is vain to assert that the scenes of riots, incendiarism, and bloodshed we have witnessed is not the work of members of any of the unions, but instead is that of the lawless elements of the cities in which they have occurred. If this is literally true it cannot relieve the unions in question of the responsibility for conditions that their own acts made possible, and which without such acts would never have existed.

BOYCOTTS OF SYMPATHY.

There is another phase of this question less grave, it is true, in its consequences to the government, as such, and yet of immeasurable importance to individuals. This view was more forcibly presented in what may be properly termed the Pullman strike, than in any other of of which I have knowledge. It is the question of the inherent right or wrong of what some labor leaders term a "sympathetic strike." There was no pretense in this branch of the Pullman strike that the men engaged in any of the industries outside of those of the Pullman company had a grievance of any kind against their employers that such strike was intended to cure. The openly avowed purpose of certain leaders was to compel the managers of other branches of business, who had no controversy with the Pullman company, and had no interest in the questions between that company and its employes, to join hands with these employes and help to right what at most was a personal wrong to them. In other words, the demand was that entirely disinterested and wholly innocent parties should against their own will become part of the striking force, or they and the general public with them should be subjected to the immeasurable injury of complete paralysis of the business of the country. Upon what theory of logic or morals it can be claimed that one class of men, however organized or numerous, can by force or intimidation compel others who have no interest in their controversy to become their allies and assume the burdens of a contest, the outcome of which can neither help nor hurt them, it is impossible to see.

It would be injustice to the members of these unions themselves to attempt to conceal from their knowledge the intense feeling that was excited in the public mind by their effort to embroil the great railway system of the country, the peaceful working of which is so absolutely essential to the welfare of the country, in a controversy in which that system had no interest, and of the right or wrong of which its managers could not be expected to have the least knowledge. Every true friend of these unions should be quick to assure their members that they cannot correct one wrong, whether real or fancied, by inflicting a vastly greater wrong on entirely innocent parties. The "sympathetic strike" must go or the unions that engage in it will be destroyed, and with it must go forever the scenes of riot and carnage that have characterized so many recent strikes, or the organizations responsible for them will be ground into dust under the iron heel of an awakened public sentiment that will never consent to see the laws that are absolutely essential for the protection of life and liberty openly and flagrantly violated, and thereby the very existence of our institutions put in jeopardy. There are infinitely better remedies for the wrongs of labor than any that unlawful force can ever supply. To any suggestion of such as are within the law the great heart of the masses of our people will quickly and joyfully respond.

THE WORKINGMAN'S CHOICE BETWEEN LODGE AND CHURCH.

(From the Epworth Herald, Chicago.)

We are trying to account for the estrangement of laboring men from the church. Here is another reason for indifference and opposition: Fraternal organizations multiply. Their name is legion. Most of them have absorbed the humanitarian spirit of Christianity. In cases of sickness, accident or death, the "brothers" are on hand to do Good Samaritan work. All conventionality and stiffness vanish behind the portals of the lodge. A free, easy, social time is had. The lodge takes precedence of the church. In many cases it becomes a substitute. It has the right of way. "My lodge is good enough religion for me" said a man the other day, not remembering that the spirit of brotherhood as practiced in the lodge room could have no existence if it were not for Christianity. It is sometimes the case that even the church members devote themselves to the lodge and merely attend their church. The lodge is the principal thing. If, after serving the lodge, they have a little time to give to the church duties, well and good. Said a gentleman recently: "I went into the city of N——, and the first thing I did was to present my church letter. After being formally received by the pastor I passed down the aisle to my seat. I noticed in one of the pews a fine-looking man. Many members of the church came to me at the close of the service and welcomed me, but this gentleman passed out without so much as noticing me. The next week I entered the —— lodge. The day after a gentleman came running across through the mud to meet me. Introducing himself he said, 'I saw you at the lodge last night; I want to welcome you.' It was the same man whom I had noticed in the church of which he was a prominent member. He never thought of giving me a welcome as a member of the church, but as a member of the lodge he was prompt and profuse in his recognition." The anti-church influence exerted by the lodge is shared to even a larger extent by the federations and unions and knights of this and knights of that among the laboring men. To a perfectly alarming extent it is the fraternal organization against the church of Christ.

REFORM NEWS.

HERE AND THERE IN NEW ENGLAND.

HEAT AND THE CAMP GROUND.

Depot, Providence, R. I., July 30th, 1894.

This morning gives promise of another "scorcher." Yesterday gave us a temperature from ninety upward. I spoke in the First U. P. church and in the Second in the evening. It is needless to say that both preacher and people took a sweat. Rev. Mr. McCord is filling up the twentieth year of his successful pastorate, and while he is not as aggressive as some, he personally maintains the position of the U. P. standard regarding secret societies, and gives a warning voice when he sees the wolf coming. Pressing duties prevent me from calling on many friends I would like to meet in the sacred bond of Christian fellowship.

Hebronville Camp, P. M.—I find here an earnest band of disciples who are loyal to Christ, and not afraid to discuss any vital question. Among others Bro. Wm. F. Davis spoke to them yesterday, as reported, in his eloquent, strong and convincing way. I have had an interview with the committee of the American Advent Camp-meeting Association, and arranged to spend Saturday and Sabbath next with them, presenting our cause as the Lord shall direct. This will be a favorable prelude to the work of the 15th of August, when Elder Cyrus Cunningham, Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason and others will discuss the secret lodge system. This convention is to open Aug. 11th and continue until the 19th. It will, D. V., be a wide-awake meeting of Christian workers, discussing a variety of topics, and no one who can should fail to attend.

Boston, Aug. 3, 1894.—This has been an unusually busy week. A lengthy article on Oddfellowship in a discussion with ex-Grand Master Jolliffe, of Ontario, Can., and the preparation of copy for a forty-page booklet delivered to the printer to-day, have fully occupied my strength and time. I hope in the future to do better though I see the old Polar Star of our reform shines on with wonted luster.

J. P. Stoddard.

FROM ROUND ABOUT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

POINTS OF INTEREST TO REFORMERS WHO MUST LOOK OUT FOR THE K OF P.

Washington, D. C., August 1, 1894.

Dear Cynosure:—I am glad to be able to report once more. In the months past I have gradually been recovering from the effects of the accident which came to me in May last. Owing partially at least to the heat I have not attempted to give lectures of late, but have improved many opportunities to bring our work before pastors and others by personal visitation. I am promised several opportunities to lecture when the evenings shall get cooler.

Last week I spent some days visiting in the Cumberland Valley. This valley, noted for its fertility and beautiful homes, never looked more prosperous than at this visit. The threatened drouth had been stayed by copious showers. The prospect of abundant harvests caused the toilers to rejoice. If money is scarce, wheat is abundant. God always gives better than we deserve. Through his mercy our nation is spared the fate of other nations who have forgotten God and gone into idol worship.

When on the train for Hagerstown, Md., I made the acquaintance of Rev. S. H. Myers, of Timberville, Va., who was glad to know of my work. He will aid in arranging for lectures when I can visit his section.

At Chambersburg, Pa , and vicinity I spent a few days very pleasantly, and I think profitably to the cause. While there I was entertained by brethren Nicklas, Yaukey, Oyler, Bollinger and others of the radical U. B. church. These brethren are having a struggle to maintain the truth as opposed to the lodge error. Their faces are toward the sunrise and their hearts are set as a flint to maintain the truth at any cost. Glorious revivals have been experienced during the past year. Some church buildings have been erected, and others are being constructed. Pastors' salaries are small, and sometimes not promptly paid. Reformers often find that God's greatest blessings come when there is least cash in the bank to their credit. Not until the other supplies were exhausted did the children of Israel receive the manna. Rev. J. A. Hamilton, of Culbertson, Pa., has recently come from Perry county to minister to the United Brethren in that section. He reports seventy-eight conversions during his meetings of the past winter. He subscribed for the Cynosure and will be glad to arrange for me to speak on his circuit at an opportune time.

At Carlisle I looked in upon Bro. Burkholder. He reported a new church, and a united people. His work is missionary. God has graciously sustained amid all the trials through which he has been called to pass. Lectures are much needed, and it is hoped can be arranged at this point.

I must mention my visit at the homes of brethren John White and Wm. Smeltzer, Steelton, Pa. These brethren do not expect to get to heaven by any other than the "strait and narrow way." They are glad to suffer reproach for Christ's sake. I expect to find them among those who bear faithful testimony until the Master shall say: "It is enough; come up higher."

At Baltimore I secured the same number of subscriptions and received many words of encouragement. Last night I attended and took part in a Bible reading given by Bro. Wm. M. Lyon, of the German Baptist church this city. The theme was entrance in at the strait gate. Those present were asked to give reasons why so many failed to enter. I suggested as one reason that many were misled by the lodge teaching that one religion was as good as another, that it does not matter much what a man believes only so he is sincere. My remarks were generally received with approval.

We read much in the papers of the coming Knights of Pythias. It is believed they mean more than to strut and dance with their tinsel swords. Their plans are evidently dark and far-reaching. They are seeking military control. The volcano of civil and religious corruption which is muttering in the dark chambers throughout our land may yet belch forth through their agency and anarchy hold sway.

Sister Powers is doing what she can as home missionary. She finds expositions of the K. of P. in demand. May God grant to wake the people of our nation up to a realization of the terrible destruction which must come unless we speedily change our course. Just as sure as these anarchistic infidel secret schools are allowed to grow the doom of our nation is sealed.

W. B. Stoddard.

ALONG THE OREGON AND CALIFORNIA BORDER.

GOOD CHEER FROM THE PACIFIC COAST AGENT.

I left Ophir on the 10th, and arrived at Gold Beach in the evening. This is the county seat of Curry county. My appointment had been announced for some time. I went to the schoolhouse, lighted the lamps, waited till 8 P. M. and no one came. I started to the hotel, met the sheriff and lady, county clerk and lady, with quite a number more. So I turned back, opened the house again, and gave them the same attention I would a houseful, hoping that something was said that will accomplish good. I left the house and town well supplied with tracts.

From here I went to Pistol River, but could not find a place to stop, so I boarded the stage again and gave them the "go by," landing at Chetco one day ahead. Here I overtook Rev. Black again, who had an appointment to speak, but kindly invited me to fill the appointment, which I did, speaking also the next night. Here I had a good congregation, who appreciated very much our work. I secured six Cynosure subscriptions here.

My next stop was at Windchuck where I spoke to a fair audience. Here I was entertained by Mr. Alvin Cooley's family. I shall never forget their kindness.

The next morning I went down to Smith River, California. I was informed that the Republican county convention would round up with a big dance Saturday night, and would take all the people away. As I was forced to hire a hall, I withdrew my appointment, went back to Windchuck and spoke; but next morning I felt impressed to again visit Smith River, which I did. When I arrived quite a number came to me and asked if I was not going to speak to them. I told them the situation, and soon two men who have the management of one of the halls placed it at my service free of charge. I again put out notices of my appointment, and got out between fifty and sixty to hear me. The old Mason who had tried to side-track me was sore when he heard that I was to speak. The gentlemen who furnished the hall said: "We believe in giving a stranger a fair chance when he comes here."

When the lecture was over the owner of the hall came to me and said: "Mr. Williams, if you will go to Crescent City and speak, I will take you down and back and it shan't cost you a cent." I was sorry I could not accept the very generous offer, but I was compelled to start back in order to meet appointments on the "back track."

The two ministers of the city were out to hear me at Smith River. One I did not get to talk with; the other, the M. E. pastor, gave his hearty approval of my address. He is a very promising young man. I hope that he will never allow himself to be led into the lodges. He, and the very gentlemanly stage driver, Mr. Roy, will receive the paper one year.

I returned to Chetco the next day, and spoke again in the evening to a very good crowd. Mr. John Cooley, the owner of the hall at Chetco, showed me no little kindness. He has an excellent home and family. May the Lord bless them greatly.

From here I took the stage to Gold Beach, then to Port Orford, then thirty miles on horseback to Eckley, where I am at present writing. I shall say nothing of timber any more, for what I had seen before, and wrote about, is not worth mentioning beside what I have seen since.

Yesterday, I passed up Sixes River, thirty miles, crossing it forty-one times. We passed a landslide which came down five years ago, burying two families and all their stock and farms from ten to sixty feet deep. The slide covers more than one hundred acres. As the mail carrier described it to me, I thought of the time when "the end" shall come. It will be as sudden and unexpected as that mountain of earth came onto those unsuspecting helpless people.

Mr. Haines, who was carrying the mail then as now, tells me that he came near being caught in it. I am now stopping with Mr. J. A. Haines and family. They have an excellent stock ranch, and are old-time friends of the Cynosure and our reform.

P. B. Williams.

CORRESPONDENCE.

OUT OF THE LODGE INTO CHRIST.

THE PERSONAL EXPERIENCE OF A ROYAL ARCH MASON SECEDED.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Inasmuch as I was a member of the Masonic order up to the last of December, 1867, I wish to give my experience in the lodge. I accepted Christ January 10, 1868, and joined the church the same year in April. I had taken the three degrees in Blue Lodge Masonry, beside several side degrees; then went on until I had taken the four Royal Arch chapter degrees before I was stopped in my bad career.

I joined the Masons when I was under conviction for sin, a poor heavy-laden sinner seeking rest and finding none. I sought membership in Masonry, hoping I might find some relief, some benefit to me in some way; or that I might find associates in whom I could confide. But in this I was mistaken. On my first entering the lodge I was convinced of wrong by seeing the sacred things of God's Word made mock of. Men would offer up a form of prayer who were cursing and swearing not long before.

But I persisted in going on, hoping my mind would change and I would see something more profitable. But the further I went, the more disgusting the whole thing appeared, and the more sacrilegious it became. So when I had taken the third degree I determined to quit, being thoroughly convicted of the wickedness carried on in the lodge.

I was well acquainted with a Methodist minister who was a Mason of the higher degrees. We met one day and began talking on the subject, when he told me if I wanted to see something grand I ought to take the Royal Arch degrees; that the Blue Lodge was nothing compared with it. He said if I wanted to take those degrees he would sign my petition and send it up for me. I thought if there was anything good about Masonry I wanted to see it, as I had seen nothing attractive yet: only my poor heart had been made to ache from what I had gone through, besides the burden of my sins weighing heavily on me.

The time came for me to take the degrees. I was very reluctant at first, but wanting to find something good, I ventured on. But when I took the first degree in this chapter the matter grew worse; the second and third also, until I was made to say: "My Lord, what is coming next!" So when I took the fourth degree it capped anything I had ever seen in point of wickedness. When the lodge was dismissed one of the members asked me how I liked it. I told him, "Well enough;" but didn't tell him how well that was.

"There is something in it, isn't there?" "Yes," said I; but did not tell him what I thought there was in it. But I verily thought that the devil was at the bottom of it, and when I went out of the building I looked back and thought what a mercy of God that he had spared our lives, and did not let the earth open and swallow us up as he did Korah, Dathan and Abiram of old.

While I was looking at the building I promised the Lord if he would spare my life and not lay this sin to my charge, I would never darken the the door of that order as long as I lived. Such was my trembling condition I feared I would be struck dead if I went again.

Thus matters went on until the 10th day of January, 1868. While riding along that morning thinking what a poor lost sinner I was, this passage of Scripture came into my mind: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." All at once my whole life was laid open before me as a dark page of sin and transgression before God, who could not look on sin with the least degree of allowance. No good thing had I ever done to merit his favor; and while meditating upon my awful condition, in the twinkling of an eye my mind was caught away to Christ. He seemed to descend at about the tops of the trees. It was not my natural eyes; but I viewed him as he died on the cross for poor sinners. Praise and thanksgiving began to pour forth from my inmost soul while tears fell fast from my eyes. How I did love him whom to know is life eternal. My sins were all pardoned, my guilt all washed away in Jesus' blood, who had given his life a ransom for me. I rode along some distance, though not a word was spoken. I was thinking

"O what love and condescension
In the Saviour's death I see;
Who the thousandth part can mention
Of what he has done to me."

Jesus had done for me what no human being could do, nor all the wealth of this world could procure. Under the melting influence of his love I was made willing to give up all the vain pleasures of the world and devote my life to his precious cause. What a contrast was this to all I had seen in Masonry. In the one I was in sin and wickedness and intermingling with the wicked in their wicked practices; in the other overwhelmed with God's mercy, goodness, grace and love, the companionship of God's Son, the hope of a home in heaven.

How thankful I now felt that the Lord had driven me out of the unfruitful works of darkness and the secret working of the wicked, and had brought me into sweet and living fellowship with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ. He commands us to walk in the light as he is in the light.

I could now see why he so severely chastised me when I persisted in going into the lodge. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." Now I could say with David, "Gather not my soul with the wicked, for I love the habitation of thy house and the place where thine honor dwelleth." I felt as thoroughly convicted for belonging to this secret order as for any sin I ever committed in my life. If my last experience is a myth, the former is also; so my life is nothing but mockery.

Time passed on, till finally the lodge sent an officer to know why I refused to attend their meetings. I told him I was glad he came. I wanted to talk with him. I told him I had nothing to say against any in the lodge, as I considered them all my friends, but the Saviour had done for me what no human being could do. He had pardoned all my sins, and I felt for this work that he had done I owed him my life, my all; that I never could be too devoted to his cause. They could do with my name what they thought best. I would not think hard of them. I had no time to waste on worldly societies when the Son of God had spent his whole life to redeem my poor soul from everlasting destruction, that I might live with him eternally in the presence of the Father and the holy angels. I read in his precious book these loving words: "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all to the glory of God." It seemed to me that my whole life would be summed up in word or deed, and how could I do this in his name and belong to some worldly institution? Every drop of his blood seemed to appeal to me for obedience to him to "come out from the world and be separate and touch not the unclean thing," "for he that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." How can any one purchased with his blood refuse his love and go into the synagogues of Satan to offer sacrifice to devils by drinking wine out of a human skull! at the same time drinking "the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils?"

Soon after I gave up the lodge I had a talk with another member who professed a hope in Christ, and I found that he had the same experience as I, and was compelled to give it up. So this led me to talk with others until I found a half-dozen that professed a hope in Christ and had to give up Masonry, and we all joined the Baptist church. Now from all I know and have experienced, I have been made to wonder how any one who had realized the love of God shed abroad in his heart could want to remain in any worldly order to the hurt of the cause of our dear Redeemer.

I wrote my experience once on this subject and sent it to an old Baptist editor, and found him to be a member of the lodge. He published it, but criticised it by saying that my convictions on the subject of secret societies was a conundrum to him, for when I was first convinced of the wrong in it, why didn't I come out and go no further. This he could not understand.

I explained this to him by asking why it was when he was convicted of sin he didn't quit and sin no more. He did not reply.

Oh, my dear brethren, is our religion a whim? Is the dear Saviour not worthy to be followed, to be obeyed and loved with all our hearts? If he has not done enough to demand our whole life's devotion, how much do we propose to ask of him? If he was on earth again in his humiliation, and we were among the disciples, what would be thought of us should we step out of his company to join the sinful pleasures with men of the world? What would have been thought of Lazarus, if when the dear Son of God stopped at Bethany, Mary should have told him her brother was gone to the Masonic lodge? Shall we not be better employed at home with our families, reading the blessed Word of God, or seeking in prayer for that wisdom from above which all need in this perverse world? AN OLD-TIME BAPTIST.

"ABLE TO SAVE TO THE UTTERMOST."

CHELSEA, Mass.

Several times within the past few days, persons in great mental distress because of sore trial have come to me to unburthen their hearts. In every case it has been graciously fulfilled unto them according to the promise, "Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." These instances have exhibited woe as the consequence of the individual's multiplied transgressions, in bondage to sin of various kinds, including the drink and tobacco habits, purloining money and family dissension, and disease. To the prayer of faith in every case God gave the answer of peace. But each humbled himself or herself to the confession of sin and redress of wrong to the person wronged. To-day comes a letter from one who complains as follows:

I am tormented with a terrible besetting sin. I have prayed to be released from it. But I am not. I believe I am so unworthy that God does not heed my prayer. . . . . I feel ashamed to sign myself, but God knows all about it.

How boldly may the most unhappy penitent, who truly repents, come to the throne of grace, assured that our Great Advocate who never yet lost a case truly consigned to and kept in his hands will save to the uttermost all who come unto God through him. Sincerely trusting him only, WM. F. DAVIS.

FROM ANOTHER OF OUR EARLY LECTURERS.

HASKINVILLE, N. Y.

I have not received any invitations to lecture recently, and for several years my health has not been such as to encourage any aggressive work in that line on my part. When my name was put on the list of lecturers I was laboring as pastor in Pennsylvania in the vicinity of some local anti-secret associations, and took an active part in their work and lectured occasionally whenever I had an opportunity. Since coming here, about nine years ago, I have frequently witnessed against the lodge in preaching, and once made and filled an appointment to answer an Odd-fellow address, but as there are no anti-secret organizations in this vicinity, there has been no call for lectures.

For the last five years I have been superannuated on account of impaired health, and much of the time my nervous condition has been such that it would not seem judicious to risk the strain of such lectures. My condition seems now improved, so that I preach once on the Sabbath, and would not decline speaking occasionally on the lodge issue. EDWIN BARUCTSON.

PITH AND POINT.

GOOD WORDS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

I have been reading the Cynosure for two years, and must say I am well pleased with the stand it takes against so many evils that are not counted bad by many who claim to believe God's Word. Secret societies seem to be so highly thought of by thousands that don't belong to them, that, instead of warning the public, they rather recommend these orders as being a good thing. The Cynosure comes out boldly against not only secret societies, but popery, the saloon, the tobacco habit, and the oppression of the colored people in the South. It is so cheering to know there are some that sympathize with these poor people.—GEORGE HASSOCK, Leash Dale, Ontario.

A CURSE OF THE SOUTH.

As long as our country is governed by clans bound by the most infernal obligations to protect, right or wrong, certain elements, we cannot hope for a bright day to dawn upon our South land. I am doing some very effective work, but on a limited scale. Pray for us.—REV. F. J. DAVIDSON, New Orleans, La.

I assure you I prize the Cynosure highly. Its weekly visits are annimating and helpful to me. I have not been making just the use of the papers that I intend to hereafter, by giving them away. Many are marked and put away for reference; out of many I have cut important articles to use in lecturing.—REV. C. POWERS, McNairy, Tenn.

LITERATURE.

MAGAZINES.

As usual the publishers of the Century have given especial care to the August issue, the Midsummer Holiday number of the magazine. F. Marion Crawford writes of "Washington as a Spectacle," and Andre Castaigne, whose striking pictures of the World's Fair are remembered, furnishes the drawings. James Whitcomb Riley is represented by one of the most characteristic of his dialect poems, "Home Ag'in," which A. B. Frost illustrates. Senator Hoar and Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley engage in a good-natured controversy on woman suffrage. These are the most important utterances recently made on the subject. There are two engravings by Timothy Cole, one a portrait of Poe in connection with the printing of some of his newly-discovered letters. Prof. Eugene Lamb Richards, of Yale, writes a paper on "Walking as a Pastime," full of vacation hints. Following upon the article published a few months ago on Sir James Simpson's discovery of chloroform as an anesthetic, there is a paper, likewise from authentic family records, on Dr. Morton's discovery of anesthesia, an event which occurred a year before the discovery of the application of chloroform to anesthetic purposes. Public topics are: "Intelligent Citizenship," "Legal Tender Money in History," and "The Senate and the Constitution," the last being a reply from Cephas Brainerd, Esq., to the paper entitled "The Attack on the Senate," by Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, in the July number.

McClure's Magazine for August opens with a striking description of life in the depths of a coal mine, by Stephen Crane; and the strong points in his description are emphasized by a remarkable series of pictures. A paper of personal recollections, by S. H. M. Byers, does for General Sherman what the notable series of papers published in the May number did for General Grant, making manifest in all of his strength and graciousness of character the actual man. As a member of Sherman's staff, and his intimate friend for twenty-five years, Mr. Byers enjoyed rare opportunities for studying his subject, and his paper shows that he appreciated and made the most of them. A notable series of portraits of Sherman accompany the article. Besides the Sherman portraits there are series of portraits of President Garfield and Louise Chandler Moulton.

The August Review of Reviews devotes, as its readers might expect, a large portion of its review of the month's events to the strike. In this able summary the leaders of this ill-timed and worse-fortuned rebellion find no sympathy, but much sound advice, which would be well heeded. The leading biographical paper is upon Hon. Wilfred Laurier, a Frenchman and a Catholic, who succeeded Hon. Edward Blake as leader of the Canadian Liberals on the retirement of the latter in 1887. Another biography is of Sir George Dibs, the blacksmith premier of New South Wales. The most interesting article is on Toronto, the city that keeps the Sabbath-day. "Labor Troubles" and their solution suggested by the experience of New South Wales and the "Railway Situation" are articles that come on timely as the strike closes.

A new health journal is no curiosity, but the first number of Health, a quarterly "journal of practical hygiene." It is well printed and bears on its front a stimulating and suggestive table of contents. About half the contributors are women, who write on "Health Culture in the Home," "Dress in its Relation to Health," "Fruit in its Relation to Health," "How we Live in Summer Time," etc. "Something new in Wheat," tells us that the process of preparing shredded grain is likely to revolutionize our old methods and ideas of the staff of life. 50 cts. a year, Health Publishing Co., 84 Reade St., New York.

St. Nicholas for August is a vacation number, and is plentifully and richly illustrated. It has a bit of travel with bicycles at Mont St. Michel, a bit of history in the bombardment of Tripoli, a bit of biography in the sketch of James Fennimore Cooper, a bit of adventure with a Sound steamer, a bit of natural history about bears, a bit of mythology concerning the daughters of Zeus or Jupiter.

IN BRIEF.

Andrew Carnegie, in an interview published in the Engineering Review, is quoted as saying he does not think the United States now requires protection, which he claims is of little use for revenue purposes, as manufactured imports have fallen so low.

There are 1,300 Young Men's Christian Associations in America, with a membership of one quarter of a million, and 600 libraries, containing 400,000 volumes. The value of Young Men's Christian Association property is valued at about $14,000,000.

Thomas Byrnes, Superintendent of the New York Police Department, is reported as saying: "After all if we hunt vice and crime back to their lairs we will be pretty sure to find them in the gin-mill. Drunkenness is the prolific mother of most of the evil doing."

Work has been commenced on the new mission house of the Home and Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian church, at Fifth avenue and Twentieth street, in New York. It is just opposite the Methodist Book Concern, and will be twelve and a half stories high, and will cost $750,000.

Comparing the children of school age in the United States, as ascertained by the census, with the statistics of Sabbath-schools, it is computed that there are nine millions of children in this country who attend no Sabbath-school. In Pennsylvania, while there are 1,300,000 children in our schools, 300,000 more than there are in the public schools, yet the work in Pennsylvania has not been much more than half done, as forty per cent of the children are yet outside of the Sabbath school.

A farmer sold a flock of sheep to a dealer and lent him his collie to drive them to the dealer's home, a distance of thirty miles. The dog was then to have a good meal and be told to go home. The dealer, however, found the dog so useful that he resolved to steal him, and instead of sending him back locked him up. The collie grew sulky, and in a few days effected his escape. Evidently thinking that the dealer was also trying to steal the sheep, the honest dog went into the field, collected the identical sheep that belonged to his master, and, to that person's intense astonishment, drove the whole lot home again.—London Meat and Trade Journal.

An interesting collection of figures on the coal industry of Illinois is presented in the twelfth annual report of the State Bureau of Labor Statistics, just published. The work shows that there are fifty-six counties in the State in which coal is mined, and that during the year 19,949,564 tons were taken out, the home value of this product being $17,827,595. There were 1,775,211 tons taken out by hand and 4,729,749 tons by machine. To do this required the services of 35,390 men. During the operation 353,772 kegs of powder were used, sixty-nine men killed, thirty-two wives made widows and 106 children made fatherless. During the year seventy new mines were opened, and old ones re-opened, and 120 mines closed or abandoned. The report shows that machine mining is on the increase, this year's output exceeding last by 836,460 tons.

The admission of a stranger, who had moved into the vicinity but recently, into full membership in the church bothered Deacon Johnson very much. He disliked the man, and felt quite convinced he was not worthy to become a member, but he could make no definite charge against him. When the church session had the man's application under consideration, the deacon protested against his admission. When pressed to give his reasons, he said, "Wal, Pahson, de fac' ob de mattah is I feels dat he's a wolf in sheep's clothing."

"Dat's a hebby chadge, Brudder Johnsing," said the parson. "W'y do you t'ink so?"

"I dun'no,' but it 'pears to me he don't bleat jest like de rest ob de flock."—Harper's Magazine for July.

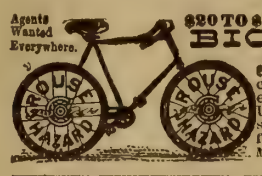
MADE LIFE A BURDEN.

MISS G. F. CRAWFORD, of Limestone, Me., writes: "For years I suffered monthly from periodic pains which at times were so acute as to render life a burden. I began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I used seven bottles in as many months and derived so much benefit from it and the home-treatment recommended in his Treatise on Diseases of Women, that I wish every woman throughout our land, suffering in the same way, may be induced to give your medicines and treatment a fair trial."

MISS CRAWFORD.

"Favorite Prescription" is a powerful, invigorating tonic and a soothing and strengthening nervine, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For every "female complaint," it is the only remedy so sure that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, you have your money back.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.



$20 TO $60 SAVED ON NEW BICYCLES

$125 high grade Safety $50; $100 pneu. $60; $40 cush. ball $20 etc. Largest and oldest dealers in U.S. Easy payments We sell everywhere. Cata. free. Rouse, Hazard & Co., Mfrs., 4 O St., Peoria, Ill.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18TH, 1894.
Entrance Examinations September 17th, at 2 P. M.
For Catalogue, address
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.
BY REV. S. F. PORTER,
A Study of Christ's Comings.
Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.
For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ransom, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1894.

Good reading will be found on every page this week. Rev. T. C. Moffatt has a strikingly original application of ancient Egyptian life. The winds blow from all quarters to separate the chaff from the wheat in the A. P. A. discussion, but on the Labor Problem the figuring is quite on one side of the account. But candid readers will find them telling truths worth heeding. The "Home" readers will thank us for the selection about Corea. No one cares now to be ignorant of that country, and we have a graphic picture on page 10. Who can read John G. Woolley without a thrill? We wanted to print his whole speech at Cleveland, but had to restrain our hand and give a portion only to the temperance lovers.

GENERAL HAWLEY AND THE A. P. A.

The second speech at the Sunset Club discussion of "Secret Societies in Politics" was by a gentleman who served with honor in the rebellion, and has since occupied offices of trust and responsibility until he became an organizer for a secret political society, from which date we claim his general usefulness as an American citizen ceased, and the balance sheet foots up a serious loss.

There are three points in the address of General Hawley to which we call attention. They may be in themselves unobjectionable, but they disclose dangerous principles upheld by the organization he represents.

1. The A. P. A. will fight any religious organization, Methodist or Presbyterian, as quickly as Romanist, if they step into politics. This was twice asserted during the evening. But prohibition is in politics, and religious bodies are more firmly year by year declaring for this principle in political action, and so radically that they insist that a man must clear his conscience when he votes. Religious bodies are, therefore, in politics, and whenever moral issues become political such bodies must give their influence and modify the vote, or be untrue to God. But this may be regarded as exceptional.

The A. P. A. wishes the support of all the churches. It is captivating some of our Free Methodist and other good brethren. When it struck the city of Peoria a year and a half ago every pastor in that city was urgently solicited to join the crusade against Rome and Bishop Spalding, and bring his flock over bodily to the secret order. Some, fearing the Jesuit more than they trusted the living God, joined; but most remembered, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." This invitation to the churches is to "harness religion to a political machine," which Gen. Hawley condemns. But let this pass also as another exception.

But there is no exception in this: That the A. P. A. says to the churches by Gen. Hawley, "Hands off." But at the same time it would turn politics over to a SECRET SOCIETY. Now in the view of members of the anti-Jesuit secret order this may be the salvation of the country; but few people whose opinion is worth having would not prefer to put our politics, and the government too, into the hands of the Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, or any other body of Christians who have conscience toward God, than of any secret society whatsoever, be its name or principles what they may. "Bob. Ingersoll" himself would prefer it.

2. The A. P. A. brand must be upon the next President of the United States," or you won't have any." Gen. Hawley may have spoken rashly, but the whole tenor of his words shows that they reflect the A. P. A. sentiment. That sentiment is flat anarchy. Mowbray, or Most, or Debs, or his lawyer Erwin, have said nothing worse. It is treasonable; and marks the danger that is constitutional with all secret political societies. They have two Rs instead of three,—Rule or Ruin.

3. Gen. Hawley was neither mad or temporarily in insane when he said he would like to read the A. P. A. ritual right out "now." It would have been a proof to the Sunset Club that the order was in so far American. In like manner the A. P. A. convention at Des Moines, Iowa, May 5th, resolved to make Washington City its headquarters and meet "with open doors." On its face this is a declaration that organic secrecy is abandoned. Would God it were so! Gen. Hawley was ready to read the ritual, but before the debate was over he declared that he would not reveal the names of A. P. A. members, and that this was a rule of the order! The national meeting of the A. P. A. will be open to all, but how about the local bodies? The same Des Moines meeting declared: "No 2.—The A. P. A. is not a political party, and does not control the political affiliation of its members." But the next President will have the A. P. A. brand, or there won't be any. This seems to be a lesson well learned from the mother of lodges,—"ever conceal and never reveal."

What can be believed of this order? In "a complete history of the rise and progress of the American Protective Association," given in one of its organs, the People's Union Mission, Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 15, 1893, we are told how the eight men who founded the order in Clinton, Iowa, six years before, "were acquainted with the secret operations in their own city," and "adopted the secret methods of the Jesuits." "One of the first steps was to take very solemn oaths and obligations to keep secret the crystalization and formulation of their ideas." This clears the view. An organization that adopts the secret methods of the Jesuits may make any profession it pleases to the public. Only by its works can it be known. In these we are reading a daily history that should bid every patriot beware of a remedy for the country's salvation that promises to be as bad as the disease.

THE SANTOS OF THE LODGE.

Cesario Santo, the Italian anarchist, was put on trial at Lyons, France, last Thursday, for the assassination of President Carnot. Next day the jury in a few minutes returned with the word, "Guilty," and the guillotine will in a few days put its awful seal upon the order of the court.

The record of the trial which reaches American readers is painfully realistic, and shows how the principles of anarchistic secretism work a perfect demoralization in character. The writings of "Stepniak," the Russian anarchist, reveal the same fact of horrible indifference,—right and wrong, life and death, poverty and wealth, the sacredness of home, the love of parents and children, friendship and enmity—all moral and social laws and distinctions go down before the blood red flag of anarchy. Such was the awful revelation of the trial of the anarchists Parsons, Fielden, Spies and their comrades in 1886 in this city. The doctrines of assassination, singly or by wholesale, with poniard, pistol or dynamite, upon which these men had fed had dehumanized them, broken all bonds of moral restraint, and left them human tigers.

Judge Breuillac in the trial last week examined the assassin, recalling the fact that Santo, as a child, was an attractive feature in religious processions because of his beauty, and he had grown up with a strong inclination toward a religious life, until two years ago, when he fell under the spell of anarchism. From that time the inflammatory teachings of the secret International poisoned his very blood. His public utterances became threatening; so much so that his friends were warned by the authorities. But the disease did thorough work in breaking down moral conviction.

Santo mocked as the judge referred to the happy days of his childhood, "Children do not know what they are doing."

The judge proceeded: "Your family tried to wean you from these horrible doctrines."

"I love my mother," the Italian replied, "but I cannot submit to her prejudices, or my family's prejudices. There is the larger family of humanity."

The assassin described his journey to Lyons and the incidents of the tragedy, the judge explaining how President Carnot instructed the escort to leave a passage free to the carriage so as to allow people to approach him with petitions. Taking advantage of this fact Santo made his way through the crowd, his poniard wrapped in paper. "I laid my left hand on the carriage," he said, "and hustled aside a young man who was in my way. Then I made a dash at the President and dealt him a violent thrust with my dagger. The blade stuck fast in his breast and my hand touched his coat. As I stabbed him I cried: Viva la revolution."

He continued, "President Carnot looked me straight in the face. I felt his deep glance the moment I poinarded him."

"I wished to strike his heart," he fiercely added, "but my arm failed me; the blow glanced."

It was depravity like this, born of Masonic oaths and murder-play, that made Thurlow Weed, William H Seward, John C. Spencer, Millard Fillmore, Victory Birdseye, and their noble comrades in the struggle against the lodge in the Morgan times, cry out in the name of outraged justice, and appeal to the citizens of the great Empire State against the bloody and conscienceless lodge.

What are governments doing to-day? "Whatsoever a man [or a nation] soweth that shall he also reap." After countenancing and legalizing the lodges, which, as a strong thinker says, are "organized assassination of other people's rights, with a proviso for the assassination of the man who betrays the conspiracy," they begin to pass laws in self-defense. Italy, the home of anarchists, has at last been aroused against them, and the Chamber of Deputies passed the anti-anarchist bill by a vote of 231 to 26. A bill has been introduced in the French Chamber of Deputies to suppress anarchism, more severe than any previous legislation on the subject in that country. It not only provides new punishments for overt acts, but it reaches out after anarchistic writers and publishers who, on conviction, are to suffer imprisonment and pay a fine.

A new law against anarchism went into effect two weeks ago in Switzerland. It provides five years' imprisonment for everybody convicted of inciting to acts which imperil human life or of working to upset the present social and political order. It gives the government power to expel any native or foreign anarchist and to punish any one failing to denounce those who are known to be plotting anarchic crimes.

In our own Congress a bill was introduced June 25th defining an anarchist as one who belongs to, or is appointed or employed by, any society or organization existing in this or any other country, which provides in writing or by verbal agreement or instruction for the unlawful taking of human life, or for the unlawful destruction of property where the loss of life is a probable result of such destruction. Any such person who "shall attempt the life" of a government officer, or attempt the destruction of buildings whereby such life would be taken, shall be hung on conviction.

This is a vigorous measure,—hanging for an "attempt," and covering in its definition members of "White Cap," "White League," "Clan-na-Gael" and even the Masonic lodges. To such drastic measures have our lodges brought us. They will never permit this bill to pass, but they must see in it a prophecy of some future uprising of popluar hatred and revenge to wipe them from the earth.

—At Youngstown, Ohio, a few days since, a mass meeting of citizens considered the effort of the American Protective Association to remove the chief of police because he was a Romanist. Resolutions were adopted condemning the order in the most severe terms as being a foe to American institutions and pledging that it should be driven out of existence.

—The Cynosure readers will read the Washington letter from Bro. W. B. Stoddard with joy. After weeks of silence we began to fear the accident last May was proving quite serious. He has sued for damages, and hopes to break up some of the reckless ways of railway employes, besides being partially reimbursed for a painful injury and enforced idleness.

—One of the supervisors of Bureau county, Ill., says that the Debs strike will cost that county possibly $25,000. The mining towns of Spring Valley and Ladd, and country round about, were terrorized for days by the lawless and drunken crowd of striking miners, a large proportion of whom were unable to speak the English language. The question is whether the whole county should pay losses the miners have indirectly caused by importing a mass of uncontrollable cheap foreign labor.

—One day will be given by the New England Christian Association by the camp-meeting of the Christian Workers' Association near Attleboro,

Mass. The meeting begins Aug. 11 and continues till the evening of Sabbath, the 19th. Rev. A. A. Hoyt, editor of the Independent Christian, is president of the Association. On Wednesday Mrs. Gleason and brethren J. P. and W. B. Stoddard and J. M. Foster of the Chambers St. Covenanter church, Boston, are to speak.

—The Midland of Omaha has editorially removed to this city, and occupies a pleasant office on the tenth floor of the Stock Exchage building amid a bevy of lawyers. This does not come about because Bro. Graham has a litigious or controversial spirit. That floor is a sort of United Presbyterian headquarters, and congenial neighbors and convenience for visitors make the location a favorable one. Now happily located, may the hopes of its friends and managers be fully realized for a useful and prosperous career for the Midland.

—Rev. M. C. Wilcox, of the Foochow, China, M. E. Mission, writes of the present condition of the two large mission districts now in his care, and gives some account of a recent tour in the interior which will be of double interest to our readers next week. When last in this country Bro. Wilcox spent a Sabbath in Wheaton as guest of President Blanchard. He writes in a personal note: "I was greatly saddened at the news of the death of my dear cousin, Mrs. Charles A. Blanchard. She was one of the noblest and best of earth, such a person as from a human standpoint could be illy spared from a world so full of sin and need. But our Father knows best and he doeth all things well."

—Bro. I. R. B. Arnold and the "Floating Chapel" are on their way up the Mississippi bound for St Paul. On Sabbath, the 22nd of July, they were at St. Louis, and the Vanguard of that city says of Mrs. Arnold and her four earnest daughters that they were all pressing for the salvation of souls, and happy in their own experience of God's grace. "Sister Arnold," says the Vanguard, "feels especially called to street work, and wherever the Chapel anchors she takes her little family band and goes out to proclaim the Gospel of salvation to all classes, but especially to the poor. If she only has her twelve-year-old Jennie to help her, she goes and does the Master's bidding. Going into the highways and hedges and teaching by the wayside is God's work at hand for anyone who feels the love of Jesus burning in their heart."

—Respecting the statement made in our Washington letter, July 26, Bro. Bailey of the Central Union Mission in that city writes in correction: "Your Washington correspondent quotes me as having 'made the astounding assertion that of the 400,000 railroad men of the United States not 1,000 are regular attendants of church.' This is altogether a misquotation. I spoke of one railroad which was reported to have 4,000 employes and I ventured the guess, based upon my own general observation, that less than 1,000 of these employes were regular church attendants. I think you will agree with me that this is a very conservative statement." We surely do; and there do not lack good reasons for believing that the first report is sadly too near the truth, as a note stated. But the business and traveling public and the railway managers who will have Sunday trains are more to be blamed than the men for the situation. It is reducing them to paganism.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—W. B. Jacobs, the esteemed Sabbath-school worker of this State, and editor of the Trumpet Call, is now speaking in southern California.

—Samuel Small, the well-known evangelist and prohibition speaker, will soon start a daily paper in Norfolk, Va., as a center-shot organ against the saloon.

—Dr. B. Carradine, of St. Louis, is among the speakers announced at the Western Holiness Association, which began a camp meeting at Ashland, Ill., last week.

—Rev. Charles R. Hunt, late of the Presbyterian church, Keota, Iowa, but now removed to Union City, Pa., has a sermon in the August Homiletic Review on "Natural Selection in the Spiritual World."

—Rev. J. M. Foster of Boston speaks in Dr. D. McAllister's pulpit, Pittsburgh, the first two Sabbaths of this month. Dr. and Mrs. McAllister expect to sail for Europe on the 17th inst. for a much needed rest.

—President H. J. Kiekhoefer of Northwestern College, Naperville, Ill., has gone to Europe for an extended tour. Prof. Kletzing, of the N. C. A. Board, and other members of the faculty care for the institution during his absence.

—Major D. W. Whittle, the evangelist, is guardian of the children of P. P. Bliss, the singer and composer, killed with his wife at Ashtabula in 1876. The children have received about $50,000 from their father's interest in "Gospel Hymns."

—Rev. R. W. Chesnut, of Marissa, Ill., editor of the Reformed Presbyterian Advocate, spent a fortnight in July in northern Illinois and Iowa, giving nineteen addresses on religious and reform questions. "The Bible and the Labor Crisis" is one of his topics.

—Sir George Williams, who founded the Young Men's Christian Association, and with whom everybody has become familiar of late, is a retail storekeeper. He is president of fully thirty religious and philanthropic societies, and a director in as many more.

—Ex-Governor John P. St. John is the chief speaker on Prohibition day at Rock River Assembly this year. The assembly is on the Chautauqua plan, managed by Lutheran brethren and held at Dixon, Ill. Next year there should be a day given to the discussion of the lodge system.

—It is reported that John Godfrey, the last chief of the Miami Indians, died lately near Ft. Wayne, Indiana. He was by treaty a man of wealth, possessing, 1,900 acres of land. This is probably the reason why he was a choice victim for Masonic initiations, as he had become a 32d degree Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret.

—The Standard of this city lately published a sermon by Rev. Roland D. Grant, of Portland, Oregon. The theme: "Is the Meeting-house Holy?" is discussed in Bro. Grant's earnest and practical way; but we question his ability to make clear proof of the statement that Bonar and Wesley were just "as surely inspired" as David, or wrote as well. What were the opinions of Bonar and Wesley themselves?

—The late premier Gladstone is beginning to realize seriously that he is growing old. He has long seemed to defy time and physical decay; but the cares of state thrown off he finds himself human. His eyes are both seriously affected. An operation was lately performed on one of them, and upon the other there is a growing cataract. The old hero has the satisfaction of reviewing a long and eminently useful life even if he must submit to see little more of earth.

HELP THE CYNOSURE.

By getting subscribers.

By giving to the Extension Fund.

By giving to the fund for colored ministers in the South.

By giving to the fund for supplying College and Y. M. C. A. reading rooms.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Christian sentiment of the country urges the anti-lottery bill —Peace China! Peace Japan!—The capital afloat. —Anti-monopoly in the Constitution.—Lessons from Dr. Hamlin's useful life.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 1, 1894.

The anti-lottery bill adopted by the Senate at the instance of Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, has been for some time in the House, delayed by the tariff debate. The House Judiciary Committee has already reported it favorably, and that body is not being left in any doubt as to the sentiment of the public towards this measure. While the most of the numerous petitions asking that this bill be passed have come from religious organizations, not a few have been received from individuals in all sections of the country. The bill, which is carefully and strongly drawn, is intended to be supplementary to the law closing the U. S. mails to lotteries. It prohibits the carrying or sending from one State to another, or from any foreign country, of any paper purporting to be or to represent a ticket, share or interest in any lottery or similar enterprise, or any advertisement of them, in the mails or otherwise, under a penalty of $1,000 fine, or imprisonment for from one to two years, or both, for the first offense, and imprisonment for the same period for the second offense.

The statement sent out from Washington that this bill, if it became a law, would interfere with church fairs and similar methods of raising money was erroneous. Congress has no authority except in interstate and international matters. It is doubtful whether the bill will be acted upon at the present session by the House, as the indications are that adjournment will speedily follow an agreement on the tariff bill, which is hoped for shortly, but its friends are very confident that it will be passed by an overwhelming majority at the short session of Congress.

There has been no official announcement to that effect, but the opinion prevails in official and diplomatic circles that several of the great European powers have suggested to the governments of China and Japan that the war into which those countries have so suddenly plunged, as a result of their dispute over Korea, be stopped, and that the subject of the dispute be submitted to arbitration, with the President of the United States as arbitrator. Aside from the natural desire for peace which all good people have, there is an earnest hope that this opinion may prove true. Should the President of the United States be asked to arbitrate between China and Japan it would not only be the highest compliment that those nations could pay to the American people, but it would necessarily add to the respect of the natives of those countries for American missionaries and would consequently increase the usefulness of those missionaries. While President Cleveland would not, of course, indicate his willingness to act as arbitrator before he was asked, there is little doubt of his accepting the task when so requested.

Washingtonians are proud of their liking for cold water, both as a beverage and as a cleansing fluid, but few of them had any idea of the enormous amount of water consumed every day until the figures were made public by the authorities, in order to get the water used a little more sparingly. According to those figures the consumption of water last Saturday was more than seven barrels for each inhabitant of the city of Washington.

Representative Hutcheson, of Texas, has introduced a joint resolution providing for an amendment to the U. S. Constitution, reading as follows: "Trusts and monopolies dealing in agricultural products, or other articles of prime necessity, shall not exist in the United States, and Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The history of the life and missionary work in Constantinople of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin was told in an address to the Y. M. C. A. of this city by Rev. D. W. Fisher, president of Hanover College, Indiana. Interesting as any romance ever written, it was correctly stated by him to have been one of the best examples of Christian devotion and self-sacrifice in the annals of missionary work. He rapidly sketched the life of a boy born on a small farm—how many of the world's grandest characters were born on farms;—his education for the ministry; his going to Constantinople as a missionary and his work there, where he taught not only Christianity but also self-reliance, by the establishment of such industries as a modern bakery and a saw mill. His services in the cause of humanity during the Crimean war were recognized by a present of $25,000 from the British government, every dollar which he turned into the missionary fund. In later years he succeeded in establishing after many difficulties a college. Dr. Fisher closed with an urgent appeal for the teaching of practical Christianity to the youth of our country.

An old friend of the Cynosure, and one of the most successful canvassers, Mr. Benjamin Uish, sends for sample Cynosures for a man who needs light. He sends ten cents to pay for the papers. The amount is small, but what an impetus to the work and help financially it would be in these distressing times if all who read this item would go and do likewise. We need your co-operation in getting new subscriptions, in renewing those whose time has expired, in putting a sample in the hands of your neighbors. Shall we not have it? If you do not have money for the samples, send for them anyway.

The Home.

THE COMMON LOT OF ALL.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

The moon has risen high, dear friend,
The plain is bathed in light;
Above the hills the evening star
Has risen fair and bright.
And as I gaze, I sadly think
How death hath shadowed all;
And so I write these lines, 'twill be
The common lot of all.

A few short years ago, dear friend,
The days were rolling on;
The stars were bright upon the hills,
Soft shone the rising sun;
Upon the mountains of the east
His rays were soft and clear;
All earth was fair; yet not for us,
Because—we were not here.

A few more years, 'twill be the same;
The days will come and go,
The flowers will bloom, stars rise and set,
And bright the streamlets flow.
Friend will meet friend with clasp of hand,
The same God reign as now;
But we shall rest beneath the sod,
Its dust upon our brow.

And yet, what does it matter? we
Have lived our little day.
His fiat goes o'er all the earth,
"All things must pass away."
He lives forever, we his sons
Must learn, we know not why,
"Tis not the whole of life to live
Nor all of death to die."

And yet, dear friend, 'tis not in vain
We tread this pilgrim road,
For step by step the path grows bright
Beneath the feet of God.
With hand upraised he hails the way
Where radiant beings dwell,
And we,—our work is done, if we
Do life's whole duty well.

And so, dear friend, we will not faint
Nor falter by the way,
But in his strength we'll bravely march
Through twilight's shadows gray.
And I,—'twould cheer me now to know
While sleeping neath the sod,
That I, while tarrying here on earth,
Had led a soul to God!

Steamburgh, N. Y.

THE LAND OF COREA.

The very name of Corea is suggestive to mystery. This little kingdom, way out here at the uttermost part of the earth, is still unknown, though she stepped out from her hermit life as long ago as 1882, and entered into treaty relations with the civilized nations of the world. Corea has not yet recovered from her air of bewilderment at sight of the great outside world, and those who have visited her, either as newspaper correspondents or travelers, seem to have shared in this same bewildered condition of mind.

When one first comes in sight of this east coast, instead of beholding a country clothed with beautiful forests of maple, black walnut, cherry, oak, varnish trees, red mahogany, and every other common and uncommon wood, as has been represented, there is presented a panorama of mountains, whose rugged outlines, excessively steep slopes, and severe, wild aspect, produce a grand but meloncholy and inhospitable expression. "It seems a forsaken land given over to solitude." For the most part it is utterly treeless, nude and barren, though here and there are growths of unthrifty, crooked, weather-beaten pines. From the lofty mountain summits, which tower to the clouds, to where the foothills meet the sea, scarce a human habitation is to be seen; but, on searching more closely, in unexpected valleys that stretch far into the hills, we find many villages and hamlets, surrounded by fertile fields of rice, millet, and other productions, that give a comfortable support to the inhabitants.

The Corean towns are composed of unattractive collections of houses, low and ugly. These dwellings are small, straw-thatched mud hovels of one or two rooms, devoid of furniture, where the people sit, eat, and sleep on the floor. The streets are only narrow, filthy alleys. The mud floors of the Corean houses, heated by flues from beneath, are called kangs. They are heated in summer and winter to a degree that would be intolerable to one not used to it from infancy. Fuel gatherers scour the country to find means to feed these primitive furnaces. All the hill-sides are shaven every autumn with short, strong iron sickles. They are stripped of every growing thing, every stalk and branch is taken off, every little bush that has sprouted from the old, old roots that lie buried in the rich, black soil; every chrysanthemum and bluebell, and every coarse blade of grass, they cut down and bind in bundles for fuel. This is all they have. The impression prevailed, until recently, that Northern Corea was rich in timber, but it is now known that, except in temple grounds, or places sacred to some deity, or to the memory of some great person, there exists very little timber of any value. Everything like a stick of timber is very precious and costly.

Every plank for building, every timber of our houses is brought by ship from Japan. There is not, there need not be, a sawmill in all the country, for there is no wood to saw. All bricks for building are also brought on steamers from Japan or China; although clay is abundant, and coolies are waiting to make brick, there is no wood to burn them. No Yankee enterprise will avail here to tide over these hard places.

If age fills one with veneration, then you will find enough here to impress you most profoundly, for everything your eyes fall upon looks so old. The rocks are crumbling so you can break them with your fingers. And when the rainy season comes, in summer, the mold of ages gathers on everything, even to your gloves and shoes, if you drop out of them for a few days. The very air you breathe at such times seems to be charged with malaria and old age. It is all made plain when you are told that this is one of the oldest countries in the world; that some of its walled cities date back to King David's time; that most of them are more than a thousand years old.

The Coreans are proudly conscious of their antiquity. They say they have nearly lived out their allotted times as a people. Their slow sensibilities, ancient customs, grave language, and inert manner of life, all befit the aged. They speak of Europe and America as just beginning life; and in a stately way they show that they have no intention of yielding any of their venerable ideas to such frivolous youth. No influence can move them to change their slovenly-fitting white cotton garments for anything of a darker color or better shape. They insist on squatting on their heels when they work in your garden, while they use the short handled, awkward Corean hoe of the past ages, instead of the civilized implement of to-day. This squatting posture is a favorite one with them. We see long lines of squatting men by the roadside, in the hot sunshine, resting; they seem to be perfectly happy, in a half comatose condition, with watery eyes, after a surfeit of rice and pickle, dog chops and soup of garlic, strings of meat and dough, and some indescribable white lumps, neither flesh nor fish, bread nor fat, that cause a gaggling sensation when you feel them upon your tongue, and they slide down your throat as though they might be lizard or snake. This leaves a fierce burning behind it, and your eyes fill with tears; you plunge a brass spoonful of rice into your mouth to put out the fire of red pepper.

So wedded is the Corean to his ways that any change, even in the smallest detail of life, seems to him perfectly absurd. With as much hope might you interfere with the rising and setting of the sun, or try to change the stars in their courses. All his ancestors have sewed up their fearfully and wonderfully made trousers, queer stockings, and long, flowing white outer garments, in just the same painstaking way, and therefore the Corean of to-day refuses our offer to stitch the long seams on the sewing machines, rather choosing to "sit up of nights" and rip and sew according the good old custom. They will tell you that some strange appearance and movement in the water is caused by a dragon. You need not take the trouble to deny the existence of the winged serpent, for they will adhere to every old superstition.

Our pretty little Corean bride, who has been educated in a mission school, could not endure the thought of foregoing the custom of brides, so she gladly bore the pain of having all the short hair pulled out which is devoted to bangs by American ladies. Also a professional in the art plucked out her eyebrows. It cost many a tear, to be sure, but it was sufficient comfort to know she was following the good old custom.

The art of acupuncture is practiced largely among the Coreans, and in the most reckless, unskillful manner. Ye Babang has a painful knuckle joint, probably a sprain. Though he is a convert to Christianity, a fine Chinese scholar and teacher, he contends most learnedly for many of these customs and superstitions. He had this suffering joint punctured deeply in three places with long needles. Now, after three days, it is inflamed so we fear lock-jaw. Needles are often pushed into the bowels and stomach as far as the length of the hand, without the least regard to the situation of the internal organs, to say nothing of the quivering nerves. Sometimes these needles are roasted in the fire and taken out red-hot, and dipped in the medicine, the heat and medicine giving added agony—the treatment thus becoming more hopeful to the minds of these benighted people.

The young man Mar was sick. All sorts of medicine men were called in. It was decided that some spirit was disturbing his head, so they burned the top with a hot iron, but he grew worse, and the most learned of the wise men decided that the only remedy would be a medicine made of a finger of his only brother. The devoted brother submitted to have his finger cut off. In some way it was pulverized, so the sick man swallowed it—we never knew with what result.

Our teachers and translators in Corea are philosophers in their way. They discussed the case of Hansabang, who has been ill for a long time. Our American doctor says he has consumption. These learned Coreans reported that there was doubtless some unbalanced condition between the male and female atmospheres within the chest and stomach of Han. All sorts of medicines, made of the most repulsive reptiles and unclean things, were mixed up with incantations, and given, but with no avail, for this morning the poor man lies silent in death in his mud hut, and the mourners go about the streets wailing hideously. The old sorcerers say it was all because he had passed the point where anything could rectify his internal atmospheres.

There is much unexplored country in Corea, and it would delight the heart of the intrepid sportsman to visit this unfrequented region. Among the mountains he would find many wild animals. Tigers, leopards, bears, wolves, foxes, badgers, hogs and deer are not uncommon in the lower hills. Great numbers of sable, ermine, and otters are trapped in the highlands. Multitudes of birds are met with on hill and plain. Game birds are seen in great numbers. The beautiful pheasants are extremely plentiful. The turkey buzzard, water hen, pigeon, plover, quails and partridges are common. In spring and autumn the waters of every inlet and stream are crowded with such quantiiies of wild fowl—swans, geese, ducks, and teal—as to astonish and delight the heart of the sportsman.

The Coreans still practice the ancient art of falconry. They use with great skill trained hawks and dogs to beat up the game. Corea has been famed for her fine pearls, but of late the pearl fishery has been unsuccessful. The seas literally teem with fish, but the Corean shuns a life of toil, hardship and danger. He does not venture out upon the seas, and only gets such fish as he can catch in rudely constructed traps, set along the shore, which only require attention an hour or so each day. Whales, sharks and seals abound on the east coast. Multitudes of salmon, cod, haddock, herring, sardines, and innumerable other tribes crowd the waters. Oysters of an excellent quantity form a staple article of food.

The Japanese artificers drew their first knowledge and inspiration from Corea; but one will search in vain among the Corean handiwork of to-day for the slightest traces of the renowned craftsmen of ancient Corea. He will only find rude pottery and brass utensils without the least ornament. The present generation, no doubt, look just like the ancient ones, for, clad in the same fashion, we see these tall white figures going down by the sea, or winding up the steep hills and mountains, by the same beaten footpaths that then, as now, are the highways to China and Russia.

There are no ruins of ancient cities, temples, or palaces—no enduring marks of the generations who have lived, labored, loved, and died here. Only the old graves that billow the hillsides tell the sad story. They are recorded most carefully, worshiped, and guarded as the precious treasures of the kingdom of Corea.—San Francisco Chronicle, May 15.

TEMPERANCE.

WHAT SHALL I DO AGAINST THE SALOON?

THE ELOQUENT JOHN G. WOOLLEY AT THE CLEVELAND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

Take what road you may of Christian endeavor, it will lead you to a screened and painted door, back of which "a good man," so certified by the authorities and thereunto expressly authorized by statute, despite the Word of God and the organic law and reason of the government, pumps the putrid blood of murdered harvests into the veins of the body politic, and gangrene into the hearts and homes of men. That is the saloon, the third person of a despicable trinity of which the other two are the partisan city and the politic church—this society versus that.

I am continually receiving letters asking "What shall Christian young people do against the saloon?" The question is its own perfect answer, and I can only give it back expanded, as one may blow a rosebud into bloom.

The candid, honest, modest way for one to publish an idea is to exhibit a sample of it in operation; and so I answer by simply showing my own position, which may, of course, be wrong. The question is, what shall I—a "Christian"—"man"—"do"—"against the saloon?"

First of all, I will be a Christian. I will keep myself pure. I will, as to this thing, abolish the word "temperance." It is the Pharisee of grammar, the arch hypocrite of the vocabulary of this reform, the blood-guiltiest common noun in the language, a quagmire of definition not to be trusted by the foot of reason, or crossed by any but an empty vehicle of thought.

What is "temperance?" A claret cup, a drop of sherry, a glass of ale, a pint of wine, a bottle of whisky, a shameful night, a blank day, debt, dishonor, disease, despair, delirium, death. I have inflected it in all its attributes and languages, from the whisper of the dainty, delicious lust of ruby wine moving itself aright, to the adder hiss of the sodden, passionless adultery of drunkenness at the last, and am here alive, but on the way have passed a million men rotting unburied, and though living, lost until the judgment day.

I will be a Christian. Henceforth I'll stand upon the mountain top of Paul's great verse of which the familiar version is: "If meat make my brother to offend I will not eat meat enough to hurt myself though the world perish," but which is written: "I will eat no meat while the world stands." And drinking wine does cause my brother to offend. From the first, the strong, clean, moderate drinker has been, and is to-day, the weak man's schoolmaster to lead him to the gutter.

Am I saying that one who drinks is not a Christian? No; but he is not such a Christian as can help in this endeavor. A drinking church cannot rebuke the drinking world. A tippling Christian is a teacher of tippling, a decoy self-anchored in the slough of animalism, luring prey for the saloon—a corrupter of youth, for which offense, merely alleged and guessed at, Socrates was condemned to swallow hemlock for his country's good in the twilight of reform, two thousand years ago. They who would lend a hand to this endeavor must have a clean hand to lend. For this surgery there must be asceptic fingers and ballots sterilized by the very health of God.

In the perplexing movements of patriotic service I will keep faith with Jesus Christ, though it cost peace, pride, prestige, pulpit, or party. I will confess him before people, and on election day, which in this land of equal rights is man's day. I will show myself a Christian voter, fit to represent unfranchised womanhood at the polls. I will go to Him, hear His words, and whatsoever He says unto me, I will do it. Upon that rock I will build my politics, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

I will take up my cross daily—not semi-weekly—and will follow Him up the long Calvary of criticism, suspicion, uncharity, and persecution, to the skull-shaped dome at the land's end of Christian endeavor, and abide the issue there. Cross or coronation, loss or gain, pleasure or pain, glory or disgrace, life or death, in my person, in my property and politics I will be a Christian.

I will be a man, an active, definite, persistent, self respecting and respect-compelling man; no flunky to a party or a sect; no toady to a majority; no trimmer to the popular breeze; no lisping baby-talker to committees; no whimpering petitioner of my own servants; no whispering, apologetic preacher, with a gag; no wire-puller's Punch and Judy, penny puppet annex to a party show; no straddling, small and easy reformer; no driveling camp follower of the world's forward march; no dreary spouter of the Concordance; no Christian whose convictions require editing; no sniveling moral coward trembling at a politician's sneer; no pastor whose politics are queer; no craw-fish pietest backing under a creed at the approach of a new thought. I will be consistent; I will let no man despise me. I will not despise myself. If I keep political company where saloon-keepers feel at home, I will be man enough not to pray, "Thy kingdom come on earth." I will be too much of a man to talk of taking the world for Christ while I am consenting to farm out the highways of my own country to saloons and live on the rentals. I will hold no politician's coat while he stones a prophet or denies full citizenship to a woman. By the grace of God I will be a Christian Christian and a manly man.

I will be "against the saloon" and anything that fears, favors or ignores it. The liquor traffic is the foot-rot of civilization. Saloons are the progeny of cities betrayed by party politics. I will renounce utterly and forever all allegiance to any political party in municipal government. I will not be bound by a caucus. But when a citizen's meeting conflicts with my prayer-meeting I will miss the prayer-meeting. I will count any man the city's enemy who drags his party into its affairs. I will trust no man in city politics who winks at the saloon in national politics.

I will not be cajoled, frightened or jeered into the stupid wickedness of trying to secure good men to enforce bad laws. Any man is good enough to grant or sign a license. The men who levy, collect and disburse the price of the city's shame shall never be my representatives. The uniformed supervisor of a stipendiary public virtue shall never wear my star. While the law is wrong I will not touch it. Let shrewdness, greed and party policy look out for themselves; I am for Christ and the church.

In national affairs I will belong to a party and be true to it; so true that when it goes wrong, I will leave it and go straight ahead until it catches up. I will scratch the wickedness out of its ticket, and then throw the ticket away, unless I can stand with it upon a clean, brave, open platform. A man who is false to himself cannot be true to anything, and a party that asks a man to belie himself and speak easy his convictions, will in time betray both him and the country. A coward is potentially a traitor. I will square my politics to my church or leave the church. The man, the ticket, or the party that expects or desires votes from the saloon shall have no vote from me.

Two great political parties strive for pre-eminence in our national affairs. It was so from the beginning; it will be so to the end. Their names change, and the lines of their cleavage, but not their general character. The resultant of their contending power records the progress of this country. The problem of our Christian civilization is to diminish the angle of their drawing apart until, in some great day, a clean church shall slip the yoke of Jesus Christ upon their mighty necks and make them pull together for a thousand years. Do you say the saloon will persist? What if it does? A clean church will win its customers and keepers, to a man. Even two hundred and fifty thousand saloons would be an infinitesimal trifle in the race for power against a clean church. Let who will win this election, sell the licenses and administer the all-pervasive paltry treason of the spoils; when the clean church comes, whose right it is, she will take, without a rival or a question, the scepter of the world, and reign. I will be for that. These hands are hers, only two of millions, but I will wash them, by the grace of God, and keep them clean for her. No sales, no spoils, no saloon votes in Christian endeavor!

Great men have said to me (the humblest locust-eater in the wilderness), with fine, high admonition in their voice and mien,—"Preach the old Gospel!" I do. I did for six clean years. God helping me, I will to-day. I have it from the mouth of the first minister, fresh from the secret place of the Most High, unshopworn, unseminaried, uncoached by doctors of divinity, uncriticisable, ineligible for a salary, incorrigibly clear, smelling of wild honey, "a man sent from God whose name was John."

I will maintain to-day that he lifts most the Son of God who exalts mankind the most. No man cometh unto the Father but by becoming a son, and no man becomes a son of God but by being a man. To live is Christ; to preach or to "belong to church" is anything or nothing—Paul, Barnabas, or Cephas; Peter, who denied his Lord at the election; Eutychus, who slept while Paul spoke; Ananias, who lied about his taxes; or you or I, who do all three or neither.

I preach the Gospel according to John. Listen: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make his paths straight. Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low, and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places shall be made smooth. Oh, generation of vipers! Oh, crawling, slippery, sinuous, stealthy, wriggling Pharisees, who hath advised you to flee? How can cause escape effect? What authority do you find for running away from the consequences of your own sin or your own neglect? Wrath is the whole 'afterward' of unforgiven wrong. Whither can we fly from that? Turn about! Face the foe! Repent! Stand up and meet the results of your doings—then live so worthily as to make wrath itself repent! Let go of Abraham. Be men on your own account. Trust no old respectability or ancestry or history. Let the dead past bury its dead. Divine wrath pursues nobody, but men are burning other men for fuel now. Take an ax! Strike at the root of the Upas trees that breathes out poison to the world, nor rest until the very wood is burned to ashes;—so get forgiveness for yourself and give all flesh a chance to see salvation."

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON VIII.—Third Quarter, 1894, Aug. 19.

SUBJECT.—First disciples of Jesus.—John 1: 35-49.

GOLDEN TEXT.—We have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ.—John 1: 41

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 1: 35-42. T.—John 1: 43-49. W.—Luke 5: 27-32. Th.—Mark 1: 14-30. F.—Luke 9: 57-62. S.—Luke 14: 25-35. Su.—Matt. 19: 23-30.

(From Life and Light Series.)

The inquiry of the deputation and John's answers to them were made in public. They constituted a kind of formal announcement of the advent of Messiah. Jesus had disappeared into the wilderness after his baptism, and had not as yet reappeared. But now, the very day after that first announcement, an event occurred which brought to a crisis the ministry of John.

1. The Lamb of God. John the Baptist's announcement is abrupt, and was brought about by the sudden approach of Jesus toward him from among the crowd. John undoubtedly at once knew that this was for the purpose of being recognized and introduced to the people by him. What astonishes us is that John should have introduced Jesus as "the Lamb of God" rather than as "the Messiah." It shows a wonderful and advanced insight into the mission of Jesus. This at once placed the moral and spiritual importance of the mission of the Son of God above that of his temporal relation to them as Messiah or king. That he borrowed his imagery from the Old Testament is perfectly certain, and every one of those present would understand the reference. The paschal lamb of Egypt would no doubt at once suggest itself to them. The daily offering of the Lamb for the trespass-offerings would also occur to them. That John the Baptist here went straight to the central doctrine of the Atonement, there can be no doubt. What good to be baptized unto repentance unless there be a way of forgiveness and remission; and how can there be remission where there is no shedding of blood? Jesus is the lamb whom God hath provided for sinners, and his work is to bear away their sins, not by example or by "moral influence," but in being wounded for their iniquities. Jesus is said here not to bear the sins, but the SIN of the world. This does not refer to original sin, as some have supposed, by which he freed the world from the guilt of inherited sin; but it refers to the fact of the unity of sin in respect of the unity of the race. He may be the exclusive Messiah for the Jew, but he is the sin-bearer for the whole world.

II. The First Disciples. Until now, Jesus had not drawn to himself a single follower. He had taken upon himself the task for which he had come into the world by his formal presentation of himself to John for baptism. Now, again, the next day, he appears on the scene, not approaching John the Baptist, as on the former occasion, but quietly walking by.

1. THE MODEL PREACHER. He is not afraid, first of all, to repeat his former discourse. He is not mindful either to make or retain disciples for himself. John had gathered many disciples about him. Among them stood two—Andrew, and without doubt, John, the author of this Gospel. They were choice young men, and had been enthusiastically attached to John. Now, Jesus appears again, and John, pointing him out a second time, seems to say: "There he is, follow him. Having pointed him out to you, you have no further need of me: and having come, or passing by in your sight, it is not for you to stay with me, but go to him. He is your Lord as well as your Lamb." It is one of the sure signs of nobleness and consecration in a preacher when he seeks not disciples for himself, but for his Master. John ever declared of himself and Jesus: "He must increase, but I must decrease." What a grand example of this disinterestedness is seen in Paul, who could even wish himself accursed from Christ, if thereby he might win his brethren to Christ. (Rom. 9:3.)

2. TWO MODEL DISCIPLES. The two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus. Why others did not do so does not appear; but there are still many who profess interest in divine things, who, though they hear and see, do not follow Jesus. They are content to be the disciples of their minister, and stop there. Not so these two. They no doubt greatly admired John, and were sincerely attached to him; but they had heard him preaching Jesus to some purpose, and now they were ready to follow him.

3 AN ATTRACTIVE SAVIOUR. Jesus was passing by. He did not call these two men by any outward virtue, but being lifted up to that faith by John the Baptist, who made him so lovely, as the Son and Lamb of God, "he drew them to himself."

III. A Brother's Love. The true disciple drinks deep at the well of salvation that he may have to give out to others. The Gadarene demoniac went back to his own home to tell them of Jesus.—Pentecost.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Baptist association of Chicago is composed of 74 churches with an aggregate membership of nearly 17,000.

—In the new United Presbyterian church at Aurora, Ill., Rev. J. A. Cosby began his first year with twelve members, and has just closed it with fifty four. The congregation meets in the western part of the city.

—Elder J. F. Funk, editor of the Herald of Truth, advises the holding of a general conference of all Mennonites. He thinks it quite possible that a common basis might be devised for the twelve or thirteen branches of Mennonites.

—Rev. Alexander Blackburn, pastor of the first Baptist church of Charleston, Mass., has purchased a Gospel wagon, and proposes to make street preaching as much a department of church work as the Sunday morning services.

—Dr. Chapman and his associates have been holding special revival services at La Crosse, Wis., during the past heated term, and the meetings have been very successful. The work was largely among men, and the great proportion of signers to the cards were men.

—Rev. J. B. Galloway, so long and favorably known in connection with the N. C. A. reform work in Wisconsin is pastor of two prosperous United Presbyterian congregations at Arlington and Caledonia. During this summer he has also preached at Buffalo a portion of the time.

—An international medical missionary institute for the education of young men and women desirous of becoming missionaries in foreign lands is to be established in New York City. Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists and the Dutch Reformed Church are already interested in it.

To New Subscribers!
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
—)FOR(—
FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

111 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 18th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. Paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 328 pages; cloth, $1 00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; [illegible]

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

BATHING, ETC.

For the Bath.—A teaspoon or more of powdered borax thrown into the bath-tub while bathing will communicate a velvety softness to the water, and at the same time invigorate and rest the bather. Persons troubled with nervousness or wakeful nights will find this kind of bath of great benefit.

Warm Water for Sleeplessness.—A correspondent of the Medical Age reports a case of sleeplessness of twenty-five years' standing completely cured by drinking a pint of warm water, as warm as can be drank with comfort, one good hour before each meal, and the last thing before going to bed. "Pain gradually lessened and went; the shattered nerves became calm and strong, and instead of each night being one long misery spent in wearying for morning they are all too short for the sweet, refreshing sleep I now enjoy." We give this for what it is worth. It is certainly preferable to chloral or other drugs. Perhaps a pint would be too much for most people, but each one who cares to try the recipe can regulate the quantity of water taken by experience.

Rose Bath —It is a luxury far off, desirable but unattainable, so says the practicable mind; but not so. This luxury of the ancients can be obtained by the nineteenth century maiden at a cost second to nothing. The bath of roses can be made as follows: The warm water, in quantity amounting to the usual requirement of the bath, is first softened by stirring into the tub finely sifted oatmeal, into which is also added half a pint of glycerine; lastly put in it two drops of attar of roses. If the massage treatment be available, use it by all means; if not, let a coarse towel and hard rubbing serve the purpose of the massage system. This bath is simply fine, as it softens the skin and blends perfume into each line of the body. After all to obtain it is a simple thing, too; the two drops of attar of roses being the greatest expense of all.—Herald of Health.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW.

All rugs when shaken should be handled by the center, and not by the edges.

Sanitary.—It is a good plan to keep a small dish of powdered charcoal on one of the upper shelves of the refrigerator, as it is an excellent absorber of odors. It should be changed every few days.

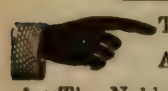
Breakfast Fruit —A squeeze of lemon juice on a dish of bananas, prunes, apple-sauce, canned peaches, or silver forked pineapple is an improvement. Breakfast fruits are better for a little bitter sweet.

Missionary.—"Was it liquor that brought you to this?"

Imprisoned Burglar—"No, sir, it was house-cleanin,' sir."

Missionary—"Eh? House-cleaning?"

Burglar—"Yes, sir. The woman had been house-cleanin,' and the stair-carpet was up, and the folks heard me."



THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

It Is Not What We Say

But What

Hood's Sarsaparilla Does

That Tells the Story. Its record is unequalled in the history of medicine. Even when other preparations fail,

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Be Sure to Get Hood's.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable. 25c.

Songs for the Times.

FOURTH AND IMPROVED EDITION.

BY GEO. W. CLARK.

Author of the "Temperance Songster," "The Liberty Minstrel," "Free Soil Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," Harp of Freedom," etc.

This work comprises some 235 Elemental, Reformatory and Progressive Songs, Odes, Psalms, Hymns, etc., words and music, old and new, on a great variety of subjects, including Truth, Freedom, Temperance, Prohibition.

Likewise National, Loyal and Patriotic Songs. Also Miscellaneous, Social, Domestic and Hygienic; Songs adapted to the home circle, to private devotion and public worship, to national gatherings, mass meetings, and all humane movements for the good of mankind. It is printed on new electrotype plates, made from new type; the impressions are on nice white paper, and its pages are clear, bright and cheery, and the price very low for so costly a work.

Single copy, 30 cts; by mail, 35 cts; by the dozen, $3; by the hundred, $20.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS

AND

REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AMERICAN HANDBOOK AND CITIZEN MANUAL.

BY

MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

CONTENTS:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Ch

THE GUIDING HAND;

—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

-——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894

(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid ..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid ..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894."—METHODIST RECORDER.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. HULET.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARBOIN.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS

OF

FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Farm Notes.

DON'T FRET.

Two gardeners, who were neighbors, had their peas killed by frost. One of them came to condole with the other on this misfortune.

"Ah!" he cried, "how unfortunate we have been, neighbor! Do you know I have done nothing but fret ever since. But you seem to have a fine, healthy crop coming up already. What are these?"

"These," cried the other gardner, "why these are what I sowed immediately after my loss."

"What! coming up already?" cried the fretter.

"Yes. While you were fretting I was working."

"What! Don't you fret when you have a loss?"

"Yes; but I always put it off until after I have repaired the mischief?"

"Why, then you have no need to fret at all."

"True," replied the industrious gardener, "and that's the very reason."—Ram's Horn.

A LARGE WHEAT YIELD.

Charles Jones, a Delaware county, Ind., farmer, reports that he had a thirty-acre field of wheat that yielded forty-two and one-half bushels per acre.

FEEDING WHEAT TO HOGS.

The farmers of Indiana, for the first time in the history of the State, are feeding their wheat to their hogs and selling their corn. Wheat brings but forty-three cents per bushel when delivered at the country stations, and corn sells readily at from 45 to 47 cents. The farmers say that one bushel of wheat contains as much nutriment as two bushels or corn, and as hogs are bringing good prices and corn is higher than wheat, it is economy to feed the latter and sell their corn.

CULTIVATING ORCHARDS.

The diverse treatment which orchards receive throughout the country affords a lesson, showing the great benefit of giving the best management and the loss from neglected treatment. Neglect is too common, and poor crops and scabby fruit are the results. In contrast with these neglected orchards are a few to which the owners give the best attention, and who receive good prices for the copious returns of handsome fruit.

One orchard of this class, which has grown to full bearing size, affords the owner a handsome profit every year, while his careless neighbors receive not more than one-fourth of his returns This well-managed orchard is kept in grass, which is grazed short by sheep, the grass afforded them being only one-half or two thirds as much as would give them full feed, the deficiency being made up with grain or meal. This is fed to them regularly in long board troughs. The sheep eat every wormy apple as it falls, and the fruit is thus kept nearly clear of insects. The droppings of the sheep enrich the ground, and a top dressing of barn manure is added yearly.

The sales of the fruit from this orchard for many years have been equal to one hundred dollars from each acre it occupies. The shade of the apple trees prevent a rank growth of the grass, and the grazing of the sheep gives it somewhat the appearance of a lawn. The owners of some other excellent orchards, who cannot use sheep, apply yard or barn manure more copiously, In one of the finest visited, the annual application of manure had gradually made it two or three inches deep; the result was a superb crop of apples. Other orchards, with less manure, are kept clean and mellow with a gang plow or Acme harrow, to keep the surface clean and in a finely pulverized condition.—Country Gentleman.

The mechanical effect of clover upon soils make it of special value on heavy soils that can hardly produce any crops except those with the most superficial root-growth. It is almost impossible to plow some very heavy soils to a greater depth than five or six inches without using up a great deal of horseflesh and man-labor. Underground and tile drainage will help such compact soil, but in many instances it is necessary to have both tile drainage and clover to improve such soil so that it can be easily worked for corn, oats and other crops.

It is not as much work to take care and good care, too, of ten acres of orchard, as it is to take care of ten acres of corn, and the income will be far greater. Ten acres of orchard would contain about five hundred trees, and a barrel to a tree when the trees come well into bearing is only a moderate yield. Five hundred barrels at one dollar per barrel would be $500, or $50 per acre.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

"Canst thou minister to a mind diseased?" asks Macbeth. Certainly, my lord; the condition of the mind depends largely, if not solely, on the condition of the stomach, liver, and bowels, for all of which complaints Ayer's Pills are "the sovereignest thing on earth."

The use of Hall's Hair renewer promotes the growth of the hair, and restores its natural color and beauty, frees the scalp of dandruff, tetter, and all impurities.

FARM FOR SALE.

A quarter section in Kearney county, Nebraska,

WILL BE SOLD AT A BARGAIN.

Description: Southwest quarter of Section 31, Township 8, North, Range 13, west of the sixth principal meridian.

ONLY $500 CASH FOR 160 ACRES.

Large bodies of cattle have ranged over and been herded on this and adjacent land. It is pretty well covered with grass. The soil as a whole is quite sandy, especially on the hills; the little valleys have the best soil.

It is near two railroad towns. Lowell is within two miles, and Hartwell is about five miles distant. All taxes are paid to date. Must be sold soon if possible. Address, W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

WAS THE ONLY

Sarsaparilla

ADMITTED AT THE World's Fair.

GET The Best.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S AND AGENT'S PROFITS.

$12 buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc., free. OXFORD MFG. CO.
338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Illustrated.

THE FULL

ILLUSTRATED RITUAL

OF THE

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine

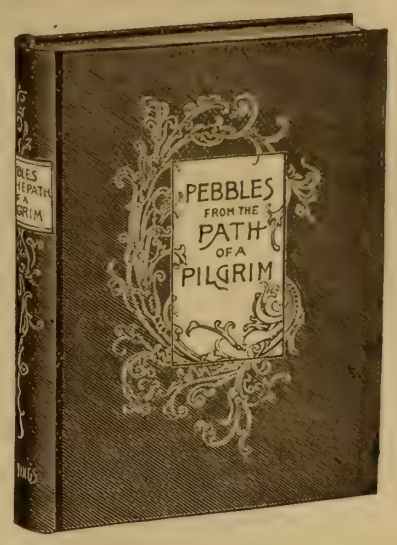
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



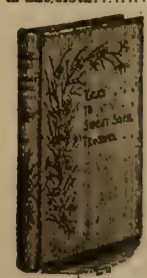
This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book.... No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Talks to Sunday-School Teachers.

By Rev. J. G. Terrill. 12mo, 200 pages, bound in fine cloth..... .75



This book is the result of twenty-five years of experience in Sunday-school and treats of: 1. The Sunday-school organization and management. 2. Methods of work. 3. Studies in human nature. 4. Rules of Interpretation as applied to the Bible. 5. Illustrative exercises for primary classes and children's meetings. In the style of presentation, subject matter and price of the book, the wants of the officers and teachers of the ordinary Sunday-school are kept in view.

S. S. Times:—A very comprehensive book. N. Y. Independent:—A sensible manual for the average Sunday-school teacher. Evan. Mess.:—We have been very favorably impressed with the book, because it is so intensely practical. The subject is systematically treated, and leaders of teacher's meetings can not do better than adopt it as a text-book and devote half an hour of each session to teaching the theory and practice of teaching as here systematized. Christian at Work:—Any school that will adopt this book generally and carry forward its work or doctrines here laid down will not be long in developing into a model school and reaping the harvest of a rich fruitage. Herald and Presbyter:—These Talks are well attested in their profitableness and excellence. Buffalo Advocate:—A plain, practical, common sense book on a very important subject. The author has had wide experience in this field of work. He knows thoroughly the ground over which he would lead others, and possesses the happy faculty of packing a great deal of valuable information as to matter and manner of teaching into this little hand-book. We commend it to the attention of all Sunday-school workers. Religious Telescope:—We are pleased with the plan and treatment of the subjects throughout, and are sure that the diligent Sunday-school teacher who longs for more thorough equipment, will find in this book a helper of great value. Illustrated Christian Weekly:—The author talks from observation and experience, and talks well.

Sunday School Publications.

The Pearl (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	3c.	Sunshine (Mo.)	Pr. Qr.	2 c.
The Lily	" "	3 "	Pure Words	"	1 "
Light & L	Scholar's Qrly.	3 "	Light & L Inf Cl. wk.		4 "
"	Teacher's "	5 "	" " Lesson Leaf	"	1½ "
Golden Treasures		1 "	L. & L. Primary Qly		4 "

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, & Sunshine, each Pr. Yr. 25c
The four to one address " 75c
Teacher's Quarterly Pr. Yr. 25c
Scholar's " " 20c
L. & L. Infant Class, weekly, 25c

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT of the Holy Ghost,

BY REV. THOS. K. DOTY,
Author of Lessons in Holiness.

240 pp. Price postpaid.....65cts.

The design of this book is, in plain language, to designate the place of the Holy Ghost in both the Godhead and the work of Salvation. Especially to show that Entire Santification is wrought in the heart by the Baptism of Holy Ghost; and that the Epoch of the Baptism is identical with that of his Advent in his Indwelling Personalty. The agency of the Holy Ghost in the Life, and in carrying on the work of the Gospel, is given particular attention.

TITLES TO THE CHAPTERS:

1. A Summary. 2. The Holy Ghost a Person. 3. The New Testament Designating Terms. 4. The Scriptural View. 5. The Holy Ghost is God. 6. Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost. 7. The Trinity of God. 8. The Apostolic Benediction. 9. The Worship of the Holy Ghost. 10. The Dispensations. 11. The First Dispensation. 12. The Second Dispensation. 13. Holiness—Sinning. 14. "The Sin of the World." 15. Final Deliverance from Sin. 16. The Day of the Holy Ghost. 17. Jesus and the Holy Ghost. 18 and 19. The Epoch of the Holy Ghost. 20. The Anointing. 21. The Baptism of the Holy Ghost. 22. The Baptism of Fire. 23. The Two-Fold Experiences of the Holy Ghost. 24. Fellowship of the Holy Ghost. 25. "In the Spirit." 26. Several Scriptural Terms Considered. 27. Pentecost. 28. Inspiration—Prophecy. 29. Spiritual Leading and Teaching. 30. The Gifts of the Spirit. 31. "Praying in the Holy Ghost." 31 and 32. Power.

This book is creating quite a stir in religious circles. The original, bold and convincing manner of presenting the subject, has forced the press to comment upon the book, either adversely or favorably, generally the latter. We give a few OPINIONS:

Bible Standard and Gospel Record: "This book is very compact, scarcely a superfluous sentence in the whole book. The manner of treating the questions involved is both clear and scriptural. .....The effect of the book will be to deepen thought and increase knowledge and, in the end, deepen piety."

Evangelical Messenger: "Brother Thomas K. Doty has written a book which we take pleasure in commending to all devout readers who enjoy all spiritual things. The subject is so important, and the treatment of it so timely, that we may be pardoned for calling attention to it thus prominently. We, at least have been greatly interested, and gratefully acknowledge that we have also been decidedly profited by perusing it .....Brother Doty writes with an incisive pen, in a clear, lucid style, often epigrammatical and with great force. He is evidently deeply impressed with the truth of what he writes and demands the respect even where he does not gain the intellectual assent of his readers. Withal the book is written in a kindly, candid spirit, rather didactic than polermical, and is calculated to help the reader and not to rouse his opposition, as is the case with so many books which have been written upon this and kindred subjects. The theological views expressed are orthodox, and in some cases the argument is fresh in matter, and certainly fresh in form throughout."

Christian Cynosure: "His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatising on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume."

Struck by Lightning.

A true and thrilling narrative of one who was struck by lightning; with incidents, experiences and anecdotes for old and young. By Rev. E. Owen.

With Striking Illustrations.

Beautifully bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold on side and back.....50c.
Paper cover.....30c.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Plan for Evading the Judgment—Request to be Whipped to Death—Learning to Swear—Alarmed by a Rattlesnake—Fall from a Building—Struck by Lightning—Converted—Sanctified—Called to Preach—First Effort—Casting out a Devil—Protracted Meeting on "Satan's Premises"—First Circuit—Revival in "Haying"—S. Hill Revival—Sisters' Quarrel Settled—Accused of Fortune-Telling—Souls Saved—Dreams—Too near Hell to Spend Time with—A Sceptic Awakened—Public Talk with a Universalist—A Chair Thrown at the Minister—Revival in Berlin—A Methodist Church of Baptist Converts—A Noisy Stage Passenger Quieted—Preaching on the Deck of a Steamboat—A Pleasure Trip—Two Overboard—Revival by Torch-light—A Fiddler Saved—A Slanderer Humbled—Bar room Discussion—Saved by Expulsion from the Church—Dancing with the Devil—Answering a Fool According to his Folly—Raps for Spirit Rappings—Short Debate with a Restorationist—"Open Rebuke"—An Unspeakable Blessing.

COMMENDATIONS.

American Wesleyan: "Thrilling as a romance and true to the last syllable. No private library or Sunday-school should be without a copy."

Phonographic Monthly, N. Y.: "Calculated to throw light into the dark places of orthodoxy."

Earnest Christian: "A true narrative of instructive events."

Lay Evangelist: "Quite entertaining and neatly gotten up."

Free Methodist: "Meeting with universal favor. Intensely interesting. We have read, laughed and cried, and shall try it again."

"Best" Marriage Certificate. Size 14x17½. Price postpaid 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50.

This superb certificate meets a popular demand, and is rapidly becoming the favorite. Read what the people say of it: Bro. Best: My attention having been called to your marriage certificate, I must pronounce it the neatest in design and execution of any I have seen. Rev. E. P. Hart. E. C. Best—Dear Brother: I am well pleased with the specimen copy of your marriage certificate, and shall use them hereafter. They are in good taste, well executed, on good material, and at a very reasonable price. Yours, M. V. Clute.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland has practically decided to unite with Great Britain, Germany and Italy to forcibly preserve the neutrality of what are known as the treaty ports of China during the war between that empire and Japan. These ports are Amoy, Canton, Ningpo, Chin Kiang, Foo Chow, Shanghai, Han Kow, Nitchwang and Tien-Tsin.

A resolution on the subject of lynchings was offered in the House by Mr. Blair of New Hampshire. By it the Commissioner of Labor is instructed to investigate and report the number, date, location and attendant facts and circumstances of all such outrages in this country during the ten years last preceding the passage of the joint resolution.

The House refused assent to the Senate amendment to the agricultural bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the destruction of the Russian thistle.

CHICAGO.

While conducting electrical experiments with a new explosive in a quarry at Hawthorne, C. H. Rudd and two others were injured and three of his assistants killed.

Fire swept through sixty acres of the lumber district, between Blue Island avenue and the river and Robey street and Ashland avenue Wednesday night, destroying over 60,000,000 feet of lumber, the new plant of the Siemans-Halske company, two foundries of the Wells-French company, the new foundry of the Chicago stove works and the plant of the Barber Asphalt company. The estimated loss is over $1,500,000. Another fire next evening destroyed the lumber yards of the John Spry Co., valued at $150,000.

Fire from a cigar set fire to the grand stand at a Sunday baseball game, and 200 people were injured in escaping.

STRIKES AND UNIONS

The special committee of the Civic Federation of Chicago, after consultation with local employers and labor leaders, decided to call a national conference to consider the labor problem.

After three months of idleness the miners at Streator and Braceville, Ill., decided to return to work.

All the packing-houses in South Omaha have been closed by the strikers. The plants will be opened with new men.

Trainmen at St. Louis, dissatisfied with the American Railway Union, are organizing a new association to supersede it.

C. A. Keller, an organizer of the American Railway Union, was arrested for conspiracy, on complaint of Danville merchants.

Additional claims for damages aggregating $55,000 against the city of Chicago on account of labor riots have been filed. The claims will be resisted.

Without rioting or violence of any kind work was started Thursday morning in one of the biggest departments of the Pullman Palace Car company's factory. Before night nearly 600 men were engaged. A large proportion were from outside the city. The beginning indicated that the long and bitter strike will soon be over, so far, at least, as the operation of the Pullman shops is concerned.

The Chicago & Alton general shops in Bloomington, Ill., resumed operations. About 1,000 men were set to work, and there was great rejoicing on all sides.

In the United States District Court at Denver, Aug. 2, seven Grand Junction railroad men were convicted by a jury of retarding the mails by refusing to handle trains in which were Pullman cars. Judge Hallett fined them $10 and costs each.

District Attorney Milchrist filed a supplemental information in the Debs contempt case Wednesday, to include the directors of the American Railway Union in the charge of violating the order of the court. The document contains all the allegations of the original information against Debs, and in addition to that it sets forth that the work of promoting the strike and boycott was divided up, and particular branches of it given to committees.

COUNTRY.

The schooner "Glad Tidings," built in 1889 by Captain Henry Bundy, the sailor missionary of this city, was run down by a propeller near Detroit last week, and the four persons on board drowned. The vessel was taking stone to Detroit. Captain Bundy some time since secured a larger boat for his work.

Because it is not self-sustaining the Leadville branch, 334 miles long, will be abandoned by the Union Pacific.

Railroads doing business in Iowa have appealed to the State commissioners for permission to increase rates.

Two firemen were killed and five injured by a collapsing building in Philadelphia.

One fireman was killed and six others injured by falling walls during a fire in Detroit. The property loss is $60,000.

One man and two boys were killed, and two men injured, by the explosion of a thrasher engine at Dahlgren, Ill.

At midnight Aug. 3, fire was discovered in the house occupied by Cornelius Place and family, Spencerport, N. Y. The door was broken in. Mr. Place, his wife and five children were rescued. Three older boys were overcome and burned to a crisp.

Seven deaths and five prostrations resulted from the heat in Philadelphia. The thermometer registered 90 degrees, and the greatest humidity was 66 degrees.

J. S. Coxey has issued an appeal to Congress "On behalf of 400 hungry citizens of the United States now assembled near the capital to secure redress of their grievances, asking for a resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue $500 worth of rations to relieve the Commonwealers in their present distress."

FOREIGN.

A disastrous conflagration has destroyed 2,000 houses at Cottell, a town in Bulgaria. It is believed that many persons perished. The townspeople whose houses were burned are camping out in the fields.

The Polar expedition sent out by the Chicago Herald lost its vessel, the Ragnvarl Jarl, in an ice crush May 24, near Dane's Island and Spitzbergen. Undaunted by the disaster, Commander Wellman and his men, with the exception of four who returned to Dane's Island and thence to Tromsoe, took to their boats and sledges and resumed their journey toward the pole.

The Japanese government has informed the representatives of the foreign powers at Tokio, Japan, that a state of war exists between Japan and China. This is regarded as equivalent to a declaration of war.

Fearing epidemics if any longer allowed in the gardens where they sought refuge at the time of the earthquakes, the Turkish government is compelling the terrified people to return to their homes. A majority refuse to obey, in spite of the fact that the stench in the encampments is great. The feeling of panic continues, and slight earthquake shocks are experienced daily. It is believed in well-informed circles that the total loss of life is not over 500.

A naval battle was fought July 30 between the Chinese and Japanese fleets. The Japanese sank the Chinese battleship Chan-Yuen, and two large cruisers, supposed to be the vessels built for China by the Armstrongs, were captured or destroyed by the Japanese. The Chinese fleet engaged carried nearly a thousand men, and a large number of them are reported to have been killed or drowned.

The World's Tribute to
Dr. Price's Cream
Baking Powder
Highest Honors Awarded by theWorld's Columbian Exposition,
Chicago, 1893.

World's Fair Medal and Diploma awarded to

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from July 30 to Aug. 3:

Dr Q A Brown, P Sjoblom, Rev. E Barnetson, J Humble, W Knight, T Ruark, W Sperry, G W Modlin, G H Hamlin, J. Dekker.

I have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla for the last ten years, and find it will do as it is advertised to do. A. M. SHANNON, Charleston, Ill.

An Echo from the World's Fair.

The Lake Shore route has recently gotten out a very handsome litho-water color of the "Exposition Flyer," the famous twenty hour train in service between New York and Chicago during the Fair. Among the many wonderful achievements of the Columbian year this train—which was the fastest long distance train ever run—holds a prominent place, and to any one interested in the subject, the picture is well worth framing. Ten cents in silver sent to C. K. Wilber, Western passenger agent, Chicago, will secure one.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	51⅜@	54
Winter No. 3	52⅝@	53⅜
Corn—No. 2	49⅝@	51⅝
Oats—No. 2	29⅝@	34
Rye—No. 2	44
Bran per ton	11 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50 @	11 50
Butter, medium to best	10⅜@	23
Cheese	06⅜@	09
Beans	1 25 @	1 90
Eggs	10⅜@	20
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 50 @	5 00
Flax	1 24 @	1 25
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50 @	9 40
Broom corn (per ton)	30 00 @	70 00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	65 @	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	02½@	06¾
Lumber—Common	15	50
Wool (unwashed)	7 @	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 15 @	4 85
Common to good	2 00 @	4 00
Hogs	3 25 @	5 20
Sheep	1 00 @	3 60

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	55⅝@	56¼
Corn No 2	56 @	57¾
Oats	40 @	45
Rye	52 @	52½
Eggs	14 @	15¾
Butter	12 @	19
Wool	19 @	25

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 40 @	4 75
Hogs	4 50	4 80

LODGE LAMP

a monthly of choice articles on the SECRET : SOCIETY : SYSTEM, which the National Christian Association proposes to publish if the demand fo such a paper is such as to warrant its issue.

Annual subscription 20 cents.

Clubs of 20 for only $2.00.

Send in your pledge to take 20.

☞Money to be sent when you are notified that the plan is successful.☜

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL XXVI, No. 49 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 16, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,268.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Fresh-nibbed pens..... 8
Rev. Mr. Carwardine and the Pullman Strike.... 8
Congress Chartering Lodges..... 8
New Methods and New Lodges..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Boycott..... 1
The Lodge System and Good Citizenship..... 2
Missionary Experiences in China..... 2
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Address of Hon. Washington Hesing..... 3
Lodge Lamp Letters 6
OBITUARY..... 7
REFORM NEWS:
Southwestern Oregon a Good Field; Still at Work in New Orleans.4,5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Strikes Profitable; The Roman Church Militant; Joseph Mackey; Badge Yourself; Pith and Point.....5,6
This and That..... 7
N. C. A 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....11
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

The whisky trust has stopped all the distilleries but five in the country until the question of the corn crop is settled by the weather, and the tariff by Congress. God will give us corn enough for all honest purposes. If he withholds the surplus usually consumed in whisky-making well and good. Let these factories of death be shut forever.

The wisdom of Solomon has not wholly departed from the earth. The Christian queen of Madagascar so effectually made war on that "civilized" innovation, the liquor business, as to make the dealers cry out for a compensation for loss of business. She silenced them with the reply, "Compensate those you have wronged and I will pay your loss." So said our own Supreme Court in a round-about way to the Kansas saloonists a few years since. So will the Lord say to them in the hastening judgment.

A general officer of the Southern Pacific road is reported as saying, if he knew a man who had been untrue to his company he would have revenge of him: "If I find out that he has got a job anywhere, I will pursue him and use my best efforts to get him discharged." Such hot-headed managers deserve to be put in the same cage with Debs and Hogan and Irons. If men have been guilty of unlawful acts against the Southern Pacific company, it is powerful enough to try their case in court. Such threats only aggravate a case that is bad enough in California. No State in the Union probably has endured so grievous a railway domination as she.

The case of private Cedarquist of the regular army, who was court-martialed at Omaha, has taken on a very different phase since President Cleveland last week took it in hand. Cedarquist refused to report for target practice on the Sabbath day. The President released Cedarquist from imprisonment and ordered the arrest and court-martial of Major Worth, who issued the command for Sunday practice. The law of the army dates back to President Lincoln, who in November, 1862, ordered that Sunday labor in the army should be confined to strictly necessary duties; and to President Harrison, who strictly forbade rifle practice on the day of rest. We shall watch the result of this second trial with interest. The President's order reflects seriously on Gen. Brooke, commanding the department of the Platte, who approved the finding of the court-martial.

Carroll D. Wright, U S. Labor Commissioner, has been speaking at Chautauqua on his way to take part in the Pullman investigation ordered by President Cleveland. His last address was on Compulsory Arbitration to which he is opposed, though reluctant to make objections to a measure advocated by so many esteemed as his friends. "Compulsory arbitration," he said, "means a slavery to the workingman infinitely worse than the slavery of the South before the war. Yet out of the system there may grow some modifications which will help the world greatly in the settlement of the ugly contests which are continually occurring." Mr. Wright agrees with Mr. Gompers of the Federation of Trades Unions, and his opinion will hold against a hundred theorizers. The Cynosure has always held that a genuine arbitration must be voluntary, otherwise it becomes only an adjunct of a court of law. But this even may be an improvement on our present system.

Mr. Wright's repetition of an expression frequently repeated by labor agitators calls for remark. That the condition of workingmen is worse, or is likely to be worse, than that of the ex-slaves is an exaggeration of which a gentleman of his supposed intelligence should not be guilty. It may be true of individual instances, but of the system it is most untrue. The Pullman strike probably grew out of the autocratic spirit of the president of the company. The independence of American workingmen will not brook much restraint from the employer. But from the labor union it does suffer. Dread of personal violence and fear of death always menace the workingman who will not join the secret union. If Mr. Wright's words are ever true, they are so because of secret lodge despotism.

Sunday ball-playing must answer in Chicago courts. The National League games have never been played on the Sabbath until Mr Spalding resigned as president of the league. He would not allow it. But the Sunday game has proved a nuisance to the district of the city in which it is played, and last week the International Sunday Observance League procured an injunction to stop it. Through some technicality of law the injunction was set aside, but this will be amended, and an order will probably be issued this week that will prevent further Sunday games this year. The organization thus laboring to secure the priceless boon of a Sabbath rest and quiet, promises to take up other cases when the ball game is settled. Mr. A. S. Maltman is president of the League; Mrs. M. E. Cook of the Woman's Educational al Union, vice-president; and Thomas H. Gault its attorney.

A "Saturday" school is the suggestion of Mr. D. C. Cook, the publisher of Sabbath-school literature. He very truly holds that the study of the Word of God is too important to be put off with a single half hour on the Lord's day, and when the public school gives up a day why not use it for Scripture study. Rev. Mr. Earngey, pastor of the east-side Methodist church, Elgin, Ill., says the plan has been profitably introduced among his people. The attendance is large, the interest good and the profit will, he trusts, be great. The methods of the public school are introduced, and the teachers also so far as possible. Pastor Earngey's report in the Northwestern Christian Advocate suggests two thoughts: 1. If the Word of God is studied in a secular way, by the every-day methods of the public school, will it not become a mere study book with no spiritual power left in it for the children? We cannot study it too much, neither can we too well. It is God's book, the book of religion, written and interpreted by the Holy Spirit. If its truths be not "spiritually discerned," we should fear lest they become a "savor of death" and not of life. 2. If so much time is given to Bible study in schools, with other people for teachers, what will become of the parents? Will not some one revive the Home Bible class for every day in the year?

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? 2 Cor. 6: 14, 15.

THE BOYCOTT.

BY OSSIAN CAMERON, LL. B.

In 1880 the Land League placed under a ban Captain Boycott, a farmer at Lough Mask, Connemara, Ireland, who was the agent of Lord Erne, an Irish landlord. The persecution was instituted to punish Mr. Boycott for refusing to take from his tenants reduced rents computed according to Griffin's valuation. His laborers under threats and anathemas were required to leave his service and an attempt was made to compel all others to refrain from having any social or business relations with him.

This was the first prominent application of the practice, and from the person attacked the system took the name by which it has since been known in all English-speaking nations. Since that time boycotting has been resorted to in connection with nearly all strikes of labor against capital, and sometimes in the absence of strikes it has been used as a means of persecution.

In the strike just past, which is known as the Pullman strike, the boycott was utilized in its most rabid form, and if till this time there had been any doubt as to its lawlessness, such doubt must have forever vanished when the practice so plainly manifested itself in all its hideous barbarity.

The writer does not deny to workingmen of all classes the right to combine and use all lawful means to secure better wages and improve the condition of themselves and families. On the contrary I believe this a duty incumbent on every man, and all worthy endeavors to that end are laudable. But just how far one may go and what means may be used in attaining the end does not appear to be generally understood.

The Century gives the following definition of boycott: "To combine in refusing to work for, buy from, sell to, give assistance to, or have any kind of dealings with a person or company on account of political or other differences." Thus far, with some possible limitations, all is well. But the part which now follows makes the boycott unlawful, i. e., "and in preventing others from working for, buying from or selling to, assisting or having any kind of dealings with a person or company," etc., etc.

A man may refuse to work for or deal with a person or company, but he may not prevent others from working for or dealing with such persons or company. The Declaration of Independence holds that men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men. Especially for the establishment of these rights was the government of these United States founded.

According then to the Declaration of Independence and the underlying principles of the Constitution and government of the United States, the individual has in the exercise of his inalienable liberty the right to sell his labor to such employer and on such terms as he may deem just. And the person or persons who prevent or attempt to prevent the exercise of this right by threats, physical force or violence are guilty of a criminal offense more serious than highway robbery. In the latter the victim would be dispossessed of his property, which he might recover, or receive a recompense for the loss of it. In the former he is dispossessed of a sacred right in which all the people of the nation are interested, and in consequence of the loss of which the principles of government are contrasted and anarchy is advanced, unless the government is able to and does repel the infraction of the rights of its citizens.

It seems strange that intelligent men should lose sight of a truth so self-evident and resort to a practice so reprehensible that it can never accomplish any good. When any body of men leave their employer for a grievance real or imaginary, and if all others voluntarily and of their own will refuse to work for such employer, and by such merely negative action an adjustment is effected, a good result is attained and no wrong is done. For in this case it is to be presumed that the workmen are only demanding what is reasonable. But as was the case in the outgrowth of the recent strike, men who had a right to work and who were willing to work, were by violence prevented from working. Interstate commerce and the United States mails were interfered with and stopped in transit, the operation and enforcement of the laws were prevented, and in California the government was defied, all of which brought the perpetrators of such acts within the field of criminality and some of them very near to if not over the line of treason.

And now the strike is over and labor has lost; and according to prominent labor leaders, labor never gained anything by a strike. Not only did labor lose the point at issue, but wages that might have been earned and positions that might have been held, and which are not easily secured these times, were lost. By virtue of an Illinois statute passed in 1887, the vast amount of property destroyed must be paid for by the city of Chicago, thereby increasing the burden on the taxpayers, many of whom were workmen interested in the strike. While capital was put to some inconvenience it will not be a heavy loser and will be able to make up any loss sustained. This labor cannot do, and it will probably be a year before many of the families of workmen interested in this strike will recover from the effects of it.

There are differences existing between labor and capital. There are wrongs to remedy, rights to secure and grievances to redress; but, as has been proven in every instance, neither the boycott or strike are the means by which to secure the desired results. A system which has proved so disastrous to the interests of workingmen should be abandoned, and in endeavoring to better their condition wise and judicious measures should be adopted, for none are so much interested in law and order as the laboring classes.

Labor and capital are so linked together, the one is so much the creature of the other, and there is such an interdependence existing between them that to insure success to either they must work in harmony. Each must consider the welfare of the other as much as it does its own.

There is a solution to every problem, but it is plain that the tactics thus far used by labor organizations have had little or no success in removing existing difficulties; they should therefore be consigned to oblivion and other methods resorted to,—methods which will proceed along the lines of natural justice and sound reason, and which will solve the question which now confronts labor and capital.

Old Colony Building, Chicago.

THEY NEVER PASS AWAY.

"You never get to the end of Christ's words. There is something in them always behind. They pass into proverbs—they pass into laws—they pass into doctrines—they pass into consolations; but they never pass away: and after all the use that is made of them, they are still not exhausted."—Dean Stanley.

LABOR.

Labor is God's first law. When Paradise
Vanished forever from our parents' sight,
God, while he saw that what he did was right,
Yet, crowned with love, ordained that mortal eyes
Should see again the radiant tree of life,
And eat its fruit, with truth and mercy rife,
Only through labor. Through Creation ran
The mandate, that true happiness to man
Rested in labor. He should eat his bread
Alone through needful energy. The flowers
Should bloom once more when all man's native powers
Were roused. Then hummed the bee; the sun was sped
Upon his daily journey; and the earth,
Through all its radiant bounds, woke to a brighter birth.

—Alfred B. Street, in the Independent.

THE LODGE SYSTEM AND GOOD CITIZENSHIP.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

Civil government is an ordinance of God. Obedience to just and legal authority is obedience to God. Rebellion is not mere mistaken political opinion, but a sin against God. Patriotism is not mere sentiment, but a duty to God. The state is the divinely-appointed order in which man's highest freedom is enjoyed. The effect of the secret lodge system upon citizenship is to stunt and stifle, prevent and pollute, alienate and destroy that which God has made.

I. The lodge transfers the allegiance of the citizen from the Author of the state to Satan, the usurper. The ten tribes of Israel which revolted from Solomon's son followed Jeroboam, the maker of the calves, the man "who made Israel to sin." Their idolatries grew more abominable under Omri and Ahab until God could no longer endure them and left them to the will of their enemies. The king of Assyria prevailed over them and carried them as captives to the region between the Euphrates and the Caspian sea. To the desolated and depopulated land he brought colonists from his own country. These brought their own idols and religions, but were led by an extraordinary judgment to dread Jehovah and learn of his worship. This they mingled with their own in a strange medley. "They feared the Lord and served their own gods." (2 Kings 17th). The lodge unites Pagans, Mohammedans, Jews and Christians in its worship. It leaves out Christ. It sacrifices to devils, not to God. Instead of elevating the people and making good citizens, it degrades and ruins them.

II. It administers disloyal oaths.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that any one who has taken the Endowment House oaths of the Mormon hierarchy should not be naturalized. The murder of Wm. Morgan by the Freemasons in 1826 caused forty-five out of fifty of the members to leave the order. In their indignation they exposed the oaths by which the lodge bound its members. In 1833, as a result of this exposition, the Vermont Legislature passed a law interdicting these oaths. The law provided that any one taking the lodge oath voluntarily should "be fined not more than $100 and not less than $50." In 1839 the Legislature increased the penalty to $200. Massachusetts and New Hampshire adopted a similar law, and Daniel Webster, the great lawyer and statesman, stoutly defended it. Think of a citizen taking a Master Mason's oath: "I promise and swear that a Master Mason's secret, given to me in charge as such, shall remain as sacred and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election." Think of him taking the Royal Arch degree, which amends the above thus: "Murder and treason not excepted!" Where is the safety for society when men, to whom it looks for counsel and guidance, bind themselves by such oaths?

III. It is the enemy of the home.

The human body is composed of life-cells. So long as these are healthy and active, nourishment and strength are communicated through them. But when they are diseased and prematurely decay, pain, dissolution and death seize the body. The nation is an organic body. It is made up of living cells. Every family is such a life-cell. When these cells are kept pure and healthy, the nation grows and prospers. But when they are polluted and diseased, or when atrophied by secret alienations, national dissolution and death follow.

A nation without homes is weak and an easy prey to the enemy. A nation with homes is invincible. But the lodge is a foe to the home. The 328,000 divorces granted in the United States in the past twenty years were in many cases due to alienations created by the lodge. The husband and father who spends his evenings in the lodge instead of the home, and takes the means that should be used in buying food and clothing for his wife and children, in providing them a home and home comforts, in educating his children and fitting them for making the best of life, and uses them in paying lodge dues and purchasing rich regalia, robs those nearest and dearest to him, and breaks down a life cell of the social body.

Boston, Mass.

MISSIONARY EXPERIENCES IN CHINA.

THE KUCHENG AND JONG-BING DISTRICTS IN SOUTHEASTERN CHINA.

BY REV. M. C. WILCOX, PRESIDING ELDER OF KUCHENG DISTRICT.

A short time ago I returned from a tour of the Jong-bing district; a tour attended as usual with many hardships due to heavy rains, hot days, frightful roads and dingy inns; but filled with encouragement and joy on account of the exceptional opportunities for preaching the "unsearchable riches of Christ."

Those familiar with this part of the Master's vineyard know that for many years the great "Upper Min Region," embraced within the Jong-bing district, has long been a scene of turbulence, of opposition to foreigners and to the native preachers. About fifteen years ago Dr. Sites, our senior missionary, was severely beaten at Jong-bing city, where in 1889 the writer also narrowly escaped from an ugly mob. When entering Sa-gaing city two years later, I was immediately surrounded by a crowd that rapidly increased in size and violence. Fortunately, as I approached the Ya-mun, or premises of the district magistrate, an officer rushed out and led me through a narrow passage to a place of safty. An escort of soldiers was furnished when a few days later I left the city.

During my last few visits to the Jong-bing district, an increasing friendliness has been manifested, but the recent tour has been the most satisfactory of all. In less than a month I preached about thirty times, besides giving numerous addresses and conversing with many individuals. When I add that though in most of places it was necessary to speak through an interpreter, yet large crowds, weary from their day's labor, listened eagerly from one to two hours to the Gospel, it is evident that those hundreds of towns and villages are indeed a field "white already to harvest." Never has there been such prosperity as now on nearly every circuit.

With another large field to care for I find it impossible to give the Jong-bing district more than a fraction of the foreign supervision it ought to receive. No one else of our force has time to give it the least attention. Hence it is of first importance that a missionary be immediately sent out to reside at Jong-bing city, and from that central point to superintend and push the work in that immense region. Last year our estimate for this new worker could not be granted. This year we shall try again, and it is an earnest prayer that the increased contributions of the church will make this greatly-needed re-inforcement possible.

Now just a few words about the other field entrusted to my care. As regards the Kucheng district the day of serious persecution seems to be past. Increasing success everywhere crowns the labors of Christ's faithful servants. For a long period the work in Kucheng city and district seemed nearly at a standstill. But during the six years preceding our last conference the members and probationers increased from 372 to 1,019, or 147 per cent. Concerning Kucheng city there occurs the following in my report for 1891: "For years our church in this wicked district capital has had at times a struggle for existence. A few of its members—a little remnant who would neither move away nor die—have held on in faith, and now their faith seems on the eve of being rewarded."

I rejoice so soon to add that during last year our members and probationers in this city more than doubled in number, increasing from forty to eighty-seven. It looks now as if the same thing would be repeated this year, for we already have 106 members and probationers and about fifty new inquirers who have not yet joined on probation, and it is still five months until conference. Among those recently received as probationers are a Master of Arts and a Bachelor of Arts, the first degree men who ever confessed Christ in Kucheng city, though a number of graduates in other parts of the district have become Christians, two of them being able and earnest ministers of the Gospel.

The conversion of these degree men is especial ly important on account of their influence on the literati, who as a class are hard to reach. Chinese graduates, as is well known, have certain special rights and privileges in their relations with the native officials, as well as great prestige with the people.

Since I began this article I have been strongly urged to appoint a preacher, a pastor teacher or at least an ordinary teacher to a village three miles away, where great religious interest is shown. I have no money for new work, the missionary appropriation being insufficient to care for the rapidly growing work already begun. Having aleady assumed the expense of new work on both of my districts, I at first hesitated, but soon decided to appoint a pastor teacher to the place.

Had I the money I could appoint efficient workers to more than a score of villages in my two districts, with the best results. With $15—plus native contributions—I can support for one year a boys' day school, a Sunday-school and regular Sabbath preaching, all in charge of a pastor teacher. Who will send me this amount or at least something towards supporting one such pastor teacher? I will write to donors about their work, or answer any inquiries. My address is Foochoo, China. Please send your contribution to Rev. C. C. McCabe, D. D., 150 Fifth Ave., N. Y., being careful to state that it is for my work, and your church will receive credit therefore, if you have a receipt from New York. Be sure not to deduct your special gift from your regular contribution to your missionary society. I trust that many readers will respond and help this glorious work.

Spurgeon on "Verbal Inspiration."—Perhaps the use of the phrase "verbal inspiration" may give rise to misrepresentation. It is not intended thereby to assert the dictation word by word to the writers of the various books of the language they employed; nor is it meant to convey the impression that the words of wicked men or of Satan recorded in the Book are inspired of God; but only that the human anthors were guided by the Holy Ghost to choose the best and most fitting words for the conveyance to man of the Divine revelation. In such a volume thought can only be expressed in words, and unless these have Divine authority there is no sufficient guarantee against error. It is to be hoped that an oft-exploded objection will not again be raised.

A Washington correspondent of the Record of this city tells of our good Quaker poet as a politician. Gen. Coggswell, who represents the Salem (Mass.) district in Congress, says that John G. Whittier, the Quaker poet, was, in his earlier years, one of the cleverest and most skillful politicians he ever knew, and that if he had turned his attention to politics instead of poetry he would have been a great success. But he loved a quiet life and lived with his maiden sisters among his chickens and his books. He took a great interest in both national and local affairs and was an omniverous newspaper reader, so that he was one of the best-posted men on all questions in the district. But he never made any show about it, and although reticent, shy and apparently impartial, he always did very effective work for his favorite candidates when elections came around. "I would rather have Mr. Whittier's support," said Gen. Coggswell, "than that of any other two men in the district. He understood human nature thoroughly and was a master of political science. He had no ambition himself, but knew how to reach and influence other men, and loved to do it. When I was a candidate for Congress the first time, I had a hard fight and only one majority. I think I owed my success to Mr. Whittier's support."

SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

ADDRESS OF HON. WASHINGTON HESING, POSTMASTER OF CHICAGO.

Chairman Catlin:—I have great pleasure in introducing our honored postmaster, Mr. Washington Hesing.

Mr. Hesing:—Belonging, as I do, to a profession, one of whose cardinal principles is always to follow copy, I trust I may be pardoned if I avail myself this evening of that privilege.

To secret societies, as an abstract proposition, I am opposed. Secret societies in politics will always have my hearty and unqualified disapprobation. When ten gentlemen meet together and establish a secret organization for the purpose of enjoying a quiet game of poker in some gentleman's parlor, they are justified in so doing. They constitute a community of interest for private and social purposes, and are not inimical to the public at large.

When ten cranks meet together and form a society for the curtailment of certain rights that are inalienable to every citizen of the United States, they are acting in direct contradiction to the spirit of our Constitution, and ought to be stopped by the government itself in their nefarious practices.

WHAT IS POLITICS?

Politics, as defined by Webster, is "the science of government; that part of ethics which has to do with the regulation of government of a nation or State, the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity, the defense of its existence and rights against foreign control or conquest, the augmentation of its strength and resources and the protection of its citizens in their rights, with the preservation and improvement of their morals, the management of a political party, the advancements of candidates to office."

Secret societies in politics have never been productive of any good, but have fostered not only the spirit of exclusiveness but also the spirit of hatred and anger, and have invariably appealed to the baser passions of men. It is the history of the world that whenever upon the body politic, that individuality has been lost sight of, that the true welfare of the nation has been disregarded, and that scheming and designing persons, actuated by motives of self-interest and personal aggrandizement, have led into political strifes under false pretenses a certain portion of the population, and finally, when their own objects and individual interests were accomplished, have invariably deserted those who, by their influence and their vote, helped them to attain their purpose, and have abandoned the very principle which first called them together.

SECRET ORGANIZATIONS HAVE FASTENED THEMSELVES

As a conspicuous example of the bad influence exercised by such organizations may be cited which was built up in Ireland on the foundation of Protestant ascendency and the complete denial of all civil and religious rights to those of other beliefs. This order to-day binds its members to loyalty to the sovereign of England only while she remains a Protestant. Should she exercise the right inherent in every individual to change her belief, members of this order would, if they dared, throw off all allegiance and rebel. For two hundred years the Orange order has flourished in Ireland, and it is largely responsible for the political conditions which prevail in that country. This secret order opposed the emancipation of Catholics in 1829, opposed the disestablishment of the Irish Protestant church in 1869, and is now bitterly opposed to self-government in Ireland, because it would sweep away the remaining privileges enjoyed by this arrogant order. So hurtful to good discipline and loyalty are the principles of Orangeism that the British government years ago issued stringent orders that no member of the army or navy should join the Orange order, under penalty of ignominious dismissal.

THE ORANGE ORDER,

Take an instance of secret society government. The city of Belfast, Ireland, is ruled by the fanatical order of Orangemen, and though Catholics form one-third of the population and pay one-third of the taxes, they are mercilessly boycotted, so much so that not five Catholics are employed by the municipal government. Dublin, on the other hand, where secret societies are tabooed, is controlled by Catholics, and fully one-half of the municipal employes are Protestants. There are other examples closer to hand.

In the adjoining Dominion of Canada thousands of Orangemen have settled. With their descendants they form a considerable portion of the population, and in the large cities they are the governing power.

The same intolerant spirit displayed in Ireland is displayed in Canadian cities, and Catholics are not permitted to hold office, though the government gives to all creeds the same rights and privileges. The origin and growth on this continent of secret political organizations is of some interest. In Canada there are settled with their descendants thousands of United Emp. Loyalists. These people were the Tories of our olution. They hold an evelasting hatred to the United States and its institutions, and they are mainly members of the Orange order.

Canada commercially is in a poor condition. Its inhabitants very largely have been forced to emigrate to this country in order to secure a livelihood. The Orangemen and the United Empire Loyalist in Canada is forever claiming that he, and he alone, is loyal to the country, and that all others are traitors.

The methods of secret political societies

BRING ABOUT MISGOVERNMENT.

The municipal administration throughout Canada, wherever these secret orders are in the ascendancy, is incompetent, corrupt and disgraceful. In the United States immigrants drawn from these classes come in contact with the old leaven of Know-nothingism. The three, being of a common origin, naturally blend, and we have the American Protective Association of to-day.

It is one of the strange psychological phenomena of this country that every now and then there should appear secret societies aiming to control and direct our political affairs. Like the blue glass craze of a few years ago, which intended to upset all physiological rules; like the roller skating craze of a later date, which seemed to have interested nearly every young man and young woman in the country; like the walking craze, which for a time seemed to be the all-absorbing topic in the minds of the entire American people, and which gave prominence to a Weston and an O'Leary; so do the appearance at regularly recurring intervals of secret societies in politics seem to have their run, seem to be for the time being an important factor in politics, at last begin to lose their force, until finally they disappear, and, in the language of the patient politician, one might say that "if so soon done for, then why begun for?"

Early in the 40's there arose the native American party, which, as the historian says, "was for a time being the arbiter in politics." This society had its influence, and for several years carried many elections and decided the contests in many States.

TEN YEARS LATER CAME THE KNOW-NOTHING

society, and a crusade of extraordinary severity was set on foot. It was not simply a crusade against religion, but it was a relentless war waged against a political enemy. How that secret order ended, what destruction it caused, what havoc it created in social circles and business relations, and what destruction it brought to the party which was its ally, history only too well recounts.

This society brutally and in cold blood shot down and killed inoffensive citizens, tore suckling babes from the breast of a loving mother, separated father and son, ransacked churches in Cincinnati, burned them in Louisville, and hanged priests in Philadelphia, amid the leering derision and fanatical scoff of a crazed multitude.

These are the cold facts of history and well known to every intelligent citizen. They are recited to show what secret societies are in politics.

During the war of secession there came into existence the

KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN CIRCLE,

a secret organization which determined not only upon the advancement of its members to political office, but which inscribed on its banner the watchword, "The Overthrow of the Republic."

The sober common sense of the American people met each of these recurrent spasms of bigotry and foolishness, and conquered. For years there has been peace, and the solidification and unification of the races that compose our population has gone on.

Unfortunately for the welfare of this great government, and for the peace of mind of its citizens, there has at this time arisen an organization, called the American Protective Association, which is so far as I know the only secret society in politics in this country, with the exception of what is known as the Continental League, an order composed of citizens regardless of religious toleration, and opposed to any invidious distinction being made against any one on account of his religious belief. The order, in fact, has been called into existence owing to the threatening attitude of the American Protective Association, justified, as it were, by the instinct of self-preservation.

This association, claiming to have two million members, is figuring prominently in our politics, and everywhere forming a sinister alliance with one of our great political parties. In some instances it is the dog that wags the tail of this great party, and in other instances it is the tail that wags the party dog. From three polluted sources its inspiration is drawn. First, the Orange order, which originated during the religious wars of Europe; second, the United Empire Loyalists or Tories, who were driven from the United States at the time of the Revolution, and third, the old leaven of Know-nothingism, still dormant in this country. It has the prime qualities of all three. It arrogates to itself all the loyalty of the country, all the honesty, all the public spirit, and in fact everything else worth having.

In other lands the type that goes to form such an organization is of a low order of intelligence. It is fanatical, it is law-breaking, and it is riotous. Across the line the type professes an undying hatred of the United States and its people, and is ready to fight every movement that tends toward continental union.

In these United States it reverses its politics and professes to be most loyal of the loyal. The Continental League simply declares in favor of absolute religious freedom, and it has been organized for the purpose of defeating anyone who is opposed to another in politics on account of his religion. While the one has been called into being by the other, I do not believe that either ought to exist. Remove the main cause, and the other will naturally fall to the ground.

I am opposed to both, and shall with great pleasure hail the day when all

SUCH SOCIETIES ARE BANISHED FROM OUR LAND.

Politics having been defined as "the preservation of the safety and the peace of the nation or State, and the protection of its citizens in their rights," it does seem to me that that which pertains to the public at large, that that which every citizen is so interested in, must be free from all secret society influence.

A society which is to work for the common good, which is to benefit mankind, which is to elevate the moral tone of the nation, which is to lead its citizens to higher aspirations, ought not to work in secret. The very fact that it is secret

MEANS UNHOLY MOTIVES.

Its workings shun the light of day. Its members are afraid to appear before their fellow-men and openly espouse their cause and vindicate their actions. How could any organization command respect and expect to work for the common good which starts out by ostracizing a member of the human family because that member worships God in a certain manner, or because he does not worship God at all? What possible justification can there be which binds a citizen not to employ a Catholic in any capacity, not to countenance the nomination or appointment of a Catholic to any office, and binds him at all times to place political positions and power only in the hands of Protestants.

Let me ask the gentleman who is here as the defender of such methods, by what divine right he can possibly justify such persecution? I care not what his belief may be; I care not whether he is a fetish worshiper, whether he worships stone gods, whether he is a disciple of Calvin, or Luther, or Wesley, or General Booth, Voltaire or Ingersoll, he must recognize one broad underlying principle, that after all is said and done, in this country we judge of our fellow-man by his worth as a citizen, by his merit as a man, and not by his religious belief.

The Constitution of the United States especially provides that the matter of religion shall in no way interfere with the privileges of citizenship. On this basis our Constitution rests, and it is the distinctive feature which makes this country different from the countries of Europe. Despite that, we find here a secret society which takes upon itself to say that members of a certain religious belief shall not exercise the privileges granted them by the Constitution. This society works in secret, and its ways are dark, because its members know that its INTENTIONS ARE NOT HONEST.

What would that secret society say if another society were founded which imposed upon its members the same identical oath, only changing the words Roman Catholic to the word Methodist or Presbyterian? That society would have my unalterable opposition and undying hatred, just as the A. P. A. has.

How can any secret society be conducted "for the best interests of the safety, the peace and prosperity of the nation, and the protection of its citizens in their rights?" In politics we all have an equal interest. We are here as members of one great political family. We are here to do our best, not only for the preservation of the state, but for its improvement and betterment. It is by means of politics, open and above board, by means of an honest and frank and fearless expression of public opinion, that the best interests of the community can be served, and that whatever is for the benefit of the state can be secured by a manly, straightforward and honest vote.

In this country, especially, there must be

NO SECRETS IN PUBLIC LIFE.

At each recurring campaign we demand that the candidate declare himself upon the vital questions interesting the people at that time. We demand of him a declaration of principles. He comes before the whole people asking their suffrage. He must declare himself in language unequivocal on those things which concern the welfare of the entire people. There is no secrecy about that; there must not be any. No secret society will ever be tolerated in this country that will attempt to make its influence felt in the management of our public affairs. The political life of each official must be an open book, which can be referred to at any moment by the humblest citizen. Every voter has a right to demand information as to what his representative is. No secret society attempting to control the individual conduct of a representative, or an official, or attempting to dictate political course, must ever, for one moment, be tolerated in this country. Church and state are forever separated. There can never be any division of the school fund. Our common school system, the bulwark of the Republic, is an impregnable institution, and no one has the power to move it. The Catholic church, and every other church for that matter, has the right to remain unmolested, and it must be protected, not only in its material interests but also in its religious manifestations, by the civil authorities.

No man's belief must ever be charged up against him; no discrimination must ever be made between the atheist and the religionist, between the agonistic and the deist, the Jew and the Gentile, the Catholic and the Protestant. The religious man's belief is his solace and consolation. The unbelief of the agnostic may be his solace and consolation. Neither should be disturbed. Each has a right to think freely. Neither must be interfered with in the enjoyment of this right. Men drink in their religious belief with their mother's milk. It is impressed upon their minds by the stern hand of a loving father, and they will hold fast to it to the day of their death, as men hold to a prize of great worth.

At all times will the conscientious man defend his belief, but at no time will he ever question the right of a brother member of the human family to hold a different faith. Religious belief is private property. It is the right of the conscience, and its enjoyment has been won by centuries of struggle. It is too late to retrace our steps. In this country no man must be molested in his religious belief, and in defending his right from proscription or persecution of his belief he may call upon any man for assistance. All men are equal before God. All are equal in the eyes of the law. All have the same standing before men, and in our body politic must be upon an equal footing.

NO SECRET SOCIETY SHOULD BE TOLERATED.

In politics they always have a religious tendency, and they interfere with the general principle of separation of church and state. Their influence is baneful, their tendency wrong, their teachings hurtful and their existence a menace to society, a detriment to the state, and a hindrance to the progress of humanity.

Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has again vindicated his claim to be considered the most clear-headed and far-seeing of the labor leaders of the country. In general the attitude of this brotherhood has been such as to inspire confidence and respect. This is certainly true of its course in connection with the recent absurd boycott. In answer to Debs' complaint that engineers have been ordered to work with "scab firemen, Mr. Arthur says that the members of his brotherhood have been advised to "attend strictly to their own business as engineers and to run their engines without regard to the men employed by the companies as firemen." There is nothing of the "sympathetic strike" in this and of course Debs & Co. will be dissatisfied. But we do not suppose that Chief Arthur is especially anxious to win Debs' favor.—New York Tribune.

Reform News.

SOUTHWESTERN OREGON A GOOD FIELD.

LABORS AND EXPERIENCES BY BOAT, TRAIN, STAGE AND AFOOT.

Marshfield, Ore., July 30, 1894.

Editor Cynosure:—Since my last letter I have spoken four times at Eckley, to fair congregations considering the scattered condition of the community. The people gave the very best of attention as we discussed the evils of the lodge, intemperance and infidelity, holding up Jesus as the only remedy for sin. I left Bro. Haines on Monday, feeling that our rugged trip over mountains and through canons had been amply rewarded by the kindness of these friends. I hope that good will result from this visit.

On Monday, the 23d, piloted by the mail carrier (Mr. Liberty Haines), I made my way back to Myrtle Point, arriving at 4 o'clock in the evening. Finding that I could not get a train to Marshfield before Wendesday morning, I secured the M. E. Church South again for an appointment Tuesday night.

In the afternoon Rev. C. H. Curtis and another gentleman came in and billed the town for a Y. P. S. C. E. lecture at the Presbyterian church. He being a vice-president of the State association, and the other gentleman from California, our friends feared that we might not have a hearing. I confess myself that it looked exceedingly doubtful; but when the time arrived our house was comfortably filled, and we had an excellent service.

I was entertained most kindly by the German Baptist people here, principally by Elder Bonewitz. I shall not forget their great kindness to me and shall pray the blessing of God upon them.

I find among other things at Myrtle Point, that the M. E. pastor and the saloon-keeper belong to the same order (Freemasons). I wonder if the Rev. gentleman in recognizing this brother Mason, sings: "Blest be the tie that binds." If the subject of intemperance should ever come up in that lodge for discussion, the minister could hardly present the views of Methodism without being considered Masonically "sectarian." A minister who, for influence or shekels, will go into such a combination is unworthy the name. I noticed that another saloon-keeper wore the three links, and spoke of "my order." Passing by where he and others were talking, I heard him say: "I have no use for any man who goes against my order." Doubtless the remark referred to me. I am very thankful that Odd-fellow and Masonic saloon-keepers have no use for me.

One of the awful things in the way of annhilation of the saloon is that so many ministers vote the same ticket with the saloon-keepers.

"Two men went up to the polls to vote;
The one was a preacher, the other a bloat.
The one carried under his arm the Word of his God,
The other a license to sell 'forty rod.'
But the angel above who recorded each name,
Saw that their tickets read precisely the same."

I pity the moral blindness of any Christian or Christian minister who cannot see any harm in these associations. Ministers, as a rule, would leave the church if she received or retained saloon-keepers, but they will associate with them in the Masonic and Odd-fellows' lodges. Oh, shame!

I came to Marshfield on the 25th, where I am at present writing. While dining yesterday at the Blanco House, I was somewhat amused by the conversation of two business men eating at the same table. Their conversation, when I went in, was on a very interesting subject to me, that of secret societies. One said: "I am a member of several lodges, but most of secret societies are similar to one we had at college, where I attended. In the initiation, among other things, we sought to frighten the candidate nearly to death. When we had him to the the highest pitch of excitement, some one would slap him across the back of the neck with a wet towel. One man fainted, and I tell you we had three physicians in that hall in less than no time. It took them an hour to restore him to consciousness. I think most secret orders have much the same element of nonsense and abuse."

The other gentleman related his experience by saying that he had united with one lodge years ago, and being of a jovial disposition, he practiced a joke on the lodge, for which they suspended him for three months, and he never went back since. That ended his experience with secret societies. It is generally accepted that secret societies are responsible for the present disturbed condition of the country. And yet, hundreds in this country are in favor of the strike and strikers. After as thorough an arraignment of the whole business as I am capable, the saloon men and secretists said next morning: "He's even opposed to the strike and strikers." Secret societies now seem ready to so far overdo things as to create so strong a sentiment against them that the whole brood will be prohibited by law.

I am now stopping with the family of Elder Wm. Stewart, on whose charge I am billed to speak four times. Then, the Lord willing, I will go home awhile.

PHILOMATH, Aug. 3.—Since writing last, I spoke at the Mosher Chapel, on the Coos River, to a good audience, who gave the very best attention, and contributed more than the average congregation toward my expenses. I received five Cynosure subscriptions, and distributed quite a number of tracts. One lady of a very fashionable church was heard to say: "If I had $10 I would give it freely to help that work."

Here the family of Elder Stewart showed me no little kindness, as did also Capt. Rogers of the steamer "Coos River." I found here a graduate of Yale and Oberlin Colleges, an A. B. and A. M., pegging away on a ranch, mowing hay with an ox team. He is a jolly old man, opposed to all secret orders. Both his Quaker proclivities and Oberlin training, doubtless, have something to do with his feelings on the subject of secret societies.

On Saturday, the 28th, I boarded the steamer "Coos River," tied my yawl to the steamer and ran down to Marshfield. There I met George Ross with a sail-boat, who sailed with me across the bay and up Catching slough, where I spoke at Unity church Saturday night, and next morning and afternoon to crowded houses.

The theme Saturday night was Intemperance. Not more than two miles away more than a score of men were dragging for a man who was drowned while drunk. Everybody said: "He was a nice man but for strong drink." So this is one of Coos county's contributions to the seventy-five thousand slain annually by rum.

Marshfield has about two thousand people, and fourteen saloons. Take out this nuisance, and it is one of the very best little towns on the coast. I am asked many times over: "What would the saloon men do if the saloons and the whole business was closed up." I answer: "I could pay every man engaged in the traffic, and every person depending on them for a support, $2 per day, and have many left if the saloons were shut up." A San Francisco musician argued for saloons, because it made a demand for his music. I asked him whether lewd women could not use the same argument, and he had to admit it.

On Sabbath morning I spoke to a crowded house on Infidelity. After a "basket dinner" I spoke again on Secret Societies. One good old sister came before the services and whispered to me to give it to them till time to milk the cows in the evening, but when I had spoken an hour and thirty minutes, I thought it enough.

This proved to be one of the most appreciative congregations I ever met. Two men could not stand the pressure to the close. One was afraid his wife would learn too much about what foolishness he went through when he was initiated. He went out and finally induced her to follow. I distributed a number of tracts, and secured seven subscriptions for the paper.

Bro. Ross piloted me to Marsfield, where I expected to speak in the Baptist church at night. When we got there it was not lighted, so we went to hear the Swedish minister. Of course we understood nothing he said. I stopped at the Blanco Hotel, where, Sabbath as it was, I could hear them in the next room throwing dice and clanking their glasses in the saloon. If Oregon has no power to stop such business she is imbecile, indeed. It is high time to give the women a chance at running the government. I am sure they cannot make it worse than it is in many places. When I think that in one month alone, in your city of Chicago, seventy-five thousand men took out naturalization papers, and an interpreter had to tell them the difference between a shovel and a ballot, it makes every ounce of my native-born blood boil to think that our intelligent Christian women of America must be denied the right of franchise. They are the ones to offset this ignorant foriegn vote.

On the 30th I ran up to Myrtle Point on the train, where I laid over till five next morning. I boarded the stage for Roseburg, seventy miles away, arriving there at seven P M

On the 1st, at 7 A. M, I took the Southern Pacific train for home. On the way I came the nearest having to use physical suasion on an Odd-fellow of any time since I started in the reform work. During a very heated discussion, in which I whipped out the constitutions and by-laws of three subordinate lodges, and flatly contradicted a statement he had made, he saw that he was "tied up" and was becoming the butt of ridicule by the passengers, and so concluded that a change of tactics was necessary. He jumped up and swayed himself, saying: "You might as well call me a liar." I was ready for that turn of affairs and answered him: "Call it what you please, sir; its your own statement if you are an Odd-fellow." He concluded that he was beaten worse than ever.

I arrived home at two and found all well. This week I shall be busy making out the program and other arrangements for our coming convention. Next week if the Lord wills I shall start down the valley on a tour of several weeks.

P. B. WILLIAMS.

STILL AT WORK IN NEW ORLEANS.

RACE HATRED READY TO SHED BLOOD.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 8, 1894.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have visited Violets, Ship Island Canal, Kenner, St. James and Pass Christian, Miss., and distributed tracts, preached and lectured. Some kind friend sent me about 1,500 or 2,000 tracts. I have been very cordially received and entertained at each place, and found an open door. Strange to say, people in the interior parishes, where educational advantages are so limited, receive and accept a true Gospel much more cheerfully than those in this great city with all of its advantages.

There is much religious excitement in and around St. Gabriel and other places near Baton Rouge on account of the barbarous treatment of Rev. W. A. Cuddy, a Northern evangelist, whose only crime was that he preached in Negro churches against race prejudices and taught the equality of man from a godly and Bible standpoint.

I have succeeded in convincing a very prominent and intelligent secret lodge lady against the lodge iniquity. She said to me yesterday: "Bro. Davidson, thank God I am thoroughly convinced, and I am so glad my eyes have been opened. The lodge is ruining our people. Oh, pray that I may be encouraged to oppose them." I promised to ask you to send her some tracts.

The excitement along the Gulf Coast has quieted down. Many prominent whites condemn the lynching of the twelve-year-old boy in Biloxi. But what does that amount to as long as the perpetrators of such outrages are permitted to go free and unpunished. The grand jury has indicted quite a number of our city councilmen and the civil engineer. How can we expect a better condition of affairs when our courts and every branch of civil government is infested with oathbound secret societies.

We are feeling with some severity the effects of the financial stringency. There have been a few speculative walking delegates here agitating the labor unions to strike; but the laboring masses here, having no grievances with their employers, have refused to obey the mandate. In conversation with a prominent business man and labor leader here a few days ago, speaking of the Birmingham massacre of Negroes, to my surprise he approved the bloody affair and frankly confessed that he would lead a rioting mob under the same circumstances, if he thought it would win, any day in the week. Where are we, and what are we coming to! O God, deliver us from bloodthirsty men! Yours in the work,

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

A year's numbers of the Cynosure would make six good-sized volumes of valuable reform literature, containing 550 pages each.

CORRESPONDENCE.

STRIKES RIGHT AND PROFITABLE.

STEAMBURGH, N. Y.

In those days when law and order is the rule, and strife and anarchy the exception, strikes are not only unnecessary, but a disgrace and an insult to a civilized community. Treason and rebellion can be met blow for blow, but strikes, like the work of an assassin, is a blow in the dark.

When thousands of men, by their own voluntary acts, are thrown out of employment, leaving their helpless wives and children to suffer, it leaves a stain, not only on their own name, but upon the nation, which, as citizens, they have sworn to protect and honor.

Let those men remember that true courage does not consist in open rebellion, but in honoring their country by humble obedience to its laws.

MRS V. A. STONE.

THE (ROMAN) "CHURCH MILITANT."

LEBANON SPRINGS, N. Y.

On the first page of the Cynosure of July 26 there appeared a brief note, suggested by comments in the Northwestern Christian Advocate, on the finding of "sixty stand of arms in the basement of a Roman Catholic church in Kensington, near Pullman." If we were to inspect other "basements," or other sly places in churches, or other buildings of the Roman church, they would probably make discoveries quite as surprising and perhaps even more suggestive. Look at the following:

Something more than a third of a acentury ago there was a grand rally of the Massachusetts military in Boston. Every regiment of every department of the State military service was represented. All were reviewed by the governor. This became the occasion for an episode, "not down in the bills," but which proved evidently more suggestive than its author intended, or even dreamed of. Catholic military companies, batallions, etc., all officered, armed, drilled, and all "in apple-pie order" for effective service, turned out and "started in" for review by the governor. But he wouldn't review them. He gave them to understand that as they were not State soldiery, he could have nothing to do with them.

That was a poser! The Catholic press belched forth invective like red-hot thunderbolts, denouncing the governor and all his sympathizers, for such narrow, bigoted discrimination against, as it claimed a body of genuine military patriots. The Protestant press at once raised the question, "Why all this military organization, equipment and drill among a sect, and distinct from the State militia? What do you mean by it?"

That question did the business. Not a breath of criticism of that action by the governor has since soiled the pages of the Romish press. And why? Simply because they don't want the American public to know "why."

That Romish military turnout revealed the fact that the Roman Catholic element in our midst was and is quietly, stealthily organizing, arming and drilling—for what? Every one aware of the fact and of the circumstances must know it is for mischief. Although for a time such questions were pressed on every hand, both privately and in public, the Catholic press has not yet vouchsafed an answer thereto.

In the light of such facts, the late "find" in Kensington ceases to be a mystery. It makes far more than plausible the surmise that the Roman church is actually plotting mischief; that her people who in this land are mostly of foreign birth, are literally preparing to assail, and if possible, overthrow the government here which gives them hospitality and protection, with entire freedom of thought, of speech and of worship; and, when naturalized, perfect equality with all native-born American citizens.

In reply to the question "For what?" etc., there can, therfore, be but one answer. That display in Boston and such "finds" as that in Kensington all tell but one and the same story. They assure us that we, the American people, are fostering a venomous serpent in the very bosom of our body politic, an enemy (the Roman hierarchy) who is plotting, planning and actually arranging for the subjugation of our country to the most corrupt and hateful despotism that ever cursed the world.

The fact that already the government of these United States is practically in the hands of the papacy, that the great cities all over the Union—New York, Boston, Chicago, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New Orleans, St. Louis, and others, are (from ninety to one hundred per cent) in their hands (although in numbers, the Catholics are only about one-eighth of our population), all shows not only the stealthy persistence with which this object is being pushed, but the turnout of those armed cohorts in Boston tells the story of the treasonable, bloody designs the method of the enemy, which the late discovery in Kensington, small though it is, only too emphatically endorses and confirms.

C. A. S. Temple.

JOSEPH MACKEY.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—In your issue of July 19th appears an item relating to Joseph Mackey, of New York City, which we presume is going the rounds of the press, as a friend informed us he had read the same in a German paper.

In this item Mr. Mackey is made the publisher of the Commercial Gazette. He was editor and proprietor of the United States Economist, He is spoken of as founder of the Free Methodist. He published that paper one year, early in the '70s, long after it was founded. The particularly interesting part of the item is that "having a large number of workmen he had printed for his individual use a complete copy of the Bible, and wherever there was a general promise, made it particular by inserting his own name before it," etc.

During nearly eight years of the most successful part of Mr. Mackey's business career, and up to the time of his failure in 1877, I was employed as clerk and reporter in his office, yet I never heard of the Bible which is made the subject of this item. We think Mr. Mackey would not have gone to the expense of getting out such a work. Usually he expended his money in a more practical way.

We believe Mr. Mackey marked his own Bible in the way indicated, and perhaps this wonderful relation grew out of that fact, if so, we have here an interesting comment upon the proverb, "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth," when the fuel is suppled by the religious newspaper man. Respectfully, (Rev.) W. B. Rose.

Note.—The statement of Mr. Mackey's Bible was taken from an exchange. It has not much savor of probability. In 1870 or '71 Bro. Mackey made a brief call at the Cynosure office; as we remember Bro. J. M. Y. Smith was with him. He was introduced as having begun the publication of the Free Methodist, which then, in new dress and every appearance of freshness, began to come in exchange. Whether new or old, let us be thankful that he undertook the publication, and that the newspaper man saves so good a deed from oblivion.

BADGE YOURSELF.

Salinas, Cal.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—"The Christian Conservator replies to the proposal that we have a badge for Christians with a keen sarcasm. The suggestion deserves it. . . . . The badge is one of the frailties of the Christian Endeavor movement." So reads a Cynosure editorial. In the first place, it seems to me that the paper referred to put up a straw man to see how well it could knock the stuffing out of it. Is any such movement really contemplated outside the sanctum of the Christian Conservator?

As a matter of fact, no rational being will contend that there is any harm, per se, in members of societies, Christian or secular, wearing badges if they choose. And as to pernicious influence, who ever heard of a C. E. badge breeding a desire for initiation into secret orders? On the other hand, it undoubtedly attracts criticism to the wearer's faults, and makes him more on guard especially among strangers; it stimulates enthusiasm among Endeavorers, and frequently serves as a guide to an agreeable companion while traveling. As a rule, only earnest workers wear it; for one of the first signs of decaying spirituality appears when a Christian Endeavorer put his badge out of sight. However incon sistent a Christian may be, he does not desire public notice of the failing.

As well give up all insurance because characteristic of some lodges, or let the women leave off wearing aprons lest their example induce their sons and husbands to join the Masonic fraternity. And how unfortunate indeed that the beloved apostle was not permitted to enjoy the sage reflections of the editor of the Christian Conservator et al , when he penned Rev. 21: 17, for surely he "that overcometh" would be recognized without the "white stone" wherein is written a new name! Pardon me if this sounds irreverent; such a strain of reasoning did not originate with me.

The reform press have too important principles at stake to spend their time in stooping to cast slurs on millions of consecrated youth in this land. The fight is not against the badge but against that for which it too often stands. Personally, I am proud to wear the C E. emblem and to assert the principles it repsesents both at home and abroad. Yours truly, Pro Christo et Ecclesiae, Silas W. Mack

PITH AND POINT.

FOR TWENTY YEARS AGAINST THE LODGES.

I am an out and out anti-secret man, and in my weak way have been fighting secret lodges for the last twenty years single-handed and alone. It is immaterial to me if I do not get any reward here or hereafter, I will fight it on general principles. Jesus Christ hated that kind of thing and I hate it also. There is a man in this vicinity who professes to be a Christian and says he has come out from them (the Masons), but who, in the secret of his heart, upholds them and says God permitted them to be, for they do a work the churches fail to, namely, they (the Masons) take care of the widows and orphans. I asked him how about the widows and orphans outside of Masonry. "Oh," he said, "they did not agree to take care of them;" thereby showing their selfishness. It is my candid opinion that this secret order business ought to be handled without gloves, and by the grace of God I propose to do so, no matter if the "heavens fall." I am reading some of the back numbers of the Cynosure and find much to interest me. May God bless the N. C. A. and make it a power for good, and to the defeating of the powers of darkness.—C. E. March, Santa Cruz, Cal.

THEY DON'T WANT ANY MORE OF THAT OATH.

The books and tracts reached me safely and in due time. Language fails to express the gratitude I felt for them. I met a small crowd at Mt. Vernon on the 8th of July and lectured against secret societies, showing Masonry's false claims to antiquity, to benevolence, and its religion without any Christ; also the profanity of its oaths. I generally ask permission to modify the closing sentence of the obligations. They say, "I pray God to keep me steadfast and in due performance of this my solemn oath or obligation of," etc. I give it thus, "I am confident the devil will use his utmost power to keep me steadfast and in due performance of this my God-dishonoring and Christ-rejecting obligation of," etc. The crowd was small on account of rain. Some said that they had thought they would never be satisfied until they had joined the Masons, but if that was the kind of obligations Masons take, they never would be a Mason. —S. F. Proctor, Ellsworth, Ark.

A dear brother who has long and earnestly maintained the principles of our cause in Millville, Aylsford, Nova Scotia, writes:

"My dear wife and I are in feeble health and suffering severe pain; but we are nearing the end of our pilgrimage. "'Twill all be over soon," praise the Lord. With best wishes for the work and workers of the N. C. A., I am as ever, sincerely yours, in hope of eternal life.—R. S. Morton."

THE HARVEST IS GREAT AND THE LABORERS ARE FEW.

In a private note Bro. Williams of Oregon writes:

"I think I did the best month's work in July I ever did. I need a little rest but can't find time. People press me to come again. Oh, what an opening here, if we had men to put in the field!"

FROM LODGE LAMP LETTERS.

The enclosed list was made out with the assistance of Mrs. George Clark. We do not like the name Lodge Lamp. Call it Truth.—Rev. H. H. Hinman.

FROM A CHICAGO PASTOR.

I am in favor of your Lodge Lamp. I will subscribe for 25 copies. I very much appreciate the stand that the National Christian Association has taken.—Rev Ewen A. Sandahl.

FROM A NEW ENGLANDER.

If I had the money I once had, before Masonic conspirators made my business a failure, I would order a thousand Lodge Lamps gladly and willingly.—H. E. Hunter.

FOUR SCORE AND TEN.

I will be 90 years old next January if I live. I am not able to go around and get subscribers, but you may send 20 copies direct to me each month —N. P. Eddy.

NEBRASKA NEEDS TEN THOUSAND

A better thing could not be done. I have read the sample copy sent with more satisfaction than I have words to express. I wish it may be given a wide circulation here in Nebraska, now more filled up with secret orders than ever before.—Wm. C. Bissell.

SUBSCRIBES FOR 100 COPIES.

I hasten to reply in order to help your Lamp to enlighten the Lodge. May the Lord save this land of the Pilgrims from the power of hell. I can but think he will.—Rev. Samuel F. Porter.

FROM A KANSAS REFORMER.

I hope this Lodge Lamp will succeed, for many thousands will take it (because of its small cost) who will not take the Cynosure.—S. C. Hart.

The following named subscribers are a strong endorsement of the Lodge Lamp, as well as an earnest of success in the effort of the N. C. A. to regularly reach more homes than it has been able to reach heretofore. The plan is to make the August, and perhaps the September, number valuable as tracts upon the Secret Trades Unions. Following numbers will be devoted to other important phases of the lodge question. We need to devote one or two papers to the secret insurance lodges. It is not intended to make a newspaper of the Lodge Lamp, but a periodical which can be used as a tract. Shall we receive your help? Will you not secure a club of twenty or more among your neighbors? Read the following list of subscribers, and then let us enroll your name among them:

C A Blanchard, J M Hitchcock, W B Stoddard, Miss Maud Whipple, Prof E Whipple, Rice R Whittier, H H Hinman, Elias Wallick, Josiah Shaw, W C M Smith, H E Hunter, Daniel Koup, R Ingram, Chas Kennicott, O C M Bates, R Smith, E A Cook, Mrs A E H Doyon, Prof D A Straw, Rev I A Sommer, W Huesemann, Mrs W H Fischer, Dr I N Brown, W Post, J Griffin, Prof H F Kletzing, Rev W O Dinius, J McFarland, W Kiteley, O C Blanchard, Prof C G F Miller, Rev S F Porter, J A Conant, B T Pettengill, R L Park, Rev H J Becker, Prof H A Fischer, Mrs E Hinsdale, J B Barnes, Rufus Park, D Molyneux, W R Morley, O M Carnahan, J C Young, Mrs M M Shaw, R Guun, Mrs J R Johnson, J Grove, L Woodruff, Mrs E M Livesay, W O Percival, A Gummer, E Sutton, Miss S E Logan, Rev E F W Stellhorn, S C Hart, M A Gault, E H Candee, S A Casey, T Hodge, W K Keeler, S J White, S Grover, Mrs W H Whittemore, Mrs A C Hand, W C Bissell, D H Harrington, H Curtis, N P Eddy, E Brakeman, N R Corning, J Dorcas, H E Hunter, Rev J Stuckey, Rev H A Day, C A Millan, F M Salesbury, W P King, A J Loudenbeck, Rev C W Pritchard, Rev E S Ternberg, Rev S A Sandahl, Rev P B Williams, W S Butler, Mrs E B Clark, Rev O T Lee, Rev J Forbes, C A Carlsted, A Muller Jr, W McClelland, J P Phelps, S F Proctor, Lydia B Oliphant, Rev A W Parry, James Ferguson, Mrs M W Bingham.

OBITUARY.

Among the faithful reformers recently called up higher, is our highly esteemed brother in Christ, Rev. Burnthorn Musgrave, of Nova Scotia.

He will be greatly missed from the community in which he resided. Although not rich in this world's goods, yet his heart and hands were ever ready to sympathize with the afflicted, and to relieve the needy. Like Job, "The cause which he knew not, he searched out." He was untiring in his efforts to benefit both the body and soul of those in need.

From his youth, he has been opposed to Freemasonry, etc., and for the past few years he has been a reader of the Cynosure, and has both in public and from house to house been faithful in exposing the evils of the secret lodge system. Being in the 72d year of his age, his triumphant spirit, on the 30th of July, 1894, left the scenes of earth, to enter into the "saints' everlasting rest." Less than two years ago his beloved wife preceded him to the celestial country. "The memory of the just is blessed."

To his bereaved children we tender our Christian sympathy, praying that their father's God may in truth be their God: so shall they find comfort in their sore bereavement, and enjoy the blessed prospect of a glorious meeting by and by, with loved ones gone before, in that blissful home where there is no sin, sorrow, nor death.

We rejoice to know that, while God is calling his faithful aged soldiers home, he is raising up recruits to carry on the war against the kingdom of anti-Christ, in the assurance of certain victory and everlasting triumph as the final result. Praise the Lord! R. S. M.

THIS AND THAT.

You can sometimes bring a baby up on the bottle, but you'll always bring a man down with it.

The dryest place in the world is that part of Egypt between the two lower falls of the Nile. Rain has never been known to fall there, and the inhabitants do not believe travelers when told that water can fall from the sky.

The Tamarack Mining Company's No. 3 shaft, at Houghton, Mich., reached the Calumet and Heckla conglomerate vein at a depth of over 4,200 feet, the deepest point sunk by any mine in the world. The extent and richness of the vein will be known in a few days. Indications now are that it will be very rich.

The great labor union chief was leaning back in his chair smoking a cigar when one of his subordinates rushed in. "Sire," exclaimed the subordinate, "the Amalgamated Window Washers have discovered a grievance!" "Then tie up a railroad at once," returned the great chief, nonchalantly.—Chicago Post.

The hottest place on earth is the vicinity of Massowah. When the northwest wind blows from the desert the thermometer has been known to go to 160. The men of the Italian garrison there can sleep only by the assistance of natives employed to go to and fro all night and sprinkle the bodies of the sufferers with water.

A few nights ago at Uniontown, Pa., a bomb was exploded under the house of a non-union workman named Dunbar. The building was blown to pieces. The family escaped without injury. Bombs were discovered under other houses of non-union men. Many citizens remained on the streets all night, fearing to go into their homes.

An explosion of a natural gas well near Coffeyville, Kan., Tuesday night, created excitement and terror for miles around. Huge rocks were hurled high in the air, and, descending, crushed into the cottages in the neighborhood. No one was injured. For thirty acres around the well the earth was torn up as by a volcano.

I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and it has cured me of sour stomach, and I feel well and weigh more than ever before. Charlotte Gibson, Landes, Ill.

SEVERE EXPOSURE

Often results in colds, fevers, rheumatism, neuralgia and kindred derangements. We do not "catch cold" if we are in good condition. If the liver is active, and the system in consequence doing its duty, we live in full health and enjoy life "rain or shine." To break up a cold there's nothing so valuable as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They keep the whole system regulated in a perfectly natural way. If we do not feel happy, if we worry and grumble, if we are morbid, if the days seem dreary and long, if the weather is bad, if things go awry, it is the liver which is at fault. It is generally "torpid." A common sense way is to take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. We generally eat too much, take insufficient exercise, by means of which our tissue-changes become indolent and incomplete. Be comfortable—you are comfortable when well. You'll be well when you have taken "Pleasant Pellets."

No Constipation follows their use. Put up sealed in glass—always fresh and reliable.

LODGE LAMP

a monthly of choice articles on the SECRET : SOCIETY : SYSTEM, which the National Christian Association proposes to publish if the demand fo such a paper is such as to warrant its issue.

Annual subscription 20 cents.

Clubs of 20 for only $2.00.

Send in your pledge to take 30.

☞Money to be sent when you are notified that the plan is successful.☜

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits.

FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.

OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18TH, 1894.

Entrance Examinations September 17th, at 2 P. M.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer. Ennis, Texas.

PROPHECY:

A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

New England Department.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

Eastern Department.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

Northern Department.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

Pacific Department.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

College Agent, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison Street, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

President—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

Vice President—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

Gen'l Sec'y and Treasurer—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Rec. Secretary—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

Directors—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

New England.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

Iowa.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

Kansas.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

Nebraska.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

Maine.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

Minnesota.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

New Hampshire.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

New York.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

Ohio.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

Oregon.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D., Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 16, 1894.

Fresh nibbed pens in our paper this week give us an excellent and intelligent discussion of the boycott, and some account of missionary life in a country on which the world now turns an eager eye. Note Bro. Wilcox's proposition. Should not our enthusiasm for the Gospel proclamation in China be greatly increased when a little self-denial at home will provide means for doing so much for the Lord in the dark lands. Rev. J. M. Foster's theme is one to which his taste is well adapted. The Postmaster of Chicago had once and again spoken before the Sunset Club, but he never spoke more effectively than when he denounced secret political organizations. Our letters from lecturers and others promise to fill the most attractive pages of the Cynosure. Young and old readers will find the Home story teaching a lesson worth heeding. Anti-masons, write for your paper, and pray for it.

Rev. Mr. Carwardine and the Pullman Strike.—The Cynosure has two or three times mentioned the name of Rev. Wm. H. Carwardine, pastor of the Pullman M. E. church, as having spoken publicly in favor of the strike. It gives us pleasure to correct a statement based on frequent notices in the daily press, of which we had corroborative evidence. In a private note Bro. Carwardine writes: "Please understand my position. I do not endorse the strike; was sorry the men went out. Neither do I endorse the boycott. It was a most foolish thing to do. But back of all that, there were serious wrongs that ought never to have existed. No one can understand the hollow pretenses of this Pullman Company until they carefully study it on its own ground. I want to be just. I simply have stood for justice in the name of our blessed Christ. If we ministers ever expect to win over the workingmen, we must look carefully into their grievances. We need not endorse all their actions, but we can appeal for justice to those who have it in their power to do well by them." In this position Bro. Carwardine is invincibly right. We regret that the report of his speeches in the meetings in labor unions misrepresented him; and very much doubt whether his views would be generally acceptable in such gatherings, especially if put in emphatic terms.

CONGRESS CHARTERING LODGES.

The reference to Congressional action giving a charter to the Knights of Pythias, made in these columns two weeks ago, has been verified. Through the good offices of Rev. W. B. Stoddard we have here a copy of the official action taken by Senate and House and approved by the President:

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE SUPREME LODGE OF THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That George B Shaw, of the city of Eau Claire, State of Wisconsin; William W Blackwell, of the city of Henderson, State of Kentucky; Walter B. Richie, of the city of Lima, State of Ohio; Robert L. C. White, of the city of Nashville, State of Tennessee; Philip T. Colgrove, of the city of Hastings, State of Michigan; and Tracy R Bangs, of the city of Grand Forks, State of North Dakota, officers and members of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, and their successors, be, and they are hereby, incorporated and made a body politic and corporate in the District of Columbia by the name of "The Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias;" and by that name it may sue and be sued plead and be impleaded in any court of law or equity, and may have and use a common seal, and change the same at pleasure, and be entitled to use and exercise all the powers, rights, and privileges incidental to fraternal and benevolent corporations within the District of Columbia.

Sec. 2. That the said corporation shall have the power to take and hold real and personal estate, not exceeding in value one hundred thousand dollars, which shall not be divided among the members of the corporation, but shall descend to their successors for the promotion of the fraternal and benevolent purposes of said corporation.

Sec. 3. That all claims, accounts, debts, things in action, or other matters of business of whatever nature now existing for or against the present Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, mentioned in section one of this Act, shall survive and succeed to and against the body corporate and politic hereby created: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall be construed to extend the operation of any law which provides for the extinguishing of claims or contracts by limitations of time

Sec. 4. That said corporation shall have a constitution, and shall have power to amend the same at pleasure: Provided, That such constitution or amendments thereof do not conflict with the laws of the United States or of any State.

Sec. 5. That said corporation shall not engage in any business for gain; the purposes of said corporation being fraternal and benevolent.

Sec. 6. That Congress may at any time amend, alter, or repeal this Act.

Approved, June 29, 1894.

This is said, by the organs of the lodge interested to be the first case in the history of the country where a secret order has been incorporated by Congress. We are not prepared to deny the statement.

Gen. J. W. Phelps, whose activity against the lodges was invaluable during the early days of the reform, says in his book, "Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern," p. 137, that "Mr. Bower, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, introduced two bills, on the 27th of March, 1844, for chartering Grand Lodges. Bill No. 264 was for the Odd-fellows, and bill No. 265 for the Freemasons. Both bills were objected to and voted to ile on the table by the decisive vote of 133 to 29." There was not a vote in favor of the measure from the States of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia, North Carolina, Louisiana, Tennessee, Michigan and Illinois; and only four in all New England.

Another attempt was made to get a charter for the Odd-fellows in 1851, writes Gen. Phelps, referring to the columns of the National Intelligencer of January 28th of that year. This measure also failed. The Know-nothing craze was already prevailing, and its tide washed against the walls of Congress, as we find in the masterful speech of Wm. H. Seward, denouncing all secret societies as un-American and disloyal to God.

In April, 1864, when the long strain of war had produced more or less demoralization among our legislators, Gen. Phelps says a Masonic Hall Association was formed in the District and was chartered by Congress. This was an ordinary corporation for building and managing a lodge hall. But a Masonic hall is a very harmless and inert affair if there is no lodge to meet in it. The charter, therefore, included the idea of lodge gatherings, and in so far recognized them.

This is the extent of our information as to Congressional action of this kind. No thorough investigation of this and like questions was ever made in the national records, and we must, therefore, accept the Knights of Pythias' boast that this "is the first instance wherein the U. S Congress has, by special act, incorporated a secret order."

The Knight of Columbus, O., boasts that this act has a far-reaching effect; that it recognizes: 1., The K of P. as a "patriotic order," and 2, that the Uniform (uniformed) rank, which is organized on the same basis as the regular army, is "an adjunct of that army." The ordinary observer will utterly fail to see wherein any such recognition appears. Only a lodge enthusiast would be able to read so much between the lines. On the contrary this charter can be repealed at any time; it recognizes the order only as "fraternal and benevolent;" provides that it must be subservient to law, and must make no regulations contrary to the Constitution. Here Congress stultified itself. The title of the order is not American, it is effete Orientalism. The whole conception of it is contrary to the spirit of our Constitution. Only legislators blinded and befooled by the hypocritical oaths of the lodge would have entertained such a resolution of approval. Congress is not elected for any such folly as "recognizing" secret orders at all. It is plainly going beyond its business in adopting such a measure.

But if any Congress is to do such work, let it let it be one such as we have now. One that assassinates the business of the country. One that stands for months with a hand behind its back for a bribe. One that betrays its trust; and, to give some little class or section a few millions from the national treasury, will prolong a bitter agony for the whole people, and provide for beggary and starvation for thousands.

The Knight also boasts that the K. of P. order is by this act put "in advance of all orders and organizations." Let it be so. The end of the lodge road is hell and death. Toward that end let all the un Christian lodges be hastened; but let their members escape to Him who only can save.

—Rev. S. H Swarts, the well-known and fearless M. E. pastor whose addresses on the platform of our conventions have always been eloquent and effective, is now located at Morris, on the Illinois river.

NEW METHODS AND NEW LODGES.

The chief of the American Railway Union declared in a speech at Brazil, Ind., July 30, that he would not engage in another strike, and would now turn his attention to politics. Since the strike failure the leaders of the labor unions are quite generally turning to the ballot. One lesson of the failure is, therefore, being improved. The Chicago unions are busy with schemes and trades for November, in which the name of Mayor Hopkins is seriously involved.

What, must be the first inquiry, will be the effect of this movement? Politics is already a witch's caldron. What will be the effect of throwing in the secret labor organizations? The A. P. A. anti-Romanist order, the Farmers' Alliance and the labor unions would be a powerful influence if their discordant elements could be allied. Secret societies in politics would, in such a case, with Sovereign's Knights of Labor filling the army, be a menace to American institutions which would arouse the most indifferent citizen. There can be no doubt that men without conscience, like Debs, but with his genius for organization and for intrigue, can find a field of infinite possibilities and of infinite mischief in politics.

Another new scheme of the A. R. U. is an insurance feature. The preliminary steps are taken, but how far they will get toward their end is questionable. The general officers find that their records are so kept that they cannot tell who belongs and who does not. Large numbers have left the order. It now claims 120,000 members, about forty per cent of whom only have paid their dues. But an insurance attachment would make another corps of salaried officials to take the workingman's money from his home.

While Debs is planning in the interior, away in California a new secret political order shoots up like a mushroom from a compost heap. The secret obligations, signs and passwords of this order are to promote the free and unlimited coinage of silver! The country is promised an outline of the principles on which this new order is founded. We are eager to see them. The invention of men has been taxed to the utmost to give reasons for the existing secret societies which their children will not laugh at. The man who can invent some "principles" which will justify a secret lodge for silver coining must be a genius. Counterfeiters have given the country all we want of that business.

From St. Louis we have word of a new secret union for railway men. The information, so far as it has any point, is to the effect that the A. R. U. is to be superseded on the the southwestern lines, where Martin Irons ruled with rigor a few years since.

But the most formidable movement, at least on paper, is the American Labor Union. It is an outgrowth of the Railway Union, and its organizers, of whom Debs is one, intend that it shall supersede all other secret labor societies, Knights of Labor, the American Federation, etc. Their statement is "That the so-called labor leaders are too numerous; that they are thriving on the hard-earned wages of the toiling masses;" and that the time has come when only one organization is needed for workingmen. Read the manifesto.

The American Labor Union believes in organization on the principle of every member being a leader and every member participating in the settlement of the wage workers. It believes that 200 or more labor leaders are a source of widespread dissatisfaction among organized workmen. The American Labor Union offers a remedy for these evils by coming into the labor world with one universal brotherhood of workmen.

Now if Mr. Debs will push this new organization he may yet be a benefactor of the race. The new society must thrive by war. It builds on the same foundation as the other orders, and must tear them down to get room. The Knights of Labor and the Federation must go down. Sovereign and Gompers must retire to the private life of their individual trades. Before this is done the workingmen of America will get tired of paying the piper, and will tie Mr. Debs and his antagonists to a pole where they can have their battle out like Kilkinney cats. Alas! that "fleas have other fleas to bite 'em." "Let the potsherds strive with the potsherds of the earth."

—The disagreement between the Buffalo, N. Y., lodges and the grand lodge of the Order of Railway Conductors of America has culminated in forty-eight suits brought in the supreme court to compel the order to pay $12,000 strike allowance to the men who went out in the Lehigh Valley strike of last year. This is the first time in this country that an action of this kind has been commenced.

—The New York Times published lately an interview with Col. Fred. D. Grant, elder son of Gen. U. S. Grant and ex-minister to Austria. In his remarks he is reported as saying: "No secret organization should be recognized by any law-maker, or by any man holding a public office, no matter whether it be a religious organization or otherwise." This is sound sense, and is a reminder of his father's vigorous condemnation of secret political societies. See Grant's Memoirs, vol. I., p. 213.

—Two circulars have just been sent out by Wheaton College: one giving the report of the examining committee invited to attend the examinations at the close of last term; the other, addressed to the students of the institution, requests of them a brief report of vacation work in the great harvest field of God. The examiners speak highly of the good scholarship and especially of the "pervasive Christian influence" of the college. The latter they regard as an excellent commendation of Wheaton. The fall term opens September 18th next. Pres. C. A. Blanchard will gladly answer all inquiries addressed him at Wheaton.

—A correspondent of the Lutheran Standard reports the laying of the corner-stone of a new building for the M. E. church South, in Baltimore. The ceremony was performed by Freemasons. The writer says very shrewdly: "The corner-stone was anointed with the corn of nourishment, the wine of refreshment, and the oil of joy. And this a Methodist corner-stone! Rome baptizes bells and anoints the dying, and Methodism pooh-poohs it and laughs at them; but now it looks as if Methodism were bringing up the rear of the papal procession by anointing corner-stones! And then the idea—the preposterous idea of anointing a Methodist corner-stone with wine! Certainly the veriest sharp-tongued dame who ever went daft on the temperance question will have to scrub said corner-stone until she cannot smell the odor of that wine, or even imagine she smells it."

—Bro. Williams has been rallying the good people of southwestern Oregon for reform in a good, earnest fashion. We hope in future to hear often from this field. The incident he mentioned last week, of the sliding mountain side, seems to have a counterpart in another locality. Dispatches from Portland tell of a sliding mountain on the Columbia river, one mile west of Cascade Locks. It made the longest slide on record when the recent floods subsided. The high water seemed to have held the mountain back, and when it receded the sudden removal of the pressure led to a spurt. The Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's engineer made a study of the moving mountain. He said: "The mountain contains 75,680,000 cubic yards of earth, and at the rate it is now moving—one-thirty-second of an inch a day—will require 4,160 years for its entire disappearance. This mammoth pile of dirt will not in the least affect navigation, for the slide is so gradual and the current so strong that the dirt will be carried down the river and deposited upon the lowlands. As a consequence what is now unproductive land, because of its sandy soil, will become productive, and the river proper will be narrower. The mountain is on a soapstone foundation, which is not level. This accounts for the movement."

"No longer will banks and tariff occupy the foremost place, and, sounding always with the chink of dollars and cents, give their tone to the policy of the country. Henceforth, protection to no man will be the true American system."—Charles Sumner.

"Fellow-citizens, you may, and probably do, think me fanatic; till you judge men and things on different principles I do not care much what you think me: I have outgrown that interesting anxiety; but I tell you this, if I see the commonwealth upside down I mean to keep my neck free enough from collars to say so."—Wendell Phillips.

If newspapers are not promptly paid for, they become accusing angels.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. M. A. Gault of Bloomington, Ind., is spending the present month at Petoskey, Mich., near Mackinaw.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard, Washington agent, arrived at Boston last Thursday to attend the Hebron camp-meeting. He is one of the speakers on the 15th. All is serene in the "Hub" city.

—The Lutheran Evangelist says that the new pastor of the General Council church at Goshen, Ind., is Rev. J. A. Leas, a recent graduate of the Lake View Lutheran theological seminary in this city. Bro. Leas took an active part in the Students' movement for the investigation of the secret orders, and was chosen treasurer of the Bureau of Correspondence.

—Rev. L. G. Abrahamson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Salem church on Portland avenue, Chicago, and Rev. P. J. Svaerd, D.D., president of the Augustana Synod, have been created members of the Royal Order of the North Star by King Oscar II. of Sweden. Both gentlemen are prominent leaders of the Swedish population of America, and have rendered most valuable services to their countrymen in their moral and material progress.

—The twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra A. Cook, so long and closely connected with the N. C. A. and the Cynosure, was observed last Tuesday evening at their home on Washington Boulevard in this city. The house was crowded with friends and well wishers from all parts of the city and from Wheaton. The special program was simple. President C. A. Blanchard very happily referred to the quarter century that has passed since the ceremony in the old Wheaton home, how the brother and sister had given their testimony for every righteous cause, and had borne patiently the trials and self-sacrifice such a testimony was sure to bring. Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, the Corresponding Secretary of the National W. C. T. U., also spoke very happily and eloquently of the large family of ten children God had given, and of the reform lying so near her heart, and in which Mrs. Cook is an active worker.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Missionaries in the Orient.—Congress against anarchy.—A sermon to deceived Coxeyites.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8, 1894.

Anxiety has been everywhere felt for the safety of American missionaries in China, Japan and Corea, owing to the war in those countries. Dr. J. W. Bachman was requested by the executive committee on foreign missions of the Southern Presbyterian church to see Secretary Gresham and urge upon him the necessity of taking some steps for the protection of missionaries. Secretary Gresham told him that the same protection would be given the missionaries as is extended to all citizens of the United States abroad, but further than that he could make no promises; that this government had no power to especially care for one class of its citizens more than another; that the interests of the United States were being amply looked after by our war ships, and should the missionaries at any port seek refuge on board any U. S. vessel, protection would be accorded them.

All of this might have been taken for granted. If our missionaries can get only the protection they ask for from our war ships they will not get much, as most of them are in the interior and would but put themselves in additional jeopardy by attempting to reach a port, without even the certainty of finding a U. S. vessel there should they succeed in reaching it. Other governments demand protection for their citizens acting as missionaries. Why should not ours?

The Senate this week, after devoting a small portion of two days to debate, passed a bill that in the opinion of many persons deals with a subject of quite as much importance to the future welfare of the United States as the tariff. This bill is for the further restriction of immigration and the absolute prohibition of the coming of anarchists. The bill passed by the Senate is a substitute for the House bill providing for the inspection of all immigrants by U. S. Consuls, and both bills are now in the hands of a conference committee.

The Senate bill is a long one, the first three sections being devoted to providing for the exclusion of anarchists and for the deportation under certain circumstances of those already in the country, and the last three to the duties of U. S. Immigrant Inspectors, which the bill provides for. The House bill makes the U. S. Consuls abroad do the inspecting.

A motley congregation, indeed, was that which confronted Rev. Dr. Corey and a portion of the Epworth League of the Metropolitan M. E. church, last Sabbath. The congregation was made up of unfortunate men who have been deluded by smooth-talking demagogues into coming to Washington with one or another of the so-called "industrial armies," and the services were conducted in their camp on the Virginia side of the Potomac, just opposite Washington. Dr. Corey at the end of the exercises asked all who were desirous of returning to their homes to raise their hands. Every hand went up. He then asked them if the present movement to secure railroad transportation for them was successful would they promise never to start from their homes on such a foolish mission again. Once more every hand went up, in token of assent. One of the men made a few remarks, thanking Dr. Corey and the members of the Epworth League, and saying that the men never would have come to Washington if they had not been grossly deceived.

*

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The General Conference of the Seventh-day Baptist denomination is being held this week at North Brookfield, New York.

—Bishop Walter Hawkins was striken with paralysis and died July 16, aged 66 years. He was born at Georgetown, Md., a slave son of Negro slave parents. He raised himself from the condition of Southern slavery to the position of bishop of the British Methodist Episcopal church in Canada.

—The Young Lutheran says: "The Norwegian missionary, Skrefsrud, who, with the Dane, Borresen, was instrumental in giving the Gospel to the Santals in India, is visiting the churches of his countrymen in America. It is said he has done more for Protestant missions in India than any other man who has labored there in recent years."

—Robert A. Barnes has given $1,000,000 for a hospital at St. Louis, to be managed by the M. E. Church South. Mr. Barnes is not a member of any church, and his wife is a Roman Catholic. He has placed this donation under the control of the Methodists, he says, partly because his mother was a Methodist, and partly because he thinks the Methodist church does more work among the poor than any other.

—On July 18 the congregation of the East London Tabernacle held an out-of-door tea party to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the pastor, Rev. Archibald G. Brown. Mr. Brown became pastor at the age of 22. He was a graduate of Mr. Spurgeon's Pastor's College, and in his work has met with phenomenal success. He is well known in this country for his vigorous tracts against so-called church "amusements."

—Dr. C. S. Vedder of Charleston, S. C., is pastor of the only Huguenot church in America. He uses the same form of services that was brought over from France by the founders of the church 203 years ago. There is no difference between this church and the Presbyterian, except that the Huguenots use the liturgical form of services, the same as used in Switzerland. The form of government is the same, and they both have the same confession of faith, as composed by Calvin himself in the forty original articles.

—The work being done by the Beacon church, Philadelphia, Rev. W. E. Loucks, pastor, is very varied and comprehensive. The church has a membership of about 700. Among the institutions the church cares for is Beacon Summer College with its 96 students and 8 instructors. A four-year course, to begin in the fall, will include classical, scientific, commercial and polytechnic courses, under 21 teachers. There is a conservatory of music, and night classes are provided for the people; there are also a Young Men's Association, a Young Ladies' League, a Beneficial Society, Boys' Brigade, and other kindred institutions. At the last communion of the church, 36 members were received.

—The book committee of the Methodist Episcopal conference has selected Cleveland as the city in which to hold the great Methodist Episcopal conference. The conference will be held during the entire month of May, 1896. It will bring 600 persons to the city. The committee has already placed an assessment on the church at large, which will result in the collection of $80,000. This amount will be used in paying the traveling expenses of delegates and defraying their bills while here. The delegates will come from every Methodist conference on earth, the countries represented being the United States, including all its States and territories; Mexico, South America, China, Japan, India, Norway, Sweden, Germany, Italy and Africa.

The Home.

MY LEGACY.

They told me I was heir. I turned in haste
  And ran to seek my treasure,
And wondered as I ran how it was placed;
  If I should find a measure
Of gold, or if the title of fair lands
And houses would be laid within my hands.

I journeyed many roads; I knocked at gates;
  I spoke to each wayfarer
I met, and said: "A heritage awaits
  Me. Art not thou the bearer
Of news? Some message sent to me whereby
I learn which way my new possessions lie!"

Some asked me in; naught lay beyond their door;
  Some smiled, and would not tarry,
But said that men were just behind who bore
  More gold than I could carry;
And so the morn, the noon, the day were spent,
While empty-handed up and down I went.

At last one cried, whose face I could not see
  As through the mist he hasted:
"Poor child, what evil ones have hindered thee,
  Till this whole day is wasted?
Hath no man told thee that thou art joint heir
With one named Christ, who waits the goods to share?"

The one named Christ I sought for many days
  In many places vainly;
I heard men name his name in many ways,
  I saw his temples plainly;
But they who named him most gave me no sign
To find him by, or prove the heirship mine.

And when at last I stood before his face,
  I knew him by no token
Save subtle air of joy which filled the place;
  Our greeting was not spoken;
In solemn silence I received my share,
Kneeling before my Brother and "joint heir."

—Helen Hunt Jackson.

AUNT MARGARET.

(Helena Maynard, in the Standard.)

"Well, Clara, perhaps you are right. Do as you think best," said Mr. Grant, as he took down his overcoat and prepared to go out. That was the way in which discussions between Mr. and Mrs. Grant usually ended, disproving the old assertion that a woman will always have the last word.

This evening Mr. Grant had been longer in reaching that decision than usual, and it did not seem quite satisfactory to him, for he stood a moment with his hand on the knob, and then came back to his wife's chair.

"Well!" she said somewhat impatiently.

"Of course," he said, "you wouldn't think it was best unless she was entirely willing. Remember I owe a great deal to Aunt Margaret."

"Well, I am sure anybody would say you had repaid her well."

"My dear," Mr. Grant began, but she was apparently unwilling to reopen the question, and hastened to say: "I'm sure she will be willing, Robert. Don't worry about that. Leave it to me to manage. Of course, there is no hurry."

Oh, no," he said, "no hurry at all," and then he had gone.

"Well," she said with a look of relief, as the door closed behind him, "so far, so good. I won't say anything to Aunt Margaret until next week when Robert is gone. I hope she will not be unreasonable."

In her pleasant room across the hall Aunt Margaret sat in her low rocker before the grate. Her hands were busy with her knitting, but her thoughts were wandering in the past. How distinctly she remembered sailing bark boats in the meadow brook, playing Robinson Crusoe on its tiny island, and hunting the first spring flowers. Then the happy schooldays brought a smile to her lips, and as she recalled the apple-bees and quiltings, the picnics and singing-schools, her room seemed filled with the presence of the friends of her youth who had shared in those merry-makings. Again they were gathered in that very room at her sister Fanny's wedding, and the walls re-echoed with music and laughter.

Now they have vanished all but one, the one in all the world to her then, and he sitting by her side. Ah, that was sixty years ago; or was it only yesterday?

Her wedding dress was almost done, and the preparations for the wedding feast were begun when Fanny and Fanny's husband sickened and died, leaving two little boys, James and Robert, and Margaret had said: "We must wait a little, John."

One year, two years passed, and now John was going West.

"You will go with me," he pleaded. Could she go and leave her aged father, her mother stricken with paralysis, and the little orphan children?

"No, John, I cannot go, but I cannot ask you to wait for me any longer. You are free. Good bye, good bye."

Is that a tear glistening in the firelight?

Then came a long, monotonous stretch of years, broken only by sad events, the drowning of James, the death of her father and mother, the news of John's marriage. But the daily labor was lightened by love, and though the joy and hope of youth were gone, peace took their place.

Then Robert married, and brought his wife to brighten the old home. Very sweet and gentle she was, and Aunt Margaret wept as if for her own daughter when she died a few years after. But she had little time for tears. There was a baby boy to be cared for. How winsome and mischievous he was, and how the years which had whitened her hair and wrinkled her brow and bent her form had given him strength and manliness! How empty the house seemed when he went away to college!

And then his father had brought home another wife, and since then—Ah! the fire has burned low, and the stocking is done.

"Good morning, Aunt Margaret; I thought I would bring my work and sit with you for a while. How pleasant this room is. It is just such a room as Mrs. Rogers' library, where I visited last fall. Hers is all finished and furnished in hard woods; all that side of the room is lined with book cases. Her writing desk stands here, and the library table there. It is just such a room as I have always planned to have, some time," and Mrs. Grant chatted on of other things.

At last she spoke of the home for the aged at Clayton, and said: "I was telling Robert the other day that I thought you would enjoy it better to live in an old ladies' home. The one at Clayton is very nice. The matron and all the attendants are so kind I am sure you would like it. You could take down all of this furniture you wanted, and your pictures to hang on the walls to make it seem homelike. Of course it would be some expense, but Robert said he would be glad to meet that."

She had talked on, keeping her head bent over her work. She had not seen the look of blank amazement pass over Aunt Margaret's face, leaving it perfectly white, but she heard a stifled moan.

"Oh, Aunt Margaret, are you having those rheumatic twinges again? Where is the pain this time?" she asked lightly.

"In my heart," said Aunt Margaret, making a pitiful attempt to smile.

"Oh, I hope not. Rheumatism of the heart is very bad. That is one thing I told Robert; at the home you would always have the best medical care and nursing."

"And then you could have your library," said Aunt Margaret, slowly.

"Why, yes, perhaps I could, but I don't want you to think—"

"No," said Aunt Margaret, "I know you don't, and I don't want to, but how can I help it?"

Mrs. Grant made a number of button-holes in silence, then she said: "Well; what shall I tell Robert?"

"You may tell him I will go whenever he wishes me to," the feeble voice faltered."

"Very well," said Clara, in a relieved tone. "I thought you would think it was best. Suppose I tell him the first of April."

"The first of April, why that is next week; let me stay a little longer; just a few weeks."

"Very well, said Mrs. Grant, folding up her work; "probably the twentieth would be better. Robert has to go to Clayton then on business. But I am afraid I have tired you with my long visit; I must go now."

As the door closed behind her Aunt Margaret leaned her grey head on the table before her and burst into tears.

"To think it should come to this," she sobbed, "that I should be grudged a room to die in. Oh, Robert, Robert."

At last the tears ceased, and lifting her head she looked for a long time out at the greening hills, behind which for nearly eighty years she had seen the sun set; then, turning, she looked from the other at the white monuments gleaming through the trees and marking the spot where so many she had loved and cared for rested.

"There is room for the old woman there," she said, bitterly, and the tears started bitterly, but she kept them back, and lying down on the lounge fell into a troubled sleep.

And the days came and went, each bringing nearer the twentieth. Such short, sad days, and yet she sought to hide their sadness in her heavy heart, and busied herself packing and making preparations for her journey. And Robert was deceived and thought she wished to make the change; and when Clara's heart reproached her, she thought of her library and said: "She will soon get used to it and then she won't mind."

But though she said it over and over the morning she went away, it was long before she could forget the pathetic hopelessness of her last backward look.

When Robert returned his wife asked him but few questions; and when she would have talked over with him her plans for furnishing the library, he only said: "Do as you think best." And once when she laughingly asked: "Are you not afraid I will make it cost too much?" he sighed and answered: "I am afraid it has cost too much already."

Young James was away at college, and when he heard that Aunt Margaret had gone to the Old Ladies' Home he could not understand it. He wrote to her and to his father, and neither of their answers satisfied him; but other matters claimed his attention. In June he was graduated with honors, and a few weeks after, his marriage with Elsie Knowlton occurred. The happy couple took a bridal tour among the mountains before settling down to housekeeping in James' native city.

They planned their return journey through Clayton and stopped over a day to visit Aunt Margaret. Elsie had heard James speak of her so often that she was quite prepared to love the little lady who welcomed her so warmly. Aunt Margaret wanted to hear all their experiences and plans, but James could get her to say but little of herself. She enjoyed the day so much that it was hard for her to say good bye when the time came for them to leave.

"It seems as if you ought to be going home with us, auntie," said James.

There was a wistful look in her eyes, but she did not trust herself to speak.

They were obliged to wait awhile in the reception room where they met the matron. "Yes," she said, in answer to a remark of Elsie's, "this home is a great benefit to many an aged woman. Some who are left in circumstances of extreme destitution are supported here by their friends. A number of our rooms are endowed for the use of the very poor who have no friend willing or able to pay their expenses. Others are left with some property but without any family friends, and are glad to pass the closing years of life here, where they receive the care and attention often lacking in a boarding house.

"But there is another class here for whom I feel sorry. There are old ladies here who were deeply attached to their homes, but whose children or grandchildren do not want the trouble of caring for them. There is no stigma attached to providing for them here, as there would be in sending them to the poor house. But it is hard to transplant old people. Of course we do all we can to make them happy, but nothing can make up for the old, familar scenes and faces, or take away the bitterness of the thought that they were not wanted."

James and Elsie looked grave, but at that moment their car passed, and the conversation was interrupted.

The following evening they stood in the library at Father Grant's, looking out as Aunt Margaret had so often done at the sunset.

"What a beautiful scene," exclaimed Elsie, "and what a beautiful room," she added; but James answered: "I had rather see it as it was when I went away. It was Aunt Margaret's room; poor auntie!" and he sighed.

After a few days they went to housekeeping in their own home, a little farther down the street. Very busy and happy they were arranging their furniture, hanging pictures, and deciding where many of the pretty wedding gifts should be placed. At last it was all done but one room. From the first Elsie had said that her plan for that room was a secret, and James had laughingly declared that she could not keep a secret two days; but it was not until the morning of the third day that she came behind his chair at the breakfast table and whispered something in his ear that made him catch her in his arms and kiss her as he exclaimed: "Do you really mean it, Elsie?"

All the breakfast time they discussed her plan, and James pointed out all the objections to it, but Elsie had an answer for each one, and at last he said as his father had done, but in a very different tone: "Do as you think best, dear."

A few days after James went to Clayton. When he came back late in the evening Aunt Margaret was with him. She was very tired, and after a warm supper, Elsie took her off to bed. Then she came back to hear James' account of his day.

"It was all I could do to persuade her to come," he said, in conclusion. "I don't know as I should have succeeded if you hadn't sent that little note, but that settled it. After she had read it, she leaned back in her chair and said, with the tears running down her cheeks: 'She wants me, she wants me. Thank God, I shall die in Camden, after all.'"

"Die!" said Elsie, wipping her own eyes, "she mustn't talk about dying yet."

When it became known that Aunt Margaret had returned to spend the remaining years of her life with James and Elsie, there were many comments. Robert Grant kissed the young woman fondly, and said: "God bless you, my daughter," while his wife declared that it was the most foolish idea she ever heard of, and prophesied that Elsie would soon regret it.

But her prediction was never verified, though for five years Aunt Margaret gradually grew more feeble, and needed more care, and Elsie was obliged to give up many of the pleasures of society on her account.

Then the day came when she bent to catch the last whispered words of blessing. Standing at the open grave, she seemed to hear the words: "As ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me," and returning to her home, hallowed by precious memories, she felt richly repaid for every sacrifice.

TEMPERANCE.

SATOLLI AND LIQUOR.

HISTORY OF BISHOP WATTERSON'S ACTION.

A few days ago a representative of the Associated Press called on Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, O., who made a statement of the proceedings leading up to the recent decision of the papal legate Satolli. A week before Thankgiving day last year a member of one of the Columbus societies belonging to the Knights of St. John's union told the bishop that the military branch of the division, to which the informant belonged, had, during the preceding year, given three entertainments, two of them under the assumed name of the Evening Star Club, at which beer was sold and other things were done contrary to the statutes of this diocese and the provincial council of Cincinnati and the third plenary council of Baltimore, and that this same branch intended to give under the disguise of a prize drill a similar entertainment the night before Thanksgiving day, with beer-selling and beer-drinking and promiscuous dancing.

The bishop went immediately to the hall, where the society was then holding a preparatory meeting, and told the members what he had heard, all of which they acknowledged to be true. After reproving them for their persistent violations of the laws binding them in these matters, he received a promise from them not to hold their Thanksgiving entertainment in the intended manner; but, within two days thereafter, two delegations from this commandery waited upon him, and as about $80 of expenses had been incurred in preparing for the entertainment they proposed to him to allow them to hold their prize drill, which would occupy about fifteen minutes, and then turn over the affair to others, who should conduct it according to the pre-arranged program, the society itself to be the beneficiary of the proceeds. He expressed his astonishment at such a proposition, and told them he could not connive at such a "beating of the devil round the stump."

The entertainment was held as they had originally arranged and many of the members of the general division and of other societies assisted at it. The bishop sent word that he would no longer recognize them as a Catholic organization. In December an election was held for president of the general division, and also for captain of the military branch. Saloon-keepers, regardless of the bishop's well-known wishes, were chosen for both of these offices. Thereupon he informed the officers of the division that if they should install the newly elected president he would deprive the whole division of its rank and privilege as a Catholic society, as he had already done in the case of the military branch, and that they must either respect his injunctions or appeal to higher authority; and if the decision went against him he would set them an example of ecclesiastical obedience. They reported this decision to their society, which thereupon resolved to appeal to Mgr. Satolli.

Some years ago, wishing to promote the honor and usefulness of societies in his diocese, Bishop Watterson decided not to approve of new societies or new branches of old societies, save on condition that manufacturers and venders of intoxicating liquors should not be admitted to membership. He believed that more could be done to diminish the evils of intemperance if the societies which enjoyed special privileges Catholic societies should be made to conduce in some way to this end. He knew that by their very name of Catholic they were bound to conduce to the increase of religion and not to its injury. Therefore, he resolved to make general what, up to this time, had only applied to new organizations; and in the beginning of March he issued his now famous pastoral letter on total abstinence and Catholic societies in relation to the manufacturers and venders of intoxicants. The very day, however, on which it was published, but before it was actually sent out, he received a letter from the apostolic delegate inclosing the appeal of the society referred to and its correspondence with the supreme president of the union to which it belonged.

In his decision, which was partially disclosed July 21, Mgr. Satolli first lays down the general principles "that, as it belongs to the office of a bishop to find out in his own diocese what is hurtful or helpful to the spiritual good of the faithful, so it belongs to his power to command, forbid, council or permit to be done or removed whatever he may judge conducive to his own duty and the good of the faithful."

Of the ninety-four members of the Canadian Provincial Parliament recenty elected, sixty-three are pledged to vote for a prohibitory law in case the courts decide the test case in favor of the provinces.

The Massachusetts Legislature adopted an investigation law, giving the State Bureau of Statistics $5,000 with which to conduct an investigation of the relation of the liquor traffic to crime, pauperism and insanity.

In speaking of alcohol as a medicine, Dr. Hammond says: "I am free to say that, weighing all the points for and against, mankind would be better, not only physically, but mentally and morally, if its use were altogether abolished."

A Roman Catholic college has conferred the degree of LL.D. upon the beer-brewing United States Senator from New York, assuming, perhaps, that a brewer who knows all about the ingredients in beer must be a learned man.

Dr. Anderson Brown, one of the foremost women physicians of England, has established an industrial farm for inebriate women. The test of the practicability of outdoor life as a cure of drunkenness will be made under the auspices of the Women's Temperance Association. Fruit growing, poultry raising, gardening, bee keeping and butter making will be among the branches taught.

Please renew your subscription now.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON IX.—Third Quarter, 1894, Aug. 26.

SUBJECT.—The First Miracle of Jesus.—John 2: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory."—John 2: 11.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 5: 29-39. T.—Mark 5: 22-43. W.—Luke—10: 25-42. Th.—John 11: 1-18. F.—John 11: 19-44. S.—Luke 19: 1-10. Sab.—The lesson.

NOTES BY THE EDITOR.

Time.—See John 1: 29, 35, 43.

Place.—Cana in Galilee, site not fixed, but supposed to be a few miles N. E. of Nazareth, the home of Nathaniel. (ch 21: 2.)

1. THE PRESENCE OF JESUS DESIRED. Vs. 1, 2. Jesus after the touching interview with Nathaniel (ch 1: 43–49) left John the Baptist and Bethabara and went to Galilee, where all his disciples belonged. A wedding was just to be celebrated in the little town of Cana. It was an humble feast. The relatives of Jesus who seem to have been present and much interested (v. 12.) were not of the wealthy and influential class; neither were his fisherman disciples. Mary speaks to the servants as if at home in the house. "Mother of Jesus" is the noblest and tenderest title by which she could be known. John never mentions her name. But though humble, the presence of Jesus made the occasion known to all time.

It was natural that he should be invited; his mother and brethren being there, and Nathaniel, a townsman, being of the disciples. So should the Lord be ever a welcome guest in our homes, and so should his disciples. So, above all should his presence be desired in our hearts. The presence of Jesus the Lord should consecrate every marriage feast and ceremony, and all the steps leading to it. We are a people cursed with loose notions of marriage, and the frequent divorces prove how often the solemn vow at the altar is a farce and the whole ceremony a crime. But if the Lord is honored, and his blessing sought in obedience given to his will, instead of to human passion and lust, marriage would become the holy and precious rite it ought to be. It is said the Moravians, realizing that marriage, even to the choice, should be of God, cast lots after prayer that the selection of life partners may be divinely directed. In consequence divorces are almost unknown among them.

2. THE HELP OF JESUS SOUGHT. Vs. 3–6. "The wine failed" (Rev. Ver). Nathaniel may have published the presence of Jesus among his neighbors. He believed him to be the Son of God and King of Israel (1: 49). Many perhaps came therefore from curiosity; and as all who wished might come to a Jewish wedding and participate in the feast, an unexpected demand was made, and the supply of wine was exhausted. "None but those who know how sacred in the East is the duty of lavish hospitality," says Canon Farrar, "and how passionately the obligation to exercise it to the utmost is felt, can realize the gloom which this incident would have thrown over the occasion, or the misery and mortification which it would have caused the wedded pair."

Mary may have felt some responsibility if the company had become large through the presence of her son.

"They have no wine." What is to be done? As if she already knew his power and appealed for its exercise. She had not known him for thirty years without many visions of his future. Between her remark and our Lord's reply there is a gap we may venture to supply. He understands the appeal. It comes from the heart of a fond mother who believes in her son, and wishes all about her to share that belief. If the people had gathered at Nathaniel's information, there would be a general expectation that the heavenly visitant would manifest heavenly power. The old human theory prevails in all the classic literature of that day that the gods never came to men without displaying godlike power, some superhuman work to prove their divinity. If Mary's word meant this we can understand the Lord's reply. The term "woman" is perfectly respectful. "What is there to me and thee?" in the original. "That which I have from thee cannot work a miracle." I cannot use divine power to gratify human pride or love even. The hour for my manifestation as King of Israel is not come. The power of God in me must be used to prove that I am one with the Father. It must not be prostituted to serve mere human curiosity or human selfishness. If the mother understood his word, she knew it was not a refusal to help in an emergency that would seriously detract from the pleasure of the occasion. It was rather an answer to her own thought. Accepting the kindly reproof, her faith in her son as the Lord was only strengthened and purified from a worldly and mixed motive. She simply says to the attendants: He can help us. Do as he says.

3. THE GLORY OF JESUS MANIFESTED. Vs. 7–11. The six stone jars were "water-pots," not wine flagons, put there so there might be water enough for the ceremonial purification of a large company. Together they held from 110 to 160 gallons. The quantity is not surprising. In a country of vineyards, they supply a common beverage. Dr. H. J. Van Lennep, long a missionary in the East, said this large quantity would "provide little for each guest, considering the habits of the people who crowd into the house to partake of the feast so long as the provisions last.....The hospitable host or master of the feast also urges even the passers-by to come and drink to the health of the bridegroom and bride." This abundance illustrates God's way of working. He pours out his bounty. His gifts are free; they are of grace. He pours floods upon the dry ground. He fills with the Holy Spirit.

It was easy for the servants to fill up the water jars, but to take out and bear to the governor of the feast was an act of obedience and of faith. They could not afford to bring nothing but water. Our Lord does not, as a rule, create in his miracles. He only changes things already existing.

"The conscious water saw its God and blushed."

The miracle manifested forth his glory:

1. In helping his mother to a clearer view of his life and work; so that we do not find that she ever desired any miraculous work to be wrought for the change of the family condition from poverty to wealth.

2. In producing faith in all the people, and especially his disciples.

3 In proving that our Lord could share in all true social joys, and that his presence but enlivens and blesses them, and makes them more and more a blessing.

4. This first miracle, from its humble, helpful and kindly nature, would produce a better effect at the time than the stilling of a storm or the raising of the dead.

"The change of water into the luscious juice of the grape (far more than into fermented wine) is the sign and symbol of all which Christ is evermore doing in the world, ennobling all that he touches, making saints out of sinners, angels out of men, and, in the end, heaven out of earth,—a new paradise of God out of the old wilderness of the world. For the prophecy of the world's regeneration, of the day in which his disciples shall drink of the fruit of the vine new in his kingdom, is eminently here."—Trench

Christ's example as to wine is safe to follow. If men drink wine made of water only they are safe. Axel Gustafson says of this miracle in a reply to Dr. Hartt in the Arena:

"Jesus was poor and lowly. His mission was to the outcast and downtrodden; he had no rich friends; therefore, presumably, the wedding at the little village of Cana must have been a very humble affair. Yet we are asked to believe that when the guests of the feast 'had well drunk,' Jesus miraculously made some one hundred and thirty gallons of intoxicating wine for their further indulgence! As to the expression 'good wine,' used by the master of ceremonies, on tasting that wine, it but strengthens the evidence that this wine was unfermented; for in Italy and Spain, for instance, whither the grape culture was introduced from Palestine, and where, even to this day, the Eastern customs and habits as to wine and wine making largely prevail, unfermented wine is called the 'good wine.' Besides, in the marriage of Cana, Dr. Lees draws attention to a most conclusive circumstantial proof that the wine made by Jesus was unfermented. He says: 'For centuries the orthodox Christian fathers were fighting all sorts of heretics, many of whom were teetotalers, but not one ever cites the miracle at Cana as antagonistic to the practice of teetotalism!' "

Can't you get us a few subscribers for the Cynosure in your town?

To New Subscribers!
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

—)FOR(—

FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

111 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and coucil. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, pass words, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn mower, Town pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 828 pages. cloth. $1.00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arraignment of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Home and Health.

HYGIENIC SUMMER DISHES.

The close, sultry mornings and the hot, uncomfortable nights of July make the ordinary bill of fare appear very unappetizing. There are people (one shudders to think what digestions and constitutions they are imparting to their children by such a course) on whose tables appears an unvarying course of hot, fried, or baked meats, indigestible pastries and fried doughnuts the year round. The stomach is a much-abused organ, and stands a good deal; but your children, even "to the third and fourth generations," must pay for your misuse of yourself. There is not the slightest doubt but that, as a general thing, people eat too much. It is most often the child with the small appetite weathers successfully many a storm of illness. A small appetite does not mean a dainty one. The dainty appetite looks for means of stimulation which too often include unhealthful dishes. If ever the housewife and mother needs to study hygienic cooking it is in summer. If ever there is an excuse for vegetarianism it is in summer; but this I do not urge other than that there shall be a free use of vegetables and fruit.

HOW TO BREATHE.

An old gentleman gave good advice to a young lady who complained of sleeplessness. He said:

"Learn how to breathe and darken your room completely, and you won't need any doctoring."

"Learn how to breathe! I thought that was one thing we learned before coming into a world so terribly full of other things to be learned," the insomniac said ruefully.

On the contrary, not one in ten adults knows how to breathe. To breathe perfectly is to draw the breath in long, deep inhalations, slowly and regularly, so as to relieve the lower lungs of all noxious accumulations. Shallow breathing won't do this,"

"I have overcome nausea, headache, sleeplessness, seasickness and even more serious threatenings, by simply going through a breathing exercise—pumping from my lower lungs, as it were, all the malarial inhalations of the day by long, slow, ample breaths. Try it before going to bed, making sure of standing where you can inhale pure air, and then darken your sleeping room completely. We live too much in an electric glare by night. If you still suffer from sleeplessness after this experiment is fairly tried, I shall be surprised."

To Prevent Blisters.—If you would insure the sufferer from being blistered by the mustard plaster, mix it with the white of an egg.

Sand in the Oven.—Sprinkle a layer of dry sand in the oven and let the cake pans rest upon it. This will prevent the cakes from burning on the bottom.

Borax.—The cleanly borax seems to be offensive to most insects, and woolen goods are well defended from their invasions if they are sprinkled with borax and closely wrapped in newspaper.

The Human Music Box.—Never was a music box so exquisitely arranged for the playing of sweet tunes as the human organism is for the production of the music of happiness.

Physician—"Considering the weak state of your eyes it will be as well if you gaze as much as possible into empty space." Patient—"All right, Doctor, then I'll keep looking into my purse."

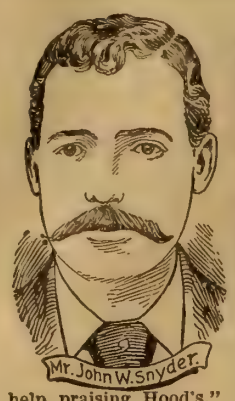
For Mending China.—A strong, perfectly colorless cement is made by dissolving a half-ounce of gum arabic in a wine glass of boiling water and adding plaster of Paris to form a thick paste. Use at once, applying with a brush.

A Hint to the Cook.—All kinds of canned food have a more delicious flavor if they are turned out upon a platter or other flat dish an hour or two to regain the oxygen that was used when they were sealed hot.

LOCKJAW CAUSED BY A MATCH.

Mrs. Charles Ashton, of Lima, Ohio, is suffering from lockjaw, caused in a singular manner. About a week ago she arose early and started a fire before dressing. The brimstone of the match flew off and struck her on the foot, burning it severely, but she paid little attention to it until the foot began to swell. It finally became painful and caused lockjaw. She has been under the influence of opiates for several days and it is thought she cannot live.

Must Praise Hood's



"I was troubled with Dyspepsia, and was in such a condition I could not walk. In a week after I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla

I Felt Better

Since taking four bottles I am perfectly cured—never felt better in my life. I can work hard, eat heartily and sleep well. My wife says there is nothing like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Can't help praising Hood's." John W. Snyder, Saville, Pennsylvania.

Remember,

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Pills cure all Liver Ills, Biliousness, Constipation, Sick Headache, Indigestion.

The Christian Witness

Is an eight-page undenominational monthly; the official organ of the New Hampshire Christian Association, opposed to secret societies. It advocates Bible Holiness, Church Purity, Sound Morality and Temperance.

Terms: 50 cents a year, or three years for $1.00.

Send stamp for sample copy.

Address S. C. Kimball,
Box 277. Newmarket. N. H.

AMERICAN HANDBOOK
AND
CITIZEN MANUAL.
BY
MANLOVE N. BUTLER.

Contents:—Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement; Real Prohibition; Poor Man's Bible, and All-Around Reformers. Over 200 pages

Paper, single copy 40c.; per doz. 35c.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Ch

The hair, when not properly cared for, loses its lustre, becomes crisp, harsh, and dry, and falls out freely with every combing. To prevent this, the best dressing in the market is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It imparts that silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

FARM FOR SALE.

A quarter section in Kearney county, Nebraska,

WILL BE SOLD AT A BARGAIN.

Description: Southwest quarter of Section 31, Township 8, North, Range 13, west of the sixth principal meridian.

ONLY $500 CASH FOR 160 ACRES.

Large bodies of cattle have ranged over and been herded on this and adjacent land. It is pretty well covered with grass. The soil as a whole is quite sandy, especially on the hills; the little valleys have the best soil.

It is near two railroad towns. Lowell is within two miles, and Hartwell is about five miles distant. All taxes are paid to date. Must be sold soon if possible. Address, W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE!

—)oo(—

SECRET CONFESSION TO A PRIEST: or, The Roman Catholic Practice of Auricular Confession. By Evangelist Leyden, an ex-Romanist.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching. (Quote from publisher's preface.) 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE SECRET WORK OF THE JESUITS, with an historical sketch of this pestiferous order, by Rev. W. C. Brownlee, D. D., with an appendix on the Church of Rome and the American Public Schools: A Warning to America. 80 pages, paper, reduced from 50 cents to 25 cents, postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS. By L. De La Hodde, member of the detective police of France. A History of the Secret Societies of France. The object of the translator of this work was to show the dangerous consequences, to society and government, arising from the practices of secret associations. 477 pages, cloth, price reduced from $1.50 to 75 cents, postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of a club of three new subscribers to the Cynosure.

Songs for the Times.

FOURTH AND IMPROVED EDITION.

BY GEO. W. CLARK.

Author of the "Temperance Songster," "The Liberty Minstrel," "Free Soil Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," Harp of Freedom," etc.

This work comprises some 235 Elemental, Reformatory and Progressive Songs, Odes, Psalms, Hymns, etc., words and music, old and new, on a great variety of subjects, including Truth, Freedom, Temperance, Prohibition.

Likewise National, Loyal and Patriotic Songs. Also Miscellaneous, Social, Domestic and Hygienic; Songs adapted to the home circle, to private devotion and public worship, to national gatherings, mass meetings, and all humane movements for the good of mankind. It is printed on new electrotype plates, made from new type; the impressions are on nice white paper, and its pages are clear, bright and cheery, and the price very low for so costly a work.

Single copy, 30 cts; by mail, 35 cts; by the dozen, $3; by the hundred, $20.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,
AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

Over 3,000 sold in less than three weeks.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

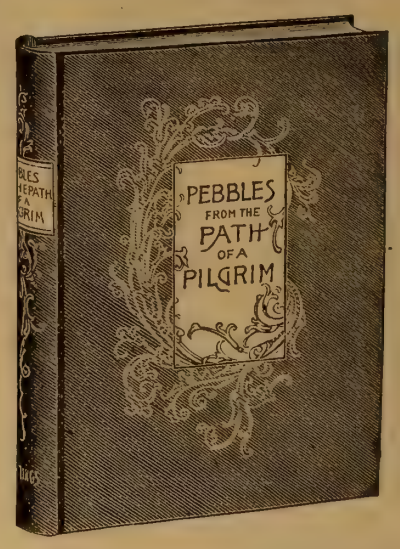
LORD & THOMAS,
Newspaper Advertising
45 Randolph Street,
Chicago.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book.... No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—

Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf.....1⅞c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅞c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.
LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING

Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

NOT AN ALARMING SITUATION.

Said Mr. Edward Atkinson in a recent address before the New York Chamber of Commerce: "There are 4,564,641 farms in the United States, with an acreage of 623,218,619 acres. Our agricultural products, aside from pasture lands, are yielded by less than 20 per cent of our area, exclusive of Alaska. The value of these farms, according to the census of 1890, was $13,279,252,649, and there was $494,247,467 worth of implements and machinery, and $2,208,767,573 worth of live stock on them, making a total value of $15,982,267,689. The mortgages on the farms occupied by owners were but $1,055,336,380, and on all farms and acres held for village improvements or other purposes only $2,255,336,380. All farm mortgages do not amount to 10 per cent of the farm value, and of this amount 82½ per cent was given for the purchase or improvement of the land, and 7 per cent for stocking it, leaving only 10 per cent for all other purposes. Really the farmers are not as much in debt as alarmists would have us believe."

GERMAN FARMERS LEARNING.

Louis Stern, United States Consul at Bamberg, in a report to the Department of State, gives some advance figures from the statistical schedule showing the agricultural use of land in Germany, which will confirm the statements of those who have for years advised our American farmers to engage in "diversified farming." Almost one-half, or 17,600,000 hectares, of the superficial area of Prussia, was used for agricultural purposes in 1893, an increase of 80,000 hectares over 1883. The conditions governing the culture of products has changed decidedly, and the agriculturists are very generally turning from the extensive and almost exclusive cultivation of grains to the growth of such products as are now made use of in the industries allied to farming, namely, the sugar industry and distilling business, the culture of beets and potatoes, etc., thus promoting cattle raising at the same time.

COYOTES QUENCH THEIR THIRST.

A remarkable story of the sagacity of animals comes from Cheyenne county, Oklahoma Territory. There has been very little rain there this season and all the streams and springs have gone dry, so that there is no place for the many wild animals abounding in that section to quench their thirst. The soil there is well adapted to watermelons and hundreds of acres have been planted by the scattered settlers. Since it has become so dry the farmers find that for the first time the coyotes are after their melons. When an animal becomes thirsty he goes into a watermelon patch, jumps on a melon until he cracks it, then inserts his sharp nose into the melon and quenches his thirst with the contents. As soon as one discovered this he communicated the fact to the others and the entire melon crop of the country bids fair to be destroyed in this way.

In ninety-nine cases out of one hundred the farmer who contemplates moving to a more favorable location, will find it more profitable to stay on the old farm, and let his "moving" consist of getting away from the old profitless methods and up to the newer and better ones.—New England Farmer.

First, give the cow plenty of pure water; second, feed her enough food in a proper manner, using those substances, properly mixed, that contain large per cent of the elements that are found in milk, and properly combining them; third, good care; fourth, warm stables well ventilated and lighted in winter; and fifth, cleanliness at all times and in all places.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

I am thoroughly convinced that of the many conditions necessary for the growth of the crop, the water supply is the most variable, and for that reason the most important factor in farming and gardening operations. The relation of the soil to water is one that can be very greatly modified by drainage, manure and tillage. Indeed, in general, on farms of ordinary fertility, the real practical value of all three of these operations is in their effect upon the physical condition of the soil; by which the relation of the soil to water is affected, and thereby also the relation of the soil to heat.—Thomas F. Hunt, Ohio State University.

Plymouth county, Iowa, farmers are cutting the drought stricken corn for fodder with self-binding reapers. Dozens of machines are running.

William Beam, a farmer living near Bowling Green, O., was instantly killed by a bumble bee sting on the temple. He was pitching wheat to a threshing machine when his fork ran into a nest.

Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers is the best, handiest, safest, surest, cleanest, most economical and satisfactory dye ever invented. It is the gentlemen's favorite.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

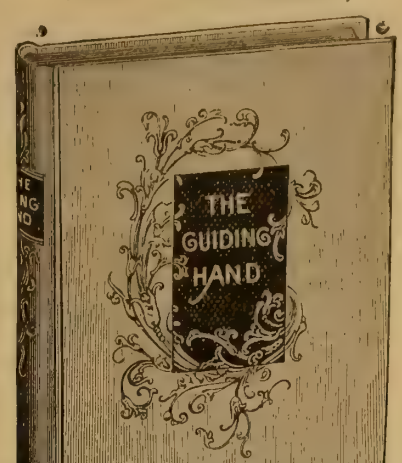
AYER'S Hair Vigor
Prevents BALDNESS
REMOVES DANDRUFF AND Restores Color TO Faded and Gray HAIR
THE Best Dressing

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR FOR GROWTH AND COLOR

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)
5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred
NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

THE GUIDING HAND;
—OR—
PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.
-——)o(——
Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by
H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")



This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:
(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.
The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon.
Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?
An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.
W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."
A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.
Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!
1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)
In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.
Paper covers, postpaid ..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid ..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid ..... .40
Read what is said about it:
"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.
"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing." EARNEST CHRISTIAN.
"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894." —METHODIST RECORDER.
"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen." —W. W. HULET.
"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness." —T. C. GIVENS.
"I am highly pleased with it."—JAMES I. COUNCIL.
"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—VICTOR CHARBOIN.
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS
OF
FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.
As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.
In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa
By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.
This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.
By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.
This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.
An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.
"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.
"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trust worthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.
By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.
"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."
BY THE SAME AUTHOR:
Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.
"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.
The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c
"This is a gem"—Illustrated Christian Weekly.
"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy,"—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.
By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.
This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.
OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:
Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.
"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.
Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.
The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.
"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.
"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.
Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.
All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.
According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.
Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.
Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.
"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.
Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.
Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.
Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

News of the Week.

WASHINGTON.

The House judiciary committee has decided to report against the admission of Japanese to citizenship.

An official statement as to the caisson explosion in Chicago says it resulted from defective plungers in the fuses of the shells.

Through the efforts of the district commissioners and leading citizens about eighty commonwealers left the city over the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad for their homes in Cincinnati and Los Angeles. Saturday the rest of the industrial army were driven off Virginia soil on to the Potomac bridges by a large body of militia under orders from the governor of that State.

The republic of Hawaii has been formally recognized by the United States through the President and the Secretary of State.

CHICAGO.

Early this week the work of elevating the tracks of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroads will begin just south of 16th street.

At Pullman work was resumed in all the departments except the freight and street car shops. No department is working at full capacity and 1,220 men are in the places of 4,000 who threw down their tools May 11.

For the first time within anybody's knowledge corn Tuesday sold without a corner over the price of wheat. The day before both closed at the same figure. August corn closed at 59¼ cents; August wheat at 55⅞ cents. Next day corn dropped 6 or 7 cents.

STRIKES AND UNIONS.

Two companies of the State militia arrived at South Omaha early Friday and during the day three other companies arrived. The strikers were quieted by the presence of the troops and no demonstrations were made, the workers being allowed to go and return from work without interference.

Members of the United, Amalgamated, and Progressive Brotherhoods of Carpenters have been discussing the advisability of a general strike against the use of articles, such as doors, sash, and blinds, manufactured by Western firms.

At a mass meeting in Kansas City, Mo., Sunday night 400 local switchmen helped organize the Switchmen's Union of Kansas City, which is a starter in the direction of a new national switchmen's organization to take the place of that just recently disbanded. An address was issued to switchmen of this country and Canada asking them to send delegates to a national convention to be held here early in the fall to perfect the new organization. P. J. McGuire, of the Knights of Labor, was refused permission to speak at the meeting, which later adopted resolutions against affiliation with the Knights.

COUNTRY.

According to the government crop experts the dry weather and hot winds prevailing in the Western States have been eating into the corn crop of the country at the rate of over 18,000,000 bushels a day. The unfavorable conditions in the corn belt have pulled down the July 1 estimate of a bumper crop of over 2,000,000,000 to an estimate of 1,503,000,000 bushels Aug. 1.

A mine underlying part of the western portion of Scranton, Pa., caved in Thursday afternoon for a distance of three blocks, affecting prsperty to the extent of $250,000, and causing excitement which verged on panic among the residents of the locality.

About 3 o'clock Friday afternoon a crowd of boys and men met in a small prairie nine miles south of De Kalb, Texas, to play baseball. A shower came up and they all ran to a large oak. Lightning struck the tree and seven were killed outright. About a dozen others were hurt and it is thought some of them will die.

Miss Grace Cober, of Columbus, Ind., dressed herself up in imitation of a ghost and crossed the path of her lover, Dr. Beck, at night. The doctor promptly pulled a revolver and fired. Miss Cober lingered in great pain for a day or two and then died.

A head-end collision of freight trains occurred on the Northern Pacific Friday. Harmon, an old engineer on one of the trains, was probably scared to death, as he was dead when found, without a mark on his body. His fireman was fatally injured. Several others were injured.

A terrible disaster occurred on the Rock Island road just outside of Lincoln. Neb., Friday night. Passenger train No. 8 was derailed east of Lincoln. The fireman, engineer and several trainmen were killed and many passengers wounded. To add to the general horror, fire broke out in the cars, totally destroying several. In the immediate vicinity of the wreck a crowbar was found which had been used to pull spikes with. This makes it look as though the wreck was deliberately planned.

Twenty-five persons were injured, some seriously, in a collision between two trolley cars on the electric road near Oakdale, Pa.

Wisconsin board of health has decided on a vigilant inspection of all persons and baggage leaving Milwaukee, to guard against smallpox.

A disastrous head-end collision occurred on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad between Hurdland and Gibbs, Mo., at 3:30 Sunday morning between two express trains, resulting in two trainmen being killed and several passengers injured.

Ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas, declared in an address at Prohibition Park, L. I., that there was a Tammany ring in every city and hamlet in the country.

At Milwaukee, Thursday, a desperate struggle occurred between a mob of 3,000 people and seventy-five policemen over the removal of smallpox patients to the hospital. The police used their clubs freely and many of the rioters were severely injured. Eleven were arrested. The mob fought with stones, and a number of the officers were badly injured about the head and face.

FOREIGN.

Thirteen persons were killed and 29 wounded by the earthquake shocks at Acireale, Sicily, Wednesday.

The trial of the thirty anarchists in Paris ended Sunday in the acquittal of all but three of the accused.

The correspondent of the London Times at Shanghai telegraphs that 12,000 Japanese troops from Feusan and 3,000 from Yunson are marching toward Seoul, the capital of Corea.

The Tsung Li Yamen, the Supreme Council of the Empire, has guaranteed the safety of foreigners in the interior of China.

A mob of French-Canadian Catholics wrecked the mission houses of the Baptist and Anglican churches and the Salvation Army barracks in Quebec.

A dispatch from Shanghai says: "The Japanese have expelled the Corean operators from all the telegraph offices in Southern Corea and have placed their own operators in charge. It is computed that China will have 60,000 troops in Corea by the end of September."

A Japanese squadron attacked Wei-Hai-Wei Friday with twenty-six vessels. It is not definitely known how many of the fleet were men of war. The engagement was entirely between the Japanese men-of-war and the forts. The forts were able without much difficulty to repulse the attack. About fifty shots were exchanged, but no material damage was done on either side.

The great coal mines near Dombrowa, Poland, began burning Friday. The fire started by an explosion of gas while the full force of men were underground. The main shaft was wrecked and comparatively few miners were rescued. The latest report is that several hundred men are entombed in the mines, and that all hope of saving them has been abandoned.

America Leads the World

The Crowning Glory of the Age.

Man's enterprise culminated at the World's Columbian Exposition. The memory of it will be a marvel for all time. The fame there acquired will live for years. The manufacturers of appreciate the award to them of highest honors at the Exposition. The significance of the compliment, the splendid character of the indorsement, cannot be underrated. It stamps Dr. Price's as without a peer among the baking powders. The jury of awards, an exceptionally intelligent body, was headed by the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture. They found Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder strongest in leavening power, perfect in purity, and of uniform excellence.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

"Foremost Baking Powder in all the World."

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 6 to Aug. 11:

Mrs M P Morris, L B Smith, E W Mallory, P F Thurber, J A Bostrom, D D Worman, J H Gray, I L Buckwalter, M Caldwell, A Roach, Rev J P Dyas, D Howder, J F H Dobler, Dr J F T Fischer, F Brouse, J B Patton, J R Lyons, Rev L S Landis, A C Lemm, J C Reese, I H Gorrell, F G Houck, P C Housel, Rev C P Jones, D B Sherk, W Mathews, R Park, O J Clark.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	53⅞ @		56¼
Winter No. 2	54¼ @		56
Corn—No. 2	54⅝ @		56
Oats—No. 2	30¼ @		35
Rye—No. 2	44
Bran per ton	15 00
Hay—Timothy	8 50 @	11	50
Butter, medium to best	10½ @		23½
Cheese	06¼ @		09
Beans	1 25 @	1	90
Eggs	10½ @		12¼
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 50 @	5	00
Flax	1 24 @	1	25
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 50 @	9	40
Broom corn (per ton)	40 00 @	80	00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	58 @		70
Hides—Green to dry flint	02¼ @		06¼
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	7 @		23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 00 @	5	00
Common to good	2 00 @	3	60
Hogs	4 25 @	5	40
Sheep	1 00 @	3	60

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	58⅛ @	59⅛
Corn No 2	62 @	62½
Oats	34¼ @	40½
Rye	52 @	52½
Eggs	14 @	16
Butter	12 @	23
Wool	19 @	25

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST
A Secret Empire;
Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.
By Rev. Richard Horton.
Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.
Price, 60 cents.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
231 W. Madison St., Chica

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING"—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI, No. 50 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,269.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure ist always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Special Mention..... 8
Help the Coast Convention..... 8
The Church and the Workingman..... 8
University Anarchy..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Lodge and the Saloon 1
Silence is Golden (poetry) 2
Chicago in Mr. Stead's Mirror..... 2
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Speech of W. A. Stevens 3
Speech of Prof. Whipple 3
Educational Notes 7
N. C. A 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
LABOR UNIONS:
The Labor Church 4
For What Christ Came 4
What Labor Organizers Think of Christ..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
In Camp; Pacific Coast Convention; A Busy Worker.... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Outside the Walls; A Noble-hearted Volunteer; Pith and Point..... 6
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE 11
BIBLE LESSON 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS 16

Science that honors God and prays to him through Christ may be trusted. The American Association for the Advancement of Science is meeting in Brooklyn. On Sabbath afternoon a meeting for prayer and Christian conference was held, which many attended. The remarks of several eminent members are reported in the daily press, showing an humble faith in Christ and his Word. As they look into nature these great students see more clearly the hand of God, and as an old member (since 1851) said, the very lighthouses of science are godly men.

The special commission appointed by the President began the investigation of the Pullman strike last week in the U S court room in this city. Up to Saturday there had been no representative of the Pullman Company or of the railroads on the stand. Officers of the American Railway Union and rejected workmen from Pullman were given most of the time for several days Debs testifies this week. Rev. Mr. Carwardine gave his experience on Friday, and made an excellent impression. Prof. Bemis, of Chicago University, on the same day made an argument for compulsory arbitration.

So long as men admire heroism will they read with enthusiasm of the Adams family of Massachusetts. Samuel Adams, "The Father of the Revolution," was cousin of John Adams, who followed Washington in the Presidential chair, and who gave the world his renowned son John Quincy, "Old Man Eloquent." The whole family to the last generation were opposed to the lodge, and the labors of John Quincy Adams to expose Freemasonry in his celebrated "Letters" were second only to his efforts against slavery. The death of his grandson who bore his name was announced last week. He was much in politics for the Adams name was one "to conjure with," but he never held important office, being better pleased with farm life and its neighborly associations.

The court-martial ordered by President Cleveland at Omaha has come to an end. Major Worth is acquitted. The court found that the order of President Lincoln was not in force, and that the order for rifle practice which private Cedarquist disobeyed was warranted by the exigencies of the occasion. Such an abortive conclusion was not unexpected; but this need not and must not be the end of this matter. The people believe that President Lincoln's order was right. He spoke for the nation. President Cleveland's order releasing Cedarquist was everywhere approved. If there is no military order that will prevent the recurrence of such cases the President, as commander-in-chief of the army, will be expected by the nation to issue one.

At Long Beach Summer Convention this year a suggestion from the World's Fair Parliament of Religions took shape in a congress of religions, in which there was a presentation of non-Christian faiths from a Christian standpoint. There were various eminent speakers on Islamism, Theosophy, the Ethnic religions, etc., and Joseph Cook gave an address each day as special lecturer on the Peerlessness of the Christian Religion. The topics treated by Mr. Cook were: "The World's First Parliament of Religion," "The Peerlessness of Christian Theism," "The Peerlessness of Christian Family Life," "The Victories and Prospects of Christian Missions," "The Peerless Bible in the World's Parliament." To speak of these addresses in detail is impossible. To name the titles and say that Joseph Cook treated them is quite sufficient.

The acceptance by the House of the Senate tariff bill last week Monday afternoon ended a long struggle. The leaders of the dominant party concluded that "half a loaf is better than no bread." It is a whole loaf for the whisky trust, however, if Mr. Cleveland does not veto. It is estimated that there are 125,000,000 gallons of their product in the country. The new law increases the government tax from 90 cents to $1 10 per gallon. The distillers will make this difference, or $25 000,000. It is understood the sugar trust will clear $40,000,000 more. The country will pay this bill, and for the humiliating generosity will find these gigantic trusts better able than ever to tyrannize in business, overpower legislation and snap their fingers with a "what are you going to do about it?" at every protest.

The infamy of secret methods in legislation was never more plainly seen than in this instance. The Senate is schooled to secrecy in its executive sessions. It has considered this tariff business in secret, as was lately pointed out in these columns, and the trusts and spoilsmen have thereby had every advantage. The McKinley bill was before the House fifteen days, but in the Senate forty-six days. The Gorman-Brice bill now passed was hatching in the Senate eighty three days, while the Wilson bill which it supplants was finished by the House in twenty-four. The conference between the houses to secure an agreement lasted over five weeks. It is time to abolish secretism in Congress.

The Chicago Tribune said of the Senate action last week: "Tainted by corruption, odorous of jobbery, dictated by powerful combinations, fairly reeking with the results of intrigue and backdoor influences, the Brice-Gorman tariff bill has been passed by both Houses, and is started on its way to the White House. The House and the President have been ignominiously defeated. After five weeks of blustering, of secret conferences, of loud protestations of insistence, the House has laid down its arms and done exactly what was predicted in the Senate a month ago. It has passed the Senate bill literally without dotting an 'i' or crossing a 't,' not daring to return the bill to the Senate for necessary corrections. The President has been humiliated by half a dozen Senators of his own party. The whisky trust has not taken its firewater from bond for nothing." The senior editor of the Tribune was esteemed a reformer in the early days of his career. He stood with the Abolitionists for the overthrow of a great evil. His name is now before the Republicans of Illinois as candidate for Senator. Will he not move for some changes that will purify our upper house of Congress. He might thus inject some vitality into his campaign. Otherwise, like chickens in a barn-yard, the old parties will only go through the usual idiotic scratching over the old straw of worn-out issues.

The Corean war promises, as we have before suggested, to be bloody and severe. The late reports are of a land battle with thousands slain and the massacre of the wounded. Rev. Alexander Kerr, for nine years a missionary of the Presbyterian Board among the Japanese and Chinese of California, says the Japanese are the French and the Chinese the Britons of the Orient. In his mind there is no question about the outcome of the war. The Chinese have the quality of endurance and will be victorious. This is not the general opinion of those who claim to be familiar with these peoples in their own countries. Better than speculating on the result would it be to secure an intervention and peace between these nations.

THE LODGE AND THE SALOON.

BY A W. C. T. U.

"We are ignorant, and shall probably ever remain so, of the share which secret means had in the insurrection of July 14th."—Guizot's Hist. of the French Revolution.

Carlyle, in his history of this same great and terrible epoch, tells us that Robespierre founded Masonic lodges under Charles Edward, the English Pretender. Rebold further relates in his History of Freemasonry that the secret lodge was a favorite means by which the Stuarts tried to gain back their lost empire; and in the case of Charles II. Masonic machinations actually succeeded in overthrowing the Puritan commonwealth and planting on its ruins the most corrupt courts and the most shameless and sensual monarch that ever disgraced even the annals of royalty.

To-day the saloon stands before your tribunal, O women of the W. C. T. U., convicted of sucking the very life-blood from the nation's vitals, convicted of murder and treason, convicted of torturing children, of breaking the hearts of wives and mothers, and raising an army of paupers and criminals to be supported at the public expense. The Christian world stands aghast at the numberless counts in the horrible indictment; but what if I prove to you that the saloon has a near relation, sworn to "espouse its cause in every difficulty, whether right or wrong?" And that relation is—THE LODGE.

But how can these things be? you ask. Are there not temperance men who are Masons? and did not the Grand Lodge of Missouri in 1882 make saloon-keeping a Masonic offence? and didn't Arkansas and Dakota and Oregon and Washington follow suit? Certainly; but I am a Yankee. Let me answer by asking another question: Doesn't every lodge writer and speaker tell us that Masonry never alters? that she is the same in every age and clime? And if the bloody revolutionist, Robespierre, with his creed of liberty, equality and fraternity, could a century ago strike hands as a worthy Masonic brother with a prince who represented the divine right of kings and all the despotic ideas, principles and practices for which one ancestor lost his head and the other was driven into perpetual exile, why can't a Mason to-day nominally espouse the temperance cause while he secretly strikes hands with the saloon-keeper?

"But there are good men who are Masons," you interrupt; "they would not do such a thing."

No; a good man has no bad ends to serve or conceal. Consequently he has no use for secrecy even if he has been foolish enough to join a secret order. And this leaves the lodge with all its hidden machinery of darkness in the hands of the lodge Robespierres. Can you escape the conclusion?

But where are the facts to prove it?

Not far off, my beloved sisters; not to be slowly and painfully searched for in ponderous tomes, but right here under your eye in the public prints. Why are county commissioners and excise boards so often Masons, standing in fraternal relations to the rum power, which they are sworn on the one side to prosecute and on the other to defend? It is a standing fling against prohibition in Maine that it doesn't prohibit, that whisky is freely sold in the large cities, and the officials whose business it is to prevent such violation of the law lift not a finger. One of the first temperance men in the State lately said, "Out here in Bath a minister was urging the prosecution of an atrocious saloon, and the lawyer to whom he applied asked, 'Are you not a Mason?' to which the minister answered, 'I am.' 'Well,' returned the attorney, 'the keeper of that saloon is a Mason and you had better let him alone.' This minister, for all I know to the contrary, was a good man, but the lodge Robespierre was too much for him. So the case was dropped and the saloon went on doing its fearful work to which the sharp, short death agony of the guillotine was mercy itself."

"But Masonry is a good thing," some among you plead. "Bad men get into it, and so they do into our churches and Sunday-schools."

Margaret Fuller once wrote, "No institution can be good which does not tend to improve the individual"—which is only the words of our Saviour in another form, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Heart-broken wives and mothers, whose husbands and sons now filling drunkards' graves, took their first glass of liquor in connection with a Masonic lodge meeting, answer me, Is Masonry a good thing tried by this test? At a Knight Templar Conclave in Columbus $2,000 was spent for a single supper and ball. It was held in the Park Rink, and while the ball was going on (impurity and the drink habit are Siamese twins, and it may be said in passing that the belle of the evening was a woman of notorious character) there was a constant procession from the Rink to the Park saloon. These facts are vouched for by Christian men in that city. Was a lodge celebration ever known, Masons, Odd-fellows or Knights of Pythias, that did not wind off with a banquet and a dance? When these same Knight Templars visited Chicago, every saloon and house of ill-fame in the city joined in a general jubilation. They expected to make great gains, and if the newspaper reports told the truth, were not disappointed.

I do not say that every Knight Templar, I do not even affirm that a majority in that assemblage, passed through the smoke and sulphur of those pits of hell, yawning to receive them body and soul; but I do ask, Can an institution of which such things are said "tend to improve the individual?" Does he not rather need superhuman strength to keep himself from being dragged down to its own shameful level? Try the church, try the Sunday-school by the same test. It is a poor rule that won't work both ways. The Society of Christian Endeavor have lately visited Cleveland, but nowhere have I seen in the daily prints the least intimation that the saloon-keepers of that city hailed their arrival with special gladness.

But what does this "good institution" say for itself? The Voice of Masonry thus authoritatively asserts, "There is nothing in the obligations taken by a Master Mason which prohibits him from keeping a saloon, or selling as a beverage intoxicating liquors."

Odd-fellowship is by some people considered as Masonry in a more respectable form, mildly diluted as it were. But though it sets up considerable pretensions to the name of a temperance order, one of their greatest authorities, White's Digest, tells us, Art. 975, that "lodges cannot abridge the liberty of the citizen, nor dictate to him what he shall eat nor what he shall drink;" and in Art. 976, it informs us that a petition being presented to the Grand Lodge to prohibit members from selling liquor, it was decided that it was contrary to the spirit and policy of the institution to pass any law on the subject referred to. Though under the pressure of public sentiment all the lodges in the land declare for temperance, does this change "the spirit and policy of the institution?" Was Robespierre a different man when secretly plotting to enthrone Charles Edward, than he was when he sent Louis XVI. to the guillotine?

Women of the W. C. T. U., you are harmless as doves; will you be also wise as serpents? Shall Robespierre continue to join hands in secret with the tyrant who is strangling America's liberties, and making the lives of so many of your sex bitterer than a thousand deaths? Will you have smiles for him and soft words? Will you believe his professions of friendship for you and your sacred cause, with these facts before your eyes? Daughters of the King, princesses of heaven's bloodroyal, you bear Ithuriel's spear. You can unmask him if you will; for you live in the day of which it is written, "There is nothing hid which shall not be manifested, neither anything kept secret but that it should come abroad."

Wellesley, Mass.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

There is peace in power; the men who speak
With the loudest tongues do least;
For the surest sign of a mind that is weak
Is its want of power to rest.
It is only the lightest water that flies
From the sea on a windy day;
And the deep blue ocean never replies
To the sybilant voice of the spray.

When the sun is set and the stars are bright,
It is then that the soul sees clearest;
It is when earth sinks in the arms of night
That the Spirit of God draws nearest.
Sweet is home to the mariner's eyes,
And the heart of youth is lightest.
From the storm-swept hills how blue the skies!
And the tear-dimmed eyes are brightest.

And so, we march to the bugle note,
Which the angel lips are sounding,
With hearts as light as the mariner's boat
Afar o'er the green waves bounding.
What wonder the heart looks up with faith,
And our spirits with pleasure thrill,
To think how He led through earth's dark path,
And taught us to be still.

Steamburgh, N. Y.

CHICAGO IN MR. STEAD'S MIRROR.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

"If Christ Came to Chicago; A plea for the union of all who love in the service of all who suffer" is the title of William T. Stead's remarkable book which has lately drawn upon its author severer criticism than any other recent publication. The book is remarkable alike for the boldness of its statements as well as for the vigor of their presentation. I have read it with some care, and desire to present the readers of the Cynosure with a partial and brief review.

First, let me say negatively, that Mr. Stead does not deserve to be rebuked for showing the city of Chicago her sins, both social and municipal. It is well that there should once in a while arise a prophet that shall heed the command to "Cry aloud and spare not. Lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their trangressions and the house of Jacob their sins." We ought rather to thank him for his great industry and faithfulness, even though some things may seem exaggerated, and in his haste some excellences have been overlooked.

2. Mr. Stead does not deserve criticism for coming merely as a visitor from the old world and undertaking to arraign our institutions before the bar of Christian civilization. The answer of the old Roman to the question, "What business have you to meddle with this matter?" was, "It concerns humanity and therefore concerns me, for I, too, am a man." This answer is as timely to-day as it was then. The great English-speaking people are indeed one family, with many interests in common. No greater kindness can be shown to the American people than kindly to tell them of their faults and make suggestions for their removal.

3. It is not true that the book has immoral tendencies. It is true that the author reaches conclusions from which many moralists will dissent. There is, too, a seeming sympathy with some of the criminal classes which is hardly consistent with inflexible justice; but there runs through the book a profound abhorrence of that which is evil, and a tender sympathy with all who suffer. If he has been specially severe on the rich and on Christians, it is on the principle that "where much is given much will be required, and to whomsoever men have committed much, of them will they ask the more."

Passing over his indictment of municipal wrong-doing, I notice his arraignment of the churches and the good people of Chicago; for what he says of them is not less true of Christians elsewhere. In some, if not all, cases he has given honor to whom honor was due, but such are surely the exceptions and not the rule in our churches. In his chapter on "the churches of the sects," he says:

"I shall never forget the almost overpowering sense of sympathy and sorrow which overwhelmed me on the morning of the conference at Central Music Hall. I had seen the brutalization of men by drink and vice until the human, let alone the divine, image had almost disappeared, and the still sadder sight of women, who were somebody's daughters, continuing in a life of vice from the terrible conviction that there was no escape. A feeling of sorrow for these people—a feeling of bitter heartache at the thought of my own inability to do them any good, was after a time swallowed up by a new emotion which took possession of me, almost in spite of myself. I felt so sorry for Christ!....The halo of supernatural glory that surrounds his tragic death cannot disguise the fact that so far as mere physical pain was concerned, his sufferings could not compare with that of uncounted myriads of his brethren who have gone down to the invisible world amid protracted agonies of torture, compared with which the way of the cross was a comparatively swift and easy relief. But when I had this fresh realization of the greatness of the sorrow that he came to relieve, and which still remains unstaunched, and of the maimed souls crushed and mangled out of all semblance to the divine image, the sense of failure of it all, the thwarting of the great aspiration came home to me with a freshness almost inconceivable, considering how long I had been familiar with some of the saddest sorrows of the world. Was it for this he came to earth? Is the 19th precinct of the first ward with its poor girls in Fourth Avenue houses, and its toughs and crooks down 'the levee,' the fruit that he might expect after 1900 years? It is this which is the real passion of our Lord. The unabandoned sin, the unstaunched tears, the abounding bitterness of the human heart,—these are the real crown of thorns which the world has crushed upon his wounded brow. The passion and cross are for us day by day and hour by hour and moment by moment. Nor will he cease from dwelling among us, the Living Word made manifest in the flesh, as long as men and women live and love, and sin and suffer, and go down forlorn into the pit.

"Then there came the comforting thought in the midst of it all, that He who saw it all from the beginning never lost heart, never struck a sail to a fear, never doubted, even when the sky was blackest and hope seemed dim; that God was love, and in the end we shall see as he saw, that even these things will work out for those who suffer and those who bleed a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. If Christ came, his first instinct would be to seek out those who are called by his name, if only to understand how it was that these things were so, after these years, and what they were doing to banish evils which banish love from the lives of so many of his brethren."

His first arraignment is of the Roman Catholic church, with its vast resources and 500,000 adherents in the city, including the Mayor, ninety per cent of the police force, eighty per cent of the members of the fire department, and sixty-seven per cent of the school teachers. The great powers of this great organization, so capable of concentration and efficiency, he describes as "doing ecclesiastical goose step in the parade ground, but refusing to go forth to battle against the powers of wickedness in high places, and against all the tyrannies that oppress the poor, because, forsooth, it might endanger the church and create difficulties with some of its members!"

The non-Catholic churches with about 200,000 members, though they give a somewhat better showing, are largely "at ease in Zion." "Two services a day on Sunday, and a prayer-meeting possibly once or twice a week, can hardly be said to be making the best use of an investment in real estate which is estimated to amount at least to $13,000,000. All money sunk in church buildings is God's trust-money. If it belonged to any one else, and were invested by trustees, so that it yielded interest only one day in seven, the trustees would be sent to the penitentiary, or to the lunatic asylum." "Instead of regarding the members as saved souls, come together to save others, the tendency is too much to regard them as the members of a select club, meeting together for their spiritual edification and for harmless æsthetic indulgence."

The biting sarcasm of comparing those who go to church and "sit and sing themselves away to everlasting bliss" to an opium-joint is timely.

"A long-pigtailed heathen comes to the door. The atmosphere is not incense-laden, but through the dim ight you see reclining on bunks persons, each of whom has a pipe, and is carefully putting a little pill of opium into it in order that they may smoke it. You sit down awhile and talk to that Chinese, and after a time you find that there is a wonderful spiritual resemblance between the opium joint and the fashionable church; because the poor wretch who is lying there wishes to get away from the world and its cares, and the turmoil and troubles of this evil life, and he likes to smoke himself away for a brief season into everlasting life—into a realm which is not a real realm, and has no bearing on real life. That man feels good. I sympathize with him."

There is at least a modicum of truth in the comparison. Selfishness in religion is the curse of the church and its possessors. How contrary to the admonition to deny ourselves and take up the cross daily; or to the statement that "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."

Nor have the obligations to the state been less perfectly set forth.

"The community that we call the state stands more than ever in need of being directed, controlled and dominated by the moral sense of the community. The state must have a conscience, as well as a will and a mind. That community will be best governed in which the moral sense of its members has most authority. This is but a restatement of the old proposition that the society that endeavors to do what is right, will be better governed than one whose members subordinate right to considerations of selfish interests, and who act on the unavowed but practical belief that it is quite possible to cheat God. Mr. Bigelow's caution: 'You'll have to get up early if you want to take in God,' has been quite forgotten by many citizens, who imagine that they can run a town safe and well by entering into a practical copartnership with the devil.

"The religious side of politics has not yet entered the minds of men. What is wanted is a revival of civic faith, a quickening of the spiritual life in the political sphere, the inspiring of men and women with the conception of what may be done towards the salvation of the world, if they will but bring to bear on public affairs the same spirit of self-sacrificing labor that so many thousands manifest in the ordinary drudgery of evangelistic work."

His chapter on "casting out devils" has fewer good thoughts than might have been anticipated. His conception of the demons that need to be exorcised is somewhat different from that of the philanthropists who have lived long in the city. They are, "Plutocracy, religious intolerance, the liquor traffic, gambling and the social evil." It is here more than anywhere else he shows his want of harmony with leading reformers. With reference to all these evils, except the last, he would restrain and regulate rather than prohibit. In his conception of an ideal Chicago, he represents the municipal saloon where light wines and beers are sold by the city, with no personal profit. He strongly favors the Norwegian system as the best method of restraint.

He forgets that it is not the method, but the thing itself that constitutes the evil. Christ made no compromises with iniquity. God said to ancient Israel that they were to make no concessions to the Canaanites; that their cup of iniquity was full. This is at least true of liquor-sellers. Nothing short of the entire suppression of the traffic in intoxicants will meet the needs of society. If it takes one year or one hundred, it is better than to consent to the wrong.

When Christ comes to Chicago—as come he will—there will be a state of society infinitely better than the picture that Mr. Stead has given us; and though we must give him credit for an honest effort to do good, we will do well to remember that the day of the Lord is imminent, for "Behold he cometh, and every eye shall see him." "But who shall abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap; and he....shall purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering of righteousness." Mal. 3: 2, 3.

Oberlin, O.

SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

DR. W. A. STEVENS LEADS THE GENERAL DISCUSSION.

I am somewhat like the preacher who had a nice church built and labored there a long time, and finally his congregation desired to get rid of him, so they invited him to retire that they might get a younger man and a more vigorous one; and when he arose to preach his last sermon he said to them, "Brethren and sisters, I have not been idle all the time, knowing that you were going to get rid of me; I have been engaged as chaplain of the penitentiary; my text is, 'I now go to prepare a place for you.'"

Now, so far as Freemasonry is concerned, I want to say that it needs no defense at any man's hands, no matter what it has been charged with here to-night. It has had such imbecile members as George Washington, Lafayette and Benjamin Franklin, and all but three of the signers of the Declaration of Independence belonged to it; so it must have been filled with a weak sort of men in its early days.

That is enough of a defense for Freemasonry, without going into the questions raised at all.

I shall differ with many, but I want to say to you that neither the Freemasons, nor the A. P. A., nor the Orangemen, nor any one of them is a secret society—not one of them. They are secret societies only in the same sense that a bank or a church organization are secret societies, because they have secrets within their own body. The A. P. A. is not a secret society. Its declaration of principles is published broadcast through the land. They are not secret societies, but societies with some secrets.

I want to say further, that the only secret society on God's earth to-day is that secret society which is governed by him who sits on the Tiber and is its commander-in-chief. Their declaration of the principles they intend to carry out in our public schools and in our republican institutions, to steal all the money they can, can nowhere be found in any book that I have ever seen. Now, these are facts. That is the only political secret society that exists to-day.

I want to say further, that it was the teachings and principles of Freemasonry that separated church and state in Italy, in Mexico and in Brazil, and not as a party either, but by the inculcation of the principles of Freemasonry, that all men were born free and equal and stand on the same foundation before Almighty God.

If you want to see the truth of what I say in regard to that one secret organization, look to the appointments of the mayor of the city of Chicago, and those of the President. They all belong to the same papal party, in each and every instance whatsoever. Every official in the city of Chicago, and inspector of police, belongs to the same political party, except one.

Now, I want to call attention to one thing. He speaks of this political society and calls it a church. I have no objection to any man's religion. I don't care, so far as he is concerned, whether he worships Chinese gods or monkeys or anything else, but it is as a political organization and not as a church that the A. P. A. attacks it; it is not attacking it as a religious organization. Therefore they are not fighting with any man's religion, as he would have you believe here this evening.

Watch their history in all the countries where that society has controlled the government. Look at Italy. Look at Chili, where this party has been in control, and there you have 60 per cent of the population illegitimate, as can be proven by the statistics, and that is the political party that the last speaker tried to uphold before the Sunset Club to-night.

ADDRESS OF PROF. ELLIOT WHIPPLE, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

That publicity should prevail in the conduct of all public affairs has come to be an axiom with all who have given unbiased and philosophic attention to the principles essential to the success of a republican form of government.

To the support of this proposition two witnesses have testified here before you and I wish now to summon another.

Says Dr. Francis Lieber, the eminent author, whose text book on "Civil Liberty and Self-Government" is used in our leading colleges: "Publicity begets confidence, and confidence is indispensable for the government of free countries; it is the soul of loyalty in jealous freemen.

"This necessary influence is two-fold, confidence in the government, and confidence of society in itself.

"It is with reference to the latter that secret political societies in free countries are essentially injurious to all liberty, in addition to their preventing the growth and development of manly character, and promoting vanity; that they are, as all secret societies must inherently be, submissive to secret superior will and decision, a great danger in politics, and unjust to the rest of the citizens, by deciding on public measures and men without the trial of public discussion, and by bringing the influence of a secretly united body to bear on the decision or election.

"Secret societies in free countries are cancers against which history teaches us that men who value freedom ought to guard themselves most attentively."

That is the testimony of Dr. Lieber.

Our courts are open to the public and I think no one would advocate a return to star chamber methods, even in view of the flood of filth that sometimes disgraces our civilization. The proceedings of our National Legislature have been conducted with open doors for a hundred years; and the fact that the Senate sits with closed doors when in executive session for the purpose of considering the fitness of Presidential nominees for offices, and unsettled questions of foreign diplomacy, constitutes an apparent rather than a real exception to this rule. The necessity for the utmost possible publicity in the conduct of the executive department of government has had recent illustrations in the Hawaiian bungle, and the stuffed pay rolls of a city that shall be nameless. If the doings of our judges, legislators and executive officers should be subject to public inspection, is it not equally necessary that the processes by which these officials are selected and put in power should likewise be open.

We guard with utmust care all the proceedings of the actual election of officials, from the choice of a town constable up to the counting of the electoral votes for President in the presence of both houses of Congress, and any attempt at secrecy is rightfully regarded as evidence of fraud. But even more important than the election itself is the caucus at which the nominations are made; and right here, at the very source of political power, the secret political society proposes to exert its potent and baneful spell, poisoning the fountain which ought to pour forth a current of pure, healthful, life-giving influences.

Are there great evils to be removed? Turn on the search light of publicity and public opinion will do the rest, whether it be to overthrow a Boss Tweed or enforce the law against the sale of diseased cattle for food. Although secret political methods are plainly out of place in a country of free speech, free press, and fair play, the question may be raised as to their admissibility in a land where these things are denied, but history bears testimony against them there as everywhere else. Search the annals of human struggles for freedom throughout, and see if you can find a single well-authenticated instance in which a secret oath-bound league has ever succeeded in changing the course of public affairs in favor of the real interests of freedom and humanity. Brutus and Cassius "removed" Cæsar, but they could not resurrect the Roman republic. The Nihilists destroyed Alexander II. of Russia, and with him perished the movement for constitutional government in that land of tyranny, misery and despair.

When the conditions are ripe for the overthrow of tyranny or the introduction of a larger measure of self government, an open appeal to the people and a manly, courageous attack upon the intrenchments of arbitrary power have ever proved more successful than cowardly plottings behind closed doors. It was an unpremeditated, open revolt that drove Tarquin the Proud from his throne and established in Rome a republic destined to endure for half a millennium. The mightiest movement toward freedom of thought and self government, as well as freedom of worship, which this world has ever known was begun when Luthur nailed his "theses" to the church door at Wittemburg. The founding of the Dutch republic, and the evolution of English civil liberty, from the "Magna Charta" to the "Bill of Rights," are filled with examples of how brave men, standing sturdily for their rights, won battles for the right in open, manly fashion. Our own history furnishes abundant illustrations which I need not take time to mention; but I desire to call the attention of those who believe in secret methods in politics to a comparison of the history of the great Know-nothing party, which was organized in the early fifties, with that of the Republican party, originated in the same decade. Secrecy naturally arouses suspicion and leads to hatred, strife and disaster. It is the favorite method of the enemies of liberty, justice and righteousness.

Jesuitism, Mormonism, the Mafia, and other similar organizations that I might name—the bare mention of each is an argument in itself.

A secret organization, although started by good men for good purposes, speedily falls under the management of bad men, because secrecy requires deception, and unscrupulous men can use the devil's tools more successfully than good men can.

Allow me to conclude by calling to the witness stand the man whom we rightly honor as "The Father of His Country." "George Washington, what do you think of secret societies in politics?" Here is his answer, an extract from his farewell address:

"All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive to this fundamental principle (the duty of every individual to obey the established government) and of fatal tendency.

"They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force, to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation the will of a party, often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community; and according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans, digested by common counsels, and modified by mutual interests.

"However combinations and associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterward the very engines which had lifted them to unjust dominion."

—The Midland lately reported that the ratio of men to women in the United Presbyterian church was greater than in other evangelical denominations, and that their opposition to the lodge did not work to their disadvantage. The Christian Conservator adds a comment: "We think the ratio is just as great in the true United Brethren church, and, possibly, in several others; but it certainly is right in accounting for this high ratio on the ground of the church's anti-secrecy principles, and in presenting this fact as a refutation of the claim that to hold such principles hinders the growth of a church. The fact is, anti-secrecy churches are more rigid in their other requirements for membership and execute discipline more rigidly than the popular and populous churches of the day, and this, rather than their anti-secrecy principles, must account for their smallness and their slow growth. But such churches have not only a greater ratio of men to women than other churches, but also a much greater ratio of active and efficient members to the enrolled membership than other churches. They have a consecrated rather than a congregated membership, a membership representing principles rather than popular sentiments, or public opinion."

The West Park Board of this city voted last week to discharge all the carpenters in their employ not members of a secret trades union. The demand for this act of cowardice and turpitude was made by the unions "in accordance with the well-known position of his Excellency the Governor." The Park Boards are Altgeld's creatures, and made no objection to the shameful request.

LABOR UNIONS.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORKINGMAN.

THE LABOR CHURCH.

(From an interview with Tom Mann, the English Labor organizer.)

"I cannot say that the churches influence powerfully the lives of the people. It is true that where the parson has got the right grip of social questions he is a power for good, and that is shown by the confidence and trust which men like some of the clergy inspired during the miners' strike of last summer. In South Wilts I have seen that there is a great chasm between the laborers and the church; and the reason why so many earnest workingmen have not found the churches congenial places is mainly—I will not say altogether—because many of those who utter the words 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven,' not only find nothing to complain of in the conditions, but would even make it their express purpose to thwart and frustrate all who strive to alter them.

"'What is the labor church, and is it progressing?'

"'Yes; in our new party we are doing everything we can to form these churches, and we have some flourishing branches. Let those who say that the labor church makes a divorce between religion and practical politics go to the brotherhood church in the Southgate Road, of which Mr. Bruce Wallace is the minister, or to Mr. Belcher's at Hackney, and there he would find earnest and devout worship going on. It is a practical religious movement, and I should be very sorry to see the day come when religion will have no hold on the working classes. May I again repeat that it is the practical part of life which must be kept to the fore.'"

FOR WHAT CHRIST CAME.

(Rev. James Brand, D.D., of the First Church, Oberlin, in "Seminary Record.")

"When Christ came, the religion of Palestine had almost lost its hold upon the poor. Those who attended the churches were the well-dressed and well-to-do in the world. The bulk of the people were neglected and neglecting. Christ's mission, therefore, while intended for all, was especially to the poor. They were the sheep peculiarly without a shepherd. It was the proof that the Messiah had come that the poor had the Gospel preached to them. His peculiar relation to them was the beginning of a social revolution which is not yet completed. In Palestine, under the Cæsars, as in other countries and ages, the word 'people' was a word of contempt and derision. 'The people' had always been simply used by rulers and leaders of society. In all changes and revolutions, this capricious and dangerous element, 'the people,' had to be recognized, reckoned with, feared, courted, or hated as a force lying beneath all movements and machinations."

"Jesus was anointed to preach the Gospel to the poor. His aim was not to manage or use them, but to enable them to use themselves. He refused to recognize the miserable social distinctions which men had erected out of their own arrogance and pride. This dangerous element, which kings had feared and aristocrats had scorned, were not to be restrained by repressive laws, but made a law unto themselves. They were not to be tutored into a quiet subordinate class, but raised by an inward divine impulse to a higher manhood and a self-governing intelligence. Accordingly, Christ comes as a poor man, not born in Cæsar's palace but in a manger. He identifies himself with the laboring people outside of luxurious circles, that he may touch the poor, sit at their tables or go hungry with them, disarm their prejudices, and tell them the glad tidings of peace.

"Now, I affirm that in many quarters there is evidence that the church life of to-day has drifted into substantially the same relation to the masses of the poor that the synagogue religion of Palestine sustained to them in the days of Christ. It is certain that a great change has taken place. Christianity began among the poor, and the question was how to reach the rich and the powerful. To-day, it is chiefly among the well-to-do classes, and the question is 'how to reach the masses.' In all fairness, however, we must concede that in the country at large, the majority of churches are made up of the families of the laboring people. We are also bound to take account of the fact that the natural tendency of Christianity is to transform the church of the ignorant poor into that of the educated rich. A city church may begin to-day when every member is a day-laborer, and in twenty-five years those very day-laborers may be the residents of the avenue. All this is to the credit of the Christian church. It is manifestly a sign of the triumph of the church that it now contains the very class which at first despised it. Moreover, how can it be otherwise than true that the church should come to contain also the culture of the country, when nearly all our educational institutions are the children of the church? This, too, is to the credit of Christianity.

"But conceding all this, the fact remains that the peril of the church, because it is the peril of human nature, lies in its tendency to court the wealthy and avoid contact with the wretched and the poor. The awful contrast between the luxurous city church and the haunts of ignorance and moral degradation, confronting each other, almost in the same street, puts this beyond debate. Could anything be more un-Christlike? Who are the poor and wretched? Why do we call them them the dangerous classes? The answer is, they are dangerous because in danger, because unsaved, and ignorant of God."

WHAT THE LABOR ORGANIZERS THINK OF CHRIST.

(From an address before the Minneapolis Baptist Association by Rev. S. E. Price, published in the "Standard.")

A few days ago I called upon one of the labor leaders in Minneapolis. After telling him my purpose in the call, I asked him if the workingmen in their efforts to get justice as they regard it counted upon the churches for any aid whatever. He blankly told me "No." I asked him why they did not. He said that they thought the preachers were supported by the men who employed the wage workers and that for this reason our mouths were stopped. I commended him for his honesty and asked him another question: What is the attitude of the workingmen generally toward the churches? He said that it was a hard question for him to answer, since they did not deal with religious questions, but in his judgment and as far as he had observed he said that it was mere indifference, that so far as he knew there was very little open hostility against the churches. I asked him how the churches could help the laboring men; he said the preachers have the ear of the public and that they could look into these questions and hold up the rights and wrongs specifically and thus help to agitate the matter. The interview did me good, to say the least.

W. T. Stead says: "When on my first Sunday in Chicago I was asked to address the Trades and Labor Assembly. I was earnestly cautioned against saying a word about religion. 'If you say anything about God or the church or religion they will hiss you off the platform. This crowd takes no stock in these things.'" (If Christ Came to Chicago, page 395.) Mr. Stead further says that he was assured that not five per cent of the members of the labor unions in Chicago ever darken the doors of a place of worship; and this five per cent are chiefly Catholics.

Mr. Pomeroy is among the labor leaders in Chicago. Recently an attack has been made upon the law of Illinois limiting child labor. Some of the wealthiest manufacturers retained one of the strongest legal firms in the State to present the case to the Supreme Court with the design of having the law declared unconstitutional. Mr. Pomeroy challenged the ministers and churches to take issue on this question. Among other things, he is reported as saying; "Is the church the protector of women and children? Let us see..... Where is the church in this controversy?' How many sermons have been hurled from the pulpit against this threatened infamy, this huckstering of childhood, this immolation of feeble women on the altar of greed? 'By their works ye shall know them.' Who are the members of this soulless manufacturers' association? Prominent pillars of the church—men whose consciences are as hard as their marrow bones are soft. I charge the church as being tacitly guilty of complicity in this premeditated crime. The church has guilty knowledge of this most damnable scheme, and forgets to call down damnation on the heads of the men who conceived it."

Upon another occasion this same man is reported to have spoken of Christ in the following language: "I am pleased to have my friend know that the labor people have cheered the name of Christ, that carpenter of Judea, the sweet pathos of whose life has softened the stone in the bosoms of men, whose teachings have made the world better beyond measure; Christ, whose fraternity was as broad as eternity, and as immeasurable as is space, whose mission among men was to teach them brotherly love; Christ, whose name is the synonym of fellowship, whose lessons were love, whose words were love, whose every act was fathered by his mighty love and pity for the weak, the poor, the persecuted and the helpless—love for every man, woman, child and beast of the field; Christ, the halo of whose glory makes the sunshine dim, the magic of whose name makes the evil hand to halt; Christ, whose church was the world, whose pulpit was the breasts of men; Christ, whose religion was humanity. No wonder the sons and daughters of toil cheer his name. Nor can you separate Christ from his church. His church, I say; for his church is within the inner temples of the pulsating hearts of the people of the world, and in listening to his sermons they forget those of the 'salaried soothsayer.'"

Last summer, Thomas J. Morgan, a socialist from Chicago, was invited to lecture at Chautauqua on the attitude of the workingmen toward the churches. He accepted the invitation. Of course he is an extremist, but we want to know his opinion, for his brood is increasing. I wish that it were possible for every Christian to read his address and the reply to it made by Dr. C. R. Henderson. Among other things the socialist said: "The organizations by which laboring men seek to better their conditions, the efforts to take the infants out of the factories and place them in the schools, and the women out of the factories and mints and place them in the homes, have all been outside of the churches, and often we have run up against the representatives of the churches who are our antagonists. Almost to a man the ministers have stood solidly with our masters as against us. What do we ask? That the ministers should stand aloof. We ask for more leisure to think, for more of the comforts of life, for homes fit to live in, that our children shall be sent to the schools instead of to the factories. And in this the whole representative class of the church stands dumb or in open antagonism against us.

"We are dealing," he says further, "with the church not as a divine but as a human institution that must take recognition of our every-day wants, or we simply have no use for it." He emphasizes what Mr. Pomeroy says in regard to Christ in these words: "And mind you, we are not fighting Christ's teachings; of course there is no class of men who respect him and his teachings better than we do" In concluding his address he said: We socialists are engaged in a great intellectual work that seeks to fit men mentally for a higher state of society. We have been asking the preachers for aid. We have been asking them to let us in their churches. Every door was closed tightly against us. Our meetings are held in saloons because no other place is open to us. We realize these conditions and are trying to lift ourselves higher. We will receive any aid that you may give us, but we don't look for any; our experience has discouraged us in that direction." It is a sad comment on Christian ministers and churches that any man should have the slightest reason for uttering such words.

Dr. T. Edwin Brown, in his "Studies in Modern Socialism," says that the number who remain outside of Christian or church influence, the proportion who are laboring men is not greater than the proportion who are well to-do. And further he says: "I do not know of a church where the badge of the honest laboring man will exclude him." However, in a foot-note on the same page he says: "This is only my experience. A good many testimonies have reached me which constrain to a sad modification of these statements. It is to be feared that there are too many churches where the Nazarene Carpenter would receive anything but a cordial welcome." Page 205.

In the report of the Senate committee on labor are these words: "One of the reasons why the workingman does not attend church is his inability, if he has a family, to come up to the social requirements of church membership in dress and in contributions to the various objects that the church carries along with it."

Dr. Strong in The New Era, gives this significant incident: "A clergyman of New York told me some years ago, that when he was a lay-member of a down-town church, he started out with a friend in obedience to the command to 'Go out into the highways' to gather up the gamins to recruit their Sunday-school. Their efforts were successful. But as the school began to grow, members of the church began to be frightened. Some of the parents said: 'Why, we don't want that kind of children in our Sunday-school. If you are going to bring in such children we will take ours and go home.' The Christly work had to stop."

REFORM NEWS.

THE PACIFIC COAST CONVENTION.

PROGRAM.

The following program has been prepared for the convention to be held at Philomath, Oregon, September 26th and 27th next.

WEDNESDAY, THE 26TH:—2:00 P. M. Devotional exercises, conducted by the president.

2:30 P. M. Address of welcome by Prof. L. B. Baldwin of the College of Philomath, and pastor of the church.

Response by Rev. S. Mathew of Canby, Oregon, vice-president of the Association.

Question-box opened by Rev. H. L. Barkley, D.D., of Woodburn, Oregon.

EVENING:—Devotional exercises for thirty minutes, conducted by Rev. John Watson of Dayton, Oregon.

Address by Bishop Wm. Dillon, D.D., of Salem, Oregon. Subject: "The Conflict of the Secret Lodge System with New Testament Christianity"

THURSDAY A. M.:—8:30. Devotions led by Rev. A. S. Copley of Albany, Oregon.

9:00. Address by Rev. W. H. Pruett of Weston, Oregon.

9:30. Report of Secretary and Agent of the Association.

10:00. Address: Odd-fellowship. Rev John Watson and others.

Question-box opened by Rev. James Parker, Philomoth, Oregon.

AFTERNOON:—2:00. Devotion led by Rev. Joseph Taylor of the Evangelical Association.

2:30. Address by Rev. R. Loggan of Dallas, Oregon. Subject: 'The Oaths of Blue Lodge Masonry."

3:00 Address by Rev. H. F. Wallace of Portland. Alternate, W. J. Feemster, Wells, Oregon.

Question-box opened by Rev. Roland D. Grant, Portland. Alternate, Rev. Little, Albany, Oregon.

EVENING:—Prayer by Rev. L. S. Fisher, Monmouth.

Addresses by Revs. G. E. Hawes and Roland D. Grant of Portland.

Quite a number of others have consented to speak if there is a vacancy in the program. We desire all to come prepared. Let there be a general discussion of each topic.

There will be free entertainment for all. The Southern Pacific R R will sell tickets at reduced rates to those attending the convention.

This program has been made out amid the arduous duties of the agent and lecturer. Let no one feel slighted; but arrange to come and have a good time together. In "union there is strength." The cause is worthy of our best efforts.

P. B. WILLIAMS, Agent

IN CAMP.

FIRST NOTE FROM ANTI-SECRECY DAY AT HEBRONVILLE.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 16, 1894

DEAR CYNOSURE:—This is the camp meeting season. All through New England as elsewhere people gather from every direction in groves and various resorts for pleasure, and to listen to a discussion of the subjects most interesting to them. When the management permit, lectures and literature on the anti-secrecy line can be presented with good effect. Such work and literature is always welcome at the camp of Christian Workers meeting each August at Hebronville, Mass. Bro. A. A. Hoyt, president of this association, is an all around reformer and not afraid to oppose all evil as he understands it.

I have been attending the meetings at this camp for the past five days, and have found many opportunities to get good and I trust to do good. The weather has been favorable and the spiritual atmosphere invigorating. Days were set apart for various organizations to present their views. Monday was Prohibition day. Tuesday the ladies of the Rhode Island W. C. T. U. had the platform. Wednesday was given to the discussion of the secret lodge system, under the auspices of the New England Christian Association.

Hons. J. A. Williams and H. B. Metcalf of Rhode Island and ex-Mayor J. C. Brock of New Bedford, Mass., were among the Prohibition speakers. Mr. Metcalf reminded us that "a nation's prosperity is represented by her ability to save men, instead of her ability to execute them." There is a volume in this sentence. "The trend of our nation," he continued, "is not in the right direction, because the courage of men is not equal to their convictions." The sad condition of public sentiment was deplored. When such a magazine as Harpers' Weekly advocates that because the evil of the saloon and brothel cannot be suppressed therefore they should be legalized, public sentiment must be terribly depraved. Mr. J. M. Fisher of Attleboro thought the future outlook for reform very dark. As he felt he could not be a Christian without being a reformer he was therefore on that side.

One glance at the long list of ladies who came to set forth the work and claims of the W. C. T. U. would convince the most critical that they were among the noble of the earth. Nothing but a burning love for Christ, and the rescue of precious souls, could cause them to endure the hardships and trials which come in their work.

Anti-secrecy day brought out the largest number I think of any week day. This was in part due to the education in progress in this section for the few years past. People are apt to be interested in what they know the most about. The "old gentleman" with his charts is getting pretty well known in the Hebronville region. We learned that some of the lodgemen say this must not be allowed to go on; "Mr. Stoddard will have to be cared for." The New England agent will doubtless report those attending and taking part in the services of "our day." Should I begin to mention the names of friends attending I should not know where to stop. I accomplished something by getting readers for the Cynosure and in tract distribution as usual. I find the pressure of the times grows heavier as the months go by. Many of our friends are poor; some are compelled to dispense with their paper. Notwithstanding, the New England list is growing. Let us have courage to stem the tide, for we trust brighter days are to come.

W. B. STODDARD.

A BUSY WORKER.

WHO CAN HELP THE NEW ORLEANS LECTURER?

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 16, 1894.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have visited, preached and lectured during the month at quite a number of places in and outside of Orleans parish. I have visited Carrollton, Gretna, Amesville, Algiers, (Cut-off, Turnsburg, St. Bernard), Violets, Ironton, Oakville, Lees, Pearlington, Buras Settlement, Kennerville and Camp Parapet. I have distributed tracts in each place, and lectured to day-schools, Sunday-schools, and preached. I have held some sixty or more private or family prayer meetings and conferences. Not one of these meetings have been held without mention being made of the secret lodge evil.

I have visited several social gatherings in this city at Spanish Fort, and distributed tracts. By invitation I have preached or lectured in a number of churches. Rev. I. H. Hall, Congregationalist, and an old N. C. A. friend, has kindly invited me to preach for his people. I have recently returned from down the coast, and will return to Grand Prairie Saturday (D. V.), where, through the kindness of Bro. J H. Baily, four appointments await me. Rev. G. H. Henderson has cordially invited me to Mississippi City, Miss.

If I had means to do the traveling I could be busy continually. I have been invited to Houston and El Paso, Texas, but lack of funds prevent me from responding. If anti-secrecy friends who have some of the Lord's money to spare would make a donation of about $300 to employ a lecturer in the South about six months, much good would be done. Thousands are being hoodwinked and blindly lead into secret lodges without the least idea of their evil. Pray for our success and deliverance from both the secret lodge and rum curse. Yours in the work,

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

Children forget very quickly what has been told to them, but they never forget what they have made or what they have found out for themselves. "Our pedentary and our rage to instruct are constantly leading us to teach children things they ought to teach themselves."—Pestalozzi.

CORRESPONDENCE.

OUTSIDE THE WALLS.

MR. MOODY'S NEIGHBORS AT NORTHFIELD—RUM, ROMANISM AND RIMMONISM.

Hinsdale, N. H., Aug. 13, 1894.

While with thousands of others I have spent the past two weeks in attendance upon the very interesting services at the home of D. L. Moody, the founder of the great schools at Northfield, Mass., and where a great work for morality and religion is being done, I have still had time to look at some few things outside the beautiful Massachusetts town.

Over the line in New Hampshire some six or eight miles lie several busy villages. In one of them, not only three drug stores and a hotel are defying both the State law and the law of God, but at a certain "lake," every day in the week, crowds assemble and every variety of vice flourishes openly and without interference.

Two miles down the river comes another village whose mills have ground out fortunes, and where one moral cess-pool for forty years has sold liquid damnation. Only last year a rum-crazed victim shot the bar-tender. He died, and when the officers came to arrest the murderer he was allowed to go to his room, where he cut his throat, dying soon after. Even at the inquest, at the double funeral on the Sabbath, before the two victims were put in the earth, and since, that bar has been open, and no one objects.

No one dares object; because not only the town and county, but the entire State, is in the hands of secret conspirators. No matter if many Masons are "good men," the leaders are dangerous, heartless, and to oppose their wishes is to be secretly pursued, boycotted, ruined!

Yet farther down the river, five miles or so above Northfield, is perhaps the most rum-and-secrecy-cursed place in America. Dante's imagination never equalled what can be seen here day or night. Under forty years' training not alone the men but even boys have been driven, coaxed or bribed into the several secret lodges.

Here, too, is seen the proof that the professed enmity between Freemasonry and Romanism is a sham, a humbug, A TRICK! In what was a clean, busy New England town years ago, the foreign element became powerful. A Roman Catholic church was built, but very unfortunately its holy father, a quite young man, was caught in a very bad place, and indicted. Masonic influence, trickery and lying interfered,—it "would cost so much and be a dirty mess." So the Attorney General quashed the indictment, but the priest had to go.

But another one came. The secretists and the priests are now together, and the result of their joint rule is seen in nine open rum-holes, and a general turning over of the town to the foreign-born element. The priest, who now occupies the fine residence connected with his church, will not need take any risks as did his youthful predecessor; for this later "father" has a very pretty little lady who alone shares with him the "parochial residence." And the dozen or more pairs in town who live without any pretence of marriage, point to this "holy" man and his woman and ask, "Is it any worse for us than it is for him?"

If Mgr. Satolli wants to see some unusual sights, let him come up into this section. In a secret club organized by high Masons not only the leaders in secrecy are found, but the young men have been lured,—a club, five of whose members recently joined the Knight Templars—and three of whom are rum-sellers. Let the Pope's representative drop in and see this "holy father," this moral teacher, not alone playing cards with the "Knights," but entering into their schemes to rule and ruin others, that they may grow rich and secure power to in due time capture the country.

Only two miles from the Northfield schools is a tavern, a low rum-hole, where a high Mason has for years debauched the surrounding country and piled up a fortune. Secrecy protects him while others go to prison.

Up the Connecticut a dozen miles is another nest of secrecy and trickery. Just across the river in New Hampshire flourishes a nest of liquor saloons. The decent people of this large town have tried to enforce the laws, but they are backed by the minions of the lodge, who profess one thing and in secret uphold law-breakers. This town is noted for several things, and a large number of its male inhabitants not only enjoy all the high-sounding titles of secretism, but Generals, Colonels, Captains and the less important military titles are as plenty as leaves on a tree.

Thus, while the Northfield gatherings—its schools and all its many advantages are doing a great and good work, it is none the less true that it is entirely surrounded by influences that are doing very much to injure and drag down what the efforts of Mr. Moody and his helpers are devotedly building up. FRANKLIN.

A NOBLE-HEARTED VOLUNTEER.

FOR THE SOUTHERN LECTURE FIELD.

I must make known to you my desire to enter fully into this reform work. But I am dependent upon continued exertions for current expenses in living. I have been a public speaker since I was sixteen years of age. My first reform work was in the anti-slavery cause when quite young, in the convention of seceders and lecturers that met in Chicago more than twenty years ago. I came then from Jasper county, Mo., with my wife. We were guests in Bro. Cook's family. In later years I have lectured more than in those days, and have been, and am now endeavoring to be posted as well as possible for anti-lodge work. One thing I'm sure of, I can work in this reform with the same zeal with which I stand up for Christ on any other line of truth. I am a member of the West Tennessee Wesleyan Methodist Conference, so my church standing will not hinder me from engaging to serve in reform work. There are many country places where I can get a hearing, and many villages along the main lines of railroad in West Tennessee where I would endeavor to "set up our banner in the name of the Lord."

You must know that I am a little more than half fledged as a worker in this glorious cause. And yet when I think of the ability and efficiency of some of the noble workers in the N. C. A., I am humbled to tears while I write. I am after work, and work of this particular kind; though I know what to expect here in the South,—reproach and ostracism. Yet conscious of the smile of the Lord, I go cheerfully on; especially as I have the witness that my labor in this direction is not in vain. Yours for reform and in the love of Jesus, C. POWERS.

PITH AND POINT.

TRACTS FOR PREVENTION.

I am glad to write that there has been no increase in the lodge here for some time. The 100 copies of "Freemasonry at a Glance" that I scattered over this country have been a great help in keeping people out of the lodge. One of the charter members of Ellsworth Lodge, who helped to influence me to join twenty-fours ago, has just quit. Others are seriously considering the matter. Now I feel that my labors are not in vain in the Lord. Pray that a real shaking up may take place here. —S. F. PROCTOR, Ellsworth, Ark.

ON THE BEACH, SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

I have met the secret devil here, and he is the old "liar." Right in the Chautauqua and camp-meetings he lifts his ugly head and feigns the image of Jesus the Christ. Public speakers talk of reforms and anti-Christs, but none seem to know anything of this most evil power of the age. Dr. Frost, a noble Baptist minister, of San Bernardino, led the Chautauqua devotional meetings with much ability, and spoke of the anti-Christ; but, on being asked by me, said: "I don't know anything of Masonry." He don't belong to any secret society. He expects to hold a three or four days' meeting on the second coming of Christ, next November, in Los Angeles. How can he rightly interpret prophecy, omitting this mighty power of secretism.—GEO. W. SHEALY, Long Branch, Cal.

LITERATURE.

THE PULLMAN STRIKE. By Wm. H. Carwardine, pastor of the First M. E. Church, Pullman, Ill. Pp. 126; paper, 25 cts. Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago.

Work has hardly been resumed at Pullman before an enterprising publisher puts a book upon the market to make his profit out of the great strike. We published last week Rev. Mr. Carwardine's letter, and approved of it. The principles set forth in the letter we like better than the story of Pullman; and very much better than the publisher's duplicity in printing a row of hovels from some back street adjoining the Pullman property, which the reader is given to understand are rented to its workmen by the Company. A friend of the author overstates his case also in the introduction, in assuming that Mr. Carwardine's judgment is final. It must be regretted that the author permitted its insertion, when a U. S. commission is sifting the case to the bottom, and may at last not agree with the conclusions of this volume. An appendix of endorsements is added. Some of the writers we personally know. Their approval does not make the book seem more valuable or reliable by any means. Nevertheless, Mr. Carwardine has given the public a statement of the Pullman trouble as he sees it, vividly and eloquently picturing the distress and bitterness of at least a part of the workmen, and enlisting our sympathies for their real and imaginary difficulties more than any other writing or statement that has yet appeared. That there are real troubles no one doubts; that some are imaginary is just as evident. One letter from an employe, written July 23d ult., says the treatment of the men was "worse than the slaves ever received in the South." It helps nobody's case to print such exaggeration, but we thank the author for not suppressing a line that reveals a large background of dissatisfaction that has no right to exist. The description of the town and its founder, and of the infidel Debs, is followed by the story of the strike, the wages, rents, shop abuses, etc. The remedy for such calamities as the Pullman strike and the Debs boycott, suggested by Mr. Carwardine, is State and National courts of arbitration, whose decision shall be final, like any court of law. But the question is not answered how the poor man would be better able to maintain his cause in such a court than in those already organized?

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE. A hymnal for the churches of Christ. By H. L. Hastings. Pp. 544. Price, $1.00. Scriptural Tract Repository. Boston.

As we have already twice reviewed this excellent volume it need only be said respecting the third edition that it is printed with same care for good workmanship as the earlier issues. The introductory remarks on sacred music are worth the price of the volume. Studied and practiced they would nearly revolutionize church music and mightily increase the power of the churches themselves. The index shows that Mr. Hastings has given personal attention to the selections and no inconsiderable part of both words and music is original. He seems to be a better poet that composer. His hymns are many of them of the "living" kind. His translation of the Dies Irae is worth a place beside Gladstone's or Dean Stanley's.

The Social Economist for August editorially discusses questions of currency in a review of Congressman Walker's bill which proposes to relieve the United States of the legal tender debt of $347,000,000 and of $130,000,000 of treasury notes, and also of the necessity of furnishing gold for export. In "The State and Social Law of Strikes" the organization of workingmen in unions is advocated as a defensive measure. "How Pullman was Built" is quoted from Mr. Stead's book on Chicago. "Women's Need of Legislative Protection" is an able review of painful facts from an English standpoint. Other articles are "State Aid to New York Railways" and "Silver, Gold and Shipping."

The Journal of Hygiene is one of the most practical and helpful of health journals, deserving a place in every home for its good advice and useful suggestions. The contributed articles in the August number are "The Army of the Tired," by Mary Lowe Dickinson, "Walt Whitman in praise of Health," "Anthropological Study of Australian Natives," "Ceylon and the Sinhalese." $1.00 per year, 46 East 21st street, New York.

The Converted Catholic for August has interesting notes of anti-Romanist reform, especially that connected with the editor's labors. George C. Needham and his wife have a joint article on the prophetic character of the present age; and a portion of the Pope's encyclical on the holy Scriptures, with a review by A. H. Ginness, of the Protestant Alliance, London, occupy a number of pages.

The Literary Digest is akaleidoscope of the busy passing day. What people are talking, thinking, writing about fills its well-edited pages. Politics, religion, literature, art, science, reforms,—to each a mirror is held and we catch the reflection. $3.00 per year. Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.

Vick's Magazine has excellent notes for August and early fall work with flowers and small fruits, especially tulips, dahlias and strawberries.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

An appeal has been made for funds to be used in educating in English Hindoo widows, most of whom are girls doomed by caste to solitary lives. A new school is to be opened in Bombay.

Says the Sioux City Journal: "Two new colleges will be open for business in Iowa at an early date. Jewell Lutheran College, at Jewell Junction, and Oak Park College, at Sac City, have been fully organized and equipped and will open with the fall terms. Welcome every increased facility for the youth of Iowa to get learning, whether it be high school, academy, college or university."

The report for 1894 of the Trustees of the John F. Slater Fund for the education of freedman is a document of very great interest. Appropriations were made during the year 1893–4 to the amount of $40,000, divided, in sums varying from $1,000 to $5,000, among sixteen institutions. For the coming school year the Board, on there commendation of the Finance Committee, appropriated $45,000, if needed.

The school population of the United States in 1890, reckoning the school age between five and twenty inclusive, was in round numbers 22,590,000. The average annual increase for the preceding ten years was about 413,000. Supposing this proportion of increase to have been maintained during the past three years, the school population to-day should be in the neighborhood of 23,700,000; it is more probably 24,000,000. Of these about 3,000,000 are Roman Catholics, and 21,000,000 are Protestants.

Pres. C. A. Swensson, of Bethany College, Linsborg, Kan., has issued an appeal for $50,000 on behalf of the college. He desires to raise an army of 500, either individuals, Sunday-schools, societies or churches, who will pay $100 in the course of two years, or $25 every six months. Five thousand dollars are subscribed already. The Young People's Society of Bethany church, Linsborg, have promised $1,000. Since 1890, $45,000 have been raised, but now $50,000 are needed to secure the college from interest-bearing indebtedness. It has twenty-five instructors and four hundred and forty students.

The American Missionary Association has a school for colored people in McIntosh, Georgia, where the pupils are allowed to pay their tuition in eggs, rice, fish, fruit and vegetables. The teacher says: "One morning, after devotional exercises, one of the girls came from her school-room, and pulling out a live chicken from under her shawl, asked: 'Professor, do you take chickens for tuition?' Again and again a little fellow has come to me, bringing a little collection of one and two-cent pieces, asking if that would be enough for his tuition." Some of the children cheerfully walk eight miles to school and back again every day.

Eczema Cured by Hood's.

I was taken with some kind of a breaking out about two years ago, which the doctors said was salt rheum and eczema. I tried all kinds of medicine but they did no good until I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla. By the time I had taken five bottles I was entirely cured. IDA M. KARNES.
Galatin, Ill.

If you desire a luxurious growth of healthy hair of a natural color, nature's crowning ornament of both sexes, use only Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE
Illustrated.
THE FULL
ILLUSTRATED RITUAL
OF THE
Nobles of the Mystic Shrine
PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA

by Columbus brought enlightenment to the world. New fields of enlightenment in this century are in the lines of science. The triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death. TUMORS, Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations. PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife. STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting. STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

LODGE LAMP

a monthly of choice articles on the SECRET : SOCIETY : SYSTEM, which the National Christian Association proposes to publish if the demand fo such a paper is such as to warrant its issue.

Annual subscription 20 cents.
Clubs of 20 for only $2.00.
Send in your pledge to take 20.
☞Money to be sent when you are notified that the plan is successful.☜

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.
OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18TH, 1894.
Entrance Examinations September 17th, at 2 P. M.
For Catalogue, address
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer, Ennis, Texas.

PROPHECY:
A STUDY.
BY REV. S. F. PORTER,
A Study of Christ's Comings.
Paper Cover, 100 Pages.
Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.
For sale by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjobion., Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D. Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1894.

THE PACIFIC COAST ANNIVERSARY.

The annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of moral reform will be held Sept. 26th and 27th, 1894, at Philomath, Benton county, Oregon. All persons and communities interested in our reform work should be represented.

Wm. Dillon, President. P. B. Williams, Secretary.

How to Help the Pacific Coast Convention.—This meeting which gathers at Philomath, Oregon, on the 26th and 27th of September, should have the cordial support of all anti-secrecy reformers in the States of Washington, Oregon and California. Some of them live at long distances. It is a two days' ride by railway from Los Angeles. But if a delegation cannot be sent, cordial greetings can go by letter and the work on the Coast receive new impetus and helpful suggestions in this way. We trust Rev. J. P. Richards, of the N. C. A. Board, can be present. Bro. Williams has secured a noble list of speakers. The name of Roland D. Grant is a tower of strength to such a meeting. Let it be an occasion worthy of the great principles it is to discuss.

Special mention must be made of articles in this number of the Cynosure on the relation of Christianity to the social questions now agitating the country. We commend every line on this topic on 4th and 5th pages and in the Home department, especially the case of Tricot, the French anarchist. When labor agitators shall cry out: "Author of the Sermon on the Mount, thou art God!" the case of the workingmen will be more hopeful. The facile pen of a W. C. T. U. worker, well known and well beloved by the Cynosure readers, has an argument on the "Lodge and Saloon" that should appeal to every member of the great Women's Union. The names of Stead and Chicago will guarantee readers for Bro. Hinman's article. The program of the convention soon to be held in Oregon promises much for the co-operation of the churches in that meeting. Sabbath-school teachers will be helped in preparing for next lesson by the Temperance department, Every page of the Cynosure is written to help somebody.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORKINGMAN.

We are not told that Jesus of Nazareth ever smoothed a board or drove a nail, but the world holds that he was a workingman. For thirty years of his short life he was "subject" to peasant parents, and was known as the "carpenter's son."

The men who speak for the million organized workingmen of our country all honor Christ. Read their eloquent encomiums on another page. Ben. Tillett, who is called the preacher among the laboring thousands of London, and is associated with Tom Mann in their leadership, always speaks to them of the "Man of Nazareth." He is ever heard gladly when he speaks of a single phase of that life, the manifestation of divine love to the poor. But they refuse to hear of those doctrines that require self renunciation, and hate the name of the church and even of Christianity or anything suggesting the organized work it is undertaking. But they accept the "Man of Nazareth." Christ's human side seems near to them.

The questions which the churches are compelled to consider in the present emergency are suggested by pastors Howie and Carwardine, How shall the workingmen be won to the church? They seem to be alienated. This must not be. If they care for Christ in his human life, shall they not also in his divine?

Without attempting any solution of these perplexing questions we believe there are some measures which should be taken by the churches of Christ, and when taken we believe they would find no problem between themselves and the workingman left for trouble or solution.

1. Christ is loved by "his brethren" and esteemed by all men because he lived as he taught. He loved God supremely and his neighbor as himself. He did not study and plan, and write essays, and hold conventions to see how he should form an "institutional" church. He DID it. He loved men with his hand as well as his heart. If men are to day driven from the church it is because we do not live as Christ did in the church. Hugh Price Hughes says: "Jesus Christ was essentially a man of the people—a workingman. He spent all his days among the poor; and, after his public life had begun, he almost lived in the crowd. Nothing is more characteristic of Jesus Christ than the familiar saying that 'the common people heard him gladly.' Therefore, when we come across anybody whom the people do not hear gladly, he may be a very estimable man, but we know he is not like Jesus Christ. I was very much struck by a remark I heard in Scotland about an undoubted Christian. Some one said of him: 'He is a very good man, but he does not remind me of Jesus Christ.'"

Although the doctrines of Christ were, as Prof. Hohenberg says, "the purest and noblest proclamation of social freedom ever given to mankind," he set up no new kingdom where these doctrines could be exercised. His "kingdom was not of this world." Napoleon called him "Le grande democrat;" but he left no democracy to prove his character. His life and teachings only enforced principles all along familiar. The only new commandment was "that ye love one another." Nor was there any question of a new religion after his death. But the LIFE that he put into the old "turned the world upside down"

We concieve that this is the first and great rule by which the labor problem is to be solved. The capitalist is commanded to love his neighbor workingman as he does himself, just as much as the latter is commanded not to steal from his employer or kill him. Let the churches proclaim it and insist on it. They will always have trouble if they cringe to poularity and court wealth as we learn one of our Chicago Baptist churches did lately,—put in office a popular politician who is well known as a Freemason and late head of a Knight Templar commandery. "D—n if they didn't make me a deacon," he said to a chum.

2 The church must be separate from the lodge, and condemn it. The lodge means false worship, and that crucifies Christ. Men cannot love the lodge in its real character and long hold esteem for Christ. The lodge means false brotherhood It draws a line on color, on sex on physical deformity, on the place of birth, on social classification. No "brotherhood" can endure such distinctions. "Come unto me, all ye that labor," says the Lord of life. Moral character, obedience, is all the Christian brotherhood recognizes.

3 The church must exterminate the saloon. No other organization can do it. It thrives on the bodies and souls of workingmen. Without starting a party or demanding that men vote for this or that, the church has a right to say that its members must have a clear conscience at the polls as well as at the counter. And true religion will make conviction enough on this question.

Our Lord did not denounce saloons, though drunkenness abounded in the world. He did not in terms condemn slavery, though in Rome every other man was a slave, and in Athens nine in every ten. He did not rebuke the lodge, though the secret abominations of that system were working in all the nations about Judea. But every discourse, every day of his life was a denunciation of these and all other schemes of the devil against our race. They all have their tap root in human selfishness. And this is the trouble in the business world to day. Monopolies and trusts are managed for selfish interest. Labor lodges are organized with the same spirit. No man can truly preach Christ without more or less antagonizing the labor unions. But the Christ-doctrine and the Christ-life together will prevail at last. Men cannot be won permanently or surely by any other means. The multitude that cried "Hosanna!" seemed to fall away, to be antagonized, but they came again to the apostles and were added to the church three thousand in a day.

—Rev. O T. Lee, of Northwood, Iowa, has written an article on the Mystic Shrine, which appears in "Amerika," the Norwegian weekly of this city.

UNIVERSITY ANARCHY.

There has been no little alarm of late lest the seeds of anarchy have taken root in our collegiate institutions. Prof. Herron, of Iowa College, well known as a writer of originality and influence on the relations of Christianity to practical life, was openly rebuked by the Governor of Nebraska at the late commencement exercises of the State University at Lincoln, who declared him an anarchist of the Lucy Parsons stamp. One of the sentences quoted in the press as calling for rebuke was this:

"Only they who are able to bear the reproach of Christ, and to be disgraced before the politics and religion of this day, can arouse and organize the Christian conscience and prepare the way of the Christian state that shall fulfill the kingdom of God. Are we ready to be offered?"

A more eminent instructor, Dr. Richard T. Ely, late of Johns-Hopkins, but now of the Wisconsin State University, is on trial before the regents of the institution. He was accused of teaching socialism, of justifying strikes and boycotts, of helping union printers in a strike, of entertaining walking delegates, etc., by State School Superintendent Wells, in a published letter in the New York Nation. The celebrity of this case has sent the editors to Prof. Ely's books, and given them a tremendous advertisement. Copious extracts are printed, but only justify their author. In an address at Chautauqua last week the professor spoke in self-vindication, denying every allegation, and saying:

"The assertion that I favor strikes and boycotts must impress the candid reader of my works as false and malignant. Repeatedly have I pointed to the disastrous nature of railway strikes in particular, and predicted the failure which we have recently witnessed. When the hard times were coming on foreseeing the probability of industrial troubles, I commended to workingmen the advice not to strike, pointing out the probability of failure, and urged upon employers a conciliatory policy."

"As to trades unions, I have held, and still hold, that their province must be a limited one, and I expect less from them than economists like Prof. Brentano and the late Thorold Rogers The old-fashioned, striking trades union has outlived its time and usefulness In my last two works, namely, 'Outlines of Economics' and 'Socialism and Social Reform,' I clearly show the limitations of labor organizations

"But am I not a socialist? On the contrary, I have thought that agriculture offered insuperable obstacles to its proposed organization of industry, and I have maintained that even could socialism be organized and put in operation, it would stop progress and overthrow our civilization.

"But what about anarchy? I was the first writer to examine exhaustive y, to expose and to attack unsparingly anarchy in the United States. This I did in my 'Labor Movement in America.' The propaganda of anarchy is a dire national calamity against which all right-minded people should work with all the resources at their command. Especially should the wage-earning people shun all connection with it. It is of hell, and its slightest touch brings disaster to them and all others. Plague, pestilence and famine combined are mild evils compared with widespread anarchy. Anything more foreign to my thought and feeling than anarchy I do not know; anything more diametrically opposed to my social philosophy I cannot conceive In obedience to the laws and constituted authorities of the land lies our only hope of progress."

The trouble with these gentlemen will be found, when we sift it, that they are not promoting incipient anarchy, or socialism even, but a practical application of the Golden Rule to the employers, and the monopolist's side of the controversy. These movements among the institutions of higher education are a sign of the times.

—The report was lately given credit in these columns that the New York Times had published an interview with Col. Fred. Grant in which that gentleman spoke unfavorably of secret societies. The Times replies to our request for confirmation that no such interview was published in that paper.

—Rev. T. H. Acheson, secretary of the Iowa State Association, requests of the friends of our reform in that State suggestions for the next annual convention. Time, place, topics, speakers,—every hint that can be made available in promoting the work and securing a successful meeting is in order. Bro. Acheson's address is Hopkinton, Iowa. Take time to write him.

—Bro. F. J. Davidson, of New Orleans, has the grace of persistency. He "keeps everlastingly at it." His last month's record is thirty-one addresses. Who will be responsible for the small salary he suggests? A little self-denial will do it. The price of a new piano, or family carriage and team, or the expense of a summer trip will make a year's difference with the work in New Orleans.

—Rev. S. F. Porter expects to remain in Dexter, North Dakota, until about Oct. 1, when he intends to resume his work for the reform among the colleges. He suggests a college number of the "Lodge Lamp." His season of labor has been a pleasant one and his health good. The congregations are large, but the driving labor of large farms seems to absorb greatly the attention of the people and leave little time for religion.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard was at Mystic, Conn., last week, where he was to present the N. C. A. reform at a Peace camp meeting. His son, Bro. W. B. Stoddard, from Washington, expects to remain in Boston until September.

—Rev. Peter Moerdyke, of this city, writes to the Intelligencer of New York, of the Hollanders who live adjacent to Pullman and find employment in the shops. They are all men of the anti-secret stamp, and were the first to return to work. Says Mr. Moerdyke, "It is to their credit that they were not among the willing strikers, and that they are and always were highly prized by the proprietors and officers of the Pullman shops. May we not add, that if all members of the labor unions were as faithful in Sabbath observance and church attendance and family worship as these Hollanders, the outlook of our country would be incalculably brighter."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bro. William Fenton was lecturing in Stillwater, Minn., last week.

—Rev. E. L. Harris has lately returned to his home in Delavan, Wis., after a month's tarry with a sister in Englewood in this city.

—Mrs. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., is severely ill and medical advisers give no hope of her recovery. For more than fifty years she has stood nobly by the side of her husband in trials and persecutions for the truth's sake.

—Rev. Alexander Thomson, of Tomahawk, Wis., formerly chairman of the N. C. A. Board, promises the Cynosure readers some of his best contributions soon. When we say "best" we make a large promise to our readers.

—Rev. J. P. Richards, of the N. C. A. Board, expects with Mrs. Richards to leave their home in this city in September for a prolonged trip to the Pacific coast. They go by the Northern Pacific Road, and will make a long stay in Los Angeles, Cal., returning in about three months.

—Rev. L Mendenhall, treasurer of the Iowa State Association, having resigned, the executive committee has appointed Mrs. W. L. Enlow of Birmingham as his successor. Bro. Mendenhall is among the most earnest workers against secret orders in the Iowa Free Methodist conference.

—Dr. David McDill, of Xenia Theological Seminary, is the author of one of the earliest books against secretism. A Monmouth letter to the United Presbyterian says that he and his wife stopped over in that city a few days on their way home to Xenia, Ohio. They have been on quite an extended visit and trip through the West.

—Rev. S. G. Ohman, late pastor of Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, Rockford, Ill., has lately been appointed superintendent of AugustanaHospital in this city. We regret to learn that Mrs. Ohman is in feeble health. The Swedish Lutheran pulpit has given up one of its most earnest and eloquent young pastors for the ministry of the sick and suffering.

—Rev. David McAllister, D.D., of the Eighth Street Reformed Presbyterian church, says the Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette, and Rev. H. H. George, D.D., of the East End church of the same denomination, who left the city early in the summer for a jaunt through Europe, are spending most of the time alloted to their tour in Scotland among the places which have a historic interest for the members of the Covenanter church.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman tarried a few days last week in Chicago on his way to Kansas. With him were Mrs. Hinman and his daughter Susan F., who started with a missionary party Monday, by way of the Canadian Pacific road, for the Orient. Miss Hinman is connected with the American Board, and is assigned to the charge of the Bridgman school for girls in Pekin, China. She is supported by a lady in Grand Rapids, Mich.

—Hon. John Quincy Adams, son of the late Charles Francis Adams, and grand-son of President John Quincy Adams, died at his home at Mt. Wollaston, Quincy, Mass., last week Tuesday. He had a genius for farming and politics, and was a well-known and popular member of the great Adams family. In 1867, 1868, 1869 and 1870 he was nominated for Governor, but was defeated. In 1872 he was the candidate for Vice-president with Charles O'Connor, and in 1873 he ran for Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts on the ticket with Governor Gaston. He had been a member of the Harvard corporation since 1877.

—The death of Hon. Burton C. Cook, at Evanston, Ill., was announced on Friday last. For many years Mr. Cook was prominent in the Republican party. He twice had the high honor to nominate Abraham Lincoln for President in Republican national conventions; was three times sent to Congress; and was for years attorney for the Rock Island, and later for the Northwestern railroad. He was an intimate friend of the late Jonathan Blanchard, former editor of the Cynosure. In his early career Mr. Cook was a member of the Masonic lodge, but abandoned it wholly years before the present agitation began.

—The Pacific Ensign of Oakland, Cal., thus notices the return of our friends, Rev. and Mrs. N. R. Johnston, to that city: "Mrs. N. R. Johnston, former State President of the W. C. T. U. of California, with her husband, has returned to our State, and is at her old home, Highland Park, East Oakland. This will be pleasing news to her large circle of friends, who will rejoice to welcome her back. Mr. Johnston's health was not improved by his sojourn at Philadelphia. The Oakland Union will tender a reception to Mrs. Johnston, perhaps Friday of next week, at the Young Woman's Christian Home on Franklin street."

—Prof. James Strong, D.D., LL. D., of Drew Theological Seminary, died suddenly Aug. 7th, while at Round Lake camp meeting. He was among the best known of the Biblical scholars of America, and his name will always be associated with two eminent works: "Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible" and "McClintock's & Strong's Cyclopedia." He began his editorial labors on the cyclopedia in 1862, and in 1868 entered Drew Theological Seminary as professor of exegetical theology. He was the author of numerous scholarly books. Of these, says the N. W. Christian Advocate, he "regarded his concordance as his crowning work. Though a doctor of divinity and a doctor of laws, Dr. Strong was neither a minister nor a lawyer. He was a scholar of whom the Methodist church, and indeed all Protestantism, is proud."

—There is sojourning in Chicago, says the Daily Record, just now a noble specimen of Southern womanhood—Miss Sophie B. Wright, a lovely, gentle lady who is devoting her life to educational and philanthropic ends. Although victim to a malady which has imposed lameness and almost continual pain upon her, this lady is at the head of the largest private school in Louisiana. Some years ago she started this institution with only two pupils; now 300 pupils are in attendance, a large corps of instructors is employed, and there is a growing demand for enlarged facilities for more pupils who clamor for admission to the Home Institute. Miss Wright is not content to devote her attention and time exclusively to the noble institution she has founded; she spends her evenings going about the city of New Orleans, teaching in the night schools which she has organized for the instruction of the poorer classes. Indeed, this gentle lady's life seems given wholly to self-sacrifices and charitable deeds.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The long debated tariff bill at last through Congress—The new Chinese treaty—Protection for American missionaries—Coxey can bring no more "armies" to Washington.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 15, 1894.

Naturally the most absorbing topic of conversation here this week is the tariff bill, which as amended by the Senate was at last adopted by the House and has been sent to the President. Separate bills were passed by the House, putting iron ore, coal, barbed wire and sugar on the free list. As to the last there seems little probability that any of them will be passed by the Senate, although there is little doubt that if a vote were taken in a full Senate on the bill placing sugar on the free list it would pass by a substantial majority, but there isn't a full Senate and isn't likely to be again this session. It is difficult and daily growing more so to get a quorum in the Senate, and that reason, if there were no others, would prevent any further tariff legislation, as in the absence of a quorum nothing can be done except by unanimous consent, and unanimous consent is never given to tariff legislation of any kind.

It is the bill in Mr. Cleveland's hands that everybody is interested in. He expressed his adverse opinion of that bill so strongly in his memorable letter to Chairman Wilson, of the House Ways and Means committee, that few people believe he will sign it, but the general impression appears to be that he will, in deference to the general demand of the business men of the country to have the matter definitely settled, allow it to become a law without his signature, and on account of that impression Congress will remain in session for at least ten days longer, unless Mr. Cleveland shall before that take action on the tariff bill, but there is little probability that any important legislation will be taken up in either House or Senate.

The great interest in the passing of the Senate tariff bill by the House and the sending of that measure to President Cleveland, either to receive his approval, be vetoed, or be allowed to become a law without his approval, has resulted in causing the action of the Senate, in ratifying the Chinese treaty by a vote of 47 to 20, to fail to receive the public attention that its importance deserves. The treaty was ratified just as it was negotiated by Secretary Gresham. It is for a period of ten years only, but will be renewed for a second period of ten years, unless notice of abrogation be given either government within six months of its expiration.

A portion of the treaty in which all good people ought to be much interested is Article V, wherein "the government of the United States agrees that within twelve months from the date of the exchange of the ratification of this convention, and annually thereafter, it will furnish to the government of China registers or reports showing the full names, age, occupation and number or place of residence of all citizens of the United States, including missionaries, residing both within and without the treaty ports of China, not including, however, diplomatic and other officers of the United States residing or traveling in China upon official business, together with their body and household servants." The claim is made that the ratification of this treaty, which is on the whole considered favorable to China—very much so when the Geary law before its modification is considered—comes very opportunely, in that it will result in making the Chinese authorities much more solicitous for the safety of American missionaries in China than they would otherwise have been. It seems certain from private information received here that the American missionaries in China will need protection if the war between China and Japan be prolonged.

Tramp organizations are at an end so far as the District of Columbia is concerned. The last of the so-called "industrial armies" were started to their homes at the expense of the District of Columbia last night, and formal notice was issued that all tramps hereafter coming into the District, whether singly or organized, would be arrested and imprisoned under the vagrancy laws. Had this action been taken months ago much unnecessary suffering would have been saved the men who allowed themselves to be persuaded into coming here.

As a practical offset to the supposed benefits of so-called beneficent societies and superfluous religious combinations, we have General Kelly's statement of the composition of the Industrial Army which he recently led to Washington City. Of his 1,200 men he says: "We have among us 73 Masons, 123 Odd-fellows, 76 Knights of Pythias, 28 Ancient Order of United Workmen, 23 Red Men, 850 who bear tradesmen's cards, 150 Young Men's Christian Association Men, and a large number of Native Sons." It is also a prominent fact that hundreds of railroad men who placed implicit confidence in the American Railway Union have, as a direct consequence, been compelled to join the great army of unemployed. And we have the Industrial Army itself, combined together for the more effectual enforcement of its varied demands on the public. Yet, while ostensibly seeking work, their leader says they are in sympathy with the strikers, men who voluntarily gave up work at the behest of their organization's leaders.—Messiah's Advocate.

The Home.

THE LIGHT OF CHRIST'S FACE.

Behold how glorious! Behold
  The light of Christ's face; and such light!
The Moslem, Buddhist, as of old,
  Gropes helpless on in hopeless night.
But lo! where Christ comes, crowned with flame,
Ten thousand triumphs in Christ's name.

Elijah's chariot of fire,
  Chained lightnings harnessed to his car,
Jove's thunders bridled by a wire—
  Call unto nations: "Here we are."
Lo! all the world one sea of light,
Save where the paynim walks in night.

What more? What sermons like to these,
  This light of Christ's face, power, speed,
In these full-rounded centuries,
  To prove the Christ the Christ indeed?
Yea, Christ is life, and Christ is light,
And anti-Christ is death and night.

—Joaquin Miller, in S. F. Examiner.

A FRENCH ANARCHIST.

Prof. L. J. Bertrand, the well-known Huguenot evangelist, now in this country on his annual visit, was holding meetings some years ago in the middle of France. At one of these conferences he made the point that the more the Sunday-schools were filled the more empty would be the saloons and the prisons, and that very speedily. All at once a man called out from the end of the hall, "Professor of sciences, don't lie, for you know as well as, or better than, myself that the church is the paradise of charlatans." The Professor was debating whether it were best to reply, when some of the bystanders remarked, "Now Tricot is in for a fight." Hearing this, the evangelist said to himself, "Tricot! Is that the name of a man?" Not feeling sure, he continued his discourse and the disturber left the hall in a rage.

While in New York in 1891, Prof. Bertrand received a letter from Geneva which read as follows: "Tricot was editor-in-chief of the well-known anarchist journal, La Lutte (The Struggle). Never did a man write more violent articles or utter more incendiary harangues. One day, to cite a single example, over the graves of the victims of the explosion at the mines of Ricamarie, he counseled the miners, the workmen and the peasants to join together and kill all the rich people of Ricamarie, burning their houses over their heads. For this he served two and a half years in prison. When he came out, more violent than ever, he established the journal L' International. The first words which arrested the attention of this ferocious partisan of the democracy were those of another anarchist: 'If we French Socialists (he ought to have said "Anarchists") were as disinterested as the disciples of that philosopher who is called "The Christ of Nazareth" we should go, one after another, throughout all France preaching our gospel, and, if we did so, in ten years France would be socialistic. But these men (Bertrand and Reveillaud) have a maxim, "Love your neighbor as yourself," while ours is "Charity begins at home."' 'That is not at all my maxim,' said Tricot, 'and I will prove it, for I am a true Socialist at heart.' The next day, in fact, he left his newspaper, bought an old omnibus, into which he packed his wife and children, and set out to make speeches and sell his pamphlets throughout France."

At St.-Jean-du-Gard a lady wrote to him: "Dear M. Tricot: I hope to see you to-morrow. Meanwhile will you please read my little manuscript and this small book entitled The Sermon on the Mount. I am a Socialist, as you are, but the author of The Sermon on the Mount is greater than either you or myself. Like you I am sad, but the Christ weeps to see that the rich are often very hard and cruel toward the poor and that the poor are always the implacable enemies of the rich, while eager to possess their riches. You believe that this evil can be met only by violence, by gunpowder, dynamite and torrents of blood. I believe, and the Christ believes, that it can be overcome by the power of love, both for the rich and the poor."

Tricot read the manuscript with astonishment and admiration; that lady was evidently a socialistic savante. But when he had read the Sermon on the Mount this ex editor-in-chief was bewildered. Never before had he heard such sublime ideas, such holy obligations, so boldly and publicly proclaimed. He was still holding the book in his hands when one of his anarchist friends came to him and said, "Friend Tricot, I am miserable. My daughter is able to pass her examination before the medical faculty, but I need 200 francs and cannot get them." "What!" rejoined Tricot. "You a Socialist in socialistic France, and unable to find 200 francs! Go to Cette, which is full of Socialists and where the city authorities are Socialists, and see if you cannot obtain more than you ask; trust my word for it!" The Anarchist went to Cette, and after calling on the Socialists there, one and all, he received only rebuffs but not a single franc. He returned to Tricot. "Well," said the man, who was now deeply impressed by the Sermon on the Mount, "since you are a Protestant, go and see your pastor about it." "My pastor! I have never been inside his church, and only last week my wife rudely insulted him." "No matter," rejoined Tricot, "I was told this very morning that the pastor reads every Sunday from the Sermon on the Mount, and that he preaches from it. He will help you not only in spite of your unbelief and your wife's treatment of him, but for those very reasons." "Well," said the other, "I don't understand what you mean, but I shall go because it is my last chance."

Four days afterwards Tricot learned that Pastor B—— had said to the senior member of his church committee: "These people are the disgrace of my parish; they are the worst two Protestants in the province, the two most disreputable people in the town; but they have a good daughter. Deacon, let us, you and me, save that girl." And they found the 200 francs; they saved the young woman, who passed her examination most successfully.

Then Tricot read each word of the Sermon on the Mount. He weighed it over and over again, as an editor, a philosopher and a savant. He forgot to eat and to sleep for twenty-four hours, then fell on his knees and offered the following petition: "I believe that the Author of the Sermon on the Mount is more than a man, more than Victor Hugo, more than Socrates. I believe that he is not man but God. Author of the Sermon on the Mount, thou art God. I believe in Thee. O have mercy upon me! I see myself a guilty sinner. Thou art holy. Show me how to pray, to pray! Author of the Sermon on the Mount, thou art God. I give thee my life, but teach me how to pray." The next day Tricot entered his carriage to sell, not his anarchist pamphlets but copies of the Sermon on the Mount. He is now hard at work for the regeneration of France, with Reveillaud and Bertrand—a proof of the power of the simple Gospel over even a skeptical socialistic Frenchman's heart. The story is thoroughly French, but it shows what may yet be accomplished in France.—Congregationalist.

CHRIST'S SERMON A WORKING MODEL.

An interesting discussion of the Sermon on the Mount was suggested a while since by the views of Archbishop Magee, of England. Are the instructions of our Lord in that marvelous sermon practicable, can they be worked out, have they an every-day-ableness, so to speak, for people of this evil time.

The Archbishop was of opinion that the Sermon is ideal and wholly impracticable; that if an effort were made to apply its teachings literally society would tumble to pieces. Zion's Herald interrogated some of our best-known Christian workers and thinkers, and gave the world their views as follows:

Bishop Cox, of Buffalo, N. Y., expresses an opinion that society will "tumble to pieces in its defective parts, but will be built up in its good parts"

Bishop Vincent says: "I do not know any part of the Sermon on the Mount which is not thoroughly practicable when interpreted as to its spirit."

President Andrews, of Brown University, says: "I maintain that the principles of the Sermon on the Mount are practicable and obligatory, and that the individual, society and government should strictly conform to the same."

Dr. Lyman Abbott says: "If the Sermon on the Mount be regarded as the embodiment of great fundamental principles, and the exposition of a spirit more important even than principles, which is to permeate human intercourse, then it is entirely practicable; and not only that, but disregard of those principles and that spirit is openly proved impracticable by the evils that this disregard brings upon human society."

Bishop Huntington says: "The Sermon on the Mount presents to all peoples and ages the standard of both personal and social life."

Rev. E. Winchester Donald, D. D., rector of Trinity church, Boston, says: "I would say that if society does not make an effort to conform its life to the principles of the Sermon on the Mount, society will 'tumble to pieces.' "

Mr. Moody thinks the principles of the Sermon are impracticable for these days, and looks only for them to be put into practice when Christ comes.

Dr. Strong, author of "Our Country," and the "The New Era," says:

"If the principles of the Sermon on the Mount are not binding, Christ was not an authoritative teacher; if they are not safe, he is not divine. If their application would cause society to 'tumble to pieces,' it is because the builders of society have heard 'these sayings of mine,' but deeming them 'impracticable,' have built their houses upon the sand."

B. Fay Mills says: "I regard the principles of the Sermon on the Mount as being not only practicable for modern society, but when rightly apprehended as being the only practicable thing for the life of the world."

Prof. George D. Herron, D. D., of the department of Applied Christianity of Iowa College, says: "The Sermon on the Mount is the divine constitution of human society. It is the most perfect piece of constitutionalism that has ever been given to man. It is the only complete legislation that has ever been enacted."

Joseph Cook expresses such important truths that we quote his words entire. He said:

"Regeneration of the individual soul, then of the family, then of society, then of government, I understand to be the Biblical plan for the reformation of the world. ("The kingdom of heaven is like leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal until the whole was leavened.") If the church can produce genuine individual Christians enough to form the great majority in any self-governing community, there seems to be no reason why the principles of the Sermon on the Mount cannot be applied to secular affairs. If there are living stones enough to constitute a temple, why can the temple not be built? We are instructed to pray that God's kingdom may come and his will be done on earth as in heaven. Of course, in a world perfectly reformed, there will, of necessity, be a distinction between the church and the state. On this great theme there is no word of wisdom except that of the Author of the Sermon on the Mount. 'Render into Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's.' Professor Schaff used to affirm that all the discussions of centuries as to the right relations of church and state have added nothing to the fund of sagacity contained in this inspired text. But when Cæsar himself becomes genuinely Christian, the principles of the Sermon on the Mount will govern the state, so far as they apply to it, as they now govern the church."

THE RESULT OF INFIDELITY.

Within five minutes' walk of the place where I now write, there is employed, I am told, a quiet, inoffensive man, who has long been known as an infidel—a disbeliever in Christianity and the Bible. He had a son, a quiet, studious young man, who naturally followed his father's way of thinking. One day the young man packed his bag with dynamite bombs, and on the 4th of December, 1891, called at the office of Russell Sage, at 71 Broadway, handed him a letter demanding one million two hundred thousand dollars, and failing to get the money, dropped his bombs, was blown to pieces himself, while others were killed or wounded and the building was wrecked by the explosion. December 15, the head and effects of the assassin were identified by his parents, and his remains were taken away.

Said his mother to the coroner: "My son was always mild mannered. I am positive that he had never harbored any bad feelings toward Russell Sage. He advocated the limitations of wealth. He was regular in his habits, and was a free thinker and believed in no hereafter. I never knew him to handle explosives and it is a great mystery to me how he learned of them."

This is infidelity gone to seed! The early Christian training of a godly mother may make an infidel a peaceable and orderly citizen, but when his children and his children's children grow, up look out! Who are the anarchists, dynamiters, an nihilists? Atheists or infidels to a man—men without Bible, or Christ, or God; having no hope, and believing in no hereafter. And infidelity spreads, especially where the Bible is unknown or prohibited, and the papers are burdened with dynamite outrages in France, Spain, Italy, Russia and America.—Hastings.

ARE YOU SICK?

A story is related of an American traveling in Syria who saw three native shepherds bring their flocks to the same brook, and the flocks drank there together. At length one shepherd arose and called out "Men-ah, men-ah!" (which is the Arabic word for "follow me.") His sheep came out of the common herd and followed him up the hill side. Then the next shepherd did the same, and his sheep went away with him, and the man did not even stop to count them. The American said to the remaining shepherd, "Just give me your cloak and turban and crook, and see if they won't follow me as soon as they will you." So he put on the shepherd's dress and called out, "Men-ah, men-ah!" but not a sheep moved an inch. They "knew not the voice of a stranger."

"Will your flock never follow anybody but you?" inquired the American. The Syrian shepherd replied, "Oh, yes; sometimes a sheep gets sick, and then it will follow any one." Is it not just so with the flock of Christ?—Ram's Horn.

Thanks!—Mr. Bancroft, the historian, did not like to hear any one say "Thanks" instead of "Thank you." Many of the children in Washington who went to see him would say "Thanks" when he gave them anything. One day, after the word had been used so often that it quite irritated him, a little fellow of ten called for his autograph. There was a talk about American history, the autograph given and the boy invited to call again. The little boy told his mother that "it was a beautiful visit." And the brilliant scholar and courteous gentleman of the old school said to a friend, speaking of the two calls: "That little man attracted me more than I can tell. With perfect boyhood and naturalness, he had the address of a gentleman, and as left me, with cap in one hand and the other tucked confidently in mine, he said: 'Thank you, sir,' in the old-fashioned way of my own boyhood."

TEMPERANCE.

MODERN WINE AND THE MIRACLE AT CANA.

Does the first miracle of our Lord at the Cana wedding feast justify us in the use of the adulterated alcoholic concoction known to-day as wine, or in the use of any alcoholic or malt liquors? It is safe in our judgment to look for such wine as Christ made in the grapes and not in the wine cask. He made it in water jars, not in wine bottles.

Bishop Ryle, by a marvelous stretch of imagination assuming that our so-called wine is the same as that provided by the miracle, says: "If our Lord Jesus Christ actually worked a miracle to supply wine at a marriage feast, it seems to me impossible by any ingenuity to prove that drinking wine is sinful. . . . . To say, as many do, that to drink any fermented liquor at all is 'a sin' is taking up ground that cannot be maintained in the face of the passage before us, without wresting the plain meaning of Scripture, and charging Christ with abetting sin."

In opposition to this read Joseph Cook: "This I claim: That our Lord was consistent with himself; that his mortality was at least as high as that of the book of Proverbs; and that whether you say this or the other thing concerning minute matters of textual criticism, you are uttering blasphemy if you suppose that he, reading the command, 'Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright," created wine of that sort and gave it to the guests who had been already six days drinking intoxicating wine; you are uttering nothing less than blasphemy if you suppose that he, who was in all things obedient to his Father, he who had yielded glad affectionate loyalty to these commands concerning wine—if he was loyal to the Old Testament which was his Bible—you are guilty of blasphemy, I say, if you suppose that he put the bottle to his neighbor's lips. I proclaim, without fear of contradiction, that there is nothing in the example of our Lord to justify our modern social drinking customs. . . . .I hold that what he drank was very probably —perhaps we cannot settle the question beyond all dispute—simply that finest kind of the fruit of the grape that is not intoxicating. . . . .When you tell me that he drank wine, and therefore you will drink wine, I must ask you to notice that your position amounts very nearly to exegetical lunacy. It never has been proved that our Lord's wine made at Cana, or the wine he drank himself, was anything nearly as dangerous as the wine, you drink. It has never been proved that our Lord's wine made at Cana, or the wine he drank, was not like the wine we suppose he used in instituting the Lord's Supper—this best kind, this delicate kind, this unfermented spirit which is used at this hour."

TEMPT NOT A BROTHER.

Because Christ gave wine to the wedding guests, shall man dig a pit at the corner of every street, that the poor may fall therein, spending their money for that which is not bread, and their labor for that which satisfieth not? Let the poor man be tempted as God wills, for the end of God is victory; let not man tempt him, for his end is his neighbor's fall, or at best he heeds it not for the sake of gain, and he shall receive according to his works.—George MacDonald.

CALIFORNIA WINE.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 10.—The big wine syndicate, which has been formed in San Francisco to control the wine business of the State, will control eighty per cent of the grape product of California for the next five years. Its formation doubles the value of the crop, as the present price of grapes is $5 a ton, while the syndicate agrees to pay not less than $10 a ton. Seven houses are in the syndicate and more will probably be soon admitted. The capital stock of the company is $10,000,000 of which $600,000 have been subscribed.

SOBEREST PEOPLE IN THE WORLD.

I desire to say that we have in Kansas a population the most sober of any population of the same size in the civilized world. We have more school-houses and churches, more newspapers and more miles of railroad, according to the population, than any other State in the Union. Our children are better clothed, better fed and better educated than the children of any other State in the Union.—Ex-Attorney General Bradford.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON X.—Third Quarter, 1894, Sept. 2.

SUBJECT.—Jesus Cleansing the Temple.—John 2: 13-25.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Make not my Father's house a house of merchandise."—John 2: 16.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

Daily Readings.—M.—John 2: 13-25. T.—Mark 11: 15-19. W.—2 Chron. 29: 1-6; 15-19. Th.—2 Chron. 6: 17-21. F.—Jer. 7: 8-16. S.—Mal. 3: 1-10. Sab.—1 Cor. 3: 8-17.

(Comment by Rev. James B. Converse in the Christian Patriot.)

The selling of oxen, sheep and doves, and the exchanging of money are honest trades if honestly conductedly. The lesson tells us that Jesus interrupted business. It tells us also why he did it, because it was done in the outer court of the temple of God. He succeeded in breaking up the business for the time, although the merchants had doubtless special licenses, bought with money, from the temple authorities, and derived large profits from their trade. For right is stronger than wrong, truth than error; and all saw that Jesus was right and trafficking within the temple was wrong. In our country at least the work was effectual. Although the American church receives and disburses millions of dollars every year, there is not a whisper of corruption in connection with it, unless it be the abuses of church fairs.

The Temple of Justice.—Government is God's temple of justice as religion is his temple of mercy. This is the Bible ideal. Government is to do justice as religion is to show mercy. Civil rulers are God's ministers as much as religious teachers. And business, trading, special privileges, are as much out of place in government as in religion. It was wrong, shameful, to use a court of the temple as a market for oxen. It is equally shameful to use the Senate chamber and the House of Representatives as a place to obtain protection for business, and the legislative halls and court-houses of the States to get licenses to sell intoxicating beverages. By the consent of the high priest the money changers received un usual profits. By the action of the President Senators and Representatives, the sugar trust collects a profit of three-eighths of a cent on every pound of sugar used in our land. By the license of the Sanhedrim the sellers of oxen made large profits. By the license of State legislatures liquor dealers make large profits. The cases are analogous. Both justice and mercy are attributes of God. Both are administered among men by officers who derive their authority from God and who are elected by the people. It would be shameful, we all agree, for ministers of the Gospel to use their God-given authority for business ends. It is equally shameful for legislators, for voters, who are also ministers of God, to use their God-given authority for business objects. The high priests who sold the outer court to the merchants disgraced themselves; and those who sell the legislative powers to manufacturers, liquor dealers and others, also disgrace themselves. The temple of mercy should not be profaned by trafficking. The temple of justice is equally holy.

Christ's Example.—Jesus drove out the merchants and money changers. When will his disciples imitate his example by driving the merchants and money changers from the temple of justice? He used little force; a scourge of small cord was enough. We need no force. If we refuse to vote for any party or any candidate who favors the giving of special privileges or advantages to any men or to any trade, it will accomplish our end. The Christians of this country control its legislation and politics. We ask them to do it after the rules of the Bible, in the spirit of Christ.

The vindication of God's house from profanation was the first and the last care of our Lord; and it is probable he began and finished his public ministry by this significant act.—Clarke.

When Jesus arrived in Jerusalem, the first place we find him is in the temple. His purpose in going to the temple was to cleanse it, as it had been foretold by the prophet Malachi: "He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of the sons of Levi." Christ's design in coming into the world was to reform the world. He saw corruption that day in Jerusalem lying like a hideous splash of filth on the marble floors of his Father's house. It must be purged away. The grasping priests had admitted within those sacred walls a market of oxen and sheep and doves, and a number of money changers. These traffickers were "concessionaires," having rented the privilege to carry on their trade within the temple walls from the money-loving priests. Such incidents are by no means confined to those olden days. The writer has in mind an instance that lies parallel, up to the act of renting the sacred enclosure, but there ceases to be a parallel, as the modern temple referred to has not as yet been purged, and remains to-day, "a house of merchandise." Reference is made to a church edifice here in Chicago where upper rooms are rented to secret societies. One Sabbath day, a few months ago, the writer was horrified to see crowding down the same stairway up which people were passing to the church service a band of rollicking, regalia-bearing men, nearly all puffing cigars, and some walking with unsteady steps. They formed in line in front of the church, and, headed by a brass band, marched away to attend a Sunday picnic. Great corruptions in the church owe their existence to a love of money (1 Tim. 6: 5-10).—Life and Light Lessons.

Special Question for Lesson of August 26. —Our Saviour was at home in the simple marriage festival at Cana, would he be so at a modern lodge banquet? Would he be welcome at any such feast? Would he make wine for it? Would he make wine for the human-skull goblet in a Knight Templar lodge?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—It is said that ninety out of every one hundred converts in China are from the country, and sixty out of every hundred are farmers.

—Three heathen temples have been absorbed by the Methodist North China mission in the growth of its premises, and Dr. Taft wants $4,000 with which to purchase a fourth one.

—Thirteen Italians, eight of whom are converts from the church of Rome, were recently received into the communion of Calvary church, New York. Two Waldensians were admitted at the same time.

—A great revival has been in progress at Mazomanie, Wis. Over forty have started for the kingdom, and still the work is going on. Services are conducted by Evangelist Anna M. Gleason, of Kewanee, Ill.

—Two Scotch missionaries, having recently made their way into Thibet, were captured by the Thibetans and were only rescued by a vigorous exercise of the authority of the Chinese frontier officers at Chema.

—A recent letter from Japan says that at the close of last year of the 377 churches in Japan seventy-eight are wholly, and 299 are partially, self-supporting. The additions during the year number 3,636. The present membership is 37,534.

—The Bridgeman School for girls, at Pekin, China, of which Miss Susan Hinman is to be in charge, has recently determined to receive no more girls with bound feet. The native Christians at Pekin, as the result of an enthusiastic meeting, have formed an Anti-foot-binding Society.

—A thirteen-year-old Negro boy is creating a sensation in Atlanta by his preaching. He was converted, he says, at the age of eight, and received an intermediate call to preach. He is now attending the theological seminary. His thoughts are said to be of a high character, and expressed in excellent language.

—Of the thirty-five Congregational pastors in Oklahoma, ten began their ministry as Methodists, six as United Brethren, five as Cumberland Presbyterians, four as Presbyterians, and two as Evangelical. Commenting upon this, the Congregationalist says: "A denomination that can bring all these into harmony has no small pow er of assimilation."

—Iron River, Wis., has lately enjoyed a wonderful revival under the leadership of Evangelist Hartsough. The services closed Aug. 5, and already 45 have joined the church. Others are ready to join at the earliest opportunity. A deep religious interest is felt by all the peo ple which will result in permanent good. Some 300 cards were signed by those professing conversion

—Rev. L. M. Hagood, M D., has collected some interesting statistics relating to the colored members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The probationers and full members number 217,439; Sunday-school scholars, 179 - 832; pastors, 1,627; churches, 2 892, valued at $3, 599,688; parsonages, 725, valued at $200,000; churches and parsonages, colleges, and school property are val ued at $4,691,688.

—The surprising statement is now made on good au thority that the Bible heads the list of books sold in Italy. Rev. Alexander Robertson, of Venice, sends some significant facts in regard to a new development in the circulation of the Scriptures in that country. Signor Sonzogno, editor of the "Secolo" newspaper, has recently sent out from his press in Milan an illustrated family Bible bearing the imprimatur of the Pope. The enterprise has met with wonderful success, not only in the large cities, but in the towns and villages, and among the clergy as well as the laity. In a short time the first edition of 50,000 copies was quite exhausted, and another is in course of preparation.

—The Waters Chinese Mission, held in the National Christian Association Building, 221 West Madison street, and the First Congregational Chinese Sunday-school, united in giving a farewell reception to Dr. and Mrs. Hager, Tuesday evening, July 24th. The meeting was held in the N. C. A. building. Dr. Hager has been a missionary in China for eight years and returned a short time ago to carry away as his wife, Miss Blackman, who has been a worker among the Chinese equally as long in our city. After a short program rendered principally by the Chinese, says the Interior, Mrs. Dr. Angier, of the First Congregational church, spoke a few words of welcome, which were responded to by the doctor. He first thanked the teachers and co-workers and gave them words of encouragement, and then addressed the pupils in their native tongue, which he speaks very fluently, telling them of his work among their people. The boys seemed to lose not a word, and after he had finished, rushed forward one and all for a hearty hand shake. Refreshments were served which were by no means the least of the evening's entertainment. Mr. Dot, of the Waters Mission, introduced his bride, a young lady from Miss Noye's school in Canton. Mrs. Dot has already adopted our dress and quite won the hearts of the mission people by her sweet manner.

To New Subscribers!
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
—)FOR(—
FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

111 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the Fast. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 396 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow —or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. paper cover. 25cts each

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials" 826 pages, cloth, $1.00

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. D. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

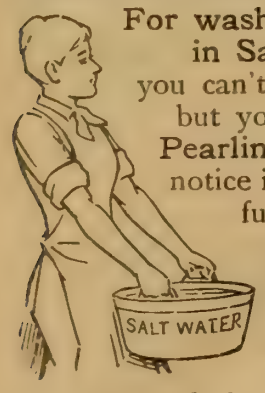
Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.



For washing in Salt Water you can't use soap, but you can use Pearline. You'll notice its wonderful cleansing properties quite as much in salt water as in fresh. You can wash in it or wash with it, just the same. On shipboard, yachting, etc., you can use salt water and Pearline for washing and cleaning in a hundred ways. You'd have to take fresh water for them all, if you had nothing but soap, and couldn't get hold of Pearline. Luxurious—bathing in salt water. 398

Home and Health.

SHOES FOR HEALTH AND COMFORT.

Few people know how to walk correctly, and therefore walking is not to the great majority a means of recreation or a mode of travel. One hindrance to correct walking is improper footwear. Most persons have neither proper shoes nor proper socks. In consequence of wearing bad shoes from childhood, their feet are distorted. Perhaps not more than one out of four persons uses his toes in walking, and the toes are an important part of the means of locomotion. In walking once with a man of good physique I noticed that he walked entirely from his knees. By this I mean that he put one foot forward, and did not push himself with the toes of his other foot, but leaned forward and pulled the other foot after him. I found that he made no use of his toes, owing to his wearing badly made shoes from childhood.

At the age of twenty-one I was interested in a pamphlet "Where the Shoe Pinches." After reading it I procured lasts made on anatomical principles. Their use has prevented the usual deformity of the foot. Some fourteen years ago, and after I began regular walking, I found even these lasts faulty, and had another pair made. As I progressed in the knowledge of walking, I found even the second pair of lasts unsatisfactory. In order to obtain a correct form for my shoes I made plaster casts. In a box large enough to contain both feet I made a partition, and covered the bottom with a layer of putty. Then I put each foot in the putty, thus making an impresssion. Into the impression I poured Plaster-of Paris. On lasts formed from these models I obtained the best possible shoes.

The modern shoe is made partly for use and partly for show. The part that is for show is the heel. The heel is an unnatural device. It inclines the foot forward, stubbing the toes, and it also brings the weight of the body too far forward, necessitating an unnatural crook in the knees. After twelve years of walking, I discarded the heel from walking shoes, though so far deferring to fashion as to keep it for wear in the cities, and going to the expense of having two pairs of lasts made on the models referred to—one pair for heeled and one for heelless shoes.

By using a correct last, the sole of the foot from heel to toe will rest flat, as nature intended it to do, and the weight of the body will be distributed over the whole surface. In the shoe made on a bad last the weight is brought unevenly on different parts of the foot. In a long walk this uneven distribution of weight makes a great difference in the fatigue of the foot.

A laced shoe is to be preferred to any other.

Another improvement which I made was in doing away with the lining of the shoe. Still another improvement was in dispensing with all pegs. Hand-made shoes are generally "lasted" with wooden pegs. When the last is pulled out of the shoe the pegs stick up inside around the edge of the insole like so many nails. The shoemaker cuts them off with a knife, and then rasps them down. After the shoe has been in use some time, and the leather becomes dry from wear, these pegs work up, and are one cause of the blistering of the feet. I found that a shoe could be manufactured without the use of these wooden pegs, so that when the shoe was taken from the last there was nothing to blister the feet, or, in other words, so that the insole could be made perfectly smooth.

Another cause of discomfort in walking is the sock. Most socks are manufactured with seams, and are pointed at the toe. These seams on a long day's tramp will cause blisters. If a person who wishes to become a walker will exercise care in the selection of his socks, he can obtain them without seams and square-toed. Woolen socks are to be preferred to cotton ones.—Century.

You cannot say that you have tried everything for your rheumatism until you have taken Ayer's Pills. Hundreds have been cured of this complaint by the use of these pills alone. They were admitted on exhibition at the World's Fair as a standard cathartic.

FARM FOR SALE.

A quarter section in Kearney county, Nebraska,

WILL BE SOLD AT A BARGAIN.

Description: Southwest quarter of Section 31, Township 8, North, Range 13, west of the sixth principal meridian.

ONLY $500 CASH FOR 160 ACRES.

Large bodies of cattle have ranged over and been herded on this and adjacent land. It is pretty well covered with grass. The soil as a whole is quite sandy, especially on the hills; the little valleys have the best soil.

It is near two railroad towns. Lowell is within two miles, and Hartwell is about five miles distant. All taxes are paid to date. Must be sold soon if possible. Address, W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry, now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST
A Secret Empire;

Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.

By Rev. Richard Horton.

Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.

Price, 60 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

Swelling in the Neck

"Large knots of scrofula nature came on my wife's neck for four years. When she had taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, we could see the swelling was going down. Now the glands have assumed their natural appearance and she is from this trouble. Our children were afflicted with spells of malaria every fall but this season they have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and it has purified their blood, built them up, and they have been free from all illness this winter." E. M. Blackburn, Oregon, Missouri.

Entirely Free

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S
]-oo-[
SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS
AND
REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,
AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough
Edward Payson, James Caughey,
Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther,
C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso,
S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills,
D. L. Moody, Guy Fox,
Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts,
Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge,
and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—o:o—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

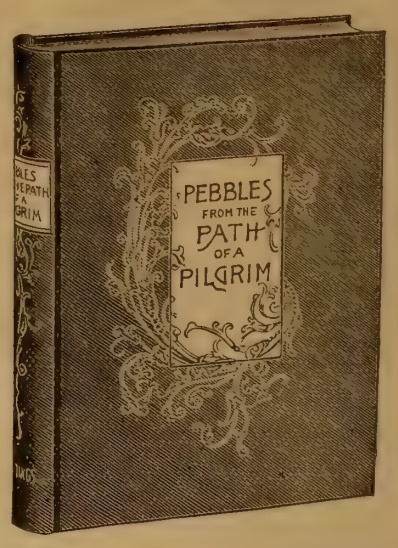
This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

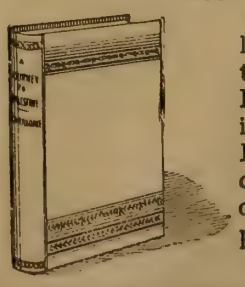
"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—



Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf.....1⅞c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1⅞c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.
LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING
Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

THE CORN CROP AND SILAGE.

Indian corn is evidently going to hold its place as the great and most popular staple with our farmers, for according to the statistician of the Agricultural Department the area devoted to corn this season shows an increase of 4,000,000 acres over 1893. But in many sections the crop is in poor condition from drought and other causes, and will require considerable care in order to prevent its loss. It is rather unusual for corn to need much looking after so late in the season as August, but this year the crop is backward in most localities, and still requires cultivation to destroy weeds and stir the surface soil. Many good farmers run the cultivator as long as a horse can pass between the rows, this practice preventing the ground from being overrun with weeds and helping the crop in other ways. Where corn does not mature the easiest way to save it is to put it into the silo, and it is probable that much of the crop will be utilized in this way the coming fall. It is certainly a contingency that ought to be provided for, and every corn grower should have a good silo, and thus be prepared to avoid any material loss by silaging his crop. Silage makes an excellent supplementary substitute for hay, and many stock keepers feed it with grain to advantage. Farmers who believe that their corn is too late to escape the frost should lose no time in making all necessary arrangements for silaging.

HILLS OR DRILLS.

Professor D. A. Kent, of the Iowa Agricultural College, recently made a journey into Illinois and took his agricultural spectacles, pencil, and note book with him. Among other observations reported by him in the Rural Life is the following, which is worth remembering until corn-planting time next year:

"In a distance of 700 miles I looked out of the car window and counted twenty-seven fields of corn in drills. Of the twenty-seven fields there was but one that was up to the standard of the best fields in hills. This was a field of sod in superior condition, and I believe would have presented a finer appearance if the corn had been in hills. The drilled corn seemed very uneven. Some stalks would be twice the size and height of others, indicating that the stalks in the hill seemed to be of mutual protection to one another. The drilled rows were fringed with grass and weeds from end to end. A hard ridge of dirt furnished starvation anchorage to the plants and was evidently stinting many of them. The children were out hoeing down the grass and cutting up the hard ridge mentioned above. The plowman was jerking his horses because they failed to enable him to cover up some of the grass. Profanity, or at least direst evidence of ill-feeling furrowed his face, and we concluded that the hills beat the drills under present conditions."

A young plant must have its proper food and drink, the same as a young animal. The fine, white roots are the feeding mouths. They suck and grow with good care; they starve and die with neglect. The more mellow the soil the more available the food, and the better within reach. Manure is fertility; that is, food.

Opposites often follow each other. We used to plant our potatoes in ridges. In the West they now make ridges like those made for sweet potatoes, and plant the tubors in the valleys between. There are no sunburnt potatoes, and the cultivator but tumbles the weeds down hill into the ditches. The finer roots are not in the way of the plow.

The quick growing kinds of turnips sown late in the autumn are very succulent, but they do not have the nutritive qualities which belong to the rutabaga family, or even the white turnips, if sown earlier. The most succulent turn pithy in winter, and are not palatable after January. There is some risk in feeding turnips freely to breeding animals—Exchange.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

TAKE AYER'S the Only Sarsaparilla AT THE WORLD'S FAIR. IT LEADS ALL OTHER BLOOD Purifiers.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA WORLD'S FAIR Chicago 1893

Agents wanted. BICYCLES ON EASY PAYMENTS New or 2nd hand; lowest prices, largest stock; makers & oldest dealers in U.S. We sell everywhere. Catalog free ROUSE HAZARD & CO. 4 G St. Peoria, Ill.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS. SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE DEALER'S $12 AND AGENT'S PROFITS. $12 buy our Oxford Boss Bicycle, suitable for either sex, made of best material, strong, substantial, accurately adjusted and fully warranted. Write to-day for our large complete catalogue of bicycles, parts, repairs, etc., free. OXFORD MFG. CO. 338 Wabash Avenue, - CHICAGO, ILL.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE!

——)oo(——

SECRET CONFESSION TO A PRIEST: or, The Roman Catholic Practice of Auricular Confession. By Evangelist Leyden, an ex-Romanist. 48 pages, paper, price reduced from 25 cents to 12 cents postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE SECRET WORK OF THE JESUITS, with an historical sketch of this pestiferous order, by Rev. W. C. Brownlee, D. D., with an appendix on the Church of Rome and the American Public Schools: A Warning to America. 80 pages, paper, reduced from 50 cents to 25 cents, postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS. By L. De La Hodde, member of the detective police of France. A History of the Secret Societies of France. The object of the translator of this work was to show the dangerous consequences, to society and government, arising from the practices of secret associations. 477 pages, cloth, price reduced from $1.50 to 75 cents, postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of a club of three new subscribers to the Cynosure.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

THE GUIDING HAND;

—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")

This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid	.35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid	.30
Cloth covers, postpaid	.50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid	.40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers." Christian Cynosure.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing." Earnest Christian.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894." Methodist Recorder.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen." W. W. Hulet.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness." —T. C. Givens.

"I am highly pleased with it."—James I. Council.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—Victor Charroin.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS OF FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—Matthew Henry. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

By the Same Author:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.
"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Other Works by C. H. Spurgeon:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

News of the Week.

WASHINGTON.

In accordance with the decision of the Democratic caucus the house agreed to the Senate tariff bill last week, Monday, and passed separate measures placing sugar, coal, iron ore and barbed wire on the free list.

President Cleveland arrived at Gray Gables, Buzzard's Bay, Mass., on the 17th inst, and was greeted affectionately by Mrs. Cleveland and the children. He appeared to be in good health and delighted to see his family. He left Washington Thursday reported sick.

The final action of the President on the tariff bill is the only thing that stands between the Senate and final adjournment. It is the general opinion that with the bill passed upon by the chief executive adjournment could be arranged within a day's time.

CHICAGO.

At 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, the strike commission appointed by President Cleveland began its investigation of the causes and extent of the recent strike, in the hope of evolving out of the evidence a rule of safety for the future whereby strikes may be averted.

The effort of the "whisky trust" to get as much whisky as possible out of bond before the new tariff increased tax on spirits goes into effect was noticeable in this city.

The aggregate sale of stamps one day last week was $261,741.20.

Fifty saloon-keepers were prosecuted by the Citizen's League of Chicago, recently, on seventy-six charges. Forty-four were charged with selling liquor to minors, twenty-eight for selling to drunkards, and four for allowing minors to play pool. Fines and costs amounting to $730 were imposed.

STRIKE AND UNION.

The directors of the American Railway Union find that $1,400 has been embezzled by the Indianapolis officers of the A. R. U. and that President Clark is missing.

At Cincinnati, Aug, 8, the railroad strikers voted to give up the fight 318 to 96. This action was the result of the earnest and pathetic appeals of the strikers in a destitute condition. They claimed that their families were without support and that the yardmaster promised to give them their places back when they ceased to be strikers.

Thirty-five men employed in the various branches of the building trades by Contractor Gildorf, of Chicago, struck because of the employment of non-union carpenters. The other trades all belong to the Building Trades council, and the strike was ordered by President Ryan of that body. It is said that the strike can only be settled by the contractor agreeing to employ none but union carpenters.

As a result of the recent strikes on the Union Pacific 2,000 men are now looking for positions elsewhere. Service letters by the fifties are being written now at headquarters, and invariably the letter closes with the single sentence: "discharged on account of the A. R. U. strike. Up to his discharge his work and conduct entirely satisfactory."

An American Railway Union committee, representing 2,500 men who were called out during the Pullman boycott, called on Governor Nelson this afternoon and requested him to confer with the commercial bodies of the Twin Cities with the view to securing their influence with the railway managers to get the men reinstated.

COUNTRY.

Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, are likely, it is reported, to produce this year the second largest wheat crop in their history. Minnesota and North Dakota will probably show a yield of 110,000,000, but as the trade demands conservative figures, the two States are estimated at 105,000,000 and 20,000,000 for South Dakota, making a total of 125,000,000 as the spring wheat crop for 1894.

Five hundred Poles marched on the jail at Winona, Minn., and secured the release on bail of Otto Blachek, arrested on a charge of inciting a riot.

Eighty-eight Coxeyites sent to jail by the Maryland authorities were put to work on the public roads.

Deserted by her husband and fearing starvation, Mrs. Adolph Max, of Lyons, Iowa, drowned herself and her two young children.

Railroad Commissioner Maxon, of Kansas, says all vegetation has been destroyed in the western part of the State by drought and hot winds.

Hog cholera broke out near Elburn, Macon county, Ill., three weeks ago, and has extended rapidly west and east. Hundreds of hogs have died of the disease and many are sick. There appears to be no remedy for the afflicted swine.

FOREIGN.

Caserio Santo, the assassin of President Carnot, was executed at 4:55 Thursday morning at Lyons, France.

The third battle in the war between Japan and China was fought on July 29, at Selkan. The battle lasted, with fearful slaughter, for five hours. Nearly 1,000 Chinese and 1,000 Japanese are said to have been slain in the conflict. The Japanese eventually drove off the Chinese and captured the town of Selkan. There were 5,000 Japanese and 6,000 Chinese engaged. The Chinese fled and took shelter on a number of ships at Koshu, fifteen miles distant. A number of cannon were captured by the Japanese. The Japanese followed, and another battle was fought at Asan, seven miles from Selkan.

The celebration of the feast of the assumption has been made the occasion for a series of riotous demonstrations in Belfast. Thursday the trouble began in earnest and culminated in a serious riot. The disturbances were begun by a mob of nationalists, who first attacked and beat a party of Protestants and then vented their wrath upon Protestant property. The extensive linen factory of Mather and Bunting was almost wrecked.

Many tin-plate works in south Wales, which have been closed for some time, are preparing to resume work in view of the passage of the tariff bill in Washington.

Three cases of cholera and one death from the disease have been reported at Amsterdam. At Rotterdam one fresh case of cholera is announced and one case is reported from Furmereno. At Maestrict there has been one death from cholera and one death from the same disease is reported from Wormerveer.

A dispatch from Vienna says that during Wednesday and Thursday there were 253 new cases of cholera and 161 deaths in Galicia and fifty-four new cases and twenty-eight deaths in Bukowina.

A plot to assassinate the French Premier Dupuy has been discovered. The anarchists had been warned of the discovery and fled to Spain. The main plot, it is alleged, was hatched in Barcelona by Spanish and French anarchists. Three men were designated by lot to execute it. They were to cross the border about the middle of August and were to assassinate the premier during his absence from Paris.

During the few days preceding Aug. 14 over 400 anarchists landed in London. A special branch of the police force is very busy watching over the new comers.

The cyclone which swept over the province of Cuidad Roal, Spain, Monday, was accompanied by a terrific storm of hail. Over 200 persons were injured and several thousand domestic animals were killed. The damage to crops in the province is estimated at $300,000.

The opening of a new French Baptist mission-house, supposed to be for proselytizing purposes, in the heart of the French Catholic suburbs of St. Bochs, Quebec, Canada, and an attack upon it by a leading French-Canadian newspaper, were the causes of a religious riot in that city last week, and military assistance is necessary to guarantee freedom of worship to the Protestants.

Three Leading Scientists

Proclaim the Superior Value of

Dr. Price's Baking Powder.

Scientists are devoting closer attention to food products. Recent examinations of baking powders by Prof. Long, Dr. Haines, and Prof. Prescott, were made to determine which powder was the purest, highest in leavening strength, most efficient in service, and most economical in cost. They decide that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder excels in all the essentials of an ideal preparation for household use. They write:—

"Chicago, March 28th, 1894.

We have purchased in the open market cans of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and also of the other leading brands of baking powders, and have submitted them to chemical analysis. We find that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is a pure cream of tartar powder, that is has a considerably greater leavening strength than any of the other baking powders we have ever tested.

Prof. John H. Long, Northwestern University, Chicago.
Dr. Walter S. Haines, Rush Medical College, Chicago.
Prof. Albert B. Prescott, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor."

Subscription Letters.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 13 to Aug. 18:

Rev S A Alt, A F Plummer, I D Fergus, Rev R J Gault, A Gummer, Rev W Ganschaw, J Franklin, Rev T R Griffin, Rev J Gaines, J E Pierce, Rev. A Austin, Mrs M B Nichols.

A Unique Picture.

There was much interest in the N. C. A. Chart used at the World's Fair last year by Rev. J. P. Stoddard in illustrating various facts in Freemasonry.

There has been a demand for copies of it by those who saw it at the World's Fair, and who wish to use it in explaining to their neighbors different phases of the lodge question.

Hence the N. C. A. has had a photo-zinc-etching made, size 18x20 inches, which shows the Blue Lodge, York Rite, Scotch Rite, etc., and their relation one to another.

There are also seen some of the initiatory scenes in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason. This chart can be used to illustrate the system of secret societies in a variety of ways. It will be especially helpful to local lecturers and pastors of churches in explaining to people the ceremonies, oaths, prayers, religion, etc., of the lodge. The Chart is on heavy book paper, and will be sent postpaid, at your risk, for six two-cent postage stamps; or sent at our risk by registered mail for ten two-cent postage stamps.

Framed and hung upon the wall it will make a novel and attractive picture for the homes of the readers of the Cynosure.

Market Reports.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	52¾@		55¾
Winter No. 2	53 @		53¾
Corn—No. 2	52⅝@		54
Oats—No. 2	29¾@		33¼
Rye—No. 2	7
Bran per ton	15 00
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@11	50
Butter, medium to best	11½@		23
Cheese	06½@		09
Beans	1 70	@ 1	90
Eggs	10½@		12½
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	5 00	@ 5	80
Flax	1 24	@ 1	25
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 00	@ 9	05
Broom corn (per ton)	40 00	@80	00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	68	@	75
Hides—Green to dry flint	02½@		06¾
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	7	@	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 40	@ 5	10
Common to good	2 00	@ 4	30
Hogs	3 50	@ 5	70
Sheep	1 00	@ 3	60

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	57	@	57¾
Corn No 2	60¾@		61
Oats	33½@		43
Rye	52	@	52¾
Eggs	17½@		18
Butter	13	@	23¼
Wool	19	@	25

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.
BY
CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI, No. 51. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,270.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Among our Correspondents..... 8
Fraternity 8
Powderly and his co-Knights 8
N. C. A. Board Meeting. 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
What are the Objections to Labor Unions?..... 1
The Fountain and the Whirlpool (poetry).... 2
An Overturning Needed. 2
SELECTED:
Turning the World Upside Down..... 2
The Adams Family..... 3
Trades Unions and Catholicism 3
Patriots Would Keep the Sabbath 3
The Curse of Secrecy in Congress 9
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Address of Prof. H. A. Fischer..... 4
Address of Joseph Mann. 4
REFORM NEWS:
The N. E. C. A. Day at Hebron; Late from Egypt; Down Stream from New Orleans; August Work in Oregon. 4,5
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Floating Chapel; The First Christian Church and State Constitution; Fruit from the Tree of Secretism; Pith and Point.. 6
LITERATURE 6
Educational Notes 6
OBITUARY..... 7
IN BRIEF..... 7
N. C. A..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS. 12
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16
MARKETS 16

The worthy Friend, Josiah W. Leeds, of Philadelphia, lately heard of an effort to start a "Boys' Brigade" in West Chester, Pa. He immediately sent a protest in tract form, a copy of which was forwarded also to Theodore L Cuyler. That widely-known esteemed and now venerable man heartily approved the protest, adding: "It is pitiable to see the carnal weapons of butchery in the hands of Christian youth! Well, let us go on protesting for peace and purity and righteousness, and hope for better days."

Ferdinand Schumacher, the "oat-meal king" of Akron, Ohio, calls attention to the fact that the late Pullman strike was voted in a saloon after an all-night debate. What a Pandora's box of lodgery, anarchy and horror is this saloon! The examination of the United States Commission shows that were it not for the one hundred saloons of Kensington, a few minutes walk from the Pullman shops, the vexations that the workmen endured would have been much more supportable and probably the strike never would have occured but for them.

Mr. KERENS, a Missouri member of the National Republican committee, is authority for saying that measures will be taken to separate the American Protective Association from that party. He says vigorously of the A. P. A.: "We don't want them. Nobody knows who they are or how many there are of them. They are a band of fanatics who deny their own identity. They are a lot of sandbaggers in politics, and belong to no political party. Their doctrine is almost the same as that of the Orangemen of the Dominion of Canada. Emphatically the Republican party must divorce itself from the A. P. A. and any other secret political organization." No doubt most of the principles appropriated by the A. P. A. would be excellent salt for Republican porridge, but the demoralization which secrecy always makes of patriotism, when brought into politics, is good reason for the last remark. It is good doctrine for all parties.

The strike leaders, who keep up the cry for government ownership of railroads, telegraphs, and a general communistic scheme, do not consider how quickly their occupation would be gone. Socialism, as they want it, would be a great, if not severe, despotism. Russia provides an example. Lately in Odessa one hundred and thirty railroad employes struck for higher wages. The Russian railways being controlled by the state, all that was necessary to end the strike was for the City Governor to call upon the police and drive the strikers back to work.

The Pullman strike was not declared "off" last week by the American Railway Union. The local lodge leader resisted the demands of the members because there would then be no claim for aid, according to lodge rules. This ridiculous situation has been kept up while the general public are pouring in money and provisions. Dr. H. W. Bolton, a prominent Methodist pastor, after a visit to Pullman thinks the reports of destitution exaggerated. There was as much within a few blocks of his church, all caused by drink and laziness. There have been no evictions for rent at Pullman and the Company seem to accept that loss of $100 000. The public generosity was called out by Gov. Altgeld's appeal. After visiting several very destitute families at Pullman he made as is his wont a great display of his discovery, and it was noised abroad that 1,600 families were starving. There is great need of food and some also of common sense about the famous city. The U. S. commission continues its examination this week. Important facts and opinions are brought out. There was too much paternalism at Pullman. Communists are demanding that we have in a general way what they curse the Pullman Company for maintaining. Suggestions have been made to the commission about the insuring and licensing of all railway men above a certain grade which would leave no excuse for maintaining the labor unions. But so long as there are demogogues and dupes the secret system will have some one to keep it up.

The Daily Leader of Cleveland, Ohio, has been putting together some facts suggested by the late Christian Endeavor convention in that city. That meeting represented two million members. The Leader compares these figures with the lodges thus: "In this country there are about 700,000 Freemasons, 725,000 Odd-fellows, and 425,000 Knights of Pythias. The Christian Endeavorers outnumber both the Masons and Odd-fellows combined. They are more than three times as numerous as the Knights of Pythias. The American Railway Union has about 150,000 members. The Knights of Labor have about the same number. All of the other labor organizations of the United States, including every national union and all of the bodies connected with the American Federation of Labor, have less than 700,000 members. That is to say, the Christian Endeavor society outnumbers by at least fifty per cent, or some 500,000, all the labor organizations in the country, taking them at their own estimates." These lodge figures are too large; but even accepting them, the Leader's estimate is peculiar. The Endeavor societies outnumber the three leading orders, and are nearly three times the labor societies. But secretists are quite often members of two or three lodges. It is, therefore, safe to estimate that the society that stands for the Lord Jesus Christ is equal to all the lodges, named; and, we believe, if the facts could be gathered, it numbers as many as all the lodges, when their membership is taken together. The lodges look large because one man who may belong to half a dozen different orders is counted for six men instead of one. This is a kind of Indian trick. They double the count of their war parties by dodging in and out behind bushes and trees.

Captain Cameron, the African traveler, when asked how he had been able to prosecute a journey of 3,000 miles from Zanzibar to the Gambia without resorting to bloodshed, replied that he had ever kept in view the fact that the native was a fellow man, and his expedition was a peaceful one. Treating the African with kindness and consideration, never arousing his jealousy, he had been able to traverse the whole breadth of Africa without resorting to violence. M. French-Sheldon, the intrepid English woman who conducted in East Africa the most wonderful and successful expedition of the kind ever undertaken by a woman, tells of her visit to the Rombo tribe who had been represented as a ferocious and treacherous people. She dealt with them kindly and found them "neither uncouth nor unkind nor ungenerous, and certainly far from being hostile." They treated her with "courtesy and gentleness." But six weeks after her visit Dr. Carl Peters, traveling through the same tribe with armed soldiers, in order to pass safely, "felt obliged to turn his guns on those Rombos, armed in their simple fashion, and kill a hundred and twenty before breakfast one morning." The difference in treating these African aborigines is a lesson to the employers who profess it needful to use severity with their men. The "black list" as used in some instances is one of the practices of lodgery most to be condemned.

WHAT ARE THE OBJECTIONS TO LABOR UNIONS.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.

We do not speak of unions as they might be, but as they are. We believe that wage-workers should combine for mutual support and help, but we object to the unions as now conducted.

1. Because they are secret. Secret organizations are contrary to the example of Jesus Christ. He said, "In secret have I said nothing." They are also contrary to his command. He said, "Let your light so shine before men that they seeing your good works may glorify your Father which is in heaven." There are many other objections to secret orders, but these are sufficient for Christians.

2. We object to these unions because they are unjust. They demand the same wages for all their members. This is of no aid to the able and energetic, but it compels employers to pay to the careless, idle and worthless wages which they do not earn. And if these worthless men are discharged, the union orders a strike and competent men are denied the privilege of earning their daily bread until they are restored. This is stealing both from the good workmen and the employers, and is a violation of the eighth Command.

3. We object to them also because they are lawless. The leaders usually tell the men that they must be law abiding, but it is known to all that strikes are almost never carried on without violence, intimidation, assault and murder. The sixth Commandment is violated, not occasionally, but constantly by the unions. To cry "scab" at a fellow workman has in it the spirit of murder.

4. We also object to them because they are oppressive. The principle of the orders is: We will endeavor to compel all workers in our trade to unite with us, become subject to our laws, and if any will not do so we will endeavor to prevent them from earning bread for their wives and children. If these unions could have their way all workmen in their lines would be compelled to unite with them or starve to death.

5. We object to them in general because they supplant the laws of God and the laws of the state by their own enactments. They substitute for the rule of the Bible, civil law and personal conscience, the edicts of a small minority of a secret lodge, and whatever it is needful to do to sustain their usurped power they undertake. How long men shall labor, what pay they shall receive, what material they shall use, to whom men shall sell goods, all these things they assume to decide, not for themselves but for others. God has given no such power to men. Christians cannot innocently be partners in such work.

Wheaton College.

THE FOUNTAIN AND THE WHIRLPOOL.

BY REV. ALEXANDER THOMSON.

I heard the whirlpool speaking low
When the skies were dark and the winds were moaning,
And the lonely pine swung to and fro
With a ceaseless groaning:

"I am the great unsatisfied;
I drink; I drink and am thirsty still:
With hell and the grave I am deified,
The gods you can never fill.

"I draw; I draw to my thirsty soul;
All things I hold in my swinging pool,
And he who yields to my fierce control
Loves me or is a fool."

I heard the voice of the fountain speak
A silvery, lapping, gentle sound:
"The good of the whole great world I seek
With the goodness I have found.

"I give; I give; and my charmed drops,
That sparkle and glow in their lustrous sheen,
Are pure as the dew on the mountain tops
That freshen the velvet green.

"I give; I give; and whatever I give,
I give it freely with pleasant tone:
God grant that the law by which I live
May not be all my own."

AN OVERTURNING NEEDED.

BY REV. C. POWERS.

As Christians and true philanthropists we are much concerned to know and do the best we can to make the truth of God effectual in overturning corrupt public sentiment, and righting the world morally in our own times. Even in our own nation, and among large bodies of professed Christians, there are presented dark pictures of depravity and wrong-doing. Christ Jesus the Son of God should everywhere be trusted as our great High Priest, followed as the infallible Teacher, and honored and obeyed as the King whose right it is to rule the world of mankind. He came the "light of the world," affording us the light and commanding us to shine. But selfishness, covetousness, Sabbath desecration, intemperance, the practice of secret lodge worships and debasing ceremonies, present an array of evil-doing which calls loudly for such radical changes as caused the heathen Ephesians to say "turned the world upside down." Very well; this is true Gospel work. God's work is always right. Sin and Satan mar the face of the world morally, bringing to the surface the results of the seeds of depravity, the thorns, briars and brambles of sin and everything that is annoying and cursing the human race.

God, the loving Father, has appointed a Sabbath for our well-being. Yet Sabbath desecration is practiced in almost every community. See Isaiah 58, last two verses, for the Lord's special or particular directions about keeping the Sabbath. Nothwithstanding the great "I Am" has said much about the Sabbath, and declared "Ye shall keep my Sabbaths and reverence my sanctuary," yet thousands on that day seek pleasure in their own way rather than in honoring his name. Corporations and the government in a manner compel thousands more to work on that day wherein the infinite Ruler says: "Thou shalt do no work."

The temperance reform ought to enlist the earnest and continued endeavors of the professed followers of God everywhere. Yet we shall never have "turned the world upside down" in this matter without universal "prohibition." The law of the eternal God prohibits. It says, "Thou shalt not" in reference to every kind of wrong doing. His Word declares: "Wo to him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips and maketh him drunk therewith." Yet saloon men and their abettors are all the time doing this very thing. Thousands of professed Christians are aiding and abetting this system of drunkard-making by voting with political parties which uphold the licensing the sale of intoxicants as a beverage. The inspired Word tells us plainly what rulers are for. "They are set for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well." Again, of the civil ruler it is said: "He is the minister of God to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." Then by the Word of the Lord and our votes let us down with the nefarious work of the saloon.

I would tarry longer on this important subject, but I wish to turn the light of God's Word on to other abominations that are dishonoring God and debasing those who were made to be sons and daughters of the most high God. The world needs to be turned upside down as to the prevailing sentiments in regard to organized secretism.

People imagine that they are "delivered to do" various things that really are against their manhood and the well-being of all concerned; as well as against the plain Word of the Lord. For instance, thousands of men promise, vow or swear to keep certain secrets that may be revealed to them after the pledge is given. And they cannot know, or are not supposed to know, but that the secret is or may be something that ought in right to be made known. Though he may be told that "It is all right," he has no moral right to bind himself where he may not do according as his own honest judgment shall dictate. The dignity of manhood requires that every one should exercise a conscience of their own, and not give it into the keeping of another. Can anyone fail to see this in the light of reason? The law of the Lord concerning this thing is found in Lev. 5: 4. Also multitudes promise to obey the dictates of leaders, out and out, and make no provisions in the case to "obey God rather than men," in case the requirement should conflict with their own sense of right and wrong.

When a man does these two things: makes a pledge to secrecy beforehand, and promises obedience to leaders without condition, he has taken a long stride towards being the mere dupe of others, and degrading his own manhood. And it is naturally degrading to the man who pretends to prerogatives which leave no responsibility for those under him as to the right or wrong of the command given. Yet the carnal brotherhoods generally have absolute commanders, while none but the Infinite Creator has a right to such a position.

A law of secret fraternities generally is in general terms: Do good, especially to a fraternity brother. Thus they abrogate a plain Bible command: "Do good unto all men, especially to those who are of the household faith. But many, very many, of them are so far from being of the household of faith in Christ that they are avowed deists, some are drunkards, many lewd and profane. But the devotee of the lodge has bound himself to favor his lodge brother rather than anyone else, be he ever so good and true to Christ.

And worse still, many of the secret orders, if not all, have false worships. Now both the Old and New Testaments make it appear, and in so many words call this "devil worship." And what are false worships? All worships that have no reference to Jesus Christ, by whom alone we may come to the true God. Jesus himself said: "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." And yet Masonry and some other secret worships reject or ignore his name. An apostle has said of it: "The only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." And again: "Whatsoever ye do, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." But Masonry proposes to do all that it does without that name; even to saving men in the "grand lodge above." In their religious ceremonies for the sake of eloquent passages—we may well conclude so—they use Bible passages, and where the name of Jesus Christ occurs in them they leave it out. Thus they insult the only living and true God by ejecting the only Meditator. God, at infinite expense and in infinite love for the sinful race of mankind, has provided a sacrifice for sin, his only begotten Son, and he became a meditator by whom man might successfully approach the Almighty in asking for pardon and salvation; and yet Masonry would have its votaries come to God rejecting the name of Jesus. Is not this indeed insult to the God of love, and insane presumption as well. Thus is Masonry anti-Christ in principle; that is, opposed to Christ. And in just so much is it opposed to the true God.

But is the Masonic god the true God? Their god can be approached without a mediator. They seem to need none. We have a right to conclude then that their god is not the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, but the one that Paul calls "the god of this world," and that is Satan. The Apostle John says, "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God." "And this is that spirit of anti-Christ." Again he says, "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father." True religion does confess Christ. Every other is false indeed. And yet thousands are made to believe that it will save them. Here is deception with a terrible vengeance. An eternally fatal deception.

There are many passages in holy writ that ought to deter Christians from membership in Masonic and other secret lodges. I will name one more. Find it in 2 Cor. 6: "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers." Then follows an exhibit of the most conclusive arguments against the evil forbidden. And yet what do we see? Multitudes yoking up with unbelievers in the lodges: and that in the strongest manner. In the nature of things this has a powerful influence to deteriorate and destroy genuine piety towards God. For this reason the thing is prohibited. And for those that have become yoked up with unbelievers, the command is, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." And yet what a prevailing sentiment is fostered by multitudes of people, that they may with impunity disregard this important command. Truly the yoking up of professed Christians with those who secretly practice heathenish ceremonies, borrowed from, and all one in principle with, the old Baal and other worship so much condemned in the Scriptures, must be provoking to the God of the Bible.

You who are familiar with the sacred Scriptures know that ancient heathen "worshiped the sun and moon and all the hosts of heaven." Abundant proof is at hand from various sources, including that from Masonic writers themselves, that the religion practiced in Masonic lodges is identical in character with the ancient sunworship, which was joined with Baal worship in Syria, with Osiris worship in Egypt, and with Brahma worship among the Hindoos.

The worship of the sun by those in heathenish darkness, it seems to me, was comparatively a light thing. But for those who have revealed religion wherein the true God is made known, who is the maker of the sun, for such privileged ones to go into idolatry, worshiping the creature rather than the Creator, was the sin above all others for which God terribly chastised and laid waste his ancient people. And it is the sin which perhaps more than any other one kind of sinning is now debasing enlightened nations, and corrupting the churches.

McNairy, Tenn.

"TURNING THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN."

"The world is wrong side up, and it will never be right side up until it is turned upside down." So said, most truly, one of the leading Christian workers of our century; so felt and acted the foremost Christian workers of the first century, Acts 17: 6. Paul was doing most noble service for God and humanity as he went about turning the world upside down, i. e., restoring men to their right relations with God. When sin entered into the world, selfishness became the ruling passion of the human heart; and for nearly six thousand years it has held its baneful sway, teaching men to "look out for number one," to "keep a sharp watch for the main chance," to put self first, "whatever comes of the other fellow." Selfishness is the tap-root of every sin. Christianity, as exemplified in the life and death of Jesus Christ, is the eternal enemy of selfishness in every form.

What is the deep down trouble with the American people to-day—the cause of strikes and lockouts and monopolies and trusts, the bane of our politics, the curse of our land? There is but one answer—human selfishness! Monopolies and trusts are organized on this basis, "The most for self, the least for the other fellow." Labor unions manifest the same selfish spirit, "Let no man work unless he belongs to our organization." In politics, on one hand the farmer is asked to vote for free trade and cheap goods that he may be benefited; on the other hand, the operatives in manufacturing establishments are asked to vote for protection and high wages that they may be prosperous. Turn which way we will, there seems but one line of appeal for the success of any object, viz., "It will benefit you or your class," and that in its essence is simply selfishness. Is it not plain, therefore, that our world is wrong side up—our whole idea of life a false one?

But is there any remedy for this state of things? Yes, one, and only one! And what is that? The establishment of the kingdom of God in the hearts of men! And how shall this be brought about? Not by preaching to others about their duty, but by manifesting the life of Jesus Christ in our daily lives before men.

This revolution in the life of Christians upon earth—for it is nothing less than that—must begin in some individual life or lives, and men must be saved by contact. Men are weary of the preaching which produces no marked effect upon the lives of those who hear: they do not care for a religion which simply makes a few church people more comfortable. The world is perishing now, as it was 1900 years ago, for the sight of a life filled with the spirit of self-sacrificing love; and it will perish unless we who bear the name of Christ shall show that we live on the same line as he did, with self dethroned, ignored, forgotten, that others may be blessed and comforted and saved.

Is there one of our readers who, waiting not for a new Christ or a new Paul to arise, will begin this day to "turn the world upside down," by showing how much an utterly unselfish life can accomplish for those who see its manifestation and feel its power from day to day?—Trumpet Call.

THE ADAMS FAMILY.

The late death of John Quincy Adams has suggested to the Inter Ocean Boston correspondent, Miss Lilian Whiting, some very interesting particulars respecting the celebrated family, from which we quote:

John Quincy Adams, grandson of the President whose name he bears, and great-grandson of John Adams, who succeeded Washington, and the son of Charles Francis Adams, the first Republican Minister to the court of St. James, died at his home, Mount Wollaston, Quincy, near Boston, yesterday morning. Mr. Adams was not an old man—he would have been sixty-one years of age next month—and in a national sense he can hardly be said to have been very prominent, but naturally there is a deep interest that clings to his honored and historic name. The antiquarian might prowl about the quaint old towns of Quincy, Quincy Adams, Braintree, and the estate of Mount Wollaston with no little reward. The three towns are succeeding stations on the old Colony Road, a little out of Boston, and the resident traveler is always amused to see the way strangers throw open the car windows and lean out and gaze as the quaint names are called by the conductor.

In the old Quincy house at Braintree there is one room still hung with curious Chinese paper placed there in 1777 to prepare to do honor to the marriage of Dorothy Quincy and John Hancock. The house in which John Adams died is still extant, incorporated with the larger mansion built on its site, and in it is still one room paneled from floor to ceiling in solid mahogany. The Adam's genealogy, including the Quincy, Hoar and Norton branches, is a matter of national history and need not be touched upon here. Dr. Holmes, as is widely known by his witty poem "Dorothy Q," traces a family connection with the Quincys, and Wendell Phillips and Phillips Brooks were remotely connected with each other and with Dr. Holmes through the Wendells. Professor Charles Elliot Norton, of Harvard, traces his ancestry to the Nortons who intermarried with the Quincys. New England genealogy—if one has a taste for social analysis and the study of hereditary traits—offers a very fascinating field, as the individualities are prominent and represent ideas, movements, and the general forces of progress.

Charles Francis Adams, minister to England under Lincoln, was a remarkable man. So far as I have known there is nothing especially remarkable about his son, John Quincy Adams, who died yesterday. He had been locally prominent in politics, but rather endured than desired political office; he was a good citizen, in his town of Braintree, where he had always lived, passing the winter in his town house on Mount Vernon street, in Boston.

The Adams family are not imaginative, ardent, or especially sympathetic; they have, in a general way, sound intellect, cool, calm, and more or less dispassionate views; they are logical, honorable and just, but they are of the cold and self-contained order. Many people believe this to be the genuine New England type, but nothing could be more remote from the truth. New England is the land of romance, of poetry, of imaginative grace, of spiritual fervor, of idealism. It is the home of the mystic. If one can find and fit the magic key he can open and read at will many a curious volume of forgotten history. There have been such treasures of moral earnestness, of religious faith, of spiritual ecstacy poured out in New England that it has become transmitted into a certain fine exaltation of life—into artistic and creative energy.

The most interesting member of the Adams family there has been of late years is Charles Francis Adams second, the grandson of the minister whose name he bears, and the son of John Quincy Adams, whose death occurred yesterday. Mr. Charles Francis Adams is a lawyer, a railway magnate and a man of letters. One of the ablest, the most fascinating and significant contributions to the literature of history is his great work, "Three Episodes of Massachusetts History," which he present under these heads: "The Settlement of Boston Bay;" "The Antimonian Controversy," and "A Study of Church and Town Government." With the death of John Quincy Adams and the close of this century, the essentially historic character of the Adams family will cease, and the relationship to the two Presidents will grow remote.

TRADES UNIONS AND CATHOLICISM.

Is there any particular connection between trades unions and Catholicism? is a question which we may not be able to answer positively, but it will do no harm to offer a few suggestions for thoughtful people to consider.

Judge Grosscup, of Chicago, in a recent address, delivered in Galesburg, Ill., on "Labor Federation a Menace to Civilization," very clearly and forcibly points out the fact that when the individual enters the union he effectually sinks his own will in the general will of his trade; actually throws away his individuality, and delivers up the free will which God gave him and which he has no right to surrender to any man or any company of men.

There is a very clear parallelism between the man in the trade union and the man in the Roman Catholic church; both have their wills subjected to outside control; they differ in that they serve different masters. The Catholic is the abject slave of the hierarchy; the union man is the slave of the union to which he belongs.

Against this subjecting of the will there has been a most terrible conflict in the history of the world. Civil and religious liberty, though given of God to man, has been purchased at great cost.

Rome has for a long time enjoyed the bad distinction of being the enslaver of the will, and who can tell how much influence she has had in preparing men to become slaves in other things than religion.

It is well to note that all secret oath-bound societies have in common with Rome, as the hidden source of their power, the complete subjection of the individual will. (And what is Rome but a gigantic secret order with the Pope as Grand Worshipful Master?)

We ought not to fail to notice the prominent place held in these trades unions by Roman Catholics. Whether these unions are the product of Rome might admit of doubt, but it is a fact beyond dispute that she fosters them, and there is also no doubt that she has a sinister motive in it all. Anything which she thinks she can use to further her purposes she will foster.

Another point common to Rome and secret orders is that they resort to force to accomplish their purposes. The anti-Christ has always propagated herself by force, the opposite of that principle by which the kingdom of Christ is propagated. Trades unions are organized for the very purpose of compelling obedience to their behests.

While we may not be able to say that Rome is the active instrument in originating and propagating trades unions, yet she finds them congenial in their fundamental principles. There is such a resemblance between Rome and all secret oath-bound societies as to stamp them as the offspring of one father.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ stands in clear distinction from all inventions of men in that it makes men free while human inventions make them slaves. The glorious paradox of the Gospel is that the servant of God is Christ's free man. But the servant of man or of men-made institutions is a slave. A faithful obedience of the apostolic injunction, "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free," would destroy trades unions and all secret orders as they now exist. Trades unions are not essentially evil, but when they cast a shadow on independent individuality or impair in the least the moral freedom they transcend their proper sphere. Trades unions exist for the ostensible reason of freeing their members from slavery to employers, but they impose a slavery more abject and base. Christianity alone can make men servants and free at the same time.—Christian Nation.

PATRIOTS WOULD KEEP THE SABBATH.

The national G. A. R. encampment is to be held in the month of September in Pittsburg. Such gatherings are always attended by an immense amount of Sabbath-breaking, and this one will be no exception to the rule. The Pittsburg Press says that the Sabbath "before the coming of the G. A. R. encampment will be such that the remnants of the Law and Order society will raise its hands in holy horror, not because that the obnoxious blue laws will be violated, but because they cannot step in and disgrace the town by untoward interference. Thousands of visitors will be in the city at daybreak, and special trains will arrive almost every half hour during the day. Brass bands, marching delegations and perspiring guides will be seen and heard on every hand. The street cars will be so crowded that hundreds instead of having a comfortable seat will either have to be as a big sardine in a little box or walk. The escort committees will be hard at work, conducting delegations to school houses."

The same paper states that the departments that will arrive on Sabbath so far as known are as follows: "Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, and West Virginia. The Philadelphia posts will arrive, some on the Pennsylvania and others on the Baltimore & Ohio. The Milwaukee posts will have a special train; and a countless number of posts, who will travel independent of their departments, will come in. The naval veterans will arrive in the morning, and in the afternoon hold divine services at their headquarters. An effort will be made to have every place with restaurant facilities kept open on that day, as well as soda fountains, so that the visitors will have no difficulty in quenching their thirst or obtaining a meal."

In the G. A. R. there are thousands of professing Christians. There are also a large number of ministers. Many of these will be in attendance at Pittsburg, and many of them will take part in this wholesale Sabbath desecration. Great organizations like the G. A. R., including all secret orders, many manufacturing and business companies, and associations whose chief object is pleasure, are utterly regardless of the claims of the fourth Commandment. Many of the members will engage in acts of Sabbath desecration in connection with these societies, but would not perform the same acts as individuals. Much of our prevalent Sabbath-breaking is due to the influence of these great corporations, societies and clubs. The government utterly fails to enforce the law against them. One reason is, the government itself does not submit to the law.—Christian Dissenter.

SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

THE GENERAL DEBATE.

ADDRESS OF PROF. H. A. FISCHER, WHEATON COLLEGE

I am from Wheaton, and therefore I agree with the first speaker; I am a Protestant, and therefore I agree with the second speaker; and I have 100 per cent of German blood, and therefore I agree with the third speaker. And so I see no way but to hold my course independently and strike out for myself, no matter whether it hits one or all of the leading speakers of the evening.

First, I want to bring forward the testimony of some men of earlier times. Here is what Chief Justice Marshall said about Masonry. He speaks of Masonry as capable of much evil, and incapable of producing any good which might not be affected by other and open means.

I am glad to learn to-night that Masonry is not a secret society. You see Chief Justice Marshall was in the dark in regard to that. Edward Everett says in respect to secret societies, that they put a vast power capable of most dangerous abuses into hands irresponsible to the public.

One greater than either of these said, 1,800 years before: "For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither goeth to the light lest his deeds should be reproved."

Now, these sentiments, it seems to me, are fully corroborated by extracts from the oath of the Royal Arch Mason. Among other words, he says this: "I furthermore promise and swear that I will aid and assist companion Royal Arch Masons when engaged in any difficulty, and espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same if within my power, whether he be right or wrong."

And then again he says: "A companion Royal Arch Mason's secrets given to me in charge as such, I knowing them to be such, shall be as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason not accepted;" although some omit this last, and give it without any modification whatever, stumbling at the harsh words "murder and treason." Now, I defy any man here to say that the Royal Arch Mason does not take this oath.

Members:—No, sir, he does not.

Mr. Fischer:—Will some of you meet me after this meeting and arrange a time and secure a hall and let me bring the proofs; and if you will over your own names sign affidavits that my statement is false I will venture to prove you guilty of perjury. These facts are too well known. In some respects Masonry is not a secret society, although Masons desire to have it so. Their oaths have been published to the world. I repeat, there are only two classes in this room to-night who can speak in respect to this oath or this extract from it. There are those who know that it is true, and there are those who don't know that it is false. You and I belong to one of these parties.

Now, I wish briefly to establish three points. In the first place, these secret societies are not necessary for any good purpose, as Wendell Phillips has said. Not in this country, at least. We profess to have a government of the people, for the people, by the people. Secret societies in government mean government of the people, to be sure, but by a clique and for a clique. They are not necessary for any good purpose whatever. What we need is publicity in our public affairs. And it never works well to fight the devil with fire. I sympathize with the objection of my friend General Hawley against the domination of the Roman Catholic church. I know full well that the Encyclopedia Britannica charges the Jesuit order with being a secret society, and justly so; and I know that it says, furthermore, that it is a naked sword, having its hilt at Rome and its point everywhere. It is a secret society. But what will be the result if the A. P. A. takes its place? If they wield the votes of two million voters in this country, will we be any better off?

The position I take is that secret societies may be used for any base purpose. We have had illustrations in our own land. We have had in this city the Clan-na-Gael, and the Anarchists; in New Orleans, the Mafia, and in San Francisco the Highbinders. We had the Masons in 1827, who murdered Morgan; we have had the Mollie Maguires in Pennsylvania; we have had secret societies under various names that have done the utmost injury to our body politic. It may be and has been used for the best purposes, but the presumption is always against a secret society.

One gentleman says they are not secret societies, but societies with secrets attached to them. Some people say the home is a secret society. Suppose that in your neighborhood, especially if you live in a country village where everybody knows what everybody else is doing or trying to do—suppose a family should move into that place, say Wheaton; and suppose they keep their doors closed; and suppose when anybody rapped at the door to get in a tyler should come to the door and open it about an inch wide, and compel you to say a certain password before you could get in; and suppose you knew they had secret meetings once a week, and they were always unwilling to tell what was done at those meetings; and suppose you asked them what they did those evenings when you could not get into their house; and suppose they said: "We have taken a solemn oath not to tell what was done," why, very soon you would expect to happen what happened out here where there was a secret house of that kind, and finally the police examined it and found it filled with stolen goods. The presumption is against these things.

The idea of this secret society, the A. P. A., is to oppose the Catholic church, but soon there will have to be another secret society to fight the A. P. A., and another to fight them, and finally it would reach a point that would remind one of the old rhyme:

> "Big fleas have little fleas to bite 'em,
> And so on ad infinitum."

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH B MANN, OF DANVILLE, ILL

Among my recollections are two great bugbears, the Roman Catholic church and the Freemasons. Religious instruction being in order in our family—on the Sabbath day—and the stock being rather depleted because of the fact that six brothers had preceded me, it appeared to fall to my lot on Sabbath afternoons, and late in the evening too, to listen to harrowing stories concerning the cruelties inflicted upon heretics by the Spanish inquisition. And I remember going to bed on Sabbath night with my young soul filled with horror and my young hair standing on end at these ghastly stories, and I was warned then that the danger most imminent in this country was the triumph of the Roman Catholic church. Something like a half century has passed since then, and again and again we have heard the same old story told by ignorant persons, by bigoted persons, and by dishonest persons.

Why, my friends, you talk about the power of the Catholic church. Do you know why any man in this country who is not a member of a Protestant church ever gets a smell at the public crib? It is because the Protestant churches are divided among themselves. Let them unite and the fellow outside of them would not be ace high in the pack. Let the Methodist church and the Baptist church and the Presbyterian church and the Campbellite church and all the other Protestant churches unite, and the so-called tyranny of Rome will be a picnic compared to the state of affairs that will then exist. Your weakness, my Protestant friends, is in your division, and our safety is in your division. You say you can't go and speak in certain communities without being stoned. And I can show you communities where there are not fifteen Catholics where neither you nor anybody else dare go and say that the Methodist clergymen are lecherous as a class, that the Methodist women are harlots as a class, without getting a head on you so big that you could not get out of church.

Gen. Hawley:—And so he should.

Mr. Mann:—And yet your fellow Sims went down to my old town, at Danville, and made that kind of statement about the Catholics, and he got a rock at him; it could not hurt him though it hit him on the head.

I get sick of it. I know something about the tyranny of the Methodist church, and I am not particularly against the Methodist church either. But I know something about the tyranny of it. I remember a time in Illinois when a man could not hold office unless he was a member of the Methodist church, or his wife was, and so do you.

When Mr. Garfield was a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, the boast was made openly that at his back stood, without regard to former affiliations, the Campbellite church, of which he was a distinguished member.

We are all tarred with the same stick. Bill Thompson struck it about right when he went to the jury and says: "Let us fellows all hang together."

The Methodist likes to see his fellow Methodist exalted, the Presbyterian prefers a Presbyterian, the Roman Catholic prefers a Roman Catholic, the Mason perhaps prefers a Mason, and the Odd-fellow an Odd-fellow, and you [turning to Pres. Blanchard] prefer a man that is not a Mason every time.

Pres. Blanchard:—That is right.

Mr. Mann:—And you have the right, sir. You have been opposed to secret societies ever since I have known of you, and you have a perfect right to be so, and I will never throw a brick at you. And with all deference you remind me of what the farmer said of the ram that butted the locomotive: "I admire your spunk, but confound your judgment."

I want to say one word about the A. P. A. It will not live, and the men in your organization who are seeking political preferment, and, don't you forget it, that's what they are there for—I don't think you are—will be in the condition of the old Know-nothing, and be calling on the rocks and mountains to fall down and cover them, and like Peter, they will be swearing before the cock crows, they know not the lord and master they now follow. Shelby M. Cullom has been trying for years to wipe off his political escutcheon the fact that he was a Know-nothing. He denied it. I don't know but he made affidavit to it. And now he is getting round so he would like to have it on again. All because of your pestilential society. It is un-American; it has no place here. It ostracises a man because of his religious belief. It is unconstitutional. If you get a man with your brand on him in the office of President of the United States you will own him body, soul and breeches. He will appoint a postmaster of the same kind; he will have to do it, because the postmaster must then be of his stripe in order that he shall not appoint any Roman Catholics to office, so that no Roman Catholic will be distributing letters; you will brand him, you will own him, and you will be a dangerous factor in the life of this country. You will when you are. But you won't. There is one great big organization in this country now going through travail and trouble which is incident to a better and a brighter life which stands ready to knock out every organization which is undemocratic, such as the A. P. A. and kindred organizations, and that notwithstanding it is now traveling in the wilderness. But it will reach the promised land, and the Democratic party stands ready to squelch the A. P. A.

REFORM NEWS.

THE N. E. C. A. DAY AT HEBRON.

VICTORY FOR THE CAUSE ALL THE DAY LONG.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 20, 1894.

We have just returned from Camp Hebron. To the partial report already sent I will add a brief sketch of the meetings from my standpoint.

From the first there was entire liberty on all topics of interest. Bro. Hoyt and the Association are not cramped or hampered by conventionalities or ecclesiastical strait-jackets, nor are they snared by the fear of men. "To the law and the testimony" is the watchword for all alike who would witness for Jesus and proclaim things done in secret "on the housetop."

Wednesday the 15th was specially assigned to the New England Christian Association. The feature of the day had been often alluded to and well advertised. Interest in the secret lodge discussion was shown by the attendance from abroad as well as by those occupying cottages for the season. Bro. Hoyt requested your agent to indicate the order of exercises. After a brief explanation and a few Scripture selections, sister Gleason led in prayer, and her earnest requests met a hearty response from the expectant congregation.

Bro. Cyrus Cunningham of Boston gave the first address and was listened to with the closest attention. It was an exhaustive review of the history, character and claims of the Masonic order, showing thorough research and strict fidelity to the facts of history. His manuscript is in my possession with permission to publish in whole or in part, and I hope ere long to give your readers, and to the public in a more permanent form, this able paper. What remained of the morning session was occupied in an exposition of the lodge system illustrated with charts.

The afternoon session was opened with a Scripture reading and prayer by W. B. Stoddard, followed by Rev. S. F. Grady of Trenton, N. J. Sister M. E. A. Gleason then spoke in her earnest, convincing, eloquent style, giving facts about labor troubles, the strikes, and information up to date of thrilling interest. Her main speech was based upon facts taken from two documents that lay side by side before her—"the open Bible" and a copy of the Voice of Masonry dated September, 1893. She unveiled the image of the beast as presented in the Voice and then hewed him in pieces with the sword of the Spirit before the Lord and the people. Testimonies followed until the hour for closing, and all felt that it had been a day of victory.

The evening services are kept steadily upon the line of direct effort for personal salvation regardless of any special topics during the day, and it was with profound gratitude that we received the evidence of God's approval in the searching and solemn presence of the Holy Spirit as the Word was preached in power by Bro. and sister Kinney of Burlington, Vt.

Responding to a call from Bro. Levi W. Crouch, president of the Connecticut Peace Association, and accompanied by my yokefellow in the Gospel, Bro. P. Bacon, I visited Mystic, Conn., on the 17th. The meeting was the last in a three-days' series, and proved very enjoyable and in many ways profitable to the cause. Arriving at camp it was with no small degree of satisfaction that I took the hands of such brave men and women as Pres. Love, of Philadelphia, James H. Earl and wife, of Boston, Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, of Winthrop, Me., Mrs. I. W. Benham, of Mystic, Levi W. Couch, of Norwich, and scores of others who had come up to this annual "feast of Tabernacles" in the interest of "peace on earth and good-will among men," and to receive from them a most hearty God-speed.

There were no tight reins or gags put on the speakers, and so the Word of the Lord had free course among the people. Bro. Lincoln, a staunch Prohibitionist, and editor of the "Home," gave a "clean cut" address on the advantages of total abstinence to the working classes, which was equally convincing in facts and argument.

I was asked to speak, using my liberty. I had anticipated a call, and had carefully written what I thought might be appropriate; but when confronted by so many eager, expectant faces, I forgot my manuscript and gave the people such thoughts as were given me in that hour. There was marked attention, and so far as I can judge what I said was well received by those by whose invitation I spoke. One minister rose to reply, and after proclaiming himself a Master Mason, declared that I knew nothing about the order; but he was so handsomely and thoroughly rebuked by a good Quaker sister that further comment was needless. Of course the "pool was stirred," and some hard things was said, but "no man laid hands on me."

Bro. Bacon was indefatigable in labors distributing tracts, obtaining names of friends, etc., and he gave it as his opinion that our visit to the convention will prove the key to a large field for successful operation in Connecticut and New England.

On Saturday morning Bro. Bacon went to Portsmouth, R I., where a holiness camp-meeting was in progress, and I returned to Hebron, doing what I could to help forward the work during Saturday and Sabbath until evening, when I went three miles and preached in Attlebury, where Mrs. S. and myself shared the hospitality of Bro. Manchester and his household, receiving a most cordial invitation to return and preach and lecture at some future time to be arranged.

J. P. STODDARD.

It is right and necessary that all men should have work to do which shall be worth doing, and be of itself pleasant to do; and which should be done under such conditions as would make it neither over-wearisome nor over-anxious.—William Morris.

LATE FROM EGYPT.

A LUTHERAN PASTOR REPORTS FROM EARLY LODGE TEMPLES.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—On Tuesday evening, Aug. 21st, in the Swedish Lutheran church at Stillwater, Minn., the "Relation of the Bible to Secret Society Worship" was discussed. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. L. Haff, entered most cordially into the spirit of the meeting; and, having recently visited Egypt, the cradle of the lodge demonologies, he made it an occasion of interest by relating his observations in the pagan temples of that country.

Rev. A. F. Winter, pastor of the German Lutheran church, would have attended the meeting but was prevented by illness. Most of the other pastors of the city were absent from home. There was a fair attendance at the meeting and considerable interest was manifested. WM FENTON.

DOWN STREAM FROM NEW ORLEANS.

POLITICS AND REFORM IN SOUTHEASTERN LOUISIANA.

GRAND PRAIRIE, La., Aug. 20, 1894.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I boarded the Grand Isle railway train Saturday, at 4:30 P. M., and reached Potash at 7:30 P. M, where I met Mr. J. H. Bailey, a seceded Freemason, Oddfellow, Knight of Pythias and Tabernaclist, who most cordially received and escorted me across the great Mississippi river in a skiff. At Bro. Bailey's hospitable home I met Mrs. Bailey, a dignified and very intelligent young lady, and five little ones. The Grand Isle railway is the only railroad in the State that has stubbornly refused to respect and recognize the validity of the separate coach and waiting-room bill. Ex Governor Henry Clay Warmoth is the owner of the road, and he has stood up and boldly proclaimed the equality of man to man, and against unjust class legislation. Gov. Warmoth says he will go to law and fight the unjust "Jim Crow" car law to and through the highest court in the land.

I met Dr. John H. Coker, M. D, late one of New Orleans' prominent colored physicians, and a friend to our reform; but now a prosperous truck farmer and practicing physician of Plaquemine parish. I also met on the train the Hon. Edward Butler, ex State Senator, and present clerk of the District Court of this district. The following conversation took place between us.

"Senator, what is the political complexion of matters in this part of the Congressional district?"

"Everything thus far is very quiet and apparently at a stand-still.

"What effect has the passage of the new tariff bill had upon the sugar farmers and the political leaders of this part of the State?"

"I think the Democrats of the district are so disgusted with their party in Congress for crippling the greatest industry of the district, that it is most likely that a Republican Congressman will be elected."

"How do the two races (black and white) get along in these parts?"

"There is very little race discrimination in this parish. Don't you see on this train you are permitted to ride in this first-class car with the whites, and no one has molested you? We consider a man a man in this parish, and treat him according to his standing as a gentleman in the community."

At this point the train whistled for Potash, and Mr. Butler shook my hand and bade me good-night. On crossing the river with Mr. Bailey, and partaking of a well-prepared meal, we drove about 2½ miles to the Bethlehem Baptist church, Rev. E Leon, pastor, where an appointment was awaiting me. I met a very orderly and quiet audience and preached to them, being very well received. Secretists are very scarce in this community.

On Sunday, at 9:30 A M., I met a very large assemblage of young men and women and children at the True Vine Baptist church, Rev. P. Edgerson, pastor, where I delivered a lecture and distributed tracts. At 3:30 P. M I met a large congregation at Pilgrim Baptist church, Rev. Louis Reddicks, pastor. I preached and distributed tracts, which were very well received. At 8 P. M. I again crossed the river in a skiff and met a large congregation at the Macedonia Baptist church, of which Bro. Reddicks is pastor also. My sermon was very well received.

I am to take train at 2:30 P. M. for Magnolia, Governor Warmoth's place, where I am to preach to-night. I have been cordially received by all whom I have met. This community has been very well leavened with anti-lodge tracts and copies of the Cynosure and Lodge Lamp. Mr. Bailey and Miss A. Williamson have each subscribed for the Cynosure. Pray for our success. Yours in the work, FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

AUGUST WORK IN OREGON.

RALLYING THE CHURCHES FOR THE PACIFIC COAST CONVENTION.

Reaching home Aug. 1, I conducted the prayer-meeting that night at Philomath, and next Sabbath, Aug. 5, spoke twice in our home church in the absence of the pastor. A few days were spent in Salem, conferring with Bishop Dillon and Dr. Barkley on the coming convention, and arranging the program. On the following Sabbath, Aug. 12, I spoke twice in Portland to very fair audiences; first in the Mt. Tabor Wesleyan church, and at night in the U. B. Mission church at Cloverdale. The house was so crowded at night that chairs were brought in from adjoining houses. Rev. J. W. Eldredge is the much-beloved pastor. While others are off at the coast for rest and vacation, he is rushing around to secure means to build a larger house for his growing congregation. May the Master prosper him.

On the 13th and 14th I spoke in the Evangelical church of Albany, Rev. A. S Copley, pastor. The congregations were but fair, owing to the warm, busy season. Many also are at the coast for rest and pleasure. The truths presented here were seemingly well received. The pastor is an out-and-out anti-secretist. He has consented to speak at the convention. The pastor of the Christian church was present the first evening, and the M. E. pastor the second. The Lord helped wonderfully in the presentation of his truth, and four subscribed to the Cynosure.

From Albany I went to Hopewell church, near Hubbard, where I spoke on the 16th and 17th to very fair crowds. On the night of the 17th, as I started to speak, a number of hoodlum lodgites began interruptions. I left the rostrum and walked back to where they were and said, "Gentlemen, I have been invited to speak in this church; have been regularly announced, and have the right of way, therefore you better keep still." They concluded to mind me.

At the close of the address they gathered about me like a pack of wolves, howling and snapping and yelling. I said, "You are fine representatives of lodges." Of all the low-down lodge elements I have met, this takes the chromo. As the hat passed for the collection some one said, "We are all Masons."

I answered, "No you are not, you are too 'hard up' for Masons: it costs money to be a Mason." The Lord assisted me as sensibly here as at any point in my life. Oh, how the truth scorched the wicked!

I was very kindly entertained here by H. L Mills, a nephew of General Robert E. Lee, and a brother of Dr. John Lee Mills, who died at Brighton Park, Ill, in 1890. Bro. Mills' great-grand-mother was a sister to Martha Washington. He was a member of the 50th New York Engineers during the late war, and was present when Lee surrendered at Appomattox. I noticed that he always (soldier-like) called him "old Lee" instead of Uncle Robert.

Mr. Mills is a wonderful man, a philosopher of no mean repute; genial and companionable. His excellent Christian wife and fine family of children all conspire to make a stranger feel at home. May the Lord greatly bless and prosper them. I secured two subscriptions here.

From Hubbard I ran into Portland again, and spoke twice at the Wesleyan Methodist church on Sabbath last, distributing tracts and securing four Cynosure subscriptions. Rev. T. H. Organ and wife, the faithful pastors of this church, have resigned, and will move to California on account of failing health. May the Lord bless them wherever they go.

Let everybody remember the convention at Philomath, Sept 26th and 27th.

P. B. WILLIAMS.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE FLOATING CHAPEL AND PROHIBITION GUN-BOAT.

As we have just finished our fourth year's work with the Floating Chapel, our friends may be interested in a brief report of what has been done. In round numbers it is as follows:—

About one thousand five hundred lectures and sermons. Three tons of literature distributed. About one hundred and fifty cities and villages reached. One hundred and fifty Prohibition mass-meetings.

A quarter of a million people have attended the meetings.

The cost has been very small, considering the amount of work done.

Cost of chapel, $2,000. Little steam tug "Galatea," $400. Running expenses for four years, $7,600. Total cost, $10,000.

Receipts, from donations, $1,200. Hat collections and 5c. admissions, $8,600. Total receipts, $9,800.

We are now working our way up the Illinois river, and shall be very glad to have friends call and see us whenever and wherever they can make it convenient to do so.

LITERATURE FOR DISTRIBUTION.

There are many readers of your paper who have quantities of good books, papers, magazines and tracts that have accumulated, for which they have no use. In our work along the rivers we find thousands who take no periodicals. Many take only story papers. All such we supply free of charge. If those who have good temperance and religious reading to spare will unite with their neighbors and ship in boxes or barrels, freight prepaid, to Peoria, Ill., we will see that they are judiciously distributed. After leaving the Illinois we intend pushing our way into the bayous down the Mississippi River. We are doing this work free of charge, and have no salary, so we request that all freight be prepaid. Your brother in Christ, I. R. B. ARNOLD.

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH AND STATE CONNECTION.

From the lectures on the apocalypse by the late William Jones of London, treating of the sixth seal, Rev. 7: 1–8, we give the following extract:

"The fall of heathenism.... was attended with one great evil.....While the churches of Christ were in a suffering state, few would join them except such as were Christians; but when Christianity became the religion of the Emperor (Constantine), converts of an ambiguous character might be expected, and an increase of secularity anticipated. The faith of the reigning prince would be the faith of every well-bred courtier, for who would be so impolite as not to be of the same faith as his prince! The profession of Christianity would be made the high road to imperial favor,....and by a revolution of sentiment the persecuted Gospel would become the fashionable religion. All this....fell out (occurred).....The new birth....seems to have been laid aside, and conversion was little more than being baptized and called by the Christian name. The glory of the church henceforth seemed placed more in splendid edifices and pompous ceremonies than in conformity to its Head. In short, from this time she became a courtier; and, laying aside her own simple attire, she appeared in a dress more befitting the mother of harlots than the bride of Christ."

In a note Mr. Jones says, the reign of Constantine was disgraced by acts of atrocity which showed that his pretended conversion was "nothing better than a political maneuver!" T. H.

FRUIT FROM THE TREE OF SECRETISM.

DEKALB, Iowa.

"The love of money is a root of all evil." Secrecy organized is the plant which furnishes shade and protection to evil in every direction. The strikers have been gathering the fruit at Chicago and elsewhere, but it has been very expensive to the whole country. The expense of gathering the fruit from a few of the branches has cost much in life, property and money. The fruit of the whole plant will cost the life of the nation if unlawful secret oaths are not prohibited by law.

How can men be loyal American citizens if they swear allegiance to another form of government than that of the United States? But to swear men thus in secret is just what secret lodges are doing. What better fruit can be expected than has been already gathered?

Away with the secret brotherhoods "invented by men and inhabited by devils." They overshadow the church of Christ so that many Christians are "neither hot or cold," and the plant bears the fruit of every evil work everywhere in both church and state. We know them by their fruits unmistakably. But how can disloyal secret oaths be prohibited by act of members of secret combinations in legislative halls? As well might we ask saloon-keepers for prohibition. Destroy the secret oath and there would be no foundation for Freemasonry and its kindred. But as long as the secret oath prevails there will be the fruit of an evil plant whose branches have spread till they cast a gloom all over our fair land.

It is high time for honest, loyal Americans to unite heart and hand in the work so nobly begun by the National Christian Association and "lay the axe at the root of the tree" and destroy disloyal secret oaths. CYRUS SMITH.

PITH AND POINT.

GOD BLESS THE N. C. A.

I have fought the secret lodge so long here that I am boycotted on every hand, and God only knows what is to come next; but I will never give over to the enemy. Thanks for the paper; will give it to some Masons that I know here. My trust is in God, who doeth all things well. I pray for the success of the N. C. A. God bless the cause.—C. E. MARCH, Santa Cruz, Cal.

A GRAND RESOLUTION.

The last number of the paper (Aug. 9) was a capital one. Let us all try and make the Cynosure a name for high thinking and clear and forceful expression.—A. THOMSON, Tomahawk, Wis.

LITERATURE.

THE ART OF ILLUSTRATION. By C. H. Spurgeon. Pp. 205. Price, $1.00. Wilbur B. Ketchum, New York.

The name of Spurgeon on a volume is assurance that the reader will find within that which is practical, earnest, attractive, evangelical. Whatever he has written is worth attention. He has shown himself master of the subject of which the volume treats, and the reader will not be disappointed in finding it a storehouse full of suggestions, most interesting and valuable. No one can afford to be destitute of the helpfulness it imparts. The volume comprises lectures originally delivered to the students of the Pastor's College. The title is one which the author himself selected, and among the subjects are the following: Illustrations in Preaching; Anecdotes from the Pulpit; the Uses of Anecdotes and Illustrations; Where can we find Anecdotes and Illustrations? The Sciences as Sources of Illustration. It is the first of his unfinished books to be published, and one to which he had himself given the title, "The Art of Illustration." Of the five lectures included in this volume, the first two were revised during the author's lifetime. Two were partially revised by him before being re-delivered to a later company of students than those who had heard them for the first time. The remaining lecture was printed substantially as it was taken by the reporter, only such verbal corrections having been made as was absolutely necessary to ensure accuracy of statement. We can commend this work to our readers as a most profitable and suggestive volume.

It must not be supposed that, because the matter of the volume was first used in lectures to young men preparing for the ministry, it is unsuited for general reading. On the other hand it is quite entertaining and highly profitable. Mr. Spurgeon's style was always attractive and popular, and the different chapters are so interspersed with anecdote and illustrations that there is no lagging in the interest from first page to last.

"Christianity and Science" is the forty-second number of the Anti-Infidel Library, written by Daniel T. Taylor and edited with additions by H. L. Hastings. The discussion taken up in this pamphlet is unending, and to many perplexing. Thousands who cannot read the large and erudite volumes written on the agreement or disagreement of religion with nature will be thankful for a handy treatise which costs but a nickel and is remarkably full and explicit. The Creation, the Deluge, Origin of Man, Geological Science, etc., are discussed carefully and the Scripture accountably maintained. Published for 5 and 10 cents, by the Scriptural Tract Society, Boston.

The Bible Concordance, upon which the Rev. J. B. R. Walker has been at work for many years, will be issued by the Congregational S. S. and Publishing Society about September 1. It contains fifty thousand more references than Cruden's venerable work, and it is rigidly alphabetical in its arrangement, all words, including proper names and appellatives, being included in the one list. All serviceable words have been retained.

Literary activity in France is very great. In 1893 there were issued 11,076 publications, which total does not represent the number of volumes or single parts, but the number of works, many of which were in several volumes. A large proportion of these works dealt with Napoleon and the people who surrounded him.

The Augustana Book Concern at Rock Island, Ill., reports net profits to the amount of $8,910, with assets worth $37,516. The profits from some of the papers were as follows: Augustana, $999.16; Child's Paper, $1,866.05; Olive Leaf, $235.09; Nineteen thousand five hundred copies of new books, and 53,952 of new editions were issued during the year. It belongs to the Swedish Lutheran church.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—Married teachers are to be excluded from the schools of Australia.

—A good year is anticipated for Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa. Pres. Johnston has secured in the East funds for endowment, for the musical department, etc.

—Fall term opens at Wheaton College Sept. 18. An effort will be made to secure a new building for a girls' dormitory, to be constructed on the cottage plan, and with accommodations for twenty-five students.

—The most expensive thermometer in the world is in use at Johns-Hopkins University. It is an absolutely correct instrument, with graduations on the glass so fine that it is necessary to use a microscope to read them. It is valued at $10,000.

—Greenville College is the only institution of its kind controlled by the Free Methodist denomination. It is finely located at Greenville, Ill. Rev. W. T. Hogg, one of the General Superintendents of the church, is president. The fall term opens Sept. 5th.

—Miss Grace Chisholm, of Cambridge University, England, Miss Maltby, of Wellesley College, and Miss Mary F. Winston, of Chicago, have received special permission from the German government to enter the University of Gottengen, with the same privileges enjoyed by men.

—A new Luthern college has been established by the Norwegian farmers of Hamilton county, Iowa, who have erected a thoroughly modern building, and equipped it for an "American, conservatively progressive, and Lutheran school." It is called the Jewel Lutheran College. The first term begins September 4.

—The Lick Observatory was lately in danger from forest fires which swept up Mount Hamilton, and at one time threatened to burn the cottages of the astronomers. The Observatory is fire-proof, but the heat of a big fire would be disastrous to the lenses of the big telescope and to many costly instruments. Director Holden and his assistants had a hard time for several days and nights watching and fighting the flames.

—The Missouri Synod (German Lutheran) has purchased property lying between St. Paul and Minneapolis for a new college. It comprises 40 lots, upon which are several substantial stone and brick buildings, the whole representing an outlay of $100,000. It was bought for $23,000, and at a cost of two or three thousand can be fitted at once for educational purposes. The property lies upon a bluff of the Mississippi River, is shaded by magnificent trees and is accessible by two electric car lines.

—The proposed Woman's Medical Institute in St. Petersburg is now to be established. Sufficient capital to insure a yearly income of more than 50,000 roubles has been secured, and the city provides the necessary college buildings and hospitals. The whole will be in charge of the government. The number of women physicians is exceptionally large in Russia, but their work is confined entirely to practice among their own sex and the children. One reason for this is the fact that the Czar has 12,000,000 Mohammedan subjects, and Mohammedan women will not permit male physicians to treat them.

The liquor business can never be legalized without sin.—Methodist General Conference.

In our opinion the great obstacle to the overthrow of the drink system is the apathy of the professing church of Christ. When the Christian people of this land, loyal to Christ as King, and wholly consecrated, rise in the power of his Spirit and demand it, the end will come, and God will be glorified.—Reformed Presbyterian Church.

OBITUARY.

Jacob Cochran died July 31st, 1894, aged 70 years, 10 months and 16 days.

Father Cochran joined the United Brethren church in 1852, in whose communion he was faithful until his death. When the division came in the church of his choice he remained true and faithful to the doctrines and principles of the church, and about the last act of his life was to contribute $200, the Sabbath before he died, to pay off a debt on his home church. He commenced to take the Cynosure with its first issue, and it continued its weekly visits till his death. So interested was he in the National Christian Association that at one time he gave $50 for its support. It can truly be said a good man has left us. The church and the Association has sustained a heavy loss. From the children has been taken a kind father, from the United Brethren ministers a friend and brother, from the community an obliging neighbor; but, believing in the resurrection of the dead and imortality through Jesus Christ, we hope to meet him in a fairer world than this. W. A. Oler, Pastor.

IN BRIEF.

Yes, man is the stronger vessel—but he has to be often bailed out.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There is about 10,000 opium smokers in New York, according to the testimony of one of the witnesses before the Lexow committee.

It takes a man with a good deal of influence with himself to do something he doesn't want to and doesn't have to, because he ought to.—Puck.

Recent figures show that the total value of the matches made and consumed each year throughout the world is but little short of $200,000,000.

A single shipment of condensed milk from Elgin to California last week amounted to 432,240 cans of Eagle Brand milk, filling twenty freight cars.

The Argentine Pacific Railway, from Buenos Ayres to the foot of the Andes, runs 211 miles without a curve, and with not a single cutting or embankment more than three feet deep. This is probably the longest piece of straight railway in the world.

A small boy surprised his teacher at one of the grammar schools by asking her how far a procession of the Presidents of the United States would reach if they were placed in a row. On her expressing her ignorance, he calmly announced: "From Washington to Cleveland."

The engineer who is installing the electric power plant for the new Metropolitan Elevated railway in Chicago, figures that the use of electricity will save the company $300,000 a year in operating expenses, compared with the cost of running trains by anthracite-burning locomotives.

Not much is heard of the widow of William H. Vanderbilt nowadays, but those who know her say there is no woman in the country who does more good with her money than she does. She lives in a very modest way, and nine-tenths of her enormous income is given to the poor. She employs agents who are constantly engaged in looking up the cases of those who apply to her for aid, and a worthy applicant is always generously assisted.

A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which the sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper which carries the sleeper while he sleeps runs. Therefore, while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper the sleeper carries the sleeper over the sleeper under the sleeper until the sleeper which carries the sleeper jumps off the sleeper and wakes the sleeper in the sleeper by striking the sleeper under the sleeper, and there is no longer any sleeper sleeping in the sleeper on the sleeper.

Hall's Hair Renewer enjoys the confidence and patronage of people all over the civilized world, who use it to restore and keep the hair a natural color.

CURES OTHERS

For over a quarter of a century, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been effecting cures of Bronchial, Throat and Lung affections. Weak Lungs, Bleeding from Lungs, Bronchitis, Asthma, all lingering Coughs, Consumption, or Lung Scrofula and kindred maladies, are cured by it.

REDUCED TO A SKELETON.

Mrs. Mira Mills, of Sardis, Big Stone Co., Minn., writes: "One year ago I was given up by my family physician and friends; all said I must die. My lungs were badly affected, and body reduced to a skeleton. My people commenced to give me your 'Medical Discovery' and I soon began to mend. It was not long before I became well enough to take charge of my household duties again. I owe my recovery to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

Mrs. Mills.

WHY NOT YOU?

LODGE LAMP

a monthly of choice articles on the SECRET : SOCIETY : SYSTEM, which the National Christian Association proposes to publish if the demand fo such a paper is such as to warrant its issue.

Annual subscription 20 cents.

Clubs of 20 for only $2.00.

Send in your pledge to take 20.

☞Money to be sent when you are notified that the plan is successful.☜

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair. OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18TH, 1894.

Entrance Examinations September 17th, at 2 P. M.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

DO YOU WANT

To receive, read, distribute and otherwise aid in the circulation of a large number of Holiness and Reform papers and magazines? If so, send me a SILVER dime, and your name and address will be printed on the Holiness and Reform Mail Exchange List, which is sent to all publishers of holiness and reform literature, who will mail you sample papers and magazines. Write name and address PLAINLY. Address, J. H. PADGETT, Printer, Ennis, Texas.

PROPHECY:

A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

New England Department.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

Eastern Department.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

Northern Department.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

Pacific Department.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

College Agent, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison Street, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

President—Rev. J. F. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

Vice President—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

Gen'l Sec'y and Treasurer—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Rec. Secretary—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

Directors—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

New England.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Rev. D. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phimps, Cynosure office, Chicago.

Iowa.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

Kansas.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

Nebraska.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

Maine.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

Minnesota.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

New Hampshire.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

New York.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

Ohio.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

Oregon.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D. Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - Editor.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1894.

THE PACIFIC COAST ANNIVERSARY.

The annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of moral reform will be held Sept. 26th and 27th, 1894, at Philomath, Benton county, Oregon. All persons and communities interested in our reform work should be represented.

Wm. Dillon, President. P. B. Williams, Secretary.

Among our contributors this week are the names of Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. Alexander Thomson, from whom we always expect something worthy of a high reputation. It is promised that the Cynosure shall have more help from them in the near future. Rev. C. Powers is of the Wesleyan connection. His argument shows that secretism is not a forgotten topic among his brethren in Western Tennessee. The Sunset Club debate was a lively one toward its close. The two speeches of this number show that the room was full of electric force that evening. Our report omits the applause and laughter that burst out every few minutes. Our lecturers are making hot weather hotter from Atlantic to Pacific. God bless them all! The home reading circle has some entertaining biographical sketches, and the mathematics of liquor has a column for temperance workers.

Fraternity.—A fortnight since a mass meeting of secret assessment societies, calling themselves "fraternal," was held at Johnstown, Pa. The gathering was widely advertised as a "general all jollification." But when it is alleged that this gathering of the lodges will be a "long step" in promoting the recognition "of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man" we understand that another spirit is also working among these orders. For centuries pagan writers have been giving us their incoherent ideas of the fatherhood of God. Every new philosopher has his explanation and theory; but there is no explanation, there is no theory that "works well," except the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. God is not known as a Father by those who do not know the Son: nor are there any but false brotherhoods which have not the Elder Brother in their company. The idea that a score or a hundred men of all sorts and colors in religion can pay a fee, and swear an oath, and by virtue of these ceremonies call each other brothers and God a father, is simple mockery and blasphemy. If brotherhood comes so cheap it is not worth quarreling about. But when we know it only comes to us bearing bloody seal of the Cross, the bold wickedness of these orders is manifest.

POWDERLY AND HIS 60 KNIGHTS.

If John W. Hayes, General Secretary of the Knights of Labor, establishes permanent headquarters in Washington for his own and other secret labor societies, it will be no joke. The press telegrams so report. The object is, of course, to manage a strong lobby, with some money and tremendous threats behind it. What sort of a lobby will this be, and what will be the character of the legislation it would promote? These are fair questions, and there is proof enough that they are not to be treated as insignificant.

Until a few months ago the name of Terence V. Powderly was inseparable from that of the Knights of Labor lodge. He had already achieved popularity in politics when elected as its General Master Workman. He gave his reputation to the order. It was smiled upon by the Romanist hierarchy because Powderly was a good son of the church. It was courted by Miss Willard, of the W. C. T. U., because Powderly denounced drunkenness. It was flattered by the politicians, because Powderly was of their ilk and his influence meant votes. Mr. Powderly became, therefore, so emphatically a representative of his order that society and leader were practically the same thing. Word of his downfall last spring, therefore, was interpeted to mean the practical retirement of the order from any place of influence in politics or power in the communistic struggles of the labor lodges.

People who once pinned faith on Mr. Powderly have not necessarily given him up because his lodge shelved him. On the contrary, those who trusted to the Knights of Labor because of its leader still rely on him, but they see more clearly what a secret society operating upon free American laborers is likely to become,—what in fact its real diabolical nature is when the hour of revelation comes.

The overthrow of Mr. Powderly was such an hour. He resigned under charges of various kinds of follies and misdemeanors; but his resignation was followed by a rejoinder which uncaps the corruptions of this secret cabal. In the respect of all candid men, Powderly's retirement is like Samson's play in the Philistine temple. As he falls the Knights of Labor edifice tumbles,—for any good purpose a wreck. But what there is left may serve well an evil purpose in Washington.

In this pamphlet the ex-Master Workman shows that the K. of L was in heavy business. At one time its paper took in $20 000 of silver mining stock for advertising. One charge that he denies is deception respecting an appropriation of $376 to be used in securing the friendly services of Pope Leo XIII. All the figures about salaries are in the thousands. There is plenty of sympathy for the poor laboring man in them. The order, too, was publishing books on a liberal scale. Powderly was charged with cheating the order out of $1,000 on a cheap edition of a work of his own. He denies the allegation.

The K of L. had something to do with rum and politics. At one of its general meetings its Grand Worthy Foreman was so drunk he could not attend to business, and at the St. Louis meeting the Democratic National Committee sent $5 000 as a corruption fund, to buy some favorable action from this secret society. This is on the evidence of the successor of Powderly, Geo. W. Sovereign.

These rulers of American Labor also had, like the Masons, secret cabals within their own number to control the action of the whole. Powderly was charged with forming a secret oath-bound clique within the order called the "Governor," to secure absolute control. He replies that his accuser was himself a member of this odious ring within a ring and took its oath.

There was another ring within this ring called the "Philosopher's Stone." The ex-leader was charged with keeping the secret work of this ring when he resigned. He does not deny it. He was ordered by the General Executive Board to turn over these lodge "goods." He retorts that N S Stevens, the founder of the K of L, imparted to him the secrets of the "Philosopher's Stone" on the promise that he should never impart it to any "undeserving or unworthy person." Of course Mr. Powderly thinks his late associates in the noble work of the K of L are of this very class, for he writes the General Secretary Hayes: "I cannot disclose it to yourself or associates." As it is unwritten work, this "Philosopher's Stone" will turn nothing into gold for them. They may try till they are bald, like the old alchemists. Mr. Powderly is obdurate. The valuable secrets of this rite he proposes to take advantage of himself, Grand Master Workman or no Grand Master Workman.

But if much of this is ridiculous, and shows the real character of these men who have all along been posing for the flattery of business men, the favors of politicians, the courtship of temperance women, and the leadership and money of the laboring poor, there is more that reveals the knavery and hypocrisy of the present leaders of the K. of L. and makes their move on Washington a matter of serious consideration. Powderly, it seems, was beaten and driven out by Hayes, who seems to out-Jesuit them all. One part of the pamphlet tells of an investigation of Hayes by the Executive Board. Evidence was taken that proved him to be guilty of "listening at keyholes," "picking of pockets," "reading of personal letters," and other intolerable practices which were of "daily occurrence." Hayes was urged to stop this work, and when hard pressed he bitterly retorted, "I have information that will damn the whole of you!" He went on to say what this information was. It was denied. He made then this amazing boast, "It don't make a bit of difference; once a lie is told it will go, and I will lie whenever I want to score a point!"

This is the man who manages this secret lodge of laboring men, and is about to open a Washington lobby! If our Congress is not wholly corrupt such infamous demagogues will finish it.

Powderly says it is his belief these men mean to disgust all decent members, drive them out, break up the order and pocket the plunder. The Knights of Labor is, he says, "a laughing-stock among sensible men to-day." There are yet in its membership those who believe themselves "sensible," but from the first they have been deluded and deceived. Such documents as this of Powderly's, which is reviewed for us in the New York Voice of July 5th ult, should open the eyes of the blindest. The time draws nigh when men will hate this lodge harlot (Rev. 17: 16), will tear her flesh and burn her with fire.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The Board of Directors of the National Christian Association met at the office in the Carpenter Building last Thursday. There were present brethren Wylie, Blanchard, Cook, Richards, Kletsing and Whipple.

The publication of the "Lodge Lamp" was considered and the work approved. The annual expense of the monthly paper is estimated to be $500. There are now 2,300 copies subscribed for, the single subscriptions being 20 cents, and one half as much in clubs.

The store front of the Carpenter building having been lately remodeled and improved, the Board approved the work at a cost of $320. It being remarked that this was a low figure, members of the body declared that workmen should be fairly paid whether by contract or no.

The circulation of the Cynosure was taken up and plans for increasing the list considered, though nothing definite was adopted. Numerous letters warmly approving the paper were read. It has been sent to many ministers in the South by the gift of friends. Expiring subscriptions of this kind have to stop unless there are funds provided for this special purpose, for it is well enough known that few colored pastors are able to subscribe for papers.

Reports from several lecturers were made, all showing the effect of hard times and the "strike." Secretary Phillips reported a number of local agents, some of whom give their services freely to the work.

The Board discussed the interests of the lecture work at some length without reaching any definite conclusion, financial stringency being the most serious difficulty in the way of its promotion.

Several members of the Board who could not be present sent letters. Bro. Hitchcock is in Ohio; Rev. Mr. Collins was providentially hindered, but means to keep his shoulder at the wheel; Rev. A J Johnson sent his "God bless you;" and Rev. W. O. Dinius is away on his circuit in northwestern Illinois.

—The last issue of the Lodge Lamp contains one of the ablest and most exhaustive articles on the methods of the secret labor unions yet printed.

—The Day of New London, Conn., in a column report of the peace convention at Mystic, Conn., notices the remarks of Bro. J. P. Stoddard on "Boys' Brigades" but says nothing about the lodge.

—The note last week about Bro. Davidson, of New Orleans, and his work and desire that more should be done by the N C. A, may lead to a misapprehension. He has received a stated sum for lecture work, but too small to allow for the expense of long journeys. There is no arrangement to provide even this after the middle of September. Who will help the Board keep at least one agent at work among the colored churches of the South?

—A friend calls attention to the fact that we do know that our Lord was a workingman before he began his public ministry. Mark 6: 3 records the question of his neighbors who called him "the carpenter." In the parallel passage in Matthew, they say "carpenter's son." The remark of last week respecting the Scripture record must therefore be modified.

—There are many fraternities, says the Pacific Ensign, "which admit no liquor dealers to membership, and clubs whose doors are closed to the men who stand behind the bar. To be entirely consistent, they should ostracise the ones whose votes perpetuate the curse." An excellent suggestion is this. Since Prohibitionists are generally opposed to the secret orders, such a counting out would leave few men in the lodges. But as consistency is not one of the jewels of secretism we shall still find lodge halls full.

—"The Supreme Vice-President of the A. P. A. is a Protestant clergyman, the Reverend Adam Fawcett, of Columbus, Ohio. He publicly asserts that Gov. Wm. McKinley is a member of the hateful organization. In that case is there a Catholic Republican who would vote for McKinley for President."—Catholic Review. Governor McKinley is not, and never was a member of the American Protective Association. So he writes to an inquirer in Rockford, Ill.

—The Chicago Legal News, well-known for its Masonic proclivities, says of the late Hon. B. C. Cook: "He had intellectual powers of a high order. Whether at the bar, in the Legislature, in Congress, among his fellow citizens, or in the counsels of his party, he was an acknowledged leader and known as a man of the strictest integrity, who could be trusted to the fullest extent." It was not possible that such a man would long remain in the deceptive associations of the lodge.

—The Floating Chapel, which Bro. I. R. B. Arnold and his family have been working for four years up and down the Ohio and Cumberland rivers, has now started from St. Louis up the Illinois. He finds at St. Louis that a new name would be popular. The gun-boats of the war were built in that city, so the Floating Chapel will be a prohibition gun-boat henceforth. It seats 500 people, and as they proceed up the Illinois river by easy stages the towns on either side will be bombarded with lectures and literature. Mob violence was threatened at Canton, Ky., because colored people were admitted freely to the services. This is the only case of hostility from the bitter caste prejudice of which we have learned. Bro. Arnold can come as far as Ottawa, we believe, and perhaps to Joliet, with the chapel, and will then be so near Chicago that we shall expect from him a long visit. Read his letter on the 6th page.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Joseph Cook, the first of lecturers, goes to Australia in September on a lecture tour of three months.

—Rev. Wm. H. Chandler, of the College church, Wheaton, is attending for several days a meeting of the Western Holiness Association at Bloomington, Ill.

—Rev. O. T. Lee, of Norwood, Iowa, whose article on the Mystic Shrine we noticed last week, has been called by the Second Norwegian church of Milwaukee to be its pastor.

—Rev. M. A. Gault, who has been spending a few weeks at Bay View and Petoskey, Mich., we regret to learn has not been benefited as he had hoped by the change. It is now feared that he may have to spend a year abroad for the restoration of his health.

—Elder Rufus Smith, well-known all over the country as city missionary and street preacher, expects to leave his home in Wheaton next week for a trip to Florida. He proposes to sow tracts all along the way and is providing Wooley's speech at Cleveland for the purpose.

—Rev. R. B. Taggert, of the United Presbyterian church, is engaged as professor in the American Temperance University, at the prohibition town of Harriman, Tenn. He believes the institution has a large and noble mission, and expects some 400 students to attend the coming year.

—William G. Hubbard, of Columbus Ohio, president of the Peace Association of Friends in America, spends considerable time presenting the important subject of international peace in public addresses. He also speaks frequently on prohibition of the liquor traffic as opposed to license and all phases of legalization.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman has gone on from this city to Elmdale in Chase county, western Kansas, to engage in home missionary work for the Seventh-day Baptist brethren. Mrs. Hinman, who also accompanied their daughter to Chicago on her way to China, after a few days with old friends at Wheaton, returned to Oberlin Saturday.

—Rev. Dr. David Metheny, of the Tarsus mission, maintained by the Reformed Presbyterian church, attended the late Synod in Philadelphia and has since returned to Mersine, Asia Minor. He was one of the speakers at the N. C. A. Conference in this city in 1890.

—Rev. H. A. Bushnell, of the "Brick" church, Galesburg (Congregational), has resigned to accept a pastorate at La Grange, a Chicago suburb. The last convention of the Illinois State Association was held in Mr. Bushnell's Galesburg church, in which he took an active part.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

While we sleep and split hairs an enemy is coming—Prohibitory work in the capital city—And in the South, especially Georgia.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 22, 1894.

Five hundred anarchists, it is said, are on their way to this country. The administration is anxious that the bill against welcoming these Ishmaelite aliens should pass in time to bar their landing. Notwithstanding, it is feared that the bill will not be acted upon by the House of Representatives at this session, though it has been passed by the Senate. The present trouble is lack of a quorum in the House and a disposition on the part of several members to object to the bill being passed without a quorum. The reason for objecting is that the bill gives the U. S. Commissioner of Immigration power to determine who may be classed as alien anarchists and to deport them without any reference to courts of any kind. In view of recent occurrences in this country and in Europe, it would seem to be much better that one man should have too much authority than that the United States should be overrun with the dangerous men who are being driven from numerous European countries. It will be too late for regrets when their presence in the United States shall have caused the loss of valuable lives and property.

One of the greatest drawbacks to the anti-saloon workers of Washington has been, for many years, the ease with which the liquor interest controlled the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in relation to the liquor traffic. It may be imagined then that all those who oppose the domination of the saloon in municipal matters are gratified to know that the present board of Commissioners have asserted their independence of the rum power. The declaration of independence was publicly made a few days ago, when ten policemen were summarily discharged because of their peculiar relations with retail liquor dealers in their precincts, and their dismissal was accompanied by a warning to all the rest of the policemen, calling their attention to the fact, which some of them have either overlooked or ignored for a long time, that it is their sworn duty to compel the saloon-keepers to conduct their business in accordance with law, and not to aid them in breaking the laws, as the dismissed policemen did.

There is so much talk and so many claims made pro and con about the success or failure of State regulation of the liquor traffic that the opinion of Mr. A. R. Burdette, of Georgia, at present visiting Washington, is of more than passing interest. He says: "Georgia is practically a prohibition State. Outside of the large cities the law forbids the retailing of intoxicating liquors within three miles of a church or schoolhouse. Now there are very few communities in the State that are not within that distance of a school or place of worship, and the result is that the saloon is almost a defunct institution in Georgia. Liquor can still be had in the small towns and villages, but only by the quart, and a heavy penalty attaches to drinking it on the premises where it is purchased. I think our system beats the State dispensary law of Gov. Tillman in that it is practicable and has public sentiment behind it. We have tried it for a number of years and it works so well that nobody would go back to the old way. In the outset I was very much opposed to the change, and voted and worked against it, but the test of experience has converted me. Though far from being a fanatic on the subject I am satisfied that any community is better off where the retailing of alcoholic drinks is interdicted."

THE CURSE OF SECRECY IN CONGRESS.

The position of the Cynosure on the tariff contest in Congress is confirmed by the New York Times, which is regarded as a Democratic organ. Secrecy in Congress is demoralization and financial ruin to the country. It must be abolished! Read the Times:

The disgraceful element in tariff legislation which has been forced upon the country by "four unnamed" Senators is due largely to the secrecy with which our public affairs are conducted. This prevails chiefly, but not wholly, in the Senate. It was there and in the Conference Committee that the mischief was done.

The bill went through the House in a little over three weeks, was freely debated and substantially amended, and when it passed to the Senate, on the 2d of February, it was a fair and honorable measure, representing the result of discussion and open agreement. It was placed in the hands of the Finance Committee, where it remained nearly seven weeks. During that time and after it was reported to the Senate it was practically completely in the control of a sub-committee of three Senators. The avowed object of the committee was "dicker" with Senators, on the basis of the purchase of their votes by legislative favors for the private advantage of the Senators.

When this disgraceful dicker, which took just five months, from Feb. 3 to July 3, was completed, the bill went to a Conference Committee, of which the Senators completing the trade were members. For two weeks more there was a series of wholly secret meetings of the Democratic conferees. On the 17th of July Mr. Wilson reported that the conferees could not agree because those of the Senate, while accepting the principles and acknowledging the obligations of the majority, were not free agents. Of course they were not; they were bound by the bargains they had made. Four weeks more passed in the same discreditable work, and finally, on the 17th of August, the Senate bill—the net result of the essentially corrupt and secret trading in the votes of Senators—was passed by the House in order to prevent the plain purpose of the controlling cabal in the Senate to defeat all legislation.

Now, what has been done could not have been done openly with the knowledge of the people. We are a strangely patient nation. We have borne much of loss, of discredit, of humiliation. But there is a limit to our patience, and we should say that it had been reached. There is not a civilized nation on the face of the earth that would tolerate such methods and their mortifying consequences. We must go to Russia to reach a land where the public interests are thus bargained over behind the veil of secrecy. England, France, Germany—any country with a professedly free government where the rights of the people are recognized—would overthrow a government in which such monstrous abuses were possible. Surely the American people will not forever endure them. It should be the next reform in our national government to compel publicity at every stage of legislation. The "Senatorial courtesy," the "Congressional etiquette," by which practical corruption and bribery are made safe and profitable, because secret, should be abolished.

The mistake of the best men through generation after generation has been the great one of thinking to help the poor by almsgiving, and by preaching of patience or of hope, and by every other means emollient or consolatory, except the one through which God orders for them—Justice. —John Ruskin.

If you serve your brother because it is fit for you to serve him, do not take back your words when you find that prudent people do not commend you. Be true to your own act, and congratulate yourself if you have done something strange and extravagant, and broken the monotony of a decorous age.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

There are too many people who never think it worth while to undertake to be religious with their money.

The devil seldom puts on mourning when a stingy man joins the church.

The only true riches are those that death cannot take from us.

It is only when our hearts are about to fail us that God can be our strength.—Ram's Horn.

The Home.

AS YE SOW.

No holy life was ever lived in vain,
Nor ever spoken word that ceased to be;
Good deeds, through all the ages endlessly,
Alleviate the pangs of endless pain;
And words that lightest on the lips have lain
Form widening eddies on a shoreless sea;
Uttered and acted thoughts eternally
Do change the record of life's loss and gain.

Lift thou a beacon in the lonesome night,
Somewhere a soul is groping hopelessly;
Stretch but a hand out wheresoe'er thou art,
Some maimed hand is feeling after thee;
Whisper one word of cheer, 'twill grow in might
And wake an echo in some breaking heart.

—Francis Howard Williams.

ALFRED ROBERTS, THE "CHRISTIAN BRAVE."

William Taylor, in his autobiography, gives a remarkable instance of devotion to the work set before him, in a man whom he met with in San Francisco, in 1850. It was a period especially trying, on account of storms, scarcity of food, and an attack of Asiatic cholera. Mr. Taylor writes: In those days there came a man to that coast who seemed to belong to the old prophetic age. He was named Alfred Roberts, and he was a friend indeed to all in need. He had nothing but the clothes he wore; he was a hard worker, but worked for nothing, yet he lacked nothing; and nothing was really needed, of human resources, by any sufferer in the city, that he was not ready promptly to supply.

As quick as a vulture could scent a carcass, that strange man would find every sick person in town, and administer to his needs, whether of soul or body. If he needed a blanket, the stranger, who was known to everybody, went at once to some merchant who had blankets to sell, and procured the gift of one to the needy man; so for the need of any article of clothing, or even a bowl of soup, he would bring hot from the galley of some soupmaker. He was soon known as a direct express almoner, working most efficiently along the lines of human demand and supply.

His appearance impressed me profoundly at first sight. It was one Sabbath morning, after preaching in my little church on Powell street, that I was met at the door by a tall man, wearing a well-worn suit of grey jeans, and a slouch white wool hat with a broad brim. He was lean and bony; he was sallow from exposure to the sun, and his features were strikingly expressive of love, sympathy, patience, and cheerfulness. He grasped my hand and held it and wept, as though he had met a long-absent brother.

I took him home with me and heard his story. He was a native of central New York State. He was then about thirty-five years old, and had been devoted to the work of God among the poor, quietly, unofficially, and without pay, from his youth. He had spent many years instructing Indians in the far West, and was recognized and honored as a chief among them. Once, when his tribe was overwhelmed, and driven from their homes by a more powerful war tribe, this white man refused to run, but hasted to meet the advancing warriors, and obtained a hearing, and dissuaded them from the further execution of their murderous purpose. For this exploit, the Indians conferred upon Mr. Roberts the name, or title, of "The Christian Brave."

He had great sympathy for the suffering slaves of the South, and cried to God for the overthrow of slavery. He had spent much of his time for the relief of the blacks in our large cities. When overworked in sick rooms, he would plant and cultivate a field of corn, and thus recover strength, and acquire independent means of subsistence.

During the year 1849 and the beginning of 1850 he was laboring among the sick and needy people, white and colored, of Washington, D. C. One night, when thus engaged at the capital, the Lord, in a vision, showed him San Francisco. The city of tents was mapped out before him in a minute detail. He noted its topography, its few houses and many tents, and saw the hundreds of sick men as they lay in their tents and in the hospital, and saw a tall young man busily engaged in ministering to them, and the Lord said: "Alfred, arise, go to San Francisco, and help that man in his work." He said to me: "Next morning I arose and went by early train to New York, and took passage for San Francisco. I spent many weeks among the sick and dying at the Isthmus of Panama, and thence got a passage in a Pacific steamer, which anchored in San Francisco harbor this morning. From the deck of the ship I recognized the city, just as I saw it in vision, thousands of miles away. I knew that my man, from his appearance, was a Gospel minister, and set out at once, as soon as I got ashore, to find him in some pulpit in the city. I went to four chapels before I reached yours, and waited till the minister of each came in, and I said of each, as he entered his pulpit: 'No; he is not the man I seek.' It was late when I reached your chapel. You were well on in your discourse. The house being crowded, I stood at the door and said: 'That is the man whom God showed me in vision, away in Washington City.' This my apology for the unceremonious hearty greeting I gave you, as you came out of the door, at the close of the service."

That was my friend Alfred Roberts, the most unselfish man I ever knew. Day and night he ministered to the sick and dying of that city for many months, as only he could do.

Then he went to Sacramento City, and devoted many months, extending into the spring of 1851, doing everything within the possibilities of human agency for the relief of the cholera patients in the first and only visitation of that plague known in California.

In that campaign, Roberts broke down in health, and returned to San Francisco, a helpless wreck of his former standard of noble manhood. I gave him shelter and all the help he was willing to receive, and nursed him till he was able to walk around at will. Then he said: "My work in California is done." So two members of my church bought for him a first-class passage to New York, for three hundred dollars, and he bade us a final farewell.

After his departure I heard nothing from him for nearly three years, when I received a letter from his own hand, written in Jerusalem, Palestine. In that letter he gave me an outline of his labors during the intervening years. He said he returned to his old field of labor in Washington, but suffering the disability of poor health, he devoted some months to manual labor, on a farm in his native State, and recovered the health and strength of former years.

Then he went to England, and spent a few months in London among the sick and destitute folk. He then went to Italy, and besides the bodily relief he gave to many, he distributed among the common people a thousand Bibles and Testaments. As such labors were not tolerated in those days, he was pursued and greatly annoyed by the police; but the Lord was with him, and delivered him from the oppressors.

He went to Jerusalem, where he was still laboring among the Turks. When I visited Jerusalem in the spring of 1863, I made the acquaintance of Bishop Gobat, resident bishop then, under the joint auspices of England and Prussia. Bishop Gobat gave me a detailed account of the labors of "that remarkable man," Alfred Roberts, in Jerusalem. Besides relieving the sick, he spent much of his time in the instruction of Mohammedan pilgrims. The Bishop said: "Roberts knew no language outside of his mother tongue, but he came frequently to our book depository and got us to select the most interesting and instructive portions of the Arabic Bible and other books, and mark the pages, with the beginning and ending of each stirring portion, and he went with these tracts for distribution. He knew the import of every tract. He had such a remarkable insight into the character of men, by a glance of his eye, that in a crowd of a thousand Turkish pilgrims he could select his orator for the occasion and enlist him, and show him what to read and proclaim to the people, and so, day by day, he had great crowds of attentive listeners. He finally worked himself down, and it was clearly manifest that his constitution was broken, and that his work was done. We all loved him as a man of God and a brother in Christ, and I fitted up for him a comfortable room in our college building on Mount Zion, and my own daughters waited on him daily, in cheerful sympathy for him, during a lingering illness of two years, when he died in peace; and we buried him on Mount Zion, but a few yards from the tomb of King David."—The Herald of Peace.

THE CALL OF DAVID LIVINGSTONE.

On September 1, 1838, Livingstone reached London to be examined by the Mission board, and at the Aldersgate street office met Joseph Moore, the Tahiti missionary, who had come from the west of England on the same errand. They became close friends at once, and nine years later Livingstone wrote: "Of all those I have met since we parted I have seen no one I can compare to you for true, hearty friendship." Both young men were in London for the first time. On their first Sunday they worshiped in St. Paul's; and on the Monday passed their examination, and were accepted as probationers. On the Tuesday they began sight-seeing, and went first to Westminster abbey. Livingstone was never known to enter it alive again, but on April 18, 1874, his bones were laid there in the central nave, in the presence of a mourning nation, and of the faithful servants who had carried them from Lake Bangweolo, through forest and swamp and hostile superstitious tribes.

After their provisional acceptance, Livingstone and Moore were sent to Mr. Cecil's, at Chipping Ongar, in Essex, on a three-months' probation. Their part of the work was to prepare sermons, which, after correction by their tutor, were learned by heart and delivered to the village congregation. One Sunday Livingstone was sent over to preach at Stanford for a minister who was ill. "He took his text," Mr. Moore reports, "read it out very deliberately, and then—then—his sermon had fled. Midnight darkness came upon him and he abruptly said, 'Friends, I have forgotten all I had to say,' and hurrying out of the pulpit, left the chapel."

Tutor Cecil, owing to Livingstone's breakdown in preaching and his hesitation in conducting family prayers, sent a report to the board which had nearly ended his connection with the London Missionary society, but an extension of his probation was granted, and at the end of another two months he was fully accepted. Livingstone continued his medical studies till November, 1840, when, on the eve of his ordination, he ran down to Glasgow to obtain his diploma.

This was on November 16, on the evening of which day he went home. There David proposed to sit up all night, as he had to leave for London in the early morning, but this his mother would not hear of. He and his father talked till midnight of the prospects of Christian missions. The family were up to breakfast at five. "Mother made coffee," his sister writes, "David read the 121st and 135th psalms, and prayed. My father and he walked to Glasgow to catch the Liverpool steamer." On the Broomielaw father and son parted, and never met again.

On Nov. 20 he was ordained a missionary in London, and on Dec. 8, 1840, sailed for Algoa bay on board the Captain Donaldson. Up to the eve of his ordination Livingstone was bent on going to China. The opium war was still dragging on, but this would not have deterred so resolute a man had not a new and most powerful influence been brought to bear on him at this crisis. One evening Dr. Moffat, the Nestor of African missions, who was in England on a visit, called at Mrs. Sewell's in Aldersgate street where Livingstone and other young missionaries boarded. The younger man was at once deeply interested and attracted, attended all Dr. Moffat's public meetings, and ended by asking whether the doctor thought he might do for Africa. "Yes," was the reply, "if you won't go to an old station, but push on to the vast unoccupied district to the north, where on a clear morning I have seen the smoke of a thousand villages, and no missionary has ever been." It was with this counsel in his mind that David embarked on the George sailing packet for Algoa bay on Dec. 8, 1840.—Thomas Hughes' "Life of Livingstone."

ABOUT COUNTERFEITS.

Did you ever see a counterfeit ten-dollar bill?
Yes.
Why was it counterfeited?
Because it was worth counterfeiting.
Was the ten-dollar bill to blame?
No.
Did you ever see a scrap of brown paper counterfeited?
No.
Why not?

Because it is not worth counterfeiting.
Did you ever see a counterfeit Christian?
Yes, lots of them.
Why was he counterfeited?
Because he was worth counterfeiting.
Was he to blame for being counterfeited?
No.—Bethany Tidings.

TEMPERANCE.

THE CHURCHES VOTE.

No Christian can be held innocent of wrong doing, who, when a moral question is at issue, so votes as to be counted against the side of righteousness.—United Presbyterian Church.

No man or party who refuses or fails to assume an attitude of open and uncompromising hostility toward the liquor traffic should expect or receive the vote of any Christian citizen of the country.—Cumberland Presbyterian General Assembly.

A SOLUTION FOR LABOR TROUBLES.

It is to be doubted if the commission appointed by the President to investigate the causes of the recent labor troubles will get nearer the real truth of the matter than did the lamented P. A. Burdick, the gifted lecturer, in the following incident which he related not long before his death. Mr. Burdick showed true Christian statesmanship in counseling temperance and righteousness as the laboring man's only hope of elevation and prosperity, and as the only permanent solvent of difficulties between labor and capital. We give the story as related in "The Economies of Prohibition," a suggestive book recently published by Funk & Wagnalls.

"While engaged in a temperance campaign in the town of B——, I called into a wagon shop to see a man who had signed the pledge, and was introduced by him to one of the wood workers. He was a moderate drinker. During the conversation he said: 'I would like to know how it is that Mr. D. has paid for a house worth $1,200, has sent his three children to school for four years, and has a $1,000 United States bond. We have worked together for fifteen years. He has received only $2 per day and I $2 50. I can't understand how he has a home and $1,000 and I have neither.'

"'Don't you save anything from your wages?'

"'No; sometimes at the end of the year I am $35 ahead and sometimes the same amount in debt.'

"'Have you any children?'

"'No.'

"'Do you drink?'

"'Not much; only beer, and I buy that by the quart and get it cheaper than by the glass.'

"'How much do you use a day?'

"'You see that pail? Well, I get it full twice a day, and it costs me 25 cents a pail. It don't amount to much.'

"'Do you get your pail filled on Sunday?'

"'Yes, just the same as other days.'

"'Now, if you will multiply 365, the number of days in a year, by 50 cents, you will see that it does amount to something. It amounts to $182.50.'

"'Well, that is so; I never reckoned it up before.'

"'Do you use tobacco?'

"'Yes, smoke and chew both. I get my box filled every morning, which costs 5 cents, and smoke three 5-cent cigars a day. I wonder what that amounts to?'

"'We can soon tell. It is 365 multiplied by 20, the amount spent each day, and it amounts to $73 a year.'

"'Then both amount to $255?'

"'Yes, sir, you are correct. Is there any other habit you indulge?'

"'I don't know whether you call it a habit, but I never work on Saturday. I take that as a holiday.'

"'How do you celebrate your holiday?'

"'Well, I might just as well make a clean breast of the whole matter: I generally sit in the bar-rooms; play now and then a game of "Pedro" for the beer to "amuse the boys."'

"'How much do you think "amusing the boys" costs you every Saturday?'

"'Oh, half a dollar I guess would cover it.'

"'Did you know it cost you $3 every Saturday instead of 50 cents?'

"'No, I can't see it so.'

"'Let me show you. If you should work every Saturday you would earn $2.50; and if you don't work you are short that amount. Not only that, but the 50 cents you spend to "amuse the boys" coming out of Friday's wages. Do you see it?'

"'Now we will sum up the whole business:

For beer one year	$182.50
For tobacco one year	73.00
For lost time one year	131.00
For "amusing the boys" one year	26.00
Total	$412.50

"If you had saved this sum every year and put it into a savings bank at 6 per cent interest how much would you have now do you suppose?'

"'I have no idea. I can see how Mr. D. has laid up money, for he neither drinks, uses tobacco nor plays cards. He works every day. You figure it out, Burdick, I am anxious to know just how big a fool I have been.'

"I had done all the figuring on a pine board in the shop. He stood looking over my shoulder, all the time muttering to himself. The amount astonished him. It amounted to $9,676.07—enough to astonish any man. He said, 'Bring out your pledge; put it all in, liquor, tobacco and cards! I want the whole or none; almost $10,000 I have squandered, and never dreamed I was the only one to blame.'

"He had the pine board framed and hung up over his work-bench. He shows it to every one who comes in and asks them, 'How is it with you?'"

The foregoing is no fancy sketch or exceptional case. It is the chief cause of poverty and dissatisfaction among laboring men to-day. If the laboring man were to take the $100 a year (a very low estimate) which he spends for rum and tobacco, and invest it in a building lot (and plenty of them can be had near the town of Pullman for that price), and then join the building and loan association, which will put him up a neat little cottage to be paid for on the installment plan, he could apply his rent and beer money thus saved and soon become the owner of a home, and be independent of Mr. Pullman and all other landlords with their crowded tenement houses.

But so long as the saloon exists to take their money and energy, and anarchists of the Debs stamp are allowed to lead them into violence, there is little hope for the cause of the laboring classes.—The Evangel.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON XI.—Third Quarter, 1894, Sept. 9.

SUBJECT.—Jesus and Nicodemus.—John 3: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.-John 3: 1-16. T.—Numb. 21: 4-9. W.—Rom. 8: 1-11. Th.—2 Cor. 5: 14-21. F.—Ezek. 36: 22-27. S.—John 6: 28-40. Su. Rom. 8: 31-39.

Except a man be born again.—It means either anew or from above. Both meanings are attached to it here by the best scholars. According to the first definition, Christ simply implies that the life must begin anew, that the character must be rebuilt from the foundation, without, however, implying how; according to the other idea, he indicates in the use of this word, not only a new but a spiritual and divine birth. Nicodemus impliedly asks to know what new doctrine Christ has to teach; Christ replies in substance that the world needs not new doctrine, but new life.—Abbott.

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit —The Jewish proselyte, as a sign that he put off his old faiths, was baptized on entering the Jewish church. John the Baptist, employing the same symbolic rite, baptized Jew as well as Gentile, as a sign of purification by repentance from past sins. Nicodemus, then, would certainly have understood by Christ's expression, "born of water," a reference to this rite of baptism, and by the expression, "born of the Spirit," a reference to a new spiritual life. The declaration, then, is that no man can enter the kingdom of God except by (1) a public acknowledgment and confession of sin, a public putting off of the old man and entering into the new; and (2) a real and vital change of life and character wrought by the Spirit of God in the heart of the believer. By the one act he enters into the visible and external kingdom; by the other, into the spiritual and invisible kingdom.—Abbott.

As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness.—Notice (1) The serpent is, in Scripture symbolism, the devil. But why is the devil set forth by the serpent? How does the bite of the serpent operate? It pervades with its poison the frame of its victim. That frame becomes poisoned, and death ensues. So sin, the poison of the devil, being instilled into our nature, that nature has become a poisoned nature, a flesh of sin.—Alford. (2) The disease of sin is incurable by man. (3) All men are poisoned with sin, and it is gradually working pain and death in them. (4) "The history of the brazen serpent is then a parable of the Gospel; parabolically it points out the way of salvation." "There is no evidence that this was intended to be a type of the Messiah; but it is used by Jesus as strikingly illustrating his work."

Must the Son of man be lifted up.—This refers to the exaltation of Jesus on the cross and through the cross to his kingdom—Alford. It was as strange to the Jews that Jesus, crucified, could save them, as that a brass serpent could save those who looked; but in both cases it was God who saved, through obedient faith.—Peloubet.

For God so loved.—There is no other certain proof of God's perfect love for all men than this. Nature gives us many hints of God's love; but there is so much which is terrible, which seems contrary to love, that we cannot be sure that God loves us, except by this gift of his Son. The argument is irrefutable, a morning star shining unclouded in every dark night of trouble. "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8: 32.)—Peloubet.

Prof. Drummond, in his Natural Law in the Spiritual World, illustrates the truth of the new birth by the scientific doctrine of Biogenesis. God's works illustrate his Word. The law of nature is that only life can produce life, and therefore any object can rise into the kingdom above it only by means of new life imparted to it from that higher life, i. e., by being born from above. A stone cannot grow into a plant. The mineral kingdom cannot enter the vegetable kingdom except by plant life imparted to it. The vegetable kingdom cannot be changed into the animal kingdom except through the imparting to it of animal life. There is no power of development of one into the other. "Spontaneous generation is a heresy so thoroughly discredited now that scarcely an authority in Europe will lend his name to it." Each lower kingdom must be born from that above, in order to rise into it. From the plane of the lower life the qualities of the higher are inconceivable. It must be born from above even to see the kingdom that is above it. The same is true if we ascend from the animal life to the spiritual life. Life from above must be imparted to our natural life before we can enter or even see the spiritual kingdom. God's spiritual life imparted to our souls makes us God's children, and places us in the spiritual kingdom of God. "From the analogies of Biology we should expect three things: first, that the new life should dawn suddenly; second, that it should come 'without observation;' third, that it should develop gradually."

The new birth in relation to the atonement.—That Jesus makes the brazen serpent of Moses a type of himself as a Saviour for men, goes without saying. By this typical parable Jesus teaches Nicodemus several most important things: (1) That he was the object of the Old Testament types. (2) That whatever the Messiah was to the Jewish people with respect to a temporal kingdom, he was also the Saviour of all, in respect to their sin. (3) That there is a close, necessary, and vital relation between the new birth and the atonement which he came into the world to make, for there can be no doubt that Jesus alluded to his sacrifice on the cross when he said: "So must the Son of man be lifted up." That relation is simply this: Man, as a sinner, must either die in his sins, as the bitten Israelites died of the serpent's poison, or he must be saved by the interposition of one who stands for him. Sin is guilty and must be punished. The death of Christ for us on the cross expiates our sin, whereof God has given us witness by his resurrection from the dead.—Pentecost.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Bishops Wright and Barnaby, of the United Brethren church, have commenced their round of fall conferences. Bishop Becker expects also to visit a number of conferences in the interests of missions.

—The Synodical Conference of the Lutheran church at present embraces 5 synods, 2,500 congregations and preaching stations, about 600,000 souls and 85,000 children attending the parochial schools. It is radically opposed to lodge affiliation.

—Dr. N. E. Wood, of Brookline, Mass., has recently been elected president of Colgate University, and been offered the pastorate of the First Baptist church, of Boston, at a salary of $6,000, while his church at Brookline insists upon his staying there.

—Oberlin Theological Seminary is starting a department that means much to its students and to the churches. It is to be known as the "Department of Field Study and Practice." Rev. C. A. Vincent, an alumnus of Oberlin College, and pastor of the Congregational church in Sandusky, Ohio, will have charge of the department.

—Rev. Mr. Anderson, a missionary of the M. E. church, writes that the recent California visit of Dr. Beverley Carradine, of St. Louis, "was a blessing to hundreds on the Pacific coast, and the Methodist Episcopal church, South, is better for his coming. He sowed no seeds of strife; he divided no churches, but left behind him a name as precious as the name of the good can be."

—The statistics of the Friends church below are based upon the census of 1890, and do not include the organization of the two most recent yearly meetings, Wilmington and Oregon. There are 10 yearly meetings, with 794 organizations, 725 church edifices, valued at $2,795,784, and 80,655 members. The average seating capacity of their edifices is 297, and their average value $3,718. Halls to the number of 90, with a seating capacity of 7,085, are occupied.

—The First Methodist church in Englewood, this city, of which Dr. C. E. Mandeville is pastor, has a very honorable record. During the past ten years there have been organized by the church seven Sabbath-schools in the surrounding neighborhood. Of these the total membership is 1,244; including the home school, 726, making a grand total of 1,970. During the six months of the World's Fair the work was very laborious on account of the many visitors. The total attendance of visitors during the period was 3,209.

—A missionary in China says that any church society of 60 members, each giving two cents per week, could preach yearly, through a native preacher, to 50,000 persons. He knows of five societies who have adopted this plan, and working together provide a floating chapel and dispensary, a Christian doctor and two native preachers; and during last November and December they preached in 100 villages, and gave medical aid to more than 1,000 persons. This confirms the late request of missionary Wilcox, of Foochow, for funds for native pastor-teachers. For $15 each he can engage such workers for a year.

—The Robert W. Logan, the missionary ship of the American Board, among the Pacific Islands, is lost, nothing having been heard of her since August of last year. The Japanese government has instructed the commanders of Japanese vessels to search for the missing ship while on their voyages. The Logan is the fifth of the vessels built by the children of the United States for the use of the missionaries in the Micronesian Islands, the successor to the four famous ships called the Morning Stars, one of which is still afloat. The Logan was built in San Francisco in 1890, and is a schooner of about 50 tons burden.

—A mission festival was held last Saturday under a large tent on the grounds of the Lake View Lutheran Theological Seminary in this city. It was managed by Rev. A. Schaap, a converted Jew, and late assistant pastor of the Danish Lutheran church. The churches of the Swedish Augustana Synod, and others connected with the General Council, participated. Among the pastors present and participating were Revs S. A. Sandahl, C E. Evald, L. G. Abrahamsohn, E Einsteinson, William A. Sadtler. C. Koerner, and Prof G. H. Gerberding, D.D. Rev. E. N. Heiman closed the exercises with an address in German.

—The total enrollment in Protestant Sunday schools in 1893 was a little over eleven millions, including teachers and adult scholars. About one fourth were over 21, leaving the Protestant Sunday-school enrollment of the school population in the neighborhood of 8,300,000 Deduct 8,300,000 from 21,000,000, and we have an army of 12,700,000 Protestant young persons of school age outside of the Sabbath school. Add a similar proportion from the Roman Catholic school population and the total swells up to 14,500,000. What are the churches doing to bring these young people into the Sabbath-school? Throug hvarious denominational and undenominational agencies the Protestant church brought in during the past three years a yearly average of 397,097 enrolled members, teachers and scholars of all ages. Deduct one-fourth of these as being over 21, and we have an average annual increase of 297,823 from the school population into our Protestant Sabbath-schools.

To New Subscribers!
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
—)FOR(—
FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

111 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2,00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2 50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and Its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 396 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D, Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

Jonathan Blanchard's Sermons and Addresses. Select discourses of the first editor of the Cynosure. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of living reform, Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, etc. A book everybody should read. 12mo. Fine photogravure portrait. Price, 75 cents.

American Handbook and Citizen Manual By Manlove N. Butler. Contents: Bible and Secretism; Masonic Religion; Masonic Sun Worship; Masonic Government; Unwritten History; Grand Lodge Masonry; Public Opinion; Lodge and Saloon; The American Movement. Over 200 pages. Paper, single copy, 40c.

Image of the Beast: A Secret Empire; or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third edition. 200 pages. Cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages. paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 826 pages, cloth, $1 00.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1 00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Home and Health.

CURE FOR SNAKE BITE.

We are receiving our usual midsummer installment of inquiries for non-alcoholic remedies for snake bite. We give here a number whose efficiency is vouched for by reliable persons. A lady from Nebraska writes of permanganate of potash kept always in the house for the purpose. It comes in dark crystals, somewhat resembling rusty iron in color, but brighter. In the case given, a child was bitten by a rattlesnake; the wound was probed with one of the crystals which was left in, and with others bound on with a cloth. A complete cure was effected. The prescription was given by Dr. Stimpson, of Plum Creek, Nebraska, who tested its virtues thoroughly.

Soft soap and lime mixed in equal parts and applied to the bite is recommended by those who have found it an antidote. A Pennsylvania friend recommends holding the bitten part in running water, or pouring water over it continuously for several hours, till the inflammation subsides. Another has tried sweet oil successfully; a tablespoonful taken internally and the wound bathed in it. For a horse, use eight times the dose for a man. Killing the snake and applying the warm flesh to the bite is an old remedy, well vouched for; killing a chicken and enveloping the wounded part in its warm body is also a well-known prescription; in both cases the flesh applied soon turns green with the extracted poison and must be replaced by fresh. A hunter recommends turning on the wound immediately a thimbleful of gunpowder and igniting it; the pain is slight and the cure certain.

The wife of a physician who has practiced nine years in Texas, where never a summer passes without his treating cases of snake bite, writes that the remedy used by him, and which has never failed, is compound tincture of iodine; for an adult give four drops in a tablespoonful of sweet milk once an hour as long as necessary. Dr. Hiatt has used this remedy for the most venomous copperhead bite, and found it always effected a cure, and without the bad after-effect resulting from alcohol treatment.

Common salt mixed with the white of an egg to the consistency of paste and spread on the wound, renewed frequently, is a household remedy always at hand, and recommended by those who have tried it for snake bite. We can vouch for its efficacy in bee stings.

Equal parts of powdered charcoal and fresh lard is another household remedy recommended by a correspondent. Other remedies have been given before in the Union Signal, prominent among them aqua ammonia, a bottle of which should always be kept in the house, as it has so many uses.

The household remedy which seems to have the weight of authority on its side is common indigo powdered, moistened and applied to the wound; it soon turns green with the poison it draws out and must be renewed. This is vouched for by a number of correspondents in different parts of the country who write us they have tested it. It is also recommended by the Medical and Surgical Reporter.

For snake bite the remedy must be applied immediately, and hence should be one always at hand and easily applied without waiting to send for a physician or to a drug store. The remedies here given, with possibly one exception, are of this character, are found, or can easily be kept in every household. If every family living in a snake-infested district would take as much pains to keep one of them within reach as some do to have whiskey "handy" for snake bite, they would find it quite as efficacious and much safer.—Union Signal.

Here is a recipe that is worth a year's subscription to any farmer: "Sprinkle a little stone lime in your stock tank, and not a particle of green scum will form on the water. When the lime loses its strength, and the scum begins to form, which may be twice during the season, wash out the tank and repeat the dose. It is cheap, not only harmless, but wholesome, keeps the water sweet and saves work.

That Tired Feeling

So common at this season, is a serious condition, liable to lead to disastrous results. It is a sure sign of declining health tone, and that the blood is impoverished and impure The best and most successful remedy is found in

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Which makes rich, healthy blood, and thus gives strength to the nerves, elasticity to the muscles, vigor to the brain in and health to the whole body. In truth, Hood's Sarsaparilla

Makes the Weak Strong

Be sure to get Hood's and only Hood's. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills cure nausea and biliousness.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S

—]-oo-[—

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies,
The Sabbath,
Temperance,
National Reform,
Christian Education,
Christian Socialism,
The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait.
Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—o:o—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS

AND

REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER,

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough
Edward Payson, James Caughey,
Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther,
C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso,
S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills,
D. L. Moody, Guy Fox,
Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H. Potts,
Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge,
and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

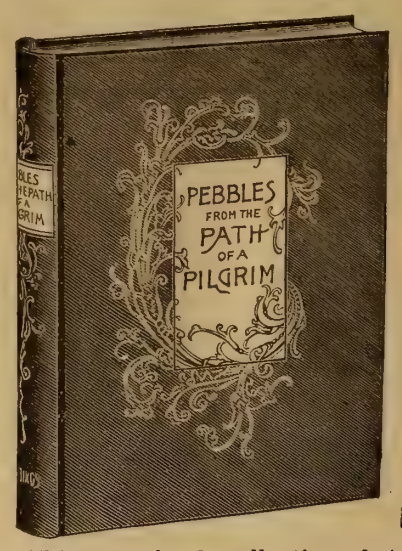
This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the eventful life of a Green Mountain girl has been pronounced "more fascinating than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapter has followed me into dreams. My copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness, and stopped the mouth of lions,' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this truly remarkable book....No family library should be without it." "'Pebbles,'" says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their center-tables."

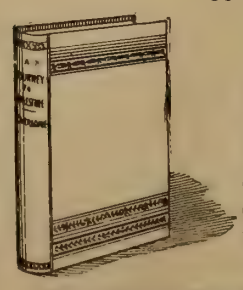
"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, from clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—



Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.

The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.

L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf.....1½c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1½c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.

LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING

Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS
OF
FLEMING H. REVELL.

Modern Ideas of Evolution.

As related to Revelation and Science. By Sir William Dawson, L. L. D., F. R. S., etc. 12 mo, cloth, $1.50.

In popular style, a testing by scientific facts and principles, the validity of that multiform and brilliant philosophy of the universe, which has taken so deep a hold of the science and literature of our times.

The New World of Central Africa

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness; with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. Maps, Portraits and numerous engravings. 537 pages, 12 mo, $2.00.

This comprehensive volume is as fascinating as the most entertaining romance. Its vivid portrayal of the dark side of African history makes one's blood tingle, while its earnest appeals create an inspiring sympathy with the effort to evangelize its teeming millions.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

Matthew Henry's Commentary.

An entirely new large type edition of this inimitable Commentary, in six large 8vo. volumes, fine cloth, $15.00; or, in half Morocco, $18.00.

"Biblical students who are most familiar with the very best commentaries of this generation are most able to appreciate the unfading freshness, the clear analysis, the spiritual force, the quaint humor, and the evangelical richness of Matthew Henry's Exposition of the Old and New Testaments."—New York Observer.

"First among the mighty for general usefulness we are bound to mention the man whose name is a household word—MATTHEW HENRY. He is the most pious and pithy, sound and sensible, suggestive and sober, terse and trustworthy."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life.

By Rev. F. B. Meyer. 32 mo, 50 cents.

"It is sufficient to say its one direct aim is the present enjoyment of the precious promises. Mr. Meyer's earnest and persuasive teaching in this direction is admirably condensed in these brief chapters."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Christian Living. Cloth, 32 mo, 50 cents.

"A more suggestive and helpful volume it would not be easy to name."—Christian Leader.

The Shepherd Psalm. Cloth, 32 mo, 50c.

"This is a gem."—Illustrated Christian Weekly

"It is a little book which hundreds of devout hearts will enjoy."—Congregationalist.

Power From on High.

By Rev. B. Fay Mills. White vellum paper, 20 cents.

This little work, revised from stenographic notes of Mr. Mills' address before the National Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., is exceedingly effective.

OTHER WORKS BY C. H. SPURGEON:

Feathers for Arrows; Or, Illustrations for Teachers and Preachers. 12 mo, $1.

"This work covers a wide range of subjects. The metaphors are always striking and frequently brilliant, while the truths that they illustrate are such as have always formed the staple of Mr. Spurgeon's discourses. A choicer collection of illustrations we do not know."—Freeman.

Spurgeon's Gems. Being a selection of brilliants from his discourses. 12 mo, $1.

The Golden Alphabet. Being a Devotional Commentary on the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. 12 mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Spurgeon brings out the truths and beauties of this wonderful Psalm so as to set a rich feast before the reader. As a practical commentator on the Psalms, Spurgeon has no equal."—Presbyterian Banner.

"This commentary is written in quite the happiest vein of its popular author, and the devotional spirit throughout is intense and elevating."—Occident.

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. 18 mo, 60c.

All of Grace. An earnest word with those seeking the way of life. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

According to Promise; Or, the Lord's Dealings with His chosen People. 16 mo, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Christmas Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve New Year Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth. 50 cents.

"Preachers may get aid in preparing Easter or funeral sermons from this volume. Good to present to those who have lost loved ones."—National Baptist.

Twelve Striking Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Twelve Soul-Winning Sermons. 8 vo, 146 pages, cloth, 50 cents.

Selected by Mr. Spurgeon as the twelve sermons under which there has been the most marked and permanent success.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

Farm Notes.

THE ARRANGEMENT OF FRUIT.

It is delightful to observe that fruit commends itself to more than the sense of taste. To that pleasure is added the exquisite coloring, the beauty of its curves and its delicate odor. All goes to show that the Great Artist disdains not to embellish that product of essences and refinements which man has not yet half learned to appreciate.

What can be lovelier than a heaping dish of luscious grapes, half smothered in their own leafage, yet glowing beneath that bloom so suggestive of all things rare and refined? Or a basket of apples, ruddy ripe and streaked with the sun's kisses, yet fragrant with hoarded spices gathered "from morn till dewy eve?" Or of golden oranges, that have drank still deeper of the chemic magic of the sunshine? Or of berries, each delectable with its own special richness—certainly that one which inspired Sydney Smith to say, "Doubtless God could have made something better than the strawberry, but he never did?" Or the royal plum, the mellow apricot, the date, the fig, the pine, and all the other wondrous store of fruitage, of the virtues of which we all know too little?

Even when these and many other gifts of our great cultivated mother are better stewed than when eaten uncooked, a few ought to be set in the centre of the table, simply as things of beauty.

The largest strawberries are to be served on the stems, with a small dish of sugar beside each plate, into which, one by one, they may be plunged—though the less sweetness, save what they embody, the better. Can anything be finer than their color, fragrance and flavor, mingled together?

Apples should be polished with a cloth until they glisten, then heap into a large dish, red and yellow together, with a silver knife at each plate.

Bananas ought to be heaped with oranges, apples or grapes, each emphasizing, by contrast, the color and form of the other.

Berries should be carefully picked over and washed, before piling in a large dish. Thinking to preserve the flavor, some housekeepers refuse to submit them to a quick colander bath. When one recalls the fact that they are subject to coatings of dust and debris of insects, as well as the uncleanly hands of pickers, one can only wonder at the neglect. What germs may thus be swallowed with the berry no one can tell. Besides, the flavor is not impaired, as may be ascertained by tasting the water in which they have been rinsed—if one can bring herself to do so.

Grapes should be carefully cut, then clip out the unsound and unripe, and arrange them with their own leaves and tendrils, the various shades together. They are also effective when interspersed with apples, pears, bananas, and other fruit. An untarnished bloom greatly enhances their appearance. To one who had never seen these fruits, oranges and grapes together would seem like a revelation of the possibilities of gustatory pleasure and esthetic beauty. Grape scissors are a great convenience in dividing large clusters.

Melons have a beauty less delicate, yet more appreciated by the multitude. Nutmeg and muskmelon ought to be divided lengthwise and brought to the table, after the seeds are removed, well chilled upon ice. With the sections should be passed both sugar and salt, that each guest may have his choice. At each plate should be set a knife, a fork, and a teaspoon. Sections of watermelon are extremely decorative alone.

Oranges are delightful, either alone or served with any other solid fruit. They are conveniently eaten and make, also, a handsome dish, when the skin is divided into sections from the blossom end nearly to the stem. Turn these carefully back and arrange in a circle on a large low dish.

Peaches should be freshly peeled and sliced, but sugared according to each person's taste. The finest should be reserved for a central dish and encircled with their own green leaves. In fact, almost all large fruit needs this garniture to show it to perfection. Then, eat and be thankful!

An effective and not inappropriate combination is made by garnishing dark fruit with white, yellow or crimson flowers. For instance, a centerpiece of rich purple plums, between the crevices of which are inserted the stems of nasturtium sprays, the tendrils falling over the sides of the dish, is charming to look at. So are ripe, red apples, over which wander sprays of the soft, feathery, greenish-white, wild clematis. Other combinations will suggest themselves with the changing seasons.

With either flowers or fruit, it is a good plan to have one large centerpiece and several smaller ones at the sides, the first low and broad. Cut glass here shows to the best advantage. If china receptacles are used, by all means they should be either uncolored or of one uniform tint, contrasting with the color of the flowers or fruit.—Hester M. Poole, in Household News.

Catarrh and Headache.

I have been troubled with catarrh ever since a little child. I am now 18 years old. I had entirely lost my sense of smell. I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and the sense has returned. I suffered with headache for over two years, but Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured it.—Lulie McClure, Litchfield, Ky.

A UNIQUE PICTURE.

There was much interest in the N. C. A. Chart used at the World's Fair last year by Rev. J. P. Stoddard in illustrating various facts in Freemasonry.

There has been a demand for copies of it by those who saw it at the World's Fair, and who wish to use it in explaining to their neighbors different phases of the lodge question.

Hence the N. C. A. has had a photo-zinc-etching made, size 18x20 inches, which shows the Blue Lodge, York Rite, Scotch Rite, etc., and their relation one to another.

There are also seen some of the initiatory scenes in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason. This chart can be used to illustrate the system of secret societies in a variety of ways. It will be especially helpful to local lecturers and pastors of churches in explaining to people the ceremonies, oaths, prayers, religion, etc., of the lodge. The Chart is on heavy book paper, and will be sent postpaid, at your risk, for six two-cent postage stamps; or sent at our risk by registered mail for ten two-cent postage stamps.

Framed and hung upon the wall it will make a novel and attractive picture for the homes of the readers of the Cynosure.

FARM FOR SALE.

A quarter section in Kearney county, Nebraska,

WILL BE SOLD AT A BARGAIN.

Description: Southwest quarter of Section 31, Township 8, North, Range 13, west of the sixth principal meridian.

ONLY $500 CASH FOR 160 ACRES.

Large bodies of cattle have ranged over and been herded on this and adjacent land. It is pretty well covered with grass. The soil as a whole is quite sandy, especially on the hills; the little valleys have the best soil.

It is near two railroad towns. Lowell is within two miles, and Hartwell is about five miles distant. All taxes are paid to date. Must be sold soon if possible. Address, W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

A Booklet of 107 pages, which includes "The Martyr's Own Monument," by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association; "Christian Politics," by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure; "The Mysterious Machine: Was it Lawn-mower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what?" by Prof. E. D. Bailey, of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government. Postpaid 25 cts.

AYER'S PRIZE MEDAL AT WORLD'S FAIR PILLS

The Best Remedy for STOMACH, Liver, and Bowel Complaints

AYER'S PILLS

Received Highest Awards AT THE World's Fair.

AYER'S PRIZE MEDAL AT WORLD'S FAIR PILLS

TAKE YOUR CHOICE!

——)oo(——

SECRET CONFESSION TO A PRIEST: or, The Roman Catholic Practice of Auricular Confession. By Evangelist Leyden, an ex-Romanist. 48 pages, paper, price reduced from 25 cents to 12 cents postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE SECRET WORK OF THE JESUITS, with an historical sketch of this pestiferous order, by Rev. W. C. Brownlee, D. D., with an appendix on the Church of Rome and the American Public Schools: A Warning to America. 80 pages, paper, reduced from 50 cents to 25 cents, postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS. By L. De La Hodde, member of the detective police of France. A History of the Secret Societies of France. The object of the translator of this work was to show the dangerous consequences, to society and government, arising from the practices of secret associations. 477 pages, cloth, price reduced from $1.50 to 75 cents, postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of a club of three new subscribers to the Cynosure.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST

A Secret Empire;

Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.

By Rev. Richard Horton.

Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.

Price, 60 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

THE

Folly, Expense & Danger

OF

SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

THE GUIDING HAND;

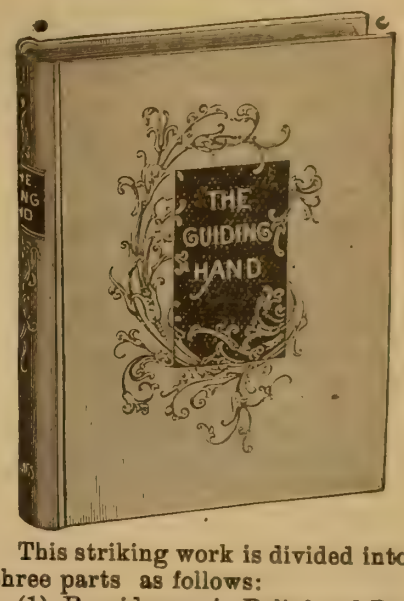
—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")



This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

National Christian Ass'n.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid	.35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid	.30
Cloth covers, postpaid	.50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid	.40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material to make it one of the very best lesson expositors extant, and in this respect its compilers have achieved flattering success. Its cheapness and its merits entitle it to a general acceptance by Sunday-school workers." Christian Cynosure.

"The book will prove a great convenience and a blessing."—Earnest Christian.

"This is a very complete and valuable guide to the Sunday school teacher for the International Lessons of 1894.'—Methodist Recorder.

"This is the best thing by way of S. S. supplies I have ever seen."—W. W. Hulet.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness."—T. C. Givens.

"I am highly pleased with it."—James I. Council.

"We like it exceedingly well and presume the plan will be continued in the future; if so you may count on us to subscribe for it."—Victor Charroin.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength. — Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

News of the Week.

WASHINGTON.

All the legislative business in the Senate was finished Friday. Both Houses adopted a resolution providing for adjournment Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

An important movement is on foot among the labor organizations, which may have its effect on politics. The scheme is to arrange a coalition and establish permanent headquarters in Washington for the purpose of influencing legislation. The Knights of Labor are at the head of the movement.

CHICAGO.

A desperate fight took place Thursday, led by union carpenters, who nearly killed a non-union contractor and one of his men.

John Newell, of this city, president and general manager of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railway company, died of apoplexy at the Tod House in Youngstown, O., Sunday afternoon. Death came upon Mr. Newell as he was journeying to a watering-place to seek rest after his unusual labors during the recent strikes.

Two policemen were shot, one being killed, by two freight car thieves Saturday. The criminals were new men at the business, both from good families, and one of them holding an excellent position in business.

CASUALTIES.

As the north-bound express train of the Paducah, Tennessee and Alabama railway was nearing Hazel, Ky., Wednesday, it struck a wagon loaded with people, killing five of the occupants and wounding one. The team, becoming frightened at the alarm of the whistle, ran into a cattle guard.

The explosion of a dynamite cartridge in the cylinder of a threshing machine near Akron, O., caused a fire which destroyed the large barn and several thousand bushels of grain. Michael Myers, 50 years of age, went into the barn to save the horses. He mounted one. The animal refused to move, and man and beast were burned to death.

By the explosion of the boiler of a traction engine near Byron, Ill , two men were killed and seven seriously injured. The engine was running on the farm of Hiram Berksmith. Suddenly a terrific explosion shook the earth, and fragments of iron were scattered over a radius of 500 feet. Berksmith was literally blown to atoms.

The boiler of a thrashing engine, on a farm eight miles southeast of La Moure, N. D., exploded, instantly killing two men. Four others were more or less injured.

J. M. Winstead, president of the Piedmont and People's Saving Banks at Greensboro, N. C., jumped from the tower of the Richmond, Va., City Hall to the pavement, 160 feet below, and was instantly killed, Thursday.

Four miners were mashed, burned and boiled to death at the Amethyst mine at Creede, Colo, Aug. 24. The fire which destroyed the shaft-house with all its machinery, melted the cable attached to the skip, and the burning mass fell upon the miners who were ascending the stepway, hurling them to the bottom of the shaft.

Two men were killed and eleven injured by an explosion of gas in the Gilberton colliery, near Ashland, Pa., Friday.

Thirty-seven miners of mixed nationalities were killed Friday by an explosion in the Oregon Improvement company's coal mine at Franklin, King county, thirty-four miles southeast of Seattle. The miners were trying to save the mines from destruction by fire when the explosion occurred.

COUNTRY.

The deeper the grand jury at Memphis, Tenn, probes, the worse the delinquent tax scandal grows. Indictments are returned against twenty-four of the most prominent cotton firms in the city. The State and county have been defrauded during the past eight years out of more than $2,000,000.

Marengo, Ill., is excited because of the action of the council in granting a saloon license for $1,200. The city has not licensed a saloon for the last thirty years.

Crawfordsville, Ind., has maintained a colored school for nine years, there being several hundred Negro families to patronize it. Colored teachers were found wanting, and the board elected a corps of white teachers. The Negro patrons have declared a boycott on the public schools.

Work has just been commenced on the east end of the Illinois and Mississippi Canal, commonly known as the Hennepin Canal. One hundred and thirty men are engaged in clearing the right of way, and in three weeks over 2,000 men will be at work constructing the ditches and in making ready for the locks. This canal, which with the Chicago Drainage Canal and the Illinois river is to form an important waterway connecting the Northwestern States with the Chicago grain market, will now be pushed with as much speed as the present and future appropriations of Congress will allow.

FOREIGN.

A terrible dynamite explosion in one of the mines Saturday at Minillos, Mexico, resulted in the killing of six persons and several animals, besides doing great damage to property.

A cyclone swept across the Sea of Azov Saturday. It is reported from St. Petersburg that at least 1,000 persons have perished, some by drowning, others by being crushed under falling houses and trees.

The Emperor of China has issued an edict ordering that 100,000 men, to consist of Manchoos and native Pekingese, be prepared for active service. Large numbers of Chinese are arriving at Hong Kong by every steamer from Japan. Japan's Minister to Corea has been killed by his own countrymen. The Japanese government has declared rice to be not included among articles contraband of war. The American Consul at Shanghai has ordered the Japanese living in that city to discard the Chinese costumes and advises a majority of them to return to their native country.

The Chinese on Friday, Aug 17, attacked the Japanese forces at Ping Yang, driving them back, with a heavy loss, a distance of eleven miles to Chung Ho. The Chinese made a second attack on Saturday, and drove the Japanese from Chung Ho, which is now in Chinese hands. The Japanese again lost heavily in Saturday's fighting. Another great battle was expected Wednesday.

A letter from Chemulpo, Corea, received at Che-Foo Friday, reports that nineteen Japanese warships and thirteen transports arrived in the Tatung River Aug. 18. They landed 6,000 men, who, proceeding inland, were attacked by 1,000 Chinese cavalry, who succeeded in dividing the Japanese force into two parts. The Chinese artillery, located on an eminence, poured a heavy fire into the ranks of the Japanese, making great havoc. The Japanese were compelled to retreat to the seashore, where the guns of the fleet prevented further pursuit by the Chinese. The Japanese loss is reported to have been over 1,300 men.

Dispatches have been received at the Marine Hospital Bureau from the Consuls at Konigsberg and Cologne, announcing the appearance of cholera at both places.

For the week ending at noon on Aug. 20, there were thirty-two new cases of cholera and twenty-three deaths from that disease reported from different parts of the German Empire.

Market Reports.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	53¾@	55⅛
Winter No. 2	53⅞@	54⅛
Corn—No. 2	54⅛@	56
Oats—No. 2	30 @	33¼
Rye—No. 2	7
Bran per ton	12 00 @	12 50
Hay—Timothy	8 50 @	10 50
Butter, medium to best	12 @	23
Cheese	06½@	09
Beans	1 70 @	1 90
Eggs	13⅛
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	5 00 @	5 80
Flax	1 24 @	1 25
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 00 @	9 05
Broom corn (per ton)	50 00 @	105 00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	68 @	75
Hides—Green to dry flint	02½@	06¼
Lumber—Common		15 50
Wool (unwashed)	7 @	23
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 80 @	5 55
Common to good	2 00 @	4 65
Hogs	3 25 @	5 95
Sheep	1 50 @	4 10

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	58¼
Corn No 2	60⅛
Oats	33⅛@	37⅛
Rye	52 @	52⅛
Eggs	17⅛@	18
Butter	13 @	24⅛
Wool	19 @	25

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 25 @	5 25
Hogs	2 75	5 72
Sheep	2 00 @	3 25

Golden Honors

from the Golden Coast

...for...

Dr. Price's Baking Powder

California, empire of the Pacific, salutes the world. Her Midwinter Fair closed in a midsummer blaze of glory. Second only to the Columbian Exposition in extent, variety and splendor, the coast display was a veritable triumph. Out of her abundance the state poured her treasures—and the nations of the earth came to aid her in her noble exhibition.

Memorable were the exhibits—of gold and silver, of wheat and oil, of fruit and wine, of silk and wool—of all that man and nature could combine to produce. And no exhibit attracted more attention or excited warmer approval than that of Official tests showed it to be highest in leavening power, purest in quality, and most efficient in results of all baking powders made. Accordingly, the Highest Award and Gold Medal were conferred on Dr. Price's at the Midwinter Fair.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The triumph at San Francisco confirms the victory at Chicago. The Midwinter Fair verdict sustains and vindicates the bestowal of highest honors on Dr. Price's by the jury of awards at the World's Columbian Exposition.

Subscription Letters.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 20 to Aug. 25:

Rev S O Irvine, Rev L H Smith, J Huchthausen, J Hogue, Rev S Studebaker, J W McPherson, H Stahl, Rev A Good, Rev L A Hocanson, Mrs D S Dean, Rev H Young, E N Jarvis.

A dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral taken in time has prevented many a fit of sickness and saved numerous lives. This proves the necessity of keeping this incomparable medicine where it can be reached at all hours of the day and night.'

THE OBJECTS, WORK AND SECRET RITUAL of "The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" have just been issued in a revised and enlarged edition. Price, in paper, 25 cents. This new order of Freemasonry now so popular in this country as the basis of social hilarity among members of the higher degrees, claims to have originated in Arabia, and was revived in Egypt, and brought to America from France. It is interlarded with Mohammedan terms and worship; and its original objects as defined in its ritual, was inquisitorial and barbarous. Its prayers are addressed to "Allah," instead of the G. A. O. T. U., and it is quite as un-Christian as the devotees of the blue lodge would have it. The abridged edition is still sold for 15 cents. Address the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
Newspaper Advertising
45 Randolph Street,
Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXVI., No. 52 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1894. WHOLE No. 1,271.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure ist always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill. as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
God Save the State..... 8
A Rockford Pastor on the A. P. A..... 8
Pullman Relief..... 8
Knights of Pythias at Washington..... 8
The Corrupters of Citizenship..... 9
The Strike Inquiry..... 9
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Christian Morality the most Important Source of Wealth..... 1
Christian Freedom..... 2
SELECTED:
A Free Country for Labor..... 3
An American Judge..... 5
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4
SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION:
Closing Speeches..... 3
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Does not Fear the Truth; The Lodge and the Saloon; Two Sermons; Badges; What of the Grange; Pith and Point..... 5,6
LITERATURE..... 6
This and That..... 7
N. C. A..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
BIBLE LESSON..... 11
HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
MARKETS..... 13

A Presbyterian paper says that Christian schools in Utah have so promoted the spirit of genuine Christian patriotism amid the death-fogs of Mormonism that the leaders of that false system more dread the building of a new school house than the power of our legislators. This power has surely had no lightning in it of late for Mormonism.

The project for a monument at Harper's Ferry to John Brown, the Abolitionist and seceded Mason, has advanced so far as a committee to raise funds, of which Frederick Douglass is chairman. Down at Osawatomie, Kansas, a monument was set up eighteen years ago, to commemorate the famous battle fought there in the "Border Ruffian" war by Brown and his sons and neighbors, on the 30th of August, thirty-eight years ago. Every year there is a celebration on the spot by the surviving pioneers. Last Thursday they met and honored in speech and song the memory of the heroes who "died to make men free" in Kansas.

Mayor Hopkins of Chicago was one of the last witnesses before the strike commission. His evidence, as published, is no credit to himself, the city, or the Jesuit order who have put him forward. For instance, he said that a train load of dead animals could not be moved away from the Stock Yards because strikers prevented. Appeal was made to his authority. He went over to the Debs headquarters and got a railway crew to take the train out. After all the train did not move for several days, but the Mayor's olfactories were far away. Such management promises that we shall be hiring thieves to catch thieves very soon in Chicago.

Several months ago John G. Wooley spoke in a series of meetings for "good citizenship" in Indianapolis. He urged, in his inspiring and eloquent addresses, independence in political action. The seed fell into good ground. The "Good Citizenship League" fostered it, and there was circulating in the Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's societies and among other church people of the State a call for a convention of persons independent in politics who propose to antagonize the influence of the saloon and who are in favor of the enforcement of the laws and for good citizenship generally. The convention was held last week and adopted an appeal to the public. It is claimed that this movement will control 40,000 votes in Indiana this fall, and cast them without respect to party for fearless men who will stand for the enforcement of law.

Congress formally adjourned Tuesday afternoon. It practically adjourned the day that the House passed the tariff bill, as it was unable after that time to transact any important business, except by unanimous consent. Two bills which should have been passed were left on the calendar of the House after they had been passed by the Senate. They were, the bill of Senator Hoar to prohibit the sending or carrying of lottery tickets and advertisements by express, and the bill prepared by the Superintendent of Immigration, to stop the coming of alien anarchists to the United States, and to deport those already here upon proof of their character. The manner in which this Congress dealt with the few bills which came before it in the interest of moral reform was not such as to inspire confidence among candid people.

The new tariff law has revealed some facts about the dark and dangerous ways of men which might otherwise have been forever buried. Playing cards, the tools of gambling, must now have a stamp on each pack, along with the neighboring package of tobacco or box of cigars. The Internal Revenue Collector of this city estimates that he will have to provide stamps for a million packs. The devil has a big trade in Chicago outside the lodge and saloon. Dr. Withrow of the Third Presbyterian church is quoted as saying of the card game: "The cases where the spotted and pictured pack has been first played innocently in the parlor, then in worse places, and has turned to be a weight to drag young men to misery and young women to shame, are positively incomputable in the arithmetic of time." "I am sure you will not find one solitary drinking saloon, nor one house of unmentionable sin, not one pirate's forecastle, nor one den of desperadoes where the pack does not hold the place of honor."

The American Tract Society is erecting a new building on the site it has long occupied in New York city, corner Nassau and Spruce streets. The structure will be over twenty stories, or 300 feet high, and the income from the floors not used by the Society are expected to yield a permanent revenue for carrying on the blessed work of publishing and circulating Gospel truth. This building will equal in height the great lodge temple in this city whose frowning and gloomy front is supposed to overtop all other office buildings in the country. In this respect only are they alike. The New York building is far more beautiful, and the purposes for which it is erected are as far from that of the Chicago structure as heaven is from hell. Since its organization the Tract Society has issued 12,400 distinct publications in 150 languages. It has sent out over 31,000,000 volumes besides 435,000,000 tracts and 220,000,000 copies of periodicals. Its colporteurs have taken the Gospel message to 8,200,000 families in all parts of the country, and the inflowing tide of emigration is supplied with the Scriptures and other evangelical literature.

The Christian conference which lately closed at Northfield, Mass., was a meeting of unusual interest and power. The addresses of Rev. F. B. Meyer of London were among the most notable feature. They will greatly aid to introduce more widely the writings of this devoted man of God to American readers. The last Sabbath was a day of jubilee for faith. The speakers of the forenoon are well known to the Cynosure readers. From Rev. Dr. Harsha's report in the Christian Intelligencer we take this account of their sermons: "At ten o'clock Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, preached a noble sermon on the Resurrection. This was one of the twelve subjects selected by Mr. Moody to be discussed during the sitting of the conference. With the repose of deep thought and long experience, the preacher detailed the proofs we have for the resurrection of our Lord, and after that pointed out what this supreme fact in history means to the Christian and to the church. There was no attempt at oratory. The preacher was too much in earnest for that. As he detailed the glorious results of the Master's work, we were swept up to brightest planes of joy and confidence. I noticed that not a soul said 'hallelujah.' The hush as the quietly intense peroration ended was like that silence which for the space of half an hour was in heaven. By request, Mr. Moody followed. His heart was almost too full to preach. That all might hear, he came up into the choir gallery and there in the midst of us poured forth all his soul on the subject of 'Grace.' It was a fitting continuation of the sermon of the great Boston divine. Altogether the service lasted three hours and a half, but I do not think anyone felt over-tired."

CHRISTIAN MORALITY THE MOST IMPORTANT SOURCE OF WEALTH.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

One of the most common fallacies, one that is strongly insisted on by labor organizations and many politicians, is, that labor is source of all wealth. It assumes that the world's wealth ought to be shared by its laborers in proportion to their devotion of time and strength in its production.

When persons holding this error see the immense accumulations of wealth in our great cities they assume that their share has been unjustly withheld and that it ought to be restored to those who have produced it. This leads directly to socialism and ultimately to anarchism. For, if we admit the right of revolution and take into account the fact that all governments are agreed in sustaining the present status of property, then it follows that the laboring poor may justly overthrow the government under which they live and re-possess themselves of the wealth and comforts of which they have been deficient.

The mistake is in the premises. If it were true that physical force is the source of all wealth, then a horse ought to be worth more than a man, for he can perform more labor, and is fed, clothed and sheltered at less cost. In a state of savagery, as in some parts of Africa where only mere physical strength is taken into account, this is true; and a horse sells in the market for more than a man.

Labor is one of the sources of wealth, and as such, is entitled to great consideration; but there are many others, some of which I will briefly enumerate.

1. I mention skill. This is apparent in the most common forces of labor. The man who plows or cuts down trees skillfully will produce more wealth than he who has equal strength but less skill. The invention of the art of printing added immensely to the world's wealth. So did the invention of the cotton gin. Its effects on the value of labor is seen in the fact that the price of slaves rose from $300 each, to $800, and eventually to $1,000. Free labor correspondingly increased in prices, while the purchasing power of a day's wages was also increased.

2. Discovery is a source of wealth. The discovery of America added immensely to the wealth of the world. So did the discovery of gold in California and Australia, and the diamonds of South Africa. Nor does there appear any difference whether the discovery comes as the result of long search, or the merest accident. A diamond is a diamond, whether picked up in the sand or dug from the depths of the earth.

As a result of these discoveries great cities have sprung up, long railroads have been built, and the desert has been made to blossom as the rose.

3. Association is a source of wealth. Sixty or seventy years ago the whole of what is now the great city of Chicago would not have sold for as much as a single block would bring to-day. Each man who came added to the value of the property of his neighbor. Each house that was built increased the value of every other house. In many cases every dollar earned by the carpenter or the mason added a thousand dollars to the aggregate wealth of the community. This is largely true of all the towns and cities of the Northwest.

But after all, the most potent source of wealth, that which does most for the general, as well as personal well-being, is

CHRISTIAN MORALITY.

Without it all other things either cease to be valuable, or become comparatively worthless. If we imagine a state of society such as is described by the prophet in Jer. 9: 2–8, or in Rom, 1: 29–32, we can readily see how undesirable it would be to live in such a place, and can sympathize with the exclamation, "Oh, that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men, that I might leave my people and go from them, for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men." Jer. 9: 2. Corner lots had no great value in Sodom and Gomorrah, nor will they have in Chicago or Paris when the morals sink to as low a level as in those ancient cities. If we accept the purchasing power of a day's wages as a fair measure of the well-being of any people, we shall find that, other things being equal, this will be in direct proportion to the prevalence of Christian morality. In savage life there is

NO SUCH THING AS WAGES.

In India and China they are very small; in Turkey and Persia but little better; and among the nations in which the power of Christianity is felt wages are in almost direct proportion to the extent to which the Bible is studied and obeyed. If our nation has more wealth than any other in the world, it is due to all the above causes, but mainly to the Gospel of Christ.

On the other hand, whatever diminishes the power of Christianity, and especially whatever depresses public and private morals, tends to impair values, diminish wages, and in every way destroy the general well-being. Take as an example the sale and use of intoxicating drinks. If these could be suppressed it would put $900,000,000 annually into the pockets of the people, —given mainly to the wage-earning class. It would greatly diminish poverty and crime and add much to the general prosperity. The same is true in a lesser degree of the use of tobacco. Such a measure of reform, even in an economic view, outweighs in importance all questions of tariffs and currency. As a means of social reformation and advancement, nothing can take the place of the Gospel of Christ.

While to the individual man, intelligence, industry, economy and enterprise are sources of wealth, it must not be forgotten that Christian morals have a vast economic value, and that "Godliness is profitable in all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

Elmdale, Kansas.

The great statesman Daniel Webster on July 4, 1802, said: "To preserve the government we must also preserve a correct and energetic tone of morals, consisting more in the habits of the people than in anything else. There are always men wicked enough to go to any lengths in pursuit of power if they can find others wicked enough to support them. Ambitious men must be restrained by the public morality. When they rise up to do evil they must find themselves standing alone. Morality rests on religion. If you destroy the foundation, the superstructure must fall."

CHRISTIAN FREEDOM.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

In exhorting believers, by well doing to put to silence the ignorance of foolish men, Peter counsels them to act "as free, and not using their liberty as a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of Christ."

Liberty is freedom to carry out the laws of being. A locomotive is free when it is upon the rails. When it is off the tracks it loses its liberty of action. A bird is free when it is flying in the open air. For this God made it. A fish is free when in the water. This is the element for which it was created. Here it can carry out the law of its being. A moral being is free when he can obey the laws of his moral nature. A spiritual being is free when he can carry out the laws of his spiritual nature. Hence man's liberty consists in acting as "the servant of God." And hence James calls the moral law "the perfect law of liberty."

Christ's children are free. They are free men among a race of slaves. They are the servants of God in the midst of the servants of the evil one. The Son has made them free. They are free indeed.

1. They are free in reference to God. A prisoner under sentence for crime is deprived of his liberty. He is under the law. But when the penalty has been paid he goes out as a free man. The law has no more power over him. He is free from the law. And yet he is still bound to live by the law as a rule of life. He is only free from the sentence of the violated law. So God's people were under the condemnation of the law. They were under sentence of death. The Lord Jesus Christ came and died in their room. The death of the Son of God was accepted as their ransom. "There is now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus." "It is God that justifieth. It is Christ that died. Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" They are free from the law. It has no more power to condemn them.

The children of Israel were slaves in Egypt. In Canaan they were free. In Egypt they served: in Canaan they labored. In the first case they served with the servile spirit. In the second their work was the spontaneous outgoing of their hearts. Christ, by his Spirit in our hearts, delivers us from the servile spirit of sin, and brings us into the glorious liberty of the children of God. "We have received the spirit of adoption whereby we cry, Abba, Father"

2. They are free in reference to man. This does not mean that they have no obligations to others. In a very important sense we are our brother's keeper. "No man liveth to himself." Our Saviour came "not to be ministered unto but to minister." We are to submit ourselves one to another in the fear of God. He that would be greatest must be servant of all. Neither are we free from human authority. We are to "submit ourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake" that has for its object the punishment of crime and the protection and encouragement of well-doing. But our freedom from men consists in the independency of our mind and conscience from human authority. Many have no other reason for their faith and practice than that they have received them by tradition from their fathers. This is not using our Christian liberty. The believer will accept no religious doctrine except what God has revealed, and observe no ordinance except what God has appointed, and obey no law except what God has enacted, and perform no duty except what God has enjoined. The question with him is, not "What do the reformers say?" but "What saith the law? How readest thou?"

3. They are free with reference to the power and principles of evil. By the power of evil we mean Satan. He is the god of this world. The whole world "lieth in the wicked one." The human race has been led captive by him. When Christ came Satan cried, "Shall the prey be taken from the mighty? Shall the captive of the terrible one be delivered?" In his death Christ conquered Satan and spoiled his kingdom. "Through death he destroyed him that had the power of death, that is the devil, and delivered them who through fear of death were all their lifetime sub ject to bondage." From this conflict Christ returned, with Satan chained to his chariot wheels and his people as captives rescued. "He spoiled principalities and powers, and made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in his cross." Christ said that the Jews were of their father the devil, and his works they did. But his people are free from Satan's power. By the principles of evil we understand the depraved propensities of the sinner. The lusts of the flesh were originally right and good. The desire for food and drink, for knowledge, for power, for property, for esteem, are natural to the human constitution. But by sin these are directed toward wrong objects, are inordinate, and have been perverted. The desire for food is right; but when excessive makes the glutton. The desire for drink is natural; but in excess makes the drunkard. The desire for esteem is good; but in excess becomes vanity. The desire for power is right; but when inordinate makes ambition. The desire for property is right; but in excess is covetousness. Emulation is a native principle of the human soul. It seeks by fair means to raise ourselves up to others' level and above them if we can. It seeks to excel. God does not require every man to stand at the head of his class. But he does require every man to stand at the head of himself, to be his best self. This emulation does. It makes for this. But emulation in excess becomes envy. Envy seeks to bring others down to our level or below us. It is the perversion of emulation. Now we are freed from these principles of evil by the Holy Spirit, who imparts a new life to the soul, who restores these principles to their allegiance to God. We are made new creatures; "old things are passed away, all things are become new." The world, with its things seen and temporal, acts upon these perverted principles of the soul and leads the sinner farther away from God. The Holy Spirit brings us under the power of the things unseen and eternal. Our lives are hid with Christ in God.

Christ's children are to use their liberty. They are to do well as free men.

1. They are to act as free toward God. They came into the enjoyment of this liberty by believing the truth as it is in Jesus. The truth made them free. Their freedom was measured by their faith. The stronger their faith and the brighter their hope, the more perfect their freedom. Their freedom is complete in the full assurance of faith and of hope unto the end. They exercise their freedom toward God when their faith in his word is without doubting, and their hope in his promises is unclouded. Some people regard it as an evidence of piety to doubt their interest in Christ. Does it honor God to doubt his Word? Did doubting ever do you any good? Will doubting save you? Is not the soul damned by doubting? Cease doubting. Strive to have full assurance of faith and hope.

2. They are to act as free toward men. While it is foolish to believe what the wisest and best man says unless he gives a reason, we are bound to believe what God says simply because he says it. It is foolish to do what the wisest and best man says unless he gives a reason; but it is wisdom to do what God says simply because he says it. We are to use our liberty. But while we use this freedom, we must accord the same to others. Some will not submit their opinions and convictions to others, but act as though others should submit their's to them. Luther said: Over the soul God can and will allow no one to rule but himself."

3. They are to use their freedom with reference to the power and principles of evil. Satan is still at large. He is our enemy. We are exposed to his fiery darts. We must put on the whole armor of God. We must be watchful. We must have all our powers in hand and be on the alert. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. We must resist the devil. We must not despise or underrate our enemy. "For our adversary the devil goeth about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour: Whom resist steadfast in the faith."

Christ's children are not to abuse their liberty. "Not using your liberty as a cloak of maliciousness." Malice is ill-will. This is badness of disposition. Out of this springs all evil. So maliciousness is used for wickedness. "Repent of this thy wickedness," said Peter to Simon Magus. A cloak is a covering. It conceals. It may mean a pretext, that which covers the real. The Saviour said, because the Jews heard his discourses and saw his miracles "they had no cloak for their sins." Josephus said, Joab had a pretext for killing Abner, but he had no cloak for the murder of Amasa. The pretext of Jezebel for killing Naboth was zeal against blasphemy. So economy is made a pretext for avarice; caution for idleness; generosity for extravagance; religious zeal for personal resentment. There is a pretext for every form of evil.

1. We must not abuse our freedom toward God. We are free from the law as a covenant of works, but are under the law as a rule of life. It is our duty to love God supremely and our neighbor as ourselves. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets. Love is the fulfilling of the laws. We are under this law to Christ. This law is our rule of life in the hands of our Mediator. We serve the Lord Christ.

2. We must not abuse our freedom toward man. Paul illustrates this by his reference to the duties of the weak and strong. The Jewish converts were weak, the Gentiles were strong, with reference to the Old Testament ceremonies. Paul said the strong must not despise the weak, and the weak must not condemn the strong. "If meat cause my brother to offend I will not eat."

3. We must not abuse our liberty toward the power and principles of evil. We must not go in the way of temptation. Satan's fiery darts in our hearts are like the burning fuse in the powder magazine. We must ward them off with the shield of faith. We must not give place to the devil, but resist him that he may flee from us. The pleasures of the world stimulate the evil within us. The theater, the ball-room and the lodge are not the place for a Christian. "The friendship of the world is enmity against God." "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you, saith the Lord." We must forever separate from the idolatry, blasphemy and immorality of the lodge.

Chambers St. Church, Boston.

A FREE COUNTRY FOR LABOR.

(Christian Intelligencer.)

This ought to be a free country. Labor is not free; has been forced to pass under a despotism of grand masters, walking delegates, and so forth. The quality of the ruling majority in the unions is exhibited in the choice of officers. The headship of such men as Debs and Sovereign indicate the low intellectual and moral tone prevailing in the unions. There are intelligent workingmen, as everybody knows; they evidently are overruled in the unions. The series of manifestoes which have come from the headquarters indicate moral and mental blindness or a deliberate misstatement of facts; to speak plainly, a disposition to indulge in lying. The workingmen ought to be set free from the vulgar despotism which now holds them in subjection.

The fathers formed the Constitution of the United States, as they declare in that instrument, to "establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty" for all loyal citizens. The South disobeys the Constitution in regard to the Negro; the labor union overthrows it in relation to the Northern workingmen. Labor is deprived of freedom in the North and South, East and West. It is time for a demand for the restoration of freedom, "the blessings of liberty." Every man has a right to work for whom he pleases and under such conditions as he is willing to accept. The law ought to protect that right from the assumptions and tyranny of the unions. A law ought to be enacted by Congress making an interference with a man's right to work a crime against liberty, to be severely punished. Such a law should be enacted because it is right. Workingmen in this country were not oppressed at the time when the labor union was imported. Besides, labor unions have not prevented sweating shops and diabolical devices of that sort. Whatever may be said about one thing and another related to or included in the labor problem, every man's right to work ought to be asserted by statute and maintained by the power of the nation. One of the burning questions of the hour is: Do we intend to be a free people, and to maintain the Constitution? The way to overthrow a despotism is to take it by the throat and hurl it to the ground. Two despotisms now pollute the home of liberty; both of them enthrall labor.

SUNSET CLUB DISCUSSION.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN POLITICS.

CLOSING SPEECHES.

GENERAL HAWLEY.

I feel that I am alone in this fight, and I regret very much that I have not the strength to answer my friend here. I know the town he comes from. He says we are seeking office. His town has been wiped out by the organization known as the A. P. A., and he feels very much annoyed about it. He says we are to die at a certain time. I don't know where he gets his information. He is very pointed in his remarks, but he wants to bear in mind one thing, that we don't care what the name is, whether it be Methodist, or Presbyterian, or Catholic, so long as it attempts to use its church power in politics. If it does we are down on it.

I want to answer one question asked here, why the A. P. A. opposes the Catholic in office. The reason is that history has shown us, experience has taught us, that priests and the pope of their institution control it absolutely. There are a few men like my friend on the left. In his written argument here he speaks of man drawing his religion from his mother's breast. I am afraid that he drew very little Catholicism from his mother's breast, for I don't believe she was a Catholic, or ever taught it. Why do we act thus? Because of the attitude of the Catholic church towards the institutions of America. They may say they do not oppose the public schools. I have one of the best friends on earth in a Catholic bishop—John Ireland—as noble a man as ever lived. But to show what they do preach, let me give you a few extracts from certain priests here: "The public school is a national fraud; it must cease to exist, and the day will come when it will cease to exist."—Priest McCarthy. "The public school system is a disgrace to the civilization of the 19th century."—Bishop Hughes. "I would as soon administer the sacrament to a dog as to a Christian who sends his children to the public school."—Bishop Walsh. Here are a hundred just such extracts. And yet he asks us why we oppose the Catholic in office. It is because we feel that they are controlled by the priesthood, and the priesthood is antagonistic to American government, and hence they are dangerous persons to trust, and that is why the A. P. A. opposes them.

My friend here strikes a chord that I have often struck: Give the Methodists the power the Catholics have, and it will be just as bad. We don't want either. We won't have it. We want no church organization to have charge of our affairs. It is a mistaken idea that we have a fight with any man's religion, so long as he uses it merely as his religion.

I regret very much that there are not other advocates of this cause here. I expected to see more of them here to-night.

Mr. Mann:—General, is it a fact that your members are not allowed to disclose the fact that they are members of your organization?

General Hawley:—I would not give your name away as a member of this order.

Mr. Mann:—If Professor Blanchard should ask you whether I was a member of the A. P. A., you would not tell him?

General Hawley:—No, sir; I would not tell him.

Mr. Mann:—I see; every man has a right to 'fess for himself.

HON. WASHINGTON HESING.

I want simply to correct a statement or two and mention some facts.

Dr. Stevens made the statement that all the appointees of the President of the United States, the federal appointees, were members of the Catholic church. I take it that he said it from ignorance, and not with malice aforethought. It is that very same thing that has given such a wrong impression of the Democratic party and of the Catholic church. Such deliberate lies constantly circulated and sent broadcast throughout the United States is exactly what is being done by the A. P. A. for personal aggrandizement and self interest. Now, as a matter of fact, of the appointees of Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Mize, the collector of internal revenue; Mr. Anderson, the pension agent; Mr. Milchrist, who was appointed by Mr. Harrison, but whose successor will be Mr. Dickson; and Mr. Arnold, the marshal, are all of them the strongest Protestants; also Delos Phelps. There are two Catholics, Martin J. Russell and myself, both of us born upon American soil, both of us educated in the common schools of this city, and I do not believe there is a man within range of my voice to whom I will yield in my allegiance to the stars and stripes, nor in devotion to American institutions.

General Hawley, I have served with you on committees. You did not then think me a dishonorable citizen because I worshiped God in my own manner.

Gen. Hawley:—I do not now.

Mr. Hesing:—I claim to stand here as an American citizen, with all the rights and privileges that you or anybody else has. So long as I conduct myself in a proper manner, neither your organization nor any other has the right to proscribe me because I worship my God as I see fit. I care not, sir, how you worship your God. If at any time an oath were placed before me, such as you have taken, proscribing you as you have proscribed me, denouncing you as a citizen, no matter how good a son, faithful husband or devoted father you may have been, if such an oath were placed before me I would say, "Away. It is unpatriotic, it is un-American."

The present Mayor of Chicago, who has been denounced by you and your kin because he happens to bear the name John Patrick Hopkins, was born of American parents, and his grandfather, Stephen Hopkins, signed the Declaration of Independence. That man happens to worship his God in a manner different from you, and you stand here to night and denounce him, when you know—and I am not here to-night to praise Mr. Hopkins because he happens to be my friend—but you know that his record, for the time that he has been in office, will compare favorably with the record of any man who ever sat in the Mayor's chair. You know, sir, that you and I were on the same committee that welcomed back Carter H. Harrison, and you know, sir, that no administrations of Carter H. Harrison—I do not say it with any disrespect to Mr. Harrison—will compare in any four months with the four months' administration of John Patrick Hopkins. That same John Patrick Hopkins—the only appointments he has made to his cabinet are three, and not one of them a Catholic. Mr. Eisendrath, the building commissioner; Mr. Ackerman, than whom no nobler man lives, comptroller, and Mr. Harry Rubens, who, in my opinion, is the best corporation counsel the city of Chicago ever had, and the three of them are non-Catholics, two of them are Jews—

Mr. Braham:—Only one.

Mr. Mann:—That's enough.

Mr. Hesing:—I want here to make a little statement personal to myself, and I want General Hawley to tell me honestly what he would think of it if it had happened to himself or to his son. As a boy 17 years of age, having graduated here at the old Kinzie school, a public school of the city of Chicago, I was prepared for college and entered Yale. I had engaged board with a family by the name of Eastman; I had never been away from home one hour until I was put upon the cars and sent to pass my examination at Yale College. It was my first Sunday there, and at dinner that day the lady of the house said to me, "How did you enjoy the sermon?" And by the way, the chaplain of Yale at that time was Dr. Daggett. "How did you enjoy the sermon?" "Very much." "How did you like Dr. Daggett?" I said, "Who is Dr. Daggett?" "Didn't you hear Dr. Daggett at the chapel?" "No," I said; "I went up here on the hill to St. John's church and heard Dr. Carmody preach." The lady was surrounded by her three daughters. This is not drawing on my imagination. It was in the month of September, 1866, in the city of New Haven, when I was a freshman, and the greenest freshman that ever entered Yale College. I was decidedly fresh. But the lady and her daughters dropped their knives and forks, and she said, "What, sir, are you a Catholic?" "I am, madam." "Can it be possible that we have a Roman Catholic at our table?" I said, "Yes, madam." They rose from the table and said, "Vacate this house this afternoon."

I was pointed at on the streets of New Haven with the finger of scorn and the look of derision because I attended a Catholic church. I was compelled to get out of that house, and I did get out. Now, sir, if that had happened to you or to your son, what would you have said? Yet that is exactly what your organization is fostering today; that is just exactly what you are doing.

General Hawley:—I deny it.

Mr. Hesing:—Those are your principles.

General Hawley:—No, sir; they are not our principles.

Mr. Hesing:—They are wrong, they are un-American, and I contend they are illegal, and the interference of the law should be invoked to stop such nefarious practices.

Mr. Mann:—Get an injunction from Jenkins.

PRESIDENT C. A. BLANCHARD.

I have been very happy to find myself agreeing in some respects with all the speakers, and in knowing that in all the points where I have not agreed with them, I will when they come over to my side.

In saying a few words now I would like to begin by calling your attention to the fact that a secret society which denies its political character, and yet operates politically in secret, is far more dangerous than a secret society which admits its political character and openly professes to be in politics. Take a case: In my own town, at a time when the Republican party was in undisputed control of both houses of Congress, and had the President of the United States, a returned soldier, honorably discharged, and who had served three years in the armies of the Union, was a candidate for a position in the railway mail service of the United States. He was a man whom I had known from childhood, a soldier with a good record, a man of good business talents and of unblemished character. In the same town at that time there were two men, members for years of the Democratic party, neither of them having served in the armies, neither of them in sympathy with the powers prevailing at Washington. My friend Mr. Griswold, the retired soldier, a man who never voted any ticket but the Republican ticket, sought in vain a position in the railway mail service of the United States, while these other gentlemen, neither of them a Republican, did obtain positions in the railway mail service of the United States. Now, what was the reason that my friend Griswold could not get appointed, while my friend Mr. Towsley and my friend Mr. Fohl could? I can't tell what the reason was, but I do know this, that my friend Griswold was not a secret society man, while my friend Towsley and my friend Fohl were both members of the Royal Arch Chapter of Masons.

Now, I have a great deal more respect for a secret organization which says, "We are in politics for what we can make, and we propose to carry elections if we can," than I have for a secret organization which denies its political character, and which at the same time sees to it that its members are put in positions of power and profit wherever it is possible to accomplish that end.

Then, again, take the operation of secret societies on the courts of justice. Most of you will remember very well indeed the case when a few years ago two men were convicted in this city for violation of the laws of the State, with respect to the management of elections and the handling of public funds. You will remember that both of these men were sentenced to State's prison; and you will remember that one of these men was taken for a ride through the streets of this city after dark, five or six miles away from where he was confined, in an open buggy, and turned loose in a big house to take a bath, and allowed to spend two or three hours in getting it; and you will also remember how perfectly astounded that brother Knight Templar was when he could not find the man that had been turned loose in the house. Now, it would be very silly of me to say that this Knight Templar turned loose his brother Knight Templar because they were both Knight Templars. But I do say this, that when a man belongs to a secret organization, by that very fact he is disqualified from a candid administration of the laws of this country, and hence such a man should decline election to any public office whatever. You may say that all Knight Templars or Masons would not act in the same way. Very likely not. But the very fact that a public official is called upon to administer the laws of the country equally and impartially for all men, that fact should render it imperative that he be free from all secret alliances whatever.

My friend on the right said many things things that I believe in. I was sorry to hear him say one thing. He said that within a few years we we would have a President with the trade mark of a secret society on him. I submit, gentlemen, that when the President of the United States comes to be the representative of a secret organization instead of the President of 60,000,000 of people, more or less, it will be time to abolish that office. I say frankly that I would rather have a king, known by that name, than to have a man here called a President ruling 60,000,000 of people in the interest of a fraction of that people belonging to a secret society.

But if we must have a man rule us in the interest of a secret society, I say by all means let us have a man who rules us in the interest of a secret society which avows its political character, and not in the interest of a secret political society which denies it.

Now, my friend across the table says that if the Protestants were united they would rule this country. I agree with him; and I say that it is the glory of Protestantism that with 15,000,000 recognized members of our churches, not members of families connected with churches, but members of churches, it is the glory of Protestantism that it has never attempted to use the power it possesses politically.

And I say still further, gentlemen, that if the 6,000,000 of members of the Roman Catholic church had conducted themselves with reference to public affairs as the 15,000,000 of Protestants have conducted themselves; if it had not been for such transactions as we have seen in New York, where a million and a half dollars' worth of land goes into the hands of the church for a dollar, in the time of Boss Tweed; if it were not that a petition signed by 16,000 voters to have the Sermon on the Mount read in the schools of this city is denied, while the schools are closed on a festival day of a certain church with no objection from anybody and without any petition; if it were not for things like that, there never would have been any A. P. A. movement at all. [Applause and cheers.]

And so I sit down, saying what I said a little while ago, in this good land which God has given us, not for a sect, not for a party, but for a nation, and for a Christian nation, in this good land which God has given us, from the lakes on the north to the gulf on the south, and from the long, stormy waves of the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west, there is not air enough to move more than one flag, and to that flag every American ought to yield a willing, an immediate and a glad allegiance. [Great applause and cheering.]

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A tropical plant in New England—The vacation season—Prohibition matters and the Sunday-closing law—A Catholic move on Harvard—How the poorer classes live—The Bryant centennial.

Scientists have discovered a species of wild cactus growing at a certain point on the Massachusetts coast. As everybody knows, cactuses are no more indigenous to New England than palm-trees, and the wonder is how it came there, as this particular variety has never been found outside of the torrid zone. The seeds were evidently brought here on the current of the Gulf Stream whose influence so far mellows the temperature that this tropical waif endures the winters and seems perfectly acclimated. I wonder what it thinks of its companions, as it hobnobs with huckleberry bushes, ground pine, and other denizens of Yankee land. However, the past summer has given us days of heat so potent that it might well fancy itself back in its native latitudes, and in compensation the thunderstorms have been unusually many and violent. A peculiar result of one which passed over Sherburn, Mass., recently, was to kill about 40,000 silkworms, belonging to Mrs. Ellen C. Johnson, Superintendent of the Reformatory for women situated in that pleasant suburban town. The worms were about a week old when they met their untimely fate. Mrs. Johnson is an enthusiast in silk-worm culture, and sent an interesting exhibit of her pets to the Columbian Exposition.

Autumn has hung out its crimson flag of warning here and there as a salutary reminder that the vacation season is over, and all must settle down once more to the year's work. With it has passed many opportunities for good which some have been quick to recognize, and others—I fear the majority—have allowed to slip. The passing influence of the summer boarders in our rural towns is greater than many think, for their example is more apt to be noted and followed, for the very reason that they are outside the circle of village life around them. When they leave behind them an atmosphere of frivolity and summer novels, the money they spend, however freely, will but illy compensate for the injury done; but if instead they present in themselves the highest ideals of culture and refinement, as well as a lofty plane of spiritual living, influences for good may be set in motion that will last for generations. Summer schools have had their usual number of enthusiastic pupils, and the various camp meetings have been largely attended. English people, says a French writer, take even their pleasures seriously. Perhaps it is their Anglo-Saxon blood which causes a yearly increasing number of the American people to take their vacations "seriously." The Old Orchard meetings were, as they never fail to be, full of interest. Dr. Simpson by his earnest appeals raised $40,000 for foreign evangelization in a few hours. This does not look as if there was any dying out of the missionary spirit. It is an instance of what a man with large faith can do in the way of unloosing, by an eloquent presentation of motives, the purse-strings of large crowds.

Meanwhile, the old truism that "the devil never takes a vacation" has been abundantly proved by the columns of the daily papers, filled with records of crime with which the public has become so familiar that it has grown commonplace, and the most shocking tragedy or unsavory scandal fails to startle us. It has been long suspected that Boston kept a respectable-sized Tammany tiger of her own, and a charge of blackmail brought against one of her chief police officials recently, by the proprietor of an infamous resort, has helped to confirm the suspicion. The accused was acquitted at his trial before the police board, but as the proceedings were concealed from the public, there is some reason for distrusting the verdict. Such an accusation brought against public servant is a matter for a regular court of law; and for the board of police or any other simply executive body to thus usurp those functions by trying its own members, is not only unconstitutional but leaves a strong suspicion of "whitewashing."

There has been an attempt made to enfore the anti-screen law. The next best thing to prohibition is to make the liquor-seller display his wares, and give the public a glimpse of the process of drunkard-making. The sight of a row of men standing at the bar and tossing off their tumblers of whisky is, of itself, an eloquent temperance lecture.

The Sunday-closing law has been tried in Newburyport, and given as much satisfaction to her better class of citizens as it has dissatisfaction to the druggists and others, who claim that they lose an amount every Sunday equal to the receipts of three ordinary days. These spasmodic, unequal, and inconsistent attempts to enforce the Sunday law may be better than nothing, but they fail of moral effect when, as in Cambridge, many of the dealers openly defy the law, and are not disturbed by the authorities. One of the counsel for an Everett druggist, recently arrested for selling soda on Sunday, said scoffingly, "The nonsense of Plymouth Rock has passed away." Oh, for such an uprising of moral sentiment among New England's sons and daughters as shall disprove such an assertion;—that shall thunder, "No; forever, No!" loud as the roar of her many waters that sound the same eternal psalm to heaven which mingled with the prayers and hymns of that pilgrim band to whom we owe the fact that she is New England and not New Mexico.

There is talk of a Catholic church near Harvard University for the accommodation of Catholic students attending the college. The Romish priest who officiated in the pulpit of Harvard Chapel a few months ago is reported as saying in regard to this innovation on the early traditions of this oldest of American universities: "The Catholic church authorities are to blame for not having taken advantage of opportunies which the Harvard authorities were glad to extend." But why should the toleration be all on one side? Would the authorities of Holy Cross College, for instance, be "glad to extend" such an invitation to one of our leading Protestant clergymen?

An insight into the way many of our poorer classes live was afforded on the Floating Hospital, which made its last trip down the harbor for this season last week. Many of the mothers carried lunches, which were almost invariably confiscated by the attending physician. Green apples, green bananas, raw salt pork, sausage, beer bottles, and small flasks of brandy and whiskey, formed evidently a large part of the home-fare of these hard-working mothers and sickly children. No wonder that the latter die by scores and hundreds during the heated term.

The celebration of the Bryant Centennial at Cummington, Mass., was attended by four thousand people, many of whom saw the old Bryant homestead for the first time. It is one of those roomy, delightful old mansions that seem to gather to themselves as to a shrine the aroma of past generations; veritably "haunts of ancient peace." This was the poet's summer home, and the study is still preserved intact where he translated the Iliad and Odyssey. Mrs. Bryant, like most mothers of great men, was a remarkable woman. She kept a diary for fifty-three years with not a single break in the daily entries. From it we learn that Bryant's birthday, Nov. 3, 1794, was ushered in by a northeast snow storm. But his life's day was long and sunny, in spite of this seemingly ominous beginning. On the whole, was not that northeaster New England's fitting welcome to the babe who was to "sing to one clear harp in divers tones" the charms of her varied seasons, not forgetting even her most disagreeable month, bleak March, for which no poet ever had word of praise before? He was the American Wordsworth without his puerilites, and like him, will always be popular with that class of people who love nature, but need an interpreter for her mysteries,—one to translate her infinite meanings into a language for finite comprehension. This is what Bryant did in his "Thanatopsis" and "Water Fowl," which two poems alone were enough to make his niche in the temple of Fame secure forever.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Humbugged by K of P —But not the saloons, etc.—They have sure game —The female squabble —Two women orders in it —A society that needs secrecy —The W. C. T. U on social impurity and the lodge.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30, 1894.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It is reported that Barnum said: "The American people like to be humbugged and I am willing to humbug them while they are willing to pay for it." The Knights of Pythias are at this writing having their "blowout" in this city. For months the daily papers have heralded their coming. It was stated that of their 500,000 members, 100,000 would parade. This is about 92 000 more than appeared. The boarding houses and hotels that had prepared for a larger crowd are of course disappointed.

The saloons, as would be expected, are having a big run. I stood for a few moments before the open door of Fritz Reuter's saloon on the corner of 4½ street and Pennsylvania Ave., and watched the "Knights" pushing and struggling to reach the bars where the liquor was being poured out and drank as fast as it could be supplied. Many of the saloons erected stands on the street so as to better accommodate the thirsty crowd. There is scarcely a low doggery or dive of any kind in the city but has the "Welcome Sir Knights" on it. Uniforms, badges, high-sounding titles, and other vanity of vanities are the order of the day. I almost grow sick at heart as I think of trying to describe this motly crew that like silly butterflies have come to dance around the Washington mudpuddles.

One of the most distressing features is that the parties are largely young in years, wrecking themselves soul and body for time and eternity. A delegation from Illinois of about 50 young men arrived with badges bearing the significant inscription: "I want a girl."

There are two divisions of the Pythian sisters asking the Supreme Lodge to recognize them as the elect. Each use the Hall manual recommended to them by the men Pythians. The main difference seems to be that the one party take the men in, and the other does not. Mrs. A. A. Young, Supreme Vice Chancellor of Concord, N. H., is reported as speaking to a Washington Star reporter in behalf of the part that excludes the men, as follows: "I don't want you to think that I am what is known as a woman's rights woman. I have rights enough, and certainly respect those of my husband, but I do not care to have gentlemen participate in our secret work. The Sisterhood was organized in Concord on February 27th, 1888, and was eight months old before the first temple of the Pythian Sisters was instituted. We had no dissatisfaction with the Sisters then, and have none now. The only difference between us is that we do not admit men to membership, while the 'Sisters' do make sisters of their brother Knights."

The Washington News of Monday evening, Aug. 27th, says that prominent Pythians are interested in starting here a branch of a secret society founded in New York two years ago to which only divorced husbands are eligible. This society is said to have a large membership. The actress Lillian Russell has three ex-husbands connected with it. If the Pythian "Sisters" want to go to destruction as fast as possible why not seek union with this new branch of Pythiasism?

But recently a lady who was speaking before the social purity department of the W. C. T. U. here regarding the impurity being taught by the lodge, especially the Masonic, was told she must stop. Many of the devoted members of the union took her part, and she is to be allowed to further present the matter at an early date. Surely it is time that the womanhood of our land were getting their eyes open to the abominations taught their husbands and brothers in these secret lodges.

W. B. STODDARD.

AN AMERICAN JUDGE.

Eight men, all from foreign countries, were sentenced in the court of quarter-sessions, Paterson, N. J., on the 8th inst. They had been tried for rioting in the late labor troubles in that city. Their sentences varied from six months to three years. Judge Hopper in pronouncing sentence said:

"All the cases in which this court will now pass sentence arose out of and were connected with the labor strikes in this city. Men who refused to quit work and join the strikers were openly attacked by mobs and violently beaten. Avowed anarchists, affiliating with the strikers, sent threatening letters to two millers and manufacturers, William Strange and Jacob Weidmann, A bomb containing three pounds of dynamite was placed at Mr. Strange's dwelling, the fuse in which had been lighted, but happily was extinguished by rain, and thus Mr. Strange and his house were saved from destruction. Most, if not all, of the men engaged in these acts of violence were of foreign birth and were either blindly ignorant or willfully regardless of the rights and privileges of free American citizens.

"The open or secret principles of anarchy or socialism, so-called, upon which these violators of law claim to have acted, never can and never should be allowed to gain a foothold in this free country. It is strange and unaccountable that workingmen will willingly submit to the tyranny exercised over them by a 'master workman,' so-called, often self-appointed leaders, who by their arbitrary orders compel men to quit work, and with their families either suffer and starve or rely upon charity for subsistence. This has probably been the case in the late extraordinary scenes among laboring men in the west. By the mere ipse dixit of a self-constituted leader thousands of workmen have been compelled to strike out of mere sympathy with others with whom they have no connection or interest whatever, and millions of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed. The timely action of the President of the United States has shown the utter futility and absurdity of such measures, and that the laws of the country will be enforced and the men guilty of such unlawful acts be brought to deserved punishment."

—Dr. David McAllister, editor of the Christian Reformer of Pittsburgh, and Dr. H. H. George, ex-president of Geneva College, have returned from an absence of nearly three months in Europe. They reached Pittsburgh last week Tuesday, both much benefited by the vacation journey.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DOES NOT FEAR THE TRUTH.

IT SHOULD SET THIS PASTOR FREE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 27, 1894.

I preached to a large and appreciative audience Friday night at Plymouth Rock Baptist church, Rev. David Young, pastor. This is one of the largest and most influential of the colored churches of the city. Elder Young is a high Mason, but he is not prejudiced against anti-secret lecturers. I preached three times on Sabbath (yesterday). There will be quite a gathering under the auspices of the annual celebration of the C. P. U. S. on Thursday next. There will probably be some 4,000 or 5,000 people in attendance. I hope to get an opportunity to speak.

The Baptist State convention will meet at Monroe, La., Tuesday, Sept. 11. I hope to attend, and if so, will have a grand opportunity to leaven Monroe with anti-lodge tracts.

Yours in the work, F. J. DAVIDSON.

THE LODGE AND THE SALOON.

Under this title a New England W. C. T. U. writes a very able article in Cynosure of Aug. 23, arguing that the secret lodges are a strong support to the saloons. I wish to give two facts which evidently sustain this view of the case. One of the most active prosecutors of liquor-dealers in this State, a Christian man of undoubted veracity, recently told me that he had never dealt with a liquor-seller who was not adorned with lodge badges, and that the secret lodges were the greatest obstacle he had encountered in closing saloons and bar-rooms.

The second fact is rather direct evidence against the lodge. A public officer, accompanied by the complainant, entered a large hotel to search for liquor. He met the proprietor, who was a 32d-degree Freemason, at the entrance. The officer, who was also a Freemason, gave a Masonic sign which was recognized by the complainant, who said: "You need not search, you will find no liquor, but I will prosecute you for perjury and neglect of duty." No liquor was found, and the next day that officer resigned to escape prosecution. I could give the names of these parties, but as one has given up the liquor business and the other his life, it is not necessary.

S. C. KIMBALL.

TWO SERMONS.

CIRCUMSCRIBED BY CHRIST'S SERMON AND TEN COMMANDMENTS.

For several months past I have been engaged in camp-meeting work with the Free Methodists at Tacoma and at Ballard, Washington.

At Tacoma I preached one night on Ezekiel's vision of the dry bones. I had an inquest and made a post mortem examination on the bones; brought forward the witnesses and proved that the persons, whose bones these were, had been killed by drinking the "cup of devils." That the poison was administered by Baal-worshiping priests and prophets, whom I arraigned as the murderers.

Then I held an inquest over the dead churches on the Pacific coast, and on the backsliders from God. I examined the bones in this valley of vision and brought forward the witnesses to prove the identity of the cup of devils, and found it to be the same poison which did the deadly work in the first instance.

I traced the cup of poison back to the hands of Masonic and other secret society preachers, proved the spread of infidelity through their agency, and charged upon them the soul-murder of most of these dead church members in this country.

I then showed God's method of promoting a revival of religion: First, by preaching a whole Gospel, and a full salvation to both baptized and unbaptized sinners,—prophesying upon the bones. And I showed what the effect of such preaching would be, shaking among the dry bones. Secondly, by the out-pouring of the Spirit of God upon these formal professors of religion—the baptism of the Holy Ghost. A sham revival might be produced by other methods, but a true revival never.

At the Ballard camp meeting the first Sabbath, in the afternoon meeting, I preached from 2 Cor. 7:1. "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

My first proposition was that holiness requires separation from the world. (1.) Separation from secret society idolatry. 2 Cor. 6: 14–18. (2.) Separation from blind leaders and those having the form but denying the power of godliness. (3.) Separation from and non-conformity to the ungodly.

Second, that holiness requires complete separation of soul and body from sin.

And third, the acquisition of holiness is not optional with the believer. He must "perfect holiness in the fear of God."

In the discussion of the subject I raised these questions: First, can a man be a Christian whose morals would not meet the requirements of the moral sentiments of the heathen? Second, can a man be a Christian whose morals are condemned by the public sentiment of an enlightened community? Third, can a man be a Christian and live outside of the Decalogue?

I then showed that the heathen world and Mohammedan nations condemn the use of liquor and denounce and punish drunkenness. That the Hindoos, Chinese, Japanese and the savages of Africa respect the sanctity of the marriage relation.

I then made a pair of compasses, using the Ten Commandments for one part, and the Sermon on the Mount for the other part. I put down the Sermon on the Mount to fix the center point and used the Ten Commandments as the other; then drew a circle, and put the question: "Can any man live a justified life who lives outside of this circle?" Of course no one dared affirm he could. I then put down the other part of the compass and with the Sermon on the Mount drew another circle and raised the question, "Can a man enjoy sanctification and live outside of this circle?" Of course no one dared say yes.

I did not then, but the next time I will use a pair of Masonic compasses, making a circle and raise the question, "Can any man be a Christian and live inside of this circle? Of course I would read the Masonic oaths and explain that the Bible and the "holy St. John" have nothing to do with this worship of Baal-Peor; and that God refuses to have anything to do with sanctioning their blasphemous oaths inspired by Satan and executed under his direction. M. H. NICHOLS.

BADGES.

DID THE SOLDIERS FIND ONE ON THE LORD?

DEKALB, Iowa.

In wearing badges we appear more like the world; consequently in such a display, in ever so good a cause, even for a noble purpose, it is in a degree wrong. "Be ye not conformed to this world." We can nowhere in the Bible find where Christians ever set the example of wearing badges. If Christ our Saviour and perfect pattern, nor any of his followers in Bible times, did not wear badges, we had best be free from such ornamentation. We are forbidden to wear silver and gold, yet there would be no more heaven in it than wearing badges of any other material. The command is to help us to be free in our affections from any desire for outward ornament, that we may be a plain "peculiar people," zealous of good works. We should not be proud of wearing a badge, but should "avoid the very appearance of evil" in that thing, because "the devil is the father of all the children of pride." Lodges are the prolific source of badges.

The Conservator did honorable duty in knocking some of the "stuffing out of this man of straw." CYRUS SMITH.

WHAT OF THE GRANGE?

HAS THE RITUAL BEEN CHANGED?

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Can you or some reader tell me whether the Grange ritual has been altered since the exposure published by Ezra A. Cook was issued? Also, whether it is likely that a Connecticut grange uses a modified ritual?

am told that in a grange near me, the candidate in the laborer degree is not conducted through the "field of labor" described in that book. (See page 16, "Assistant Steward's Lecture.")

The chaplain of the same subordinate lodge assures me that, since I spoke of the chaplain's instruction to the candidates in the gleaner's degree (page 50), he has made a special examination of the ritual and finds that I have been misinformed. I made the objection that the name of Christ was avoided; and that this was also done by attributing his own language in the Sermon on the Mount to "them of old time," thus, also, borrowing his own phrase used in the same sermon as if to still further mislead. Also that the teaching of Christ quoted by the chaplain was followed by the remark "But have we not a better law?"

The chaplain assures me that these objections do not hold; that he has consulted the ritual itself to see if such things were there, and that his examination proves that I have been misinformed.

I have heard too much secret society talk to jump at once to the conclusion that the general ritual has been changed or that Connecticut farmers have a modified performance and talk of their own, though I think it possible that after exposure followed change. But under the circumstances, I need answers to my questions.

BROTHER JONATHAN.

PITH AND POINT.

DON'T LIKE THE STORIES OF NEGRO OUTRAGE.

The Cynosure could hardly expect to have any influence in the South while it publishes such slanderous lies about our people as the last issue [Aug. 2] contained. The South has been misrepresented long enough by the Northern press, and it is marvelous that the average Northern and Western reader should continue to credit their stories. As we of the South read in the Northern press of high moral tone (?) stories of the barbarous, brutal South, we only groan in spirit and sigh, "How long, oh Lord, how long!" It is even true that reformers need to be reformed.—REV. E. J. GATES, Callahan, Florida.

If Bro. Gates will please designate the slanderous lies he has seen, and give us reasonable evidence that they are lies, we will thank him and print the reply. It is due the Cynosure and its readers that he do so. Otherwise he will be held responsible for general railing. In the quiet and secure districts of Florida he probably knows little of the character of some parts of the South. We can send him to places where he would have trouble enough. Another Florida brother thinks better of the Cynosure below:

I think the Cynosure a very reliable paper. Having become a Mason when a student in the Ohio Wesleyan University, I thought then the order did me some good, and that the principles were good. But I long ago concluded there was danger of many Masons being satisfied with Masonry for their religion; and I think there is much truth in what you say of the order, but think there is not the credit given for the good there is in, and has been done by, Masonry. I thank you for the paper. —REV. W. F. ALEXANDER, Clermont, Fla.

OUR LABOR NOT IN VAIN.

The Cynosure has been a great help to me. I place it next to the Holy Bible, which is a foe to all sin and wickedness. The whole theme of the paper is justice, love, mercy and truth. I consider it an educator, and a Bible teacher. May it be as the Word of God, never returning void, but accomplishing its purpose. It has given me many good lessons. May God be with you.—REV. J. C. WILLIAMS.

HOW MINISTERS ARE HELPED BY CONTRIBUTORS TO THE CYNOSURE.

(From a private letter.)

If I had not been a speaker and writer myself, I might have welcomed silently the message that has this moment come to my heart, without thinking it desirable to the sender, if even suitable for me to write and thank you. But I wish you to know that "Trust in God and Do the Right," in the Cynosure of July 12, is "a word in season" to one who, though struggling and trying to keep faith and courage, was in a degree "weary". And if you have helped one, that is proof of helpfulness, giving you reason to hope that more may share. R.

GREAT DROUGHT IN CATTARAUGUS CO., S. W. NEW YORK.

I wonder if the people "out West" have heard of the terrible drought in this part of the country. With the exception of a few light showers scarcely sufficient to wet the soil, we have not had a drop of rain since the first of June. Pastures are baked brown; wells and springs are dry; Robinson's Run, which flows past our door, is entirely dry, and they say it was never dry before. It has its source in the Allegany mountains just above here. The Allegany river about half a mile from where we live is so shallow that one could wade across and scarcely wet their ankles. The dust in the streets is "knee deep". It is terrible! Of course the crops are badly injured. The fruit crop is almost ruined and potatoes will not average half a crop. Yet God is still above us all, and this old world is still a pretty good world, and he will not forsake the work of his hands.—VICTORIA A. STONE, Steamburgh, N. Y.

LITERATURE.

WHAT ORMOND THINKS. By "Ormond," author of Suggestive Essays on various subjects. Pp. 60. Price 50 c. Blakely Printing Co., Chicago.

The topic of which Ormond is thinking in this little volume is in reality the natural immortality of man. Connected with the argument on this central thought, however, are discussions on some of the most important problems of life. These are short, concise, and the method of argument simple and conclusive. As an argumentative work it is pleasant reading, though not profound or critical, or exhaustive. The topic is that "the nature of man precludes the possibility of his physical body ending his mental life." "It is the belief of some that every person who ever lived is still living; and our subject will compel us to inquire whether this belief, which is held by the great majority of the human race, is well founded." Man is a dual creature, having both a material and spiritual nature, which guarantees him a continuous life, if it can be shown that the mind is not subject to the law of death and decay. This cannot be scientifically proved, but the proof is as sactisfactory to the reason as if as clear as the multiplication table. The arguments from analogy and from consciousness or intuition may not be unfamiliar, but they are not often so simply stated. The people are suffering for truth and not for the formulas by which truth can sometimes be confirmed. It is an established fact in the minds of most people that they are alive, but the wisest man who ever walked the earth cannot explain life. Just so it is with many facts of nature; he may know they are true without the ability to demonstrate the fact." Of agnosticism Ormond well says: "Agnosticism would leave man in his grave because it couldn't accept the deductions of reason beyond the ability of science to confirm, and hence to an agnostic the future is not a reality." The spiritual is the great and leading characteristic of a man's life on earth, and yet this cannot be proved by science. The "figures that won't lie" seem not to be arranged to sum up the heights and depths and reaches of the human soul. There is no effort to force any theories or dogmas, but plain practical talks upon the great vital questions which pertain to life here and to the life hereafter.

Scribner's Magazine for September has a popular list of contributors. Mrs. James T. Fields has a chapter of very entertaining literary reminiscences of Milton, Johnson, Thackeray, Lamb and Barry Cornwall, which is fully illustrated with portraits, fac-similes, etc. Doctor Carl Lumholtz, the famous explorer, has another paper on The Tarahumari of Mexico, the American Cave Dwellers, among whom he has spent several years. The amount of information, of a curious and entertaining character, which he has packed into these articles is a tribute to his wonderful powers of observation. The illustrations are from his unique collection of photographs. The old-fashioned quilts and coverlets of our grandmothers are described by Mrs. Fanny D. Bergen, under the title "The Tapestry of the New World." It is a faithful account of an old American domestic industry. Octave Thanet concludes her popular sketches of American types with some amusing descriptions of "The People of the Cities."

The September number of McClure's Magazine is profusely illustrated and gives a popular table of contents. The last and the most valuable article is on the great irrigation and storage reservoir schemes in the Rocky mountains which promise to restore millions of acres to agricultural use and turn back the tide that sets toward our cities. Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, writes of his first book. The eminent French chemist, Professor Berthelot, in an interview with Henry J. W. Dam, sets forth the grounds of his belief that a time is coming when milk, potatoes, beef, and all the staples of human food will be supplied from the laboratories of the chemist, instead of from the fields of the farmer. In an article illustrated with some very interesting composite photographs taken by himself, Dr. H. P. Bowditch of Harvard Medical School discusses the question whether composite photographs are typical pictures. Lilienthal's flying-machine, on which all students of the problem of aerial navigation now have their attention fixed, and his latest achievements with it, are described, with numerous illustrations, by a writer who himself witnessed the achievements, and has carefully studied the machine.

THIS AND THAT.

"Well, Joseph, did you take my letter to M. de Y——?" "Yes, sir, but I am afraid he won't be able to read it, for he is blind." "Blind?" "Yes, sir; while I was standing right in front of him in his private office, he asked me twice where my hat was, and I had it on my head all the time. Ha! ha!"—Le Petit Calaisien.

The Union Signal is responsible for the following very significant statements: "In this country 2,500 women are practicing medicine, 275 preaching the Gospel, more than 6,000 managing post-offices, and over 3,000,000 earning independent incomes. Since 1880 the patent office has granted over 2,500 patents to women, and in New York City 27,000 women support their husbands."

In the United States there are 1,855 daily newspapers, 31 papers published every other day, 237 published twice a week, and 14,017 weekly newspapers. Eighty-five papers are published every two weeks, 349 are published twice a month, 3,125 every month, and 307 published every two months and every three months. There are 20,006 papers and periodicals in the United States.

Lord Rayleigh, Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge University, announced in the British Association the discovery of a hitherto unknown constituent of the atmosphere—a gas characterized by extreme inertness. He has not yet found its chemical reagent, but the density is 19 09. With Prof. Ramsey he obtained a quarter of a pint of the substance. Is this the lazy element in the air?

One of the customs of the Chinese might well be imitated by other nations. On New Year's morning every man and boy in the Celestial empire, from the emperor to the lowest peasant, pays a visit to his mother. He carries her a present, and thanks her for all she has done for him. This visit, however, is partly influenced by superstition, as the Chinese believe that their mothers have an influence over their entire lives.

I kum to the conclusion lately that life was so unsartin that the only way for me to stand a fair chance with other folks was to get my life insured, so I kalled on the agent of the Garden Angel Life Insurance Co., and answered the following questions which were put to me, over the top of a pair of spectacles, by a slick old fellow, with a round grey head on him as ever was owned: "Are you a mail or femail? If so, state how long yu have been so. Had you a father or mother? If so, which? Are you subject to fits? and if so, du yu have more than one at a time? What is your precise fiting wate? Did you ever have any ancestors? and if so, how many? Du yu have any nitemair? Are you married or single, or are you a bachelor? Have you ever committed suicide? If so, how did it affect you?" After answering the above questions like a man in the affirmative, the slick, little, fat, old fellow, with gold spectacles on, said "I was insured fur life, and probably will remain so fur years." I thanked him, smiled and retired.—Josh Billings.

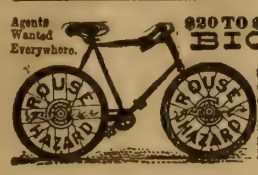
Dr. Emil Young, professor of physiology at the University of Geneva, is in great distress concerning the future of our legs. He suggests, in an essay in the Semaine Litteraire, that in the course of a thousand years the human race may have lost the necessity of the use of legs, and retain those members of the body solely as ornamental survivals. Men refuse more and more to walk, though walking is the wholesomest of physical exercise. Steam, electricity, the rope railways, tricycles and bicycles have changed the whole aspect of Swiss touring, as he says, in his own generation. "Everybody seems anxious to get everywhere any way except by the use of his legs." In another generation, he supposes, our traveling ballons will hang outside our windows, or our electrical coaches stand outside our doors. They will be produced so cheaply that every man will have his own chariot. Hence our legs will become superfluous, then they will be crippled, and shrink to hideously small dimensions, until at last they will finally disappear. Our arms, on the contrary, will correspondingly strengthen and lengthen. "While our legs remain," says Dr. Young, "let us march all we can."—Westminster Gazette.

ASSIST NATURE a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, and toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, biliousness, skin diseases, boils, carbuncles, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequalled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.



$20 TO $60 SAVED ON NEW BICYCLES

$125 high grade Safety $50; $100 pneu. $60; $40 cush. ball $20 etc. Largest and oldest dealers in U. S. Easy payments We sell everywhere. Catafree. Rouse, Hazard & Co., Mfrs., 4 G St., Peoria, Ill.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

PROPHECY:

A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Sores on the Neck.

I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla four years ago to cure sores on my neck and before I had used one bottle the sores had disappeared. I now take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring tonic and find it the best. J. H. ABBADUSKY, Fairview, Ill.

A UNIQUE PICTURE.

There was much interest in the N. C. A. Chart used at the World's Fair last year by Rev. J. P. Stoddard in illustrating [illegible] facts in Freemasonry.

There has been a demand for copies of it by those who saw it at the World's Fair, and who wish to use it in explaining to their neighbors different phases of the lodge question.

Hence the N. C. A. has had a photo-zinc-etching made, size 18x20 inches, which shows the Blue Lodge, York Rite, Scotch Rite, etc., and their relation one to another.

There are also seen some of the initiatory scenes in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master [illegible] This chart can be used to illustrate the system of secret societies in a variety of ways. It will be especially helpful to local lecturers and pastors of churches in explaining to people the ceremonies, oaths, prayers, religion, etc., of the lodge. The Chart is on heavy book paper, and will be sent postpaid, at your risk, for six two-cent postage stamps; or sent at our risk by registered mail for ten two-cent postage stamps.

Framed and hung upon the wall it will make a novel and attractive picture for the homes of the readers of the Cynosure.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft. Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Hopkinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Miawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D. Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Galloway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

At the Ballard camp meeting the first Sabbath, in the afternoon meeting, I preached from 2 Cor. 7:1. "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

My first proposition was that holiness requires separation from the world. (1.) Separation from secret society idolatry. 2 Cor. 6: 14–18. (2.) Separation from blind leaders and those having the form but denying the power of godliness. (3.) Separation from and non-conformity to the ungodly.

Second, that holiness requires complete separation of soul and body from sin.

And third, the acquisition of holiness is not optional with the believer. He must "perfect holiness in the fear of God."

In the discussion of the subject I raised these questions: First, can a man be a Christian whose morals would not meet the requirements of the moral sentiments of the heathen? Second, can a man be a Christian whose morals are condemned by the public sentiment of an enlightened community? Third, can a man be a Christian and live outside of the Decalogue?

I then showed that the heathen world and Mohammedan nations condemn the use of liquor and denounce and punish drunkenness. That the Hindoos, Chinese, Japanese and the savages of Africa respect the sanctity of the marriage relation.

I then made a pair of compasses, using the Ten Commandments for one part, and the Sermon on the Mount for the other part. I put down the Sermon on the Mount to fix the center point and used the Ten Commandments as the other; then drew a circle, and put the question: "Can any man live a justified life who lives outside of this circle?" Of course no one dared affirm he could. I then put down the other part of the compass and with the Sermon on the Mount drew another circle and raised the question, "Can a man enjoy sanctification and live outside of this circle?" Of course no one dared say yes.

I did not then, but the next time I will use a pair of Masonic compasses, making a circle and raise the question, "Can any man be a Christian and live inside of this circle? Of course I would read the Masonic oaths and explain that the Bible and the "holy St. John" have nothing to do with this worship of Baal-Peor; and that God refuses to have anything to do with sanctioning their blasphemous oaths inspired by Satan and executed under his direction. M. H. NICHOLS.

BADGES.

DID THE SOLDIERS FIND ONE ON THE LORD?

DEKALB, Iowa.

In wearing badges we appear more like the world; consequently in such a display, in ever so good a cause, even for a noble purpose, it is in a degree wrong. "Be ye not conformed to this world." We can nowhere in the Bible find where Christians ever set the example of wearing badges. If Christ our Saviour and perfect pattern, nor any of his followers in Bible times, did not wear badges, we had best be free from such ornamentation. We are forbidden to wear silver and gold, yet there would be no more heaven in it than wearing badges of any other material. The command is to help us to be free in our affections from any desire for outward ornament, that we may be a plain "peculiar people," zealous of good works. We should not be proud of wearing a badge, but should "avoid the very appearance of evil" in that thing, because "the devil is the father of all the children of pride." Lodges are the prolific source of badges.

The Conservator did honorable duty in knocking some of the "stuffing out of this man of straw." CYRUS SMITH.

WHAT OF THE GRANGE?

HAS THE RITUAL BEEN CHANGED?

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Can you or some reader tell me whether the Grange ritual has been altered since the exposure published by Ezra A. Cook was issued? Also, whether it is likely that a Connecticut grange uses a modified ritual?

am told that in a grange near me, the candidate in the laborer degree is not conducted through the "field of labor" described in that book. (See page 16, "Assistant Steward's Lecture.")

The chaplain of the same subordinate lodge assures me that, since I spoke of the chaplain's instruction to the candidates in the gleaner's degree (page 50), he has made a special examination of the ritual and finds that I have been misinformed. I made the objection that the name of Christ was avoided; and that this was also done by attributing his own language in the Sermon on the Mount to "them of old time," thus, also, borrowing his own phrase used in the same sermon as if to still further mislead. Also that the teaching of Christ quoted by the chaplain was followed by the remark "But have we not a better law?"

The chaplain assures me that these objections do not hold; that he has consulted the ritual itself to see if such things were there, and that his examination proves that I have been misinformed.

I have heard too much secret society talk to jump at once to the conclusion that the general ritual has been changed or that Connecticut farmers have a modified performance and talk of their own, though I think it possible that after exposure followed change. But under the circumstances, I need answers to my questions.

BROTHER JONATHAN.

PITH AND POINT.

DON'T LIKE THE STORIES OF NEGRO OUTRAGE.

The Cynosure could hardly expect to have any influence in the South while it publishes such slanderous lies about our people as the last issue [Aug. 2] contained. The South has been misrepresented long enough by the Northern press, and it is marvelous that the average Northern and Western reader should continue to credit their stories. As we of the South read in the Northern press of high moral tone (?) stories of the barbarous, brutal South, we only groan in spirit and sigh, "How long, oh Lord, how long!" It is even true that reformers need to be reformed.—REV. E. J. GATES, Callahan, Florida.

If Bro. Gates will please designate the slanderous lies he has seen, and give us reasonable evidence that they are lies, we will thank him and print the reply. It is due the Cynosure and its readers that he do so. Otherwise he will be held responsible for general railing. In the quiet and secure districts of Florida he probably knows little of the character of some parts of the South. We can send him to places where he would have trouble enough. Another Florida brother thinks better of the Cynosure below:

I think the Cynosure a very reliable paper. Having become a Mason when a student in the Ohio Wesleyan University, I thought then the order did me some good, and that the principles were good. But I long ago concluded there was danger of many Masons being satisfied with Masonry for their religion; and I think there is much truth in what you say of the order, but think there is not the credit given for the good there is in, and has been done by, Masonry. I thank you for the paper. —REV. W. F. ALEXANDER, Clermont, Fla.

OUR LABOR NOT IN VAIN.

The Cynosure has been a great help to me. I place it next to the Holy Bible, which is a foe to all sin and wickedness. The whole theme of the paper is justice, love, mercy and truth. I consider it an educator, and a Bible teacher. May it be as the Word of God, never returning void, but accomplishing its purpose. It has given me many good lessons. May God be with you.—REV. J. C. WILLIAMS.

HOW MINISTERS ARE HELPED BY CONTRIBUTORS TO THE CYNOSURE.

(From a private letter.)

If I had not been a speaker and writer myself, I might have welcomed silently the message that has this moment come to my heart, without thinking it desirable to the sender, if even suitable for me to write and thank you. But I wish you to know that "Trust in God and Do the Right," in the Cynosure of July 12, is "a word in season" to one who, though struggling and trying to keep faith and courage, was in a degree "weary". And if you have helped one, that is proof of helpfulness, giving you reason to hope that more may share. R.

GREAT DROUGHT IN CATTARAUGUS CO., S. W. NEW YORK.

I wonder if the people "out West" have heard of the terrible drought in this part of the country. With the exception of a few light showers scarcely sufficient to wet the soil, we have not had a drop of rain since the first of June. Pastures are baked brown; wells and springs are dry; Robinson's Run, which flows past our door, is entirely dry, and they say it was never dry before. It has its source in the Allegany mountains just above here. The Allegany river about half a mile from where we live is so shallow that one could wade across and scarcely wet their ankles. The dust in the streets is "knee deep". It is terrible! Of course the crops are badly injured. The fruit crop is almost ruined and potatoes will not average half a crop. Yet God is still above us all, and this old world is still a pretty good world, and he will not forsake the work of his hands.—VICTORIA A. STONE, Steamburgh, N. Y.

LITERATURE.

WHAT ORMOND THINKS. By "Ormond," author of Suggestive Essays on various subjects. Pp. 60. Price 50 c. Blakely Printing Co., Chicago.

The topic of which Ormond is thinking in this little volume is in reality the natural immortality of man. Connected with the argument on this central thought, however, are discussions on some of the most important problems of life. These are short, concise, and the method of argument simple and conclusive. As an argumentative work it is pleasant reading, though not profound or critical, or exhaustive. The topic is that "the nature of man precludes the possibility of his physical body ending his mental life." "It is the belief of some that every person who ever lived is still living; and our subject will compel us to inquire whether this belief, which is held by the great majority of the human race, is well founded." Man is a dual creature, having both a material and spiritual nature, which guarantees him a continuous life, if it can be shown that the mind is not subject to the law of death and decay. This cannot be scientifically proved, but the proof is as sactisfactory to the reason as if as clear as the multiplication table. The arguments from analogy and from consciousness or intuition may not be unfamiliar, but they are not often so simply stated. The people are suffering for truth and not for the formulas by which truth can sometimes be confirmed. It is an established fact in the minds of most people that they are alive, but the wisest man who ever walked the earth cannot explain life. Just so it is with many facts of nature; he may know they are true without the ability to demonstrate the fact." Of agnosticism Ormond well says: "Agnosticism would leave man in his grave because it couldn't accept the deductions of reason beyond the ability of science to confirm, and hence to an agnostic the future is not a reality." The spiritual is the great and leading characteristic of a man's life on earth, and yet this cannot be proved by science. The "figures that won't lie" seem not to be arranged to sum up the heights and depths and reaches of the human soul. There is no effort to force any theories or dogmas, but plain practical talks upon the great vital questions which pertain to life here and to the life hereafter.

Scribner's Magazine for September has a popular list of contributors. Mrs. James T. Fields has a chapter of very entertaining literary reminiscences of Milton, Johnson, Thackeray, Lamb and Barry Cornwall, which is fully illustrated with portraits, fac-similes, etc. Doctor Carl Lumholtz, the famous explorer, has another paper on The Tarahumari of Mexico, the American Cave Dwellers, among whom he has spent several years. The amount of information, of a curious and entertaining character, which he has packed into these articles is a tribute to his wonderful powers of observation. The illustrations are from his unique collection of photographs. The old-fashioned quilts and coverlets of our grandmothers are described by Mrs. Fanny D. Bergen, under the title "The Tapestry of the New World." It is a faithful account of an old American domestic industry. Octave Thanet concludes her popular sketches of American types with some amusing descriptions of "The People of the Cities."

The September number of McClure's Magazine is profusely illustrated and gives a popular table of contents. The last and the most valuable article is on the great irrigation and storage reservoir schemes in the Rocky mountains which promise to restore millions of acres to agricultural use and turn back the tide that sets toward our cities. Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, writes of his first book. The eminent French chemist, Professor Berthelot, in an interview with Henry J. W. Dam, sets forth the grounds of his belief that a time is coming when milk, potatoes, beef, and all the staples of human food will be supplied from the laboratories of the chemist, instead of from the fields of the farmer. In an article illustrated with some very interesting composite photographs taken by himself, Dr. H. P. Bowditch of Harvard Medical School discusses the question whether composite photographs are typical pictures. Lilienthal's flying-machine, on which all students of the problem of aerial navigation now have their attention fixed, and his latest achievements with it, are described, with numerous illustrations, by a writer who himself witnessed the achievements, and has carefully studied the machine.

THIS AND THAT.

"Well, Joseph, did you take my letter to M. de Y——?" "Yes, sir, but I am afraid he won't be able to read it, for he is blind." "Blind?" "Yes, sir; while I was standing right in front of him in his private office, he asked me twice where my hat was, and I had it on my head all the time. Ha! ha!"—Le Petit Calaisien.

The Union Signal is responsible for the following very significant statements: "In this country 2,500 women are practicing medicine, 275 preaching the Gospel, more than 6,000 managing post-offices, and over 3,000,000 earning independent incomes. Since 1880 the patent office has granted over 2,500 patents to women, and in New York City 27,000 women support their husbands."

In the United States there are 1,855 daily newspapers, 31 papers published every other day, 237 published twice a week, and 14,017 weekly newspapers. Eighty-five papers are published every two weeks, 349 are published twice a month, 3,125 every month, and 307 published every two months and every three months. There are 20,006 papers and periodicals in the United States.

Lord Rayleigh, Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge University, announced in the British Association the discovery of a hitherto unknown constituent of the atmosphere—a gas characterized by extreme inertness. He has not yet found its chemical reagent, but the density is 19 09. With Prof. Ramsey he obtained a quarter of a pint of the substance. Is this the lazy element in the air?

One of the customs of the Chinese might well be imitated by other nations. On New Year's morning every man and boy in the Celestial empire, from the emperor to the lowest peasant, pays a visit to his mother. He carries her a present, and thanks her for all she has done for him. This visit, however, is partly influenced by superstition, as the Chinese believe that their mothers have an influence over their entire lives.

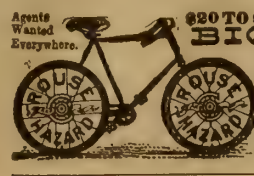
I kum to the conclusion lately that life was so unsartin that the only way for me to stand a fair chance with other folks was to get my life insured, so I kalled on the agent of the Garden Angel Life Insurance Co., and answered the following questions which were put to me, over the top of a pair of spectacles, by a slick old fellow, with a round grey head on him as ever was owned: "Are you a mail or femail? If so, state how long yu have been so. Had you a father or mother? If so, which? Are you subject to fits? and if so, du yu have more than one at a time? What is your precise fiting wate? Did you ever have any ancestors? and if so, how many? Du yu have any nitemair? Are you married or single, or are you a bachelor? Have you ever committed suicide? If so, how did it affect you?" After answering the above questions like a man in the affirmative, the slick, little, fat, old fellow, with gold spectacles on, said "I was insured fur life, and probably will remain so fur years." I thanked him, smiled and retired.—Josh Billings.

Dr. Emil Young, professor of physiology at the University of Geneva, is in great distress concerning the future of our legs. He suggests, in an essay in the Semaine Litteraire, that in the course of a thousand years the human race may have lost the necessity of the use of legs, and retain those members of the body solely as ornamental survivals. Men refuse more and more to walk, though walking is the wholesomest of physical exercise. Steam, electricity, the rope railways, tricycles and bicycles have changed the whole aspect of Swiss touring, as he says, in his own generation. "Everybody seems anxious to get everywhere any way except by the use of his legs." In another generation, he supposes, our traveling ballons will hang outside our windows, or our electrical coaches stand outside our doors. They will be produced so cheaply that every man will have his own chariot. Hence our legs will become superfluous, then they will be crippled, and shrink to hideously small dimensions, until at last they will finally disappear. Our arms, on the contrary, will correspondingly strengthen and lengthen. "While our legs remain," says Dr. Young, "let us march all we can."— Westminster Gazette.

ASSIST NATURE a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, and toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, biliousness, skin diseases, boils, carbuncles, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequalled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.



$20 TO $60 SAVED ON NEW BICYCLES

$125 high grade Safety $50; $100 pneu. $60; $40 cush. ball $20 etc. Largest and oldest dealers in U.S. Easy payments We sell everywhere. Catafree. Rouse, Hazard & Co., Mfrs., 4 G St., Peoria, Ill.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

PROPHECY:

A STUDY.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER,

A Study of Christ's Comings.

Paper Cover, 100 Pages.

Single copies, postpaid..... 25 cents.
Per 100 copies, postpaid..... $20.00.

For sale by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Sores on the Neck.

I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla four years ago to cure sores on my neck and before I had used one bottle the sores had disappeared. I now take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring tonic and find it the best. J. H. ABBADUSKY, Fairview, Ill.

A UNIQUE PICTURE.

There was much interest in the N. C. A. Chart used at the World's Fair last year by Rev. J. P. Stoddard in illustrating various facts in Freemasonry.

There has been a demand for copies of it by those who saw it at the World's Fair, and who wish to use it in explaining to their neighbors different phases of the lodge question.

Hence the N. C. A. has had a photo-zinc-etching made, size 18x20 inches, which shows the Blue Lodge, York Rite, Scotch Rite, etc., and their relation one to another.

There are also seen some of the initiatory scenes in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason. This chart can be used to illustrate the system of secret societies in a variety of ways. It will be especially helpful to local lecturers and pastors of churches in explaining to people the ceremonies, oaths, prayers, religion, etc., of the lodge. The Chart is on heavy book paper, and will be sent postpaid, at your risk, for six two-cent postage stamps; or sent at our risk by registered mail for ten two-cent postage stamps.

Framed and hung upon the wall it will make a novel and attractive picture for the homes of the readers of the Cynosure.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 25 cents per pound:

1. National Christian Association.
1½. Testimony of Statesmen.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
19. Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Dr. Nathaniel Colver on Masonry.
30. Masonic Oaths Null and Void.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
41. Freemasonry a Religion.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

Families, Churches, Senates, Juries and Camps.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—25 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NORTHERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. W. Fenton, 74 South Robert St., St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath, Oregon.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
J. K. Glassford, Phoenix, Arizona.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Wilsonville, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Ft. Wayne, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
A. W. Parry, Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for refence.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Oak Park, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. C. Ranseen, 79 West Huron Street, Chicago.

GEN'L SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. Mary C. Baker, 108 Franklin Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, A. G. Johnson, J. P. Richards, E. Whipple, Edgar B. Wylie, H. F. Kletzing, J. A. Collins, W. O. Dinius.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant; Vice-president, S. C. Kimball; Sec'y, D. B. Gunn.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. R. W. Chesnut Marissa; Sec., Rev. J. R. Wylie, Coulterville; Treas., Rev. W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., Rev. J. A. Greer, Columbus City; Sec., Rev. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton; Treas., Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Joseph A. Torrence, Denison.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., Rev. W. I. Brooks Pawnee City; Vice Pres., Rev. C. G. Widen Mead; Sec., Howard P. Young, Wahoo Treas., Rev. T. H. Dabney, Hooper.

MAINE.—Pres., ——— ———, ——— Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles, Treas. Wm. H. Morrill St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., J. F. Beauchamp, Denver; Sec., M. N. Butler, Darlington; Treas. Rev. C. G. Cox, Grant City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Robt. A. Frohock, Alton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Rev. S. R. Wallace Syracuse; Sec., Rev. W. H. Clark, Binghamton; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

OREGON.—Pres., Rev. Wm. Dillon, D.D. Salem; Sec., Rev. P. B. Williams, Philomath; Treas., Samuel Terry, Canby.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Samuel S. Collins, Allegheny; Sec., J. S. T. Milligan, Beaver; Treas., Edwin P Sellew, Philadelphia.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. B. Gaoway, Poynette; Sec., Isaiah Faris, Vernon; Treas J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

The Christian Cynosure.

HENRY L. KELLOGG - - - EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1894.

THE PACIFIC COAST ANNIVERSARY.

The annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of moral reform will be held Sept. 26th and 27th, 1894, at Philomath, Benton county, Oregon. All persons and communities interested in our reform work should be represented.

WM. DILLON, President. P. B. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

OF INTEREST to all readers it will be to know that the Sunset Club debate is now complete so far as the speeches on that occasion are concerned. Several addresses were crowded out of the general discussion for lack of time. These are promised for next week.—Every reader will welcome the New England letter after Miss Flagg's brief vacation.—Attention is deservedly called to the argument of Bro. Hinman for a first place for Christian morality in the list of factors that make the wealth of a nation. The cry of Debs, George, and like agitators is that labor alone has this credit.—Freedom of action and of discussion has of late been a frequent theme. Rev. J. M. Foster clearly defines Christian freedom; he also gives a helpful exposition of the Bible lesson.—The saloon-and-lodge question has some points worth noting in correspondence and and temperance department.

GOD SAVE THE STATE!—A paper, just started by some order in the National capital, called the United American, stands ona plank that makes its name funny. It advocates the separation of church and state, which in lodge language means "Down with Rome!" This American is evidently "united," therefore, neither to church nor state but to secretism. We understand the nature of this new organ from the fact that it calls over a long list of societies, most of them secret, and says they are "Patriotic American" organizations. This is the list:

The American Protective Association,
Patriotic Sons of America,
Junior Order U. A. M.,
American Alliance,
American Defense Association,
American Patriotic League,
American Protective League,
American Protestant Association,
American Secular Union,
American Patriotic Union,
Boston Committee of One Hundred,
Brotherhood of the Union,
Colonial Dames of America,
Order of Columbia,
Daughters of the American Revolution,
Daughters of Liberty,
Huguenot Society of America,
Independent Order of Americans,
Knights of Columbia,
Loyal Orange Institution,
Loyal Sons of America,
National Order of Videttes,
National British-American Association,
Order of True Americans,
Order of the American Eagle,
Order of the American Star,
Order of the American Union,
Sons of the American Revolution,
United American Mechanics,
United States Americans.

These societies are for the "preservation and perpetuation of our free institutions." It is doubtful if institutions that need such an army of boosters is worth preserving. We mean nothing derogatory to several honorable organizations named above. As for the others, we pray, "God save the State" from all such.

A ROCKFORD PASTOR ON THE A. P. A.—Rev. Dr. C. H. Moscrip, the well-esteemed pastor of the West Side Baptist church at Rockford, Ill., is quite in sympathy with our effort to turn the hearts of the young men of America away from the lodge to Christ. In a late article in the Standard of this city he discusses the attitude of the preacher of the Word toward Romanism. Rockford has been a battleground for the A. P. A., and the order is powerful in city politics, since it poses as the representative of the strong anti-Catholic influence of the great Swedish Lutheran churches of the city. Nevertheless Dr. Moscrip objects emphatically to the methods of the A. P. A., and says:

"We cannot join this crusade because in so doing we put ourselves under the control of a secret and worldly organization. The right of a Christian to join this organization is not here discussed. How far we may go in our attempts to overcome unrighteous craft by righteous indirections, I leave for others to decide. Just what is asserted here is that the organization known as the A. P. A., a secret, worldly, political power, controls in all activities against Romanism. Many men who join it and whose influence is decisive in its councils are as truly the enemies of true religion as they are of Roman Cahtholicism. They rule the organization, so far as its contact with Christianity is concerned, and the organization rules in the movement. Activity under the direction of the A. P. A. or in sympathy with it means betrayal of our Lord's trust committed to our charge."

Truer words respecting this Jesuitical anti-Jesuit movement have seldom been spoken.

PULLMAN RELIEF.—The College church of Wheaton having voted $25 to the Pullman sufferers it was entrusted to Secretary W. I. Phillips of the N. C. A. for distribution. Following the illustrious example of the Governor of Illinois, he visited Pullman in person. He found plenty of destitution, but such cases of improvidence and folly as very much dulled the edge of his sympathy. The Salvation Army is doing honest and faithful work in the distribution of aid. The strikers were eager to take the work out of the hands of the army, but did not succeed. Later it developed that Heathcote, the Am. Railway Union leader, and his ring were at work to keep the supplies for the members of the union only, leaving other more worthy families to starve. They have not yet succeeded; but the effort is in keeping with the universal character of the lodge. Selfishness is its beginning, midst and end. The Cynosure expects an article from Rev. H. O. Lindeblad, pastor of the Lutheran church in Pullman, giving his views of the strike. He testified before the U. S. Commission last week that the A. R. U. was the cause of the strike. Difficulties between the Company and the men might have been settled but for Debs and his order.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS AT WASHINGTON.

The general gathering of this secret order at Washington so soon after its incorporation by special act of Congress, is receiving general attention from the press. The "supreme lodge" began its meetings early last week and had not adjourned on Tuesday. Attending this body are thousands of members of the order who have no part in its deliberations but come together for a grand parade and general spree in honor of their tutelar deities, the mythical Damon and Pythias. A great camp was pitched in the vicinity of Washington monument and dancing, banqueting, prize drills, etc., have filled up the time.

This order has no "Ancient" falsehood joined to its name, for it was organized in Washington in 1864 by J. H. Rathbone, who conceived the scheme during the closing days of the war. Many volunteers joined the Freemasons on leaving for the army, and thousands had no desire to go on with the lodge when they returned. Many others knew so little of the ritual that they could not get into a lodge. The new order was planned to catch these back-sliders from lodgery, and provide degrees with a martial name to captivate their ear. This order is in every way a cheaper affair than Knight Templar Masonry, but its managers, finding the spirit of caste unsatisfied with the three degrees of "Page" "Esquire" and "Knight", an "amplified" third rank was first adopted, and this grew into what is called the "Uniform" rank; that is, a degree which is clad in a uniform. This rank is expanded into an "army" and the terms and method of division used in the United States army have been stolen by this irresponsible body of men.

The secret initiatory ceremonies of this secret lodge have been changed several times. The last ritual was adopted in 1892. A copy was soon published by Ezra A. Cook for all men to read. Part of the business of the present meeting is a new ritual for the uniform rank.

August 1, a secret committee meeting was held in Milwaukee, to prepare a revision of the K. of P. constitution. Congressman George B. Shaw of Eau Claire, Wis., was its chairman. This committee reported for sweeping changes and a complete revision of the constitution. The titles of the officers should simply be President, Vice-President, Secretaries, and Treasurer. The executive power should be in the President, the Senate to be the governing power, and a tribunal to consist of judges, who shall try all disputes which may arise in the order. The ritual was also revised and modernized by the committee.

How much of this report will be adopted remains to be seen. This lodge has an army of its own modeled after the United States army; it proposes a government of its own modeled after the National Government. Perhaps some day it intends to push the old one out and slip in its own before any one knows it. This secret lodge has already wheedled an act of incorporation out of Congress, so they can kick out the colored "brother,"—whose name may be Damon all the same however. These colored "brethren" held an enthusiastic meeting at Indianapolis two weeks ago. They number 15,000 and know how to have grand parades as well as the whites, and have as good a right.

The official reports already given make the present membership of the order 443,615 in 6,008 subordinate lodges. This is said to be a net gain of 29,000. The amount in the lodge treasuries last January was $2,000,000 and the total assets are a little over $7,000,000. The amount paid for all sorts of relief in 1893 was $1,205,000; this included the payments for life insurance or "death benefits." The uniformed rank reports a membership of 43,000.

The women question is a vexatious one for these pseudo "Knights." It used to be of the real Knights. The old stories make them always hacking and stabbing one another for the sake of some lady love. In 1888 the Supreme Lodge gave the women the right to organize and use the name Pythian. The whole story is one of humiliation to the cause of woman. Two societies were begun within a few months of each other: the "Pythian Sisterhood" and the "Pythian Sisters of the World." The Sisters of the World seem to have superior charms, perhaps because of their all-embracing title. Both societies were so eager in their effort for recognition that the male order was disgusted and in 1892 voted to have no more to do with either. They are both on hand again, however.

THE SALOON QUESTION.

Reports of committees on legislation and ritual have a settlement this week. The recommendation that saloon-keepers and bar-tenders be no longer received as members meets a volley of protests. Under authority from the "Supreme" lodge several State bodies have legislated against this class of risks. As the K. of P. is a kind of insurance body, and regular insurance bodies have generally made an extra rate for men in such dangerous employment, the movement has no moral character about it whatever. It is simply good business. The members of the order are good patrons of the saloon as our Washington letter suggests. But bar-keepers are in dangerous business.

One of the high officials in a very profuse speech on the case says the exclusion must be made "in the interest of law, order, morality, respectability," etc. Then why was it not made at first. Saloon-keeping was as vile a business thirty years ago as now. This Supreme Chancellor claims, however, with a great parade of dignity, "that the time has come when we, as a great fraternity, should put aside policy, expediency, or any other question of doubt that may stand in the way, and declare ourselves the leaders of reform by manfully facing this question and declaring that no saloon-keeper, bar-tender or professional gambler shall hereafter be considered as eligible to apply for membership in any lodge of our order. Nearly all of our disorders, Sunday desecration and insubordination have come from this element, which seems to delight in the cultivation of lawlessness and hoodlum habits."

The real reason for this spasm of virtue is, however, the expense of this class when the death "benefits" are paid; and the fact of their unpopularity which reflects upon the order. The question of the criminality of their lives cuts little or no figure.

One of the Presbyterian ministers of Washington advertised his fellowship with "the world the flesh and the devil" a week ago Sabbath by coming into his pulpit clad in the full regalia of the "Uniformed Rank" of the K. of P., sword and all, and pretended to preach a Gospel sermon. The performance was looked upon by many amazed eyes and not a few regarded it justly as blasphemous.

When the conclusion is reached on the important changes noted above we shall speak further of this meeting.

THE CORRUPTERS OF CITIZENSHIP.

The lodge celebration in Washington is made the occasion of frequent praise by the press. The alleged fraternity, the display of numbers, the influence of money and of unlawful oaths, have so affected the American press that it has too generally become blind to facts that should be obvious to every patriotic and intelligent man.

Such an instance is the Kansas City Star, which says of the Knights of Pythias meeting in Washington:

"The meeting of this great fraternal order at the capital of the nation is a reminder of the national character possessed by the society in common with all our greater benevolent organizations. The Masons, the Odd-fellows, all the older fraternities, are as wide in their jurisdiction as the country itself, and cannot fail to strengthen the ties that bind together the body of American citizenship."

Members of these orders may or may not be good citizens, but if they are such, it is not because of special obligations that they have taken. But the idea that "they cannot fail to strengthen the ties that bind together the body of American citizenship," is the very reverse of the truth. Every secret society, bound together by extraordinary obligations to each other from the real or supposed benefits of which not only all other societies but the great mass of citizens is excluded, is not a bond of union, but an evidence of separation—of divided, if not of opposing interests. In many instances it amounts to a practical conspiracy against society.

The multiplication of these orders is the multiplication of opposing interests and tends to the disintegration of the body politic. The trades unions that combine against capitalists, and the G. A. R. which brings its power to bear on Congressmen to secure extravagant pension laws, and often to secure unjust pensions under existing laws, are examples of societies which, if not so intended have practically become conspiracies. The Freemasons and Odd-fellows do nothing to promote morality or good citizenship. That is not even one of their professed objects. They not only alienate citizens from each other, but especially they tend to alienate them from the church of Christ in which only is the hope of the world. There is but one unifying principle—one ground of perfect brotherhood and of good citizenship, and that is in the Gospel of Christ. Over against this is the dividing and disintegrating principle of human selfishness, which finds its expression in the multiplication of human fraternities.

THE STRIKE INQUIRY.

The commission, appointed by the President to investigate and report on the Pullman strike and the Debs boycott, adjourned last Thursday. They meet in Washington Sept. 26, to prepare their report. This will not be ready for several weeks more, for the testimony taken covers some 2,000 pages. By that time our recollection of the great sympathetic strike will be dim; but the facts and opinions put on record by the examination will be permanently useful.

The leaders of the strike and the boycott, as well as Mr. Pullman and his managers, were on the stand. The judgment of prominent railway men was asked, the opinion of pastors whose churches were affected by the strike was taken, and workingmen by the dozen were telling their story to the world, through the commission, for weeks.

It was proved that some of the Am. Railway Union leaders had urged violent and incendiary measures. Debs advocated on the stand a revolution of society and government. Gompers claimed that labor is the sole producer and should be sole owner of the product, but did not remember that capital was also labor in another form, labor accumulated. The managers of the Pullman Company did not arouse any enthusiasm for their case; but, as we feared, have made so little application of the Golden Rule that rebellion was promoted among turbulent spirits. The responsibility of the saloon and the secret lodge for the strike, the boycott, and all the cumulating train of disasters, was established by good evidence.

The opinion of Mr. Egan, that railway men should be examined and licensed by government, was an important suggestion. The plan outlined would make both railway managers and men responsible to each other and to the public, and would also provide a simple insurance or "benefit" scheme which would give the secret union no excuse for existing.

The examiners gained universal praise for the impartial and thorough manner of conducting the inquiry. Such investigations will hereafter be more popular. Their report promises to greatly aid us in settling some of the vexing questions that agitate the laboring classes.

—An interesting discussion is going on in the columns of the Wesleyan Methodist on alleged virtues of the Masonic order.

—The small proportion of the workingmen of Chicago organized in labor unions undertook a long street parade and picnic for "Labor" day—Monday. A fine rain, very welcome to the rest of the world, marred their plan and sent thousands dripping to their homes.

—At Kishwaukee, Ill., the Wesleyan church closed a quarterly meeting on the Sabbath with excellent discourses from Rev. J. L. Clark, the State conference evangelist, and Miss Elsie S. Dow of Wheaton College faculty. The Illinois conference met with this church two years ago, and the opening sermon was preached by the N. C. A. corresponding secretary on the vital issues of our reform in respect to the church of Christ.

—Our brother of the Wesleyan Methodist some time since criticised an article from a New England pastor, published in these columns, and argued that the publication showed something like heresy lurking about this office. Now comes the Catholic Review and calls the Cynosure, after reading it for some time, "a Methodist organ published weekly in Chicago." We do not care to enter into this controversy as to whether we are Methodist or anti-Methodist. If Bro. Jennings will settle it with the Review we will be thankful.

—A correspondent asks after the grange ritual. We are unable to answer, and pass the question along to the Cynosure readers. When the ritual was published some twenty years ago, it was reprinted from official documents. The grange has for many years been nearly lifeless. In a few sections it may remain as a lingering reminiscence. It has been so little in public notice that the ritual of initiation might have been changed a dozen times without any care from the public, which has something else to do than watch for signs of life from the lopped-off limbs of lodgery.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bro. Hugh Cork, a recent graduate of Wheaton College, has been engaged as corresponding and field secretary by the State Sabbath-school Association of North Dakota.

—Prof. J. G. Thompson, brother of Pres. Thompson, of Tarkio College, Missouri, has accepted an appointment to the chair of mathematics in Cooper Memorial College, Sterling, Kansas.

—Miss E. E. Flagg has written another volume, entitled, "A Prisoner of Hope," which will be published in Boston. She is nobly caring for her aged and invalid father, and has to have constant assistance.

—Rev. J. N. Brandelle, the young Lutheran pastor who assisted the editor of the Cynosure in the first anti-secrecy meetings held in Denver in 1886, is now preaching in the Swedish Lutheran church at Lynn, Mass.

—It is announced that Major General O. O. Howard will soon retire from active service in the army. This will create the first vacancy in the rank of major generals since the death of General Crook, some years ago. General Howard has been the Havelock of the American army.

—Rev. A. J. McFarland of St. Johns, New Brunswick, is giving part of his pastoral year to a wider promotion of the Covenanter principle of testimony-bearing for the honor of Christ as ruler among nations. He has visited many churches in the province, and a few days ago came over into Vermont, where he is speaking among the churches of Barnet, E. Craftsbury and vicinity. His appeal to the churches in favor of political dissent is very kindly received by all classes of Christians.

—Our old friend S. Heaton, so long identified with the reformation of Iowa from the saloon and the lodge, offers his paper, the Iowa Voter, of Cedar Rapids, for sale. The infirmities of age compel him reluctantly to take this step. The Voter is an uncompromising antagonist of the saloon. May its publication pass into worthy hands.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The British and Foreign Bible Society began the year with a debt of $100 and ends it with a surplus of $50,000, which, it is reported, can only be said of this one religious society in all Great Britain this year of hard times.

—There are, it is reported, 42,877 Lutheran churches in the world—9,721 in America, 22,500 in Germany, 2,514 in Sweden, 1,900 in Denmark, 960 in Norway. These churches support 30,346 clergymen and have a total enrollment of 53,080,000 baptized members.

—The Methodist Episcopal church in Corea has twenty-two missionaries, native and foreign. The mission has been established only a few years, and has about 250 members, but it sustains a theological school, two high schools, churches and parsonages, in all worth about $50,000.

—Rev. J. D. Irons, D.D., late president of Muskingum College, New Concord, has informed the Wooster, Ohio, congregation that he will accept the call to that charge. The congregation has been vacant since Dr. John A. Wilson resigned to accept a chair in the Allegheny Theological Seminary.

—Of the different religious denominations, the Congregationalists have shown the greatest interest in the education of the colored people of the South. The sums donated by them at various times have amounted to $12,000,000. The Methodists have contributed $6,000,000, and the Baptists $3,000,000.

—Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, has for the last six years supported Rev. Mr. Mansell as a missionary. He is now president of the Methodist Episcopal College at Lucknow, India. The students of DePauw University, Greensville, Ind., support a graduate who is now vice-president of Lucknow College. The First Congregational Church of Toledo, Ohio, claims an interest in five missionaries in the home and foreign fields and supports them by liberal gifts.

—Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, is expected to supply the pulpit for a year of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Albany, made vacant by the acceptance of the presidency of Union College by the Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond. The days of revival enjoyed by the church during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Edward N. Kirk, sixty years ago, may be renewed. Mr. Mill's engagement is for one year only, and he will probably return to his work as an evangelist.

—Rev. Peter Stanford, pastor of Wilberforce Memorial church, Birmingham, Eng., is a Negro, and was born a slave at Hampton, Va., in 1859. After the war he was a bootblack and waiter in a New York restaurant, when he was converted at one of the Moody and Sankey meetings in 1874. He resolved to become a preacher to his people and obtained a position as yard boy at Suffield institution at Suffield, Conn. Here he became a student, and through the influence of Henry Ward Beecher and other friends he was enabled to complete his course. He went to England in 1883.

—According to the latest reports the Salvation Army presents the following stupendous facts: Corps and outposts, 7,397; training garrisons, 66; slum posts, 64; rescue homes, 49; prison-gate homes, 12; homes of rest, 24; food and shelter depots, 53; factories and labor bureaus, 32; farm colonies, 5; number of officers, 10,874; social officers, 443; rescue officers, 288; slum officers, 186; farm colony officers, 87; War Crys sold weekly, 580,532; Young Soldiers sold weekly, 147,582; magazines monthly, 114,990; the report for the United States shows 114 corps and outposts, 14 slum posts, 5 rescue homes, 5 food and shelter depots, and 1,634 officers.

—A new Gospel ship, called the Morning Star, is being fitted out in an Illinois Central slip in this city. It is a steamer of the stern-wheel type, which is hardly ever seen on the lakes, and is going south on the Mississippi, where the missionaries, who will live on board, will labor among the Negroes. The two missionaries are W. T. Palmer and J. E. White. The steamer is wide and shallow and has almost no sheer. She is constructed on the style of river craft and is 84 feet long, 17 feet beam, and draws 12 inches forward, and 6 aft. On top of the cabin the space is arranged for a meeting room, which holds 200 people. The boat has been built and fitted out by the two missionaries from money raised by selling publications of a religious nature. If their efforts among the Negroes are successful, they propose to buy land and start a colored industrial school, teaching the Negroes how to till the land.

THE HOME.

"AS ONE WHO SERVES."

It was after a meetin', four years back,
In the revival time;
The night was windy and bleak and black,
The hills were awful to climb;
But every seat was crowded so
That the men folks had to stand,
And all in a hush we rose to go,
For the Lord was nigh at hand.

I've never forgotten how Brother Hall
Spoke out at the very end;
His words were mighty, like those of Paul,
And I felt the Spirit descend.
But as we drove through the shifting storm—
Jacob and I alone—
My heart, that had been so glad and warm,
Grew cold and dead as a stone.

I thought of the stars in our pastor's crown,
Of the days that he spent with God—
The very work that our Lord laid down,
The very path that he trod.
Then I thought of the life that I have to live,
The life to which I am tied,
And only a woman's work to give
To the Saviour until I died.

Then, just as my heart came nigh to break,
It came to me full and clear,
There were those who lived for his comfort's sake
While he was sojournin' here.
His human life to our minds seems dim,
Like a far-off heavenly dream,
But somebody had to make for him
The garment without a seam!

After the long, long mountain fast,
When he prayed for his heart's desire,
He came from the chill of the night at last
For slumber and food and fire.
I think that Martha prepared his bed
With a thrifty housewife's care,
That he might find for his weary head
A rest and a welcome there.

Oh, how I wished he had come to me!
And then, from his spoken word,
I knew that I, too, in my home might be
A minister of the Lord.
For I've not the gift of a ready speech,
And my work is of every day,
But I'll make the everyday comfort reach
Straight into his children's way.

And, as I whispered a prayer to heaven,
The wind from the hills went down,
And I thought: "If I'm servin', I'll be forgiven
For the lack of stars in my crown.
My home is Christ's" And I raised my eyes,
But, will you believe it! far
Above our roofs, in the breakin' skies,
Shone his answer to me—a star.

—Congregationalist.

A PASTURE WITH A ROCK IN IT.

(Annie Trumbull Slosson, in the S. S. Times.)

"No, I don't go away summers," said good old Aunt Abby. "Oh, yes, I know; most folks do, the best off folks,—ministers and all. And they tell me I'd ought to go; say its refreshing and wakening and lifting and broadening. The church at the Hollow, and the one at the East road, and Mr. Edwards', all shut up for three weeks at a time in warm weather; and we don't have any Sabbath-school at all in July and August.

"Mr. Edwards says he gets more strength of body and mind, more help for his work and points for his sermons, in his vacation at the seashore or the mountains than in all the year besides. I dare say. But I don't exactly see my way to going; there are things to see to here, and it costs something even at the cheapest places. And I've got a way of my own of having a vacation. I don't know but after all I'm lifted and broadened and strengthened as much, and get as many points out of it, as the rest with all their traveling. Maybe you'll smile when I tell you where I go, and what kind of a place it is. It's nothing in the world but a pasture with a rock in it.

"It isn't half a mile from my house, though I'm right in the busiest part of Factoryville, you know. You go down to the bobbin-mill, and then along north as far as Giles' store; then you turn to the left, and keep right straight ahead. And there 'tis,—a good bit of pasture land, and a big bowlder nigh about the middle of it.

"I came upon it two years ago. I hadn't [illegible]e long, and wasn't used to a big bustling town like this; and when hot weather came I did just ache for fresh air and growing things and woodsy places.

"I went out one day, and walked and walked, trying to find big trees and bushes and such things. By and by I saw something green ahead, and 'twas this. I stopped at the rail fence, and looked over. Just at first it didn't seem very inviting when I thought of the woods at my old home, all dark and cool, with soft, wet moss for your feet to step on, and brooks running along; and I says to myself, but out aloud, 'It's nothing in the world but a pasture with a rock in it.'

"Well, do you know I hadn't more than spoke those words than I seemed to see a wonderful meaning in them. I forgot all about the heat and the dusty road, and I crawled through the rails and went over to the bowlder and sat down on the grass, and I began to think. 'Why,' I went on to myself, 'what's religion, when you think of it, or, come to that, what's heaven itself, any more than that,—a pasture with a rock in it? I began to love that place right then and there. I can't tell you what it's been to me, and all the thinking and help and brand-new light I've found there. Points for sermons! Why, it's just bristly with them. I find a fresh one every time I go, and I haven't near come to the end yet.

"Some days I'll be so tired I can't do a mortal thing but just stretch myself full length out on the grass and keep still, and then'll come into my head that verse out of mother's favorite Psalm—I guess 'twas your mother's too, 'tis most folk's mother's—about 'He maketh me to lie down in green pastures.' Deary me! I don't want a better sermon; and again I'll get to looking at the grass. There's red-top, and timothy, and a little herd's grass there, and it looks so pretty, shaking in the wind. And I recollect how our Lord took notice of all such little things. 'If God so clothe the grass of the field,' you know; and, before I know it, that's led me off into the most comforting, beautiful thinking.

"And then there's the rock; I can't hardly talk much about that, but you know what I mean. 'Green fields beyond the swelling flood,' as mother used to sing, is all sightly and beautiful; but, after all, it's the Rock up there that's such a thing to lean on and look to. And down here in this world, too, lying down in green pastures and watching the grass is nice and comforting in fair days; but come to storms and rough weather, a rock is what we want after all.

"I believe I get more points out of that bowlder than I do out of the pasture. In a hot afternoon I get on the east side of it in the shade, and then I think of the 'man that shall be the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.' Sometimes there comes up a storm with such pouring rain, and I creep under the lee of that bowlder, and keep safe and dry. And then I am sure to get thinking of the 'strong rock for a house of defense,' and of father's hymn,

'Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee.'

"Sometimes it's Moses hiding away in the rock to watch the Lord pass by; again it's the rod bringing water out of the rock; and lots of times it's about that tomb hewn out of a rock, that new sepulchre in a garden wherein was never man yet laid. Or by spells I think of David keeping his father's sheep, and leading them out in the pastures; or Isaac going out into the fields at eventide, and that beautiful story of the shepherds abiding in the fields around Bethlehem.

"But after all, I come back most times to the thing itself, just as it struck me the first time I ever saw it,—a pasture with a rock in it. So I don't go away in warm weather, and I never expect to now. For I'm getting on in years, and there's plenty of things in my own little watering-place here to last as long as I shall for points to think about, and for strengthening and lifting and widening. It won't be long, at the most, before I go away for good some summer. I shall be satisfied when I wake up there; but I can't help hoping the place will be a little like a pasture, and I'm certain sure there'll be a Rock in it."

A Scottish minister, in a provincial town, startled his congregation by an announcement recently. He could not be brought to see the beauty of bazars, and had a conflict of opinion with his church managers on the point. He called the whole affair gambling. Nevertheless, the church debt had to be lifted, and the good man yielded, and announced the hateful thing from the pulpit on Sunday, as follows: "You are aware that there is a considerable amount of debt hanging over this congregation. Now, we have tried several means to raise the money, but without success. And the opinion of the managers and others is, that as we have exhausted every honest means of raising the money, there is nothing left but to have a bazar."—Ex.

NOT YOURS, BUT YOU.

There was an old Negro woman, some twenty years ago, in North Carolina, who was called by Union prisoners, and Confederate conscripts as well, "Cheer up, Honeys," and "Glory Day." Sometimes they called her by one name, and sometimes by the other, but generally by both, as a kind of double description of the humble saint. Because every day, when prisoners were marched into the stockade, or conscripts were halted within her reach, she stood at the gate or hobbled along the line of worn-out and suffering men, and with the music of Christ's own sympathy in her voice she cried in the ears of all: "Cheer up, honeys, glory day is coming!" How she refreshed them! Why, they coined a laugh out of their sorrows with the very name with which they saluted her.

There are wants of the soul and hunger of spirit which can never be satisfied with the bread which one may purchase. There is a loneliness of heart which no fullness of material resources can remove. There are wounds and bruises of men, of women and of children that must have something better than pence, that furnish oil and wine for the victim half dead by the wayside. There are sorrows where contributions can only be a mockery and the adding of chains to the captive. Nicodemus does well to bring his costly gifts of spices and fine linen for the burial. But what has he of cheer and sympathy for his suffering Lord? It would have been better, Nicodemus, if you had last night followed the Nazarene to the olive garden, and helped the disciples to watch, and brought them refreshment when their hearts were so heavy with sorrow that they could not do their duty. Joseph, the rich Arimathean, does well to open his new tomb, prepared at so much cost, and give the body of his Lord a resting-place away from the public gaze. But will he bring gold to the weary sufferer on the cross or to God's Lamb that has fallen in the street? It would have been better, Joseph, had you gone down into that howling mob and helped to bear the cross with your stronger shoulder; or if you had taken your place along with John and Mary and the other woman, where the dying sacrifice might be refreshed by your presence.

There are sufferers who need us, not ours. They are abundant, and all about us. They may be found where least we are looking for them, and with the smallest effort we may refresh them with all the fresh air they need.

Years ago, one dark, blustering night, I was awakened in the middle of the night by a warm little hand which was gently pressed upon my face. I reached out in the darkness and found my precious little boy whom long since God took to himself. He was standing by my bed and trying to lay his head beside mine on my pillow. I said: "My dear boy, what is the matter? Why are you out of your bed? What is the matter?"

He answered in a whisper, "Nothing, papa."

"But what do you want?" I said.

"I want you," he answered, with a little sob that shook his body, and very soon shook mine. He soon grew quiet, and I said: "My child, are you sick?"

"No," he said.

"Are you hungry? Don't you want something?"

"No," he said, with his lips pressed to my ear; "I just want you; it is so dark."

Brethren, there are thousands of God's lonely children that have crept from their resting-place and are wandering in the dark; and it is so dark. They want you. They want nothing but you. Give yourself to them. How near to God they will bring you if you search them out diligently and refresh them! Their prayers will crowd the gates of God's mercy and bring you mercy in that day. God help us all to refresh his needy ones.—Rev. S. C. Logan, D. D., in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

TEMPERANCE.

LODGES SWAMPED BY LIQUOR.

The Supreme Medical Examiner of the Knights of Honor says: "In my opinion our order is threatened by more seriously than by the drinking habit. It is a hydra-headed monster which bodes no good to the order. I find it almost impossible to get accurate and trustworthy information in regard to applicants upon this point. Many are doubtless admitted to the order who should be debarred. Greater care and diligence is in this regard imperatively demanded. This applies in some cases to lodge medical examiners, but more particularly to investigating committees and individual members of the subordinate lodges.

NO ONE THING

"It is only when the members of the order come to understand that every time a drinker is admitted they will have to pay additional assessments on his account, that we can hope to successfully cope with this danger, and eradicate it root and branch. 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.' The increased number of assessments has been the price paid for a lack of it on the part of our members to guard the order against the man who drinks. I can find no record of an expulsion from the order for inebriety, but find a considerable number of deaths from alcoholism, delirium tremens, etc.

"These do not by any means reveal the extent of our death rate from alcohol. Gastritis, Bright's disease, cirrhosis of liver, sun stroke, heart disease, apoplexy, etc., are given as the cause of death, when in reality the death was directly or indirectly due to the long continued and steady use of alcoholic beverages. While all these diseases may occur in men who do not drink, yet they are so often superinduced by an excessive or continued use of alcohol that their frequent occurrence in our order is enough to make every such death a fresh warning against admitting men who use alcohol to any considerable extent.

"I do not mean that we should admit teetotallers only, but I do mean that we should admit temperate men only, and that we must take steps to rid our rolls of those who are imposing upon the order by killing themselves in this way. Some steps should be taken to compel the lodges to enforce the law enacted for the purpose of purging themselves of men who indulge to excess. We have a law excluding bartenders, and it is a wise provision; but we should take greater care to keep out the man who stands too much in front of the bar, as well as him who dispenses the beverage.

"There is nothing in our law to exclude brewery men, or men employed in the various branches of that business. I regard them as anything but good risks, and statistics will bear me out in the assertion that the mortality amongst men employed in and about breweries is far above the average. We are not lacking in evidence of this fact from our own death list."

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Brigham Young of Salt Lake City, Utah, who is supposed to be a descendant of the famous Mormon apostle, was locked up in the third precinct police station, Jersey City, for making overtures to Jersey City young women. Policeman A. Wohlben caught Young in the act. The prisoner said he had been drinking and was looking for a wife. He declared he came from Salt Lake City, and that he was one of the Latter Day Saints. When asked how many wives he had he smiled and replied that he could not remember them all. Young claims he was expelled from the Mormon society because he preferred rum to religion. He is 53 years old.

No political party has the right to expect the support of Christian men so long as that party stands committed to the license policy, or refuses to put itself on record against the saloon.—Presbyterian General Assembly.

The devil's best time for making hay is when the Christians are not busy.

It often happens that a dog without teeth barks the most.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

LESSON XII.—Third Quarter, 1894, Sept. 16.

SUBJECT.—Jesus at Jacob's well.—John 4: 9-26.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst.—John 4: 14.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 4: 5-15. T.—John 4: 16-26. W.—John 4: 27-42. Th.—Isaiah 55: 9-7. F.—John 7: 28-39. S.—Rev. 22: 1-7 Su. Rev. 22: 8-17.

NOTES BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

In the revolt of the ten tribes from the house of David, Samaria became idolatrous, and continued so until the Assyrian captivity. Colonists brought by the conqueror occupied the deserted land. They brought their idols, and united their heathen rites with the worship of the true God as taught them by the Israelite priests. The result was a strange medley. "They feared Jehovah and served graven images." 2 Kings 17.

These Samaritans were the bitterest opponents of the Jews in re-building Jerusalem and the temple. Manasseh, the son of Judah, the high priest in Jerusalem, married the daughter of Sanballet, the chief of Samaria. The Jews demanded that he repudiate his wife. This he refused to do, and fled to his father-in-law, who received him with royal honors; and with the permission of Alexander the Great, built a temple on Mount Gerizim, and made him the high priest. This intensified the bitter hatred between the Jews and Samaritans. "The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.

Into this country Christ and his disciples came. At noon they reached Jacob's well, near Sychar. This was the parcel of ground purchased by Jacob from the sons of Hamor, which he gave to his son Joseph. The fatigue of the journey and the intense heat made the Saviour faint and weary, "and he sat thus on the well," while his disciples went into the village to buy food. While they were gone a woman of Samaria came to draw water. He asked her: "Give me to drink?" She was surprised at this request. She knew the teachings of the Rabbins: "It is forbidden to eat the flesh or to drink the wine of a Samaritan. If a Jew receive a Samaritan into his house or in any way minister to him, he shall cause the children to be led into captivity. To eat the bread of a Samaritan is as if he ate swine's flesh." No wonder she expressed her astonishment. "How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria?"

"The gift of God" is perfect salvation, including deliverance from the guilt of sin by the atonement of Christ, deliverance from the power and pollution of sin by the grace of Christ, and a title to the perfect holy happiness of the redeemed in glory. "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." But a veil was upon her heart. She understood his words literally; so she said: "Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep; from whence then hast thou that living water? Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?" Jacob knew this country well. He selected this spot and sunk the well. Do you know of springs in this neighborhood of which he was ignorant? Your language implies that you are greater than Jacob, which I very much doubt!

By "the water" in Christ's reply some understand the gift of the Spirit. The pure river of the water of life proceeded out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. The Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son. But "the water" spoken of is "the gift of God" and includes the perfect salvation. The woman can see only a literal meaning, but suspects that she does not understand. So she said, perhaps in sarcasm: "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." This the Saviour notices not. He is searching for her soul. To reach that end a sense of sin must be awakened, and so he said: "Go call thy husband."

She seemed to have been a woman of loose habits, at least of doubtful character. It would appear that she was then living in concubinage. The fact that this stranger had such an accurate knowledge of her miserable life of sin was amazing, and she said: "Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet." She is exceedingly anxious to turn the conversation from this embarrassing subject. But the Saviour has lodged the arrow of conviction in her heart, and he can afford to let her lead the conversation where she will. The arrow will do the work. Quick-witted woman that she was, her answer suggested a theme. She would refer to this prophet the controversy between the Jews and Samaritans as to where God can be worshiped acceptably. It is often true that persons living in sin are interested in religious questions. Breckenridge made a speech against Briggs in the General Assembly while at that time he was living as an adulterer. This woman was deeply interested in this question. "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." She said: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob worshiped in Gerizim. For three centuries the tabernacle and ark were at Shiloh near here. Our fathers built this temple. Our high priest is a Jew. The five books of Moses are read to the people. Why is worship here not as acceptable as at Jerusalem.

The Saviour replied by assuring her that the time was at hand when that question would cease to be of interest. These distinctions are to be ended. Those who worship in Jerusalem will be accepted, and those who worship in Gerizim or anywhere else will not be rejected. As to the question between Mount Zion and Mount Gerizim, the Jews are right and you Samaritans are wrong. David spoke by the Spirit: "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion." The spot on which the temple was built was pointed out by revelation. God said to Solomon, "I have hallowed this house that thou hast built to put my name therein forever; and mine eyes and my heart shall be there perpetually." The Jews worship according to divine appointment; the Samaritans do not.

"Ye worship ye know not what." The "salvation" is the Saviour who came from Judah. "Mine eyes have seen thy salvation," said Simeon when he saw the child Jesus. "So the Lord hath commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation to the ends of the earth." The Saviour came out of Judah and therefore the Jews have the true mode of worship. But the time is at hand when a worshiper will not be accounted true because he worships in Jerusalem, nor false because he worships in Gerizim; but in every place God will accept true worship, "in spirit and in truth," i. e., spiritual and real worship. The worship must proceed from a mind enlightened by the Spirit through the Word and from a heart softened and made affectionate by his grace. True worship is offered according to the forms prescribed in his Word. Only such worship is worthy to be offered to a being who is rational and intelligent to an infinite degree. "God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." The question to-day between Romanism and Protestantism is settled by this. Rome is baptized heathenism; and like Samaria has a curious mixture of the false and the true. Protestantism takes the Bible as its only guide. This also settles the question between the worship of the lodge which unites pagan, Mohammedan, Jewish and Christian rites in one conglomerate and that of the true church which offers a rational, real and divinely-appointed worship.

She had read Moses' prediction, "A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up like unto me: him shall ye hear." So she said, "I know that Messias cometh (the apostle adds, "which is called Christ,"—Messiah in Hebrew and Christ in Greek meaning the Anointed): when he is come, he will tell us all things." When the Saviour spoke in Judea he used parables and did not generally speak plainly of himself as the Christ, because the Pharisees would have been provoked, and hindered him in his work. But no such reason existed here. So he speaks plainly, the time having come to reveal himself to her soul.

"I that speak unto thee am he." No doubt her heart leaped for joy. No doubt her soul did cleave to him. She surrendered her soul to him cheerfully, absolutely, irreversibly, as Saviour and Lord. Finding the Christ, she desires to have her friends find him also. A saved soul has an unquenchable desire to bring others to Jesus. So "she left her pitcher and ran back into the city."

The disciples returned about this time and marveled that he talked with the woman. They knew the teaching of the Talmud, "He who instructs his daughter in the law is like one that plays the fool," and it was unworthy of a wise man to talk with a woman, and especially a Samaritan. But their reverence for him caused them to hold their peace. Their request that he take food was disregarded. To see his work succeeding was more than meat. "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." This was strange to them. Who had provided him with food? "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me and to finish his work."

In the meantime the woman had gone to her friends and said: "Come see a man which told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ?" A great multitude came out to see him. Beholding them emerging from the gate of the city he said: "Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh the harvest? Behold I say unto you, lift up your eyes."

"And herein is that saying true, one soweth and another reapeth. I sent you to reap that whereon you bestowed no labor." The disciples had baptized many converts in Judea. But they were only reaping the fruits of the preaching of John the Baptist. The sowing of the prophets had also come to the harvest. This was said to subdue any vanity the disciples might have over their success. "Other men labored and ye are entered into their labors."

The saying of the woman, "He told me all things that ever I did"—convinced many of the Samaritans of his Messiahship. Women are used as Gospel messengers. In the 68th Psalm David said: "The Lord spake the word: the women who published it were a great host." Joel said: "Your daughters shall prophesy." The first messenger from the tomb to announce the resurrection of Christ was a woman, and three other women brought the second. Aquilla and Priscilla organize a theological seminary and give Apollos a thorough course.

The Samaritans besought Christ to tarry, and he abode two days. His preaching was abundantly successful. They are overjoyed. Like the Queen of Sheba they say: "The half was not told us." "Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world." They remembered the promise: "Unto him shall the gathering of the people be." "As many individuals were astonished at his humiliation, so at his exaltation shall he cause many nations to leap for joy." "The desire of all nations shall come." The teaching of Christ confirmed the Word. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me." Men of all classes are drawn. From all kindreds and people and tongues and nations they come. They come from the east and from the west and from the north and from the south, and sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, and sing the song of Moses and of the Lamb.

A CLEAN HANDED REFORMER.—When our Saviour drove the sheep out of the temple, he did not drive them into his own pasture; nor sweep the coin into his own pockets, when he overturned the tables of the money-changers. But we have, in our days, many who are forward to offer God such zeal as not only costs them nothing, but wherewith they have gained great estates.—Thomas Fuller.

"I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the 'grip' of Masonry and all other secret and un-Christian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Letter to Conference of Christians on Secret Societies, Chicago, 1887.

"I belonged to two secret societies, and have bumped against nearly all of them, and know what I am talking about. Their sociability and benevolence may be all well enough; but they belong to the world. . . . . I have about made up my mind that the whole thing is of the world, and the enemy of God and his church Brethren, why don't you say Amen? You know I am telling the truth; and I pray that you may have grace to receive it in love, as I have spoken it. As Christ's disciples we can make no compromise with the world The friendship of the world is enmity against God."—From Bible reading, by L. W. Munhall, evangelist, on Separation, given Feb. 25, 1890, at Somerville, Mass.

To New Subscribers!

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

—)FOR(—

FIFTY CENTS.

FROM THE FIRST OF AUGUST, ON TRIAL, TO FEBRUARY 1, 1895.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INTRODUCE THE CYNOSURE.

IN ADDITION TO THIS OFFER WE WILL ADD A PREMIUM TO EVERY ONE SENDING TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS AT THE ABOVE RATE:

SONGS FOR THE TIMES

BY GEO. W. CLARK, WELL KNOWN TO CYNOSURE READERS, WILL BE SENT POSTPAID. [See advertisement of this book in this paper.]

READ THIS OFFER!!

If you want a baby carriage you will save money by obtaining one of our premiums with the Cynosure.

We will send you a $25 baby carriage, delivered to your nearest freight office free, and sixty months subscription to the Christian Cynosure, the well-known sixteen-page weekly reform paper with its valuable articles on church, home, and farm matters along with items of news of the week; or if you do not need the Cynosure for yourself, we will take five new yearly subscriptions instead of the sixty months subscription for yourself. The total value of the carriage and the Cynosures offered is $32.50, which we will send you for $18.50 cash with the order. The cut below represents the baby carriage. This is truly a great offer. Remember, to you only $18.50.

Or you can obtain for yourself the Christian Cynosure thirty-six months, or three new yearly subscriptions, and a $14 baby carriage, total value $18.50, for only $11.00.

Or one new subscription to the Cynosure and a $16 baby carriage, total value $17.50, for only $9.00. Please notice that any one of these carriages will be sent to your nearest freight office, charges prepaid.

STYLE 100. This carriage is made of the best rattan reed, shellaced and varnished to a glass finish; upholstered best silk plush or satin brocatel, heavy lined silk satin parasol, deep silk lace edge. This cab is for fine trade. Price $25.00.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Establishment of a permanent bureau for the exhibition of the resources of the Southern States was decided on by the Southern development convention.

The cash balance in the treasury, Monday, the day previous to the one on which the new tariff act became operative, was $126,498,130, of which $54,969,305 was gold reserve. So far this month the receipts aggregate $35,688,057, of which $24,586,113 was from internal revenue and $9,592,948 from customs. The internal revenue receipts for the ten days in which the President has had the tariff bill in his possession amounted to $19,053,759. The expenditures this month amount to $27,589,000, leaving a surplus of about $8,000,000 for the month to date.

CHICAGO.

A pure food exposition will be opened in Battery D and Second Regiment armory Oct. 1 and continue for three weeks. Every article and variety of food that is pure and healthful will have a place. Among the features will be practical demonstrations of the preparation of food for the table and lectures on the art of cooking.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 27 to Sept. 1:

Mrs H A Prest, J N Lloyd, W A Brooks, J Robison, H Stevens, Rev O C Bedford, H Elder, Rev P W Holmes, Calvin Steck.

A hacking cough keeps the bronchial tubes in a state of constant irritation, which, if not speedily removed, may lead to chronic bronchitis. No prompter remedy can be found than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effect is immediate and the result permanent.

The official reports show that no baking powder received an award over the Royal at the Chicago World's Fair.

The judge of awards on baking powder, Dr. H. W. Wiley, writes that the claim of another company to having received the highest award is false; that no such award was given to it.

The Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest baking powder made, and has received the highest award at every fair, wherever exhibited in competition with others.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	53⅛@		54⅛
Winter No. 2	53	@	53¾
Corn—No. 2	55¾@		57¾
Oats—No. 2	29⅛@		32¼
Rye—No. 2	46⅛@		48
Bran per ton	12 00	@13	50
Hay—Timothy	8 50	@10	00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	23⅛
Cheese	7	@	10¼
Beans	1 70	@ 1	90
Eggs	14	@	15⅛
Seeds—Timothy (100 lbs)	4 00	@ 5	25
Flax	1 23	@ 1	24
Clover (100 lbs.)	8 00	@ 9	00
Broom corn (per ton)	50 00	@105	00
Potatoes, (pr. bu.)	68	@	75
Hides—Green to dry flint	02½@		06⅛
Lumber—Common		15	50
Wool (unwashed)	10	@	21
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 70	@ 5	80
Common to good	2 00	@ 4	60
Hogs	3 50	@ 6	20
Sheep	1 50	@ 3	60

NEW YORK.

Wheat No. 2	57⅞		58¾
Corn No 2	64¼
Oats	33⅛@		36¾
Rye	52	@	52⅛
Eggs	14½@		17
Butter	13	@	24
Wool	19	@	25

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 25	@ 5	25
Hogs	2 75	5	72
Sheep	2 00	@ 3	25

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

211 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Ecce Orienti. The Complete Standard Ritual of the First Three Masonic Degrees in Cypher, with complete Floor Charts of Initiating, Passing and Raising a Candidate. Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Cabala. The Complete Standard Ritual of the Chapter Masonic Degrees; 4th to 7th inclusive, in Cypher. Giving the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master and Royal Arch, Pocket size, Full Roan, Flap, $2.50.

Council of the Orient. The Complete Standard Ritual of Council Masonic Degrees in Cypher, 8th to 10th inclusive. Giving the Degrees of Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2 50.

Knights of the Orient. The complete Ritual of the Commandery Masonic Degrees, Knights of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, 11th to 13th degrees. Pocket size, full Roan, flap, $2.50.

The Mystic Shrine Illustrated. An illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons. 15 cts. each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias Illustrated. An exact copy of the new Official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the World, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated. In cloth 50 cts. Paper cover 25 cts.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient, or the Oriental degree, This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges. 15 cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25 cents each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("Adelphon Kruptos.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. By Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This booklet of 32 pages is a general discussion of the secret orders, whether religious, political, industrial, insurance or social. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference. Postpaid, 5 cents.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing? An address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891. W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's, too." A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover Postpaid, 5 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Masonic Sentinel Extracts. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hiech[illegible]. Showing Masonic assault on lives [illegible], etc[illegible]ders, on reputation, and on free speech [illegible] Lodges, and its interference with justice in courts [illegible] Postpaid, 20 cents

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil [illegible] Government and the Christian religion. [illegible]Pres. J. Blanchard. The unchristian [illegible]anti-republican and despotic character [illegible] Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each. [illegible] of the

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 5[illegible] "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many [illegible]them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder D[illegible] Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative [illegible] of the incidents connected with Bernard's revelation of Freemasonry 10 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Pure Blood

Gives Perfect Health—Hood's Sarsaparilla Makes Pure Blood.

"I became troubled with sores which broke out on me from the lower part of my body down to my ankles, dark, flat and

Very Painful.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cleared my system and healed the sores in a short time. It also improved my and benefited my general health. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all." L. P. THOMAS, Postmaster, Burton's Creek, Va.

Appetite

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Pills are the best. 25c. per box.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD'S

—]-oo-[—

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Select discourses of the late editor of the Cynosure and leader in our reform. Lectures, sermons and speeches given from 1834 to 1892 in leading cities of the United States, discussing topics of

LIVING REFORM.

Secret Societies, The Sabbath, Temperance, National Reform, Christian Education, Christian Socialism, The Bible, Etc., Etc.

A BOOK EVERYBODY SHOULD READ

12mo. Fine Photogravure Portrait. Price, 75 Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A BOOKLET.

107 pages, 5x7 inches.

Paper Cover, Postpaid, 15 Cents

—o:o—

The following addresses form part of the contents of this booklet:

THE MARTYR'S OWN MONUMENT, by Rev J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of American Missionary Association.

CHRISTIAN POLITICS, by Rev. J. Blanchard, late President Wheaton College, and Editor Christian Cynosure.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACHINE: was it Lawnmower, Town-pump, Balloon, Wheel-barrow,—or what? by Prof. E. D. Bailey of the Civil Service Dept. U. S. Government.

This booklet includes other interesting matter connected with the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FORMER

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

own pocket

TOUCHING INCIDENTS

AND

many PRAYER,

REMARKABLE ANSWERS

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Frances E. Willard, Geo. Muller, James H Potts, Chas. G. Finney, T. De Witt Talmadge, and many others.

This new book is meeting with universal favor.

OVER 3,000 SOLD IN LESS THAN THREE WEEKS.

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book—an excellent book."

Chaplain C. C. McCabe: "This book will remind the reader that there are Elijahs still upon the earth."

Bishop Wm. Taylor: "True to its title."

This grand, inspiring book sent postpaid for only $1. Ministers 75 cents.

Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

HOME AND HEALTH.

A USEFUL GIRL.

Sleeves to the dimpled elbow,
Fun in the sweet blue eyes,
To and fro upon errands
The little maiden hies.
Now she is washing dishes,
Now she is feeding the chicks,
Now she is playing with pussy,
Or teaching Rover tricks.

Wrapped in a big white apron,
Pinned in a checkered shawl,
Hanging clothes in the garden—
Oh, were she only tall!
Hushing the fretful baby,
Coaxing his hair to curl,
Stepping around so briskly,
Because she is mother's girl.

Hunting for eggs in the haymow,
Petting old Brindle's calf,
Riding Don to the pasture,
With many a ringing laugh,
Coming whene'er you call her,
Running wherever sent,
Mother's girl is a blessing,
And mother is well content.

—Central Christian Advocate.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

It is your New England housewife who understands the art of making brown bread in all its perfection, light, savory, delicious.

This excellent article of food is apt to be at its best in the rural districts for another reason, too, than the skill of the village housekeeper, namely, that it is possible to get the best of rye meal always fresh at the moment of need. In the large cities it is difficult often to get it; grocers do not keep it as a rule, and feed stores are the best sources of supply. In the farming districts 10 cents will buy a good sized bagful.

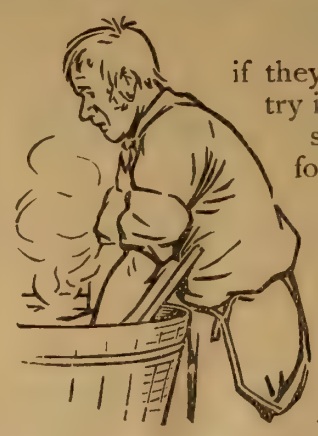
The real New England brown bread is thus made: To a pint and a half of rye-meal add a pint and a half of cornmeal and a teaspoonful of salt; mix thoroughly dry; then add a cup of molasses and a heaping teaspoonful of baking soda, wet in a little warm water. Add enough sour milk to make a soft batter. Put the mixture into a buttered mold, with tight cover, and steam four hours. When done, take out, cut into medium thick slices and serve on a platter. It can be eaten with butter alone, or for a company dish at tea serve it with thick cream poured over each slice, in which setting it is a most toothsome compound.

Heavy desserts are as much to be avoided during the warm season as heavy meats and other food material adapted to the colder temperature of winter. Greasy rich pies and puddings have no proper place in a summer dietary—if, indeed, they have anywhere or at any season of the year. Light batter pudding may be indulged; but for most palates cold custards, creams and iced desserts are greatly preferred.

The best cook-book is the one each housekeeper compiles for herself. She knows as no one else ought to know or can know the peculiarities and idiosyncrasies of the stomachs she caters for. No intelligent housewife will use all the recipes in her cook-book, unless the cook-book she compiles for herself, any more than she will eat straight down a bill of fare. She will select such as suit her purse, her ideas, and the family stomach. Every young housekeeper should have her blank recipe-book, and copy or paste into it such recipes as she finds useful and successful. In a short time she will be quite independent of other cook-books.

A man went into a drug store and asked for something to cure a headache. The druggist held a bottle of hartshorn to his nose, and he was nearly overpowered by its pungency. As soon as he recovered he began to rail at the druggist. "But didn't it help your headache?" asked the apothecary. "Help my headache!" gasped the man. "I haven't any headache. It's my wife that has the headache."

Hall's Hair Renewer is pronounced the best preparation made for thickening the growth of the hair and restoring that which is gray to its original color.



Let the men wash,

if they won't get you Pearline. Let them try it for themselves, and see if they don't say that washing with soap is too hard for any woman.

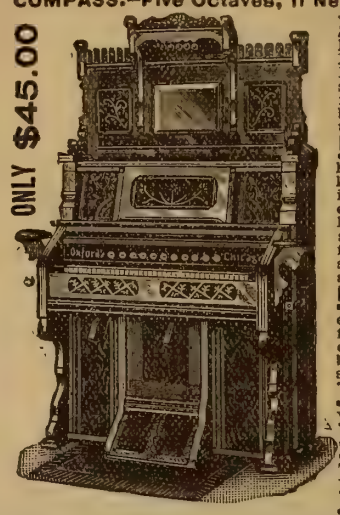
This hard work that Pearline saves isn't the whole matter; it saves money, too—money that's thrown away in clothes needlessly worn out and rubbed to pieces when you wash by main strength in the old way. That appeals—where is the man who wouldn't want to have the washing made easier—when he can save money by it?

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 456 JAMES PYLE, New York.

THE CELEBRATED OXFORD ORGANS.—CONTAINS 122 CELEBRATED ORCHESTRAL TONED REEDS.

When you buy from us you pay the factory profit, and not agents' dealers' or middlemens' enormous profits. This beautiful Oxford Columbia Organ for $45.00.

COMPASS:—Five Octaves, 11 Necessary Stops, 2 of 3-Octave, 2 of 2-Octave Each.



11 NECESSARY STOPS— All that can be put on a 4 set reed action without attaching bogus stops, viz.: Diapason, Principal, Melodia, Dulcet, Cremona, Vox-Angelica, Echo Horn, Celeste, Treble Coupler, Bass Coupler, Grand Organ and Right Knee Swell and Left Knee Swell. The above 4 set reeds and 11 necessary stops are placed at the disposal of the performer and the action is characterized by greater power, variety and brilliancy of tone, combined with the most exquisitive purity and sweetness, in addition to the music contained in an ordinary organ.

DESCRIPTION OF CASE— Constructed of the best grade of solid black walnut, handsomely finished, hand-rubbed with oil, durable and strong, thoroughly seasoned, kiln dried, and made on scientific principles, each component part being paneled to prevent warping or splitting, with veneered panels, elegantly carved and ornamented; center panel on top fitted with a large beveled French plate glass mirror, with veneer panels on each side; exquisite fret work, brocade silk velvet trimmings back of all fret work, large music cabinet, swinging front fall board, two lamp stands, convenient handles for moving. It is entirely new in design, and is as illustrated in cut. The case stands on castors.

INTERIOR CONSTRUCTION— is simple yet scientific and durable, not liable to get out of order and easily adjusted in case of any disarrangement; working parts are free from friction and will neither break nor wear. Nothing but the best of material used, and you will never find in one of the Oxford organs blotting paper instead of felt; cloth instead of leather; oil-cloth instead of rubber; common board instead of three-ply stock.

THE TONE— which is the most important part of an instrument, is full, sweet, round, sympathetic, and harmonious, with volume, variety and brilliancy, combined with great power.

THE BELLOWS— a very important part of a good organ, are of the very best and strongest material, best quality of rubber cloth and best quality of felt, with perfect stop action. They have an immense capacity and furnished, with the automatic valve for preventing an over supply of air, will never leak or wear out.

THE WARRANT— By our warrant we pledge ourselves in case our organ should prove defective in material or workmanship during a term of fifteen years to put the same in proper condition or refund money.

FREE—Our Wholesale Catalogue of Organs, Baby Carriages, Sewing Machines and Bicycles, quoting cash and time prices. Write for Catalogue at once and state which to send.

THE OXFORD MFG. CO. | Old Established and reliable.... | 338 TO 334 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits.

FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.

OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18TH, 1894.

Entrance Examinations September 17th, at 2 P. M.

For Catalogue, address

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Illustrated.

THE FULL

ILLUSTRATED RITUAL

OF THE

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine

PRICE 15 CENTS, EACH.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W Madison St. Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

MY EXPERIENCES

WITH

SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY A TRAVELER.

With a Key to Masonry Illustrated

—o-o—

A new edition, greatly enlarged, has been issued, embracing chapters on the Language of Numbers, Secret Empires, and Good Men, containing more Experiences, and affording a deeper insight into the Hidden Language and Workings of Secret Clans, and of the counterfeit pretences of good men, than ever before published. The Key is an exposition, explanation and verification of modern Baalism, with which all should be thoroughly acquainted. The price of the new edition is

Fifteen Cents,

but copies of the first edition will be forwarded for Ten Cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Songs for the Times.

FOURTH AND IMPROVED EDITION.

BY GEO. W. CLARK.

Author of the "Temperance Songster," "The Liberty Minstrel," "Free Soil Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," Harp of Freedom," etc.

This work comprises some 235 Elemental, Reformatory and Progressive Songs, Odes, Psalms, Hymns, etc., words and music, old and new, on a great variety of subjects, including Truth, Freedom, Temperance, Prohibition.

Likewise National, Loyal and Patriotic Songs. Also Miscellaneous, Social, Domestic and Hygienic; Songs adapted to the home circle, to private devotion and public worship, to national gatherings, mass meetings, and all humane movements for the good of mankind. It is printed on new electrotype plates, made from new type; the impressions are on nice white paper, and its pages are clear, bright and cheery, and the price very low for so costly a work.

Single copy, 30 cts; by mail, 35 cts; by the dozen, $3; by the hundred, $20.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

THE FARMER'S SON.

A farmer and his little child
Walked out one summer morn,
Through meadow-land and forest-land,
And fields of golden corn.

"See, child," the sturdy farmer said,
"How fair the growing grain!
'Twill make thy father rich and free
When winter comes again."

Then plucked he at the golden corn,
The little, gentle lad,
And kissed it: "Bless the corn," he said,
"That makes my father glad."

"Nay, child;" he smiled upon his boy:
"The fair grain does its best;
Yet as it grows and ripens here,
Obeys but God's behest."

Then raised the lad his little hand,
And bared his curly head;
"Bless God, he loves my father dear,
So loves us all," he said.

The sturdy farmer's eyes were wet—
"Amen!" then whispered he,
"'Tis rare I pray; but bless the Lord
Who gave my son to me."

FARMERS AND THE NEW TARIFF.

The lamentations of the high protective tariff newspapers over the sufferings of the farmer, because wool goes upon the free list, would naturally induce one to believe that wool was all the farmer had to sell and that he had nothing to buy that would be cheapened under the new tariff law. But the free list shows articles that should enable the farmer to recoup all he loses, if he loses anything, by reason of free wool.

The farmer will have free lumber, lath and shingles and a reduction of 25 per cent in the duty on furniture, which paid duties amounting in 1893 to $1,143,000. He will also have free binding twine, bagging, burlaps, and grain bags made of burlaps. In 1893 the duties paid on grain bags alone was $536,000. He will also have free of duty plows, tooth and disk harrows, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills, mowers, horse-rakes and thrashing machines.

The duties on women's and children's dress goods, coat-linings and similar fabrics have been greatly reduced. In 1893 the duties paid on this class of goods amounted to $18,250,000, which, at an ad valorem rate, was over 102 per cent, but the new bill reduces the rate to 40 and 50 per cent. The duty on woolen cloth and worsted goods is reduced one-half, while the rate on knit woolen fabrics is cut down from 94 to 40 per cent.

There is no pretense that the Senate bill is an ideal measure or that there is not much room for improvement in it, but so far as the farmers are concerned there are many compensations for the wool duty, even if putting wool on the free list shall prove harmful to their interests, which is not likely to be the case. —Chicago Record.

DEER EAT UP THE FARM CROPS.

Deer are destroying crops on the farms near Rutland, Vt. Farmer George H. Woodward of Shrewsbury, six miles distant, has complained to the Game League that they have devoured his vegetables. He demands payment for the same. He says they devour his crops during the night and have to be driven off every morning. Within a mile of this city deer are frequently met trotting along the highway. They are as docile as dogs. Up in the mountains they feed with the cows. Black bears are almost as numerous as the deer, and quite as venturesome.

FILLING THE WATERING POT.

"I don't know where the waterin'-pot is," said Jimmie boy, "but I'll tell you what we'll do, Willie; you hold your eyes over the fwowers, and I'll pinch you till you cry, and the tears'll water 'em good enough."—Harper's Bazar.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA — WORLD'S FAIR Chicago 1893

Cures OTHERS, WILL Cure You.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA — WORLD'S FAIR Chicago 1893

TAKE YOUR CHOICE!

——)oo(——

SECRET CONFESSION TO A PRIEST: or, THE ROMAN CATHOLIC PRACTICE OF AURICULAR CONFESSION. By Evangelist Leyden, an ex-Romanist. 48 pages, paper, price reduced from 25 cents to 12 cents postpaid.

Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE SECRET WORK OF THE JESUITS, with an historical sketch of this pestiferous order, by Rev. W. C. Brownlee, D. D., with an appendix on the Church of Rome and the American Public Schools: A WARNING TO AMERICA. 80 pages, paper, reduced from 50 cents to 25 cents, postpaid.

Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS. By L. De La Hodde, member of the detective police of France. A History of the SECRET SOCIETIES OF FRANCE. The object of the translator of this work was to show the dangerous consequences, to society and government, arising from the practices of secret associations. 477 pages, cloth, price reduced from $1.50 to 75 cents, postpaid.

Sent Free to the sender of a club of three new subscribers to the Cynosure.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST
A Secret Empire;

Or, Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy.

By Rev. Richard Horton.

Third Edition. 200 pages. Cloth.

Price, 60 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chica

THE
Folly, Expense & Danger
OF
SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.
(President Wheaton College.)

5 Cts per Copy; $3 per Hundred

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago

THE GUIDING HAND;

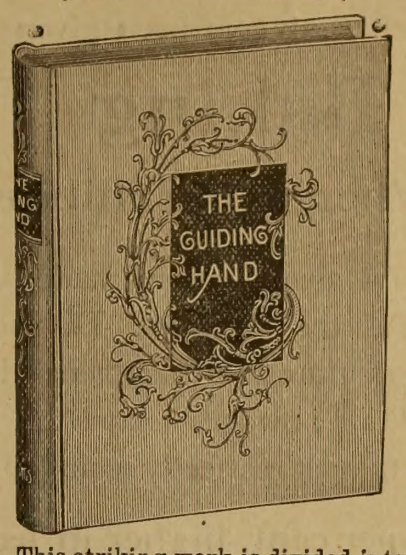
—OR—

PROVIDENTIAL DIRECTION.

——)o(——

Illustrated by authentic instances of Relief and Deliverance in times of Trouble and Perplexity; of Direction through Dreams and Mental Impressions, and of Providential Guidance, resulting in Conversion. Recorded and collected by

H. L. HASTINGS,
(Editor of "The Christian.")



This striking work is divided into three parts as follows:

(1) Providences in Relief and Deliverances. (2) Dreams and Impressions. (3) Conversions.

The "Guiding Hand" contains nearly 400 pages. It is really a handsome book, printed on heavy book paper, from large open type, good for the eyes, and artistically and durably bound in fine cloth, with fancy panels. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Very Best!

1894—LIGHT and LIFE LESSONS—1894
(INTERNATIONAL)

In book form, containing all the lessons for the entire year, with four large pages of instructions and comments on each lesson, comments being adapted to the Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary classes; Black Board Exercises, Maps, Bible Dictionary, and Class Registers beside other valuable helps. 225 Pages.

Paper covers, postpaid..... .35
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .30
Cloth covers, postpaid..... .50
Clubs of five or more, postpaid..... .40

Read what is said about it:

"The classification of each of these fifty-two Lessons is excellent. The choicest of Biblical literature has been drawn upon for material make it one of the very best lesson exposi extant, and in this respect its compilers achieved flattering success. Its cheapness its merits entitle it to a general accep and Sunday-school workers."—CHRISTIAN

"The book will prove a great conve guide a blessing."—EARNEST CHRISTIAN Interna-

"This is a very complete and RECORDER. to the Sunday school teachers. S. supplies tional Lessons of 1894."—MET

"This is the best thing by and cheapness," I have ever seen."—W. W.,

"It is a marvel of ne"—JAMES I. COUN—T. C. GIVENS.

"I am highly please well and presume the CIL. the future; if so you

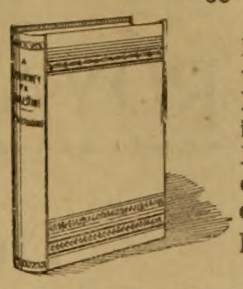
"We like it exce cribe for it."—VICTOR plan will be cor may count on CHARROIN.

N CYNOSURE,
Madison St. Chicago, Ill.
CHP

A Journey to Palestine

BY REV. B. CARRADINE, D. D.

—oo—



Revised and Illustrated Edition. 500 pages. Eighteen beautiful half-tone Engravings, including portrait of Author. Cloth postpaid, $1.50. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W Madison St Chicago.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

MONTHLIES.
The Pearl, The Lily, Pure Words, Sunshine, each, per quar., 3c.

WEEKLIES.
L. & L. Infant Class, 4c.
L. & L. Intermediate Lesson Leaf..... 1½c.
L. & L. Lesson Leaf, 1½c.
Golden Treasures (for every fifth Sunday) 1c.

QUARTERLIES.
LIGHT AND LIFE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY....5c.
" " " SCHOLAR'S " ....3c.
" " " INTERMEDIATE " ....3c.
" " " PRIMARY " ....3c.

Secretaries' Books, Class Registers, Reward Cards and Tickets, Charts, Maps, S. S. Libraries and other supplies. A large line of books, tracts, pamphlets, Bibles and Testaments at lowest prices.

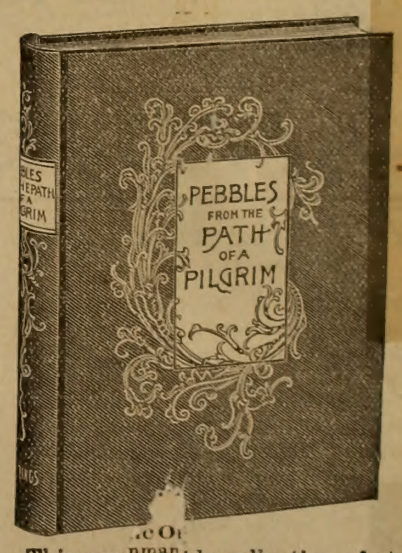
BOOK AND PAMPHLET PRINTING
Done with neatness and dispatch. Send for estimates.

T. B. ARNOLD,
104-106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim.

—BY—

MRS. H. L. HASTINGS.



This remarkable collection of stories from the experience of sec[ond]ful life of a Green Mountain [girl], etc. as been pronounced "more fas[cinat]ing than any romance." A member of Congress writes: "'Pebbles' has been read by me with great interest. The introductory chapters followed me into dreams. Every copy is read to pieces by the family, and borrowed to death by the neighbors." An editor says: "Surely the faith that 'obtained promises, wrought righteousness and stopped the mouth of lions' must have been given in large measure to the writer of this last remarkable book.... No family library should be without it." "Pebbles," says the Christian Cynosure, "is such a book as Christian parents are always glad to put on their children's tables."

"Pebbles from the Path of a Pilgrim" is a large and beautiful book of over 300 pages, printed on heavy book paper, in clear open type, and is profusely illustrated. It is artistically bound in handsome cloth, with fancy panels, and specially attractive side and back cover designs. Price, $1.50.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ROYAL Always Leads.

The Highest Award

has always been given

Royal Baking Powder

Wherever Exhibited.

The official examination made under the direction of the Chemical Division of the U. S. Agricultural Department shows that of the baking powders tested the ROYAL is the purest, most perfectly compounded and 20 per cent. higher in leavening strength than any competitor exhibited at the World's Columbian Fair.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

morning, from brain trouble, after a long illness.

The bank at Tescott, Kans., was robbed Saturday morning by two masked men, who boldly entered the bank, killed the cashier and carried away considerable money.

An English syndicate has practically closed a deal for the purchase of all the paper and pulp mills in Wisconsin. The mills in the deal number thirty-four and the price agreed upon is $14,000,000. The transfer is to be made March 1.

The International Migration society, which was incorporated in Birmingham, Ala., last February and whose object is to send Southern Negro colonists to Africa, has closed a deal with a steamship company, and the first boat will leave about Sept. 15. The ship will start from Philadelphia and touch at different Atlantic and southern ports, and from New Orleans steam direct to Liberia via Havana. It is expected that by November 5,000 Negroes will have been transported. The President of Liberia has offered each family of colonists twenty-five acres of land and implements with which to work it.

Both eastward and westward Atlantic records were broken Friday, the former by the Campania, the latter by the Lucania, which made the trip from Queenstown to New York in five days eight hours and thirty-eight minutes.

The custom house receipts last Wednesday at New York were nearly $1,000,000. It is expected that the receipts will be about $1,000,000 a day for some time until an immense quantity of goods has been released from bond.

FOREIGN.

A terrible fire occurred on the Canton river, China. A flower boat caught fire and the flames spread until hundreds of those craft were destroyed. The progress of the fire was so rapid that at least 1,000 natives perished. The flower boats were moored stem and stern in rows, and large numbers of natives lived upon them.

Baron Unger von Sternberg, said to be the chief of the international board of anarchists, was arrested at St. Petersburg.

Forest fires are raging in various parts of the province of Ontario, Can. Around Dundalk whole fields of grain and miles of forests are destroyed. Near Shelburne, forty miles of territory is on fire and twelve farmhouses have been burned. The whole mountain range north of Milton has been burning three days. Hundreds of men are fighting flames.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The Tribune of Monday says: "The Pullman strike finally has reached that stage where all labor unions and the public generally have lost interest in it. Relief supplies have stopped coming in and money contributions are growing smaller every day. Even the local leaders have become weary and are wrangling among themselves over the question of declaring the strike off or keeping it on. The unions at Pullman, Kensington, and Roseland seem to have repudiated them. Chairman Heathcote called a meeting for Saturday night to decide the matter and only half a dozen delegates put in an appearance."

TASTROPHE.

The region hat way between St. Paul and Duluth was sw[illegible]t by fire last Saturday and Sunday and the towns of Hinckley, Partridge, Herrick, Sandstone, Mansfield and Dedham on the at Northern, Baronett and Shell Lake on the Omaha, and Poplar on the Northern Pacific were destroyed. The reports of Monday morning were quite incomplete. The loss of life is appalling. Near 20 people are believed to have perished, some estimate 1,000. Property estimated all the way from $2,000,000 to $12,000,000 was burned. The greatest loss of life was at Hinckley, Minn., where the forest fires rushed like a tornado upon the town and scores perished miserably in the streets. Great loss was also experienced at Washburn, Wis., but the flames were checked after superhuman effort.

The flood of water which swept the country west of San Antonio, Texas, was one of the most terrible catastrophes that has visited the State. About half of the town of Uvalde, which has a population of about 2,500, was swept away. The flood came in the night and about fifty families sought refuge in trees. The town of Dhanis is submerged to a depth of several feet. In a settlement of about seventy-five families a few miles below Uvalde it is believed many if not all were drowned. The deluge of water did not come from the clouds, as was at first supposed, but out of the ground, and its bursting forth was caused by an earthquake. Along the Leona river near Uvalde the cracks in the earth with the water pouring thereform are still seen. Southern Pacific officials estimate that it will cost about $1,200,000 to rebuild the forty miles of track and replace the steel bridges.

CASUALTIES.

Roberts, Ill., was swept by a blaze which originated in a grain elevator. Only six business houses are left standing.

A West Michigan passenger train was wrecked near Brookings by a herd of cattle. Two men were killed and three injured.

The little lumber town of Vesper, Mich., was destroyed by a forest fire Tuesday last. The large saw and planing mills belonging to the Sherry-Cameron Lumber company and twenty-three buildings, all there were in the town, were burned.

Flames broke out in a six-story "sweat-shop" at 226 Rivington street, New York [illegible]v. Three men lost their lives and a [illegible]ech, a fireman, is dying. At 31 Goer[illegible]a Street a six-story tenement was burned, [illegible]strick families were driven out panic-

Mrs. [illegible] $17,000 damage was done.

death at [illegible] Stevens was scalded to evening. S[illegible]ordsville, Ind., Tuesday at a picnic, an[illegible] pouring boiling coffee the large pot we[illegible]g, the contents of and shoulders, sca[illegible]ied over her head

A threshing mach[illegible]er to death.

near Fergus Falls, M[illegible]ler exploded men outright, injuring a[illegible]illing two that he died soon after[illegible]o badly wounding a fourth. [illegible]iously

COUNTRY.

News comes from Memphis of the lynching of six Negroes in the northern part of the county, Saturday. Barn-burning was the alleged crime

Gen. Nathaniel P. Banks, soldier and statesman, died at his home in Waltham, Mass., shortly before 8 o'clock Saturday

"The Foremost Baking Powder in all the World."

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Carried off

HIGHEST HONORS

. at the .

World's Columbian Exposition,

Chicago,

1893.